in his communicacion, sayinge: As truly as God lyueth (which hath take away my iudgement) and the almyghtye, that hath beted my mind: My lippes shall talke of no vanitie, and my tonge shall speake no dyscepte, whyle my breath is in me, and as lōge as the wynde (that God hath gyue me) is in my nostrilles.

God forbyd, that I shoulde graunt poure cause to be ryghte. As for me, vntyll myne ende come, wyl I neuer go from myne innocencye. My ryghteous dealinge kepe I fast, whych I wyl not forsake: my herte shall not reproue me of my dayes. Therfore myne ene mye shall be founde as the vngodlye, and he that taketh parte agaynst me, as the vnrighteous. For what hope hath the hypocrite though he haue great good, & though he gyue hym rycheesse after hys hertes desyre?
Doth God heare him the soner, when he cryeth vnto hym in hys necessite? Hath he such pleasure & delpte in f^r Almyghtye, f^r he darre alwaye call vpon God? I wyl teache you in the name of God, and the thinge that I haue of the almyghtye, wyl I not kepe from you, Beholde, ye stande in poure owne conceits, as though ye knewe al thynges. Wherefore, then do ye go aboute wth suche wayne woodes, sayinge: * This is the porcyon that the wycked shall haue of God, and the heritage that tyrantes shall receyue of the Almygh-tye. Yf he get many chyldre, they shall perishe wth the swerde, & hys posteritie shall haue scarcenesse of breed. Like whome he leaueth behynde him they shall dye and be buryed: & no man shall haue pytie of hys wyddowes.
Though he haue as moche moneye as f^r dust of the earth, and raymente as readye as the claye, he maye well prepare it: but the godly shall put it vpon him, and the innocent shall deale out the moneye. His house shall endure as the moth, and as a bouth that the watchman maketh. * Whe the riche man dyeth, he carpeth nothinge wth hym: he is gone in f^r twynklynge of an eye: and hath nothinge.
Destruction taketh holde vpon him as a waterflood, & the tempest stealeth him awaye, in the nyght season. A vehement eastwynde carpeth hym hence and departeth: a storme plucketh hym oute of hys place. It tusheth in vpon hym, and spareth hym not, he maye not escape from the power therof. The clay-

The. xxviii. Chapter.

God sheweth that the wysdomes of God is vnsearchable.

There is a palace where spluer is brought out of, & where golde is tryed: where pyron is digged out of the grounde, & stones resolu'd to metall. The darckenesse shall ones come to an ende: he can seke out the grounde of all thynges, & stones. the darke, & the shadowe of death. With the spuer of water parteth he a sodre the straunge people, & knowe no good neyghbourhood: such as are rude, vnmannerly and boysterous. He byngeth foode out of the earth, and that which is vnder, colu'meth he with fyre. There is foude a palace, whose stones are all cleane Sapphirs, and where the clottes of the erth are golde. There is a way also that the byrdes knowe not, that no vulturs eye hath sene: wherein the lyons whelpes walke not, and where no lyon commeth.

There putteth he hys hande vpon the stonpe rockes, and ouerthoweth the mountaynes. Ryuers flowe oute of the rockes, and loke what is pleasaunt, his eye seeth it. Oute of dropes byngeth he great floudes together & the thinge that is hid byngeth he to lycht. Howe commeth a man then by wysdome?

* Where is the place that men fynde vnderstandynge? Verely no mā cā tell howe woorthye a thyng he is, neither is the foude in the land of them that lyue. (at theyr owne pleasure).

The depe sayeth: he is not with me. The see sayeth: he is not with me. * She can not be gotten for: * (a moost pure) gold, neyther may the pryce of her be bought wpyth any spluer. No wedges of golde of Oppir, no pryceous Onix stones, no Sapphirs may be compared vnto her. No, neither golde nor chrystal, neither swete odours, nor golde plate. There is nothyng so woorthye, or so excellent, as ones to be named vnto her: for perfecte wysdome goeth farre beyonde them all. The Topas that commeth out of Inde: maye in no wyse be lykened vnto her: yea, no maner of apparell howe pleasaunt and fayne soeuer it be.

D From whence then commeth wysdome? and where is the palace of vnderstandynge? She is byd from the eyes of all men luyng, yea, and from the foules of the ayre. Destruction & death saye, we haue herde tell of her with oure eares. But God seeth her waye, & knoweth her place. For he beholdeth the endes of the worlde, and loketh vpon all that is vnder heauen. When he weyed the wyndes and measured the waters: when he set the rayne in ordre, and gaue the mighty floudes a lawe. Then byd he se her, then declared he her, prepared her and knewe her. And vnto man he sayde: Behold, * to feare the Lord is wysdome, & to forsake euyl is vnderstandynge.

The. xxix. Chapter.

Job sheweth of the prosperitie of the tyme past, he filip expounding his tressors of iniquyte, because they saw that Job suffered accordyng to his deservynge.

Job proceeded and went forth in his comunicacion, saying: I were as I was in the monethes by past, & in the dayes when God preserued me: whē his lycht shyned vpon my heed, whē I went after the same lycht & shynynge, euen thowowe the darckenesse. As I stode wpyth me when I was younge, when God prospered my house: when the almyghtie was yet with me: when my children stode aboute me: when my wayes rāne ouer wyth butter, and when the stonpe rockes gaue me ryuers of oyle, when I went thowowe the tytie vnto the gate, and when they sette me a chayre in the strete: when the younge men (as soone as they sawe me) byd them selues, and when the aged arose, and stode by vnto me: when the princes sette of their talkynge, and laped theyr hande to theyr mouthe: when my myghte keppe still theyr voyce, and when theyr toge cleued to the rooffe of their mouth. When all they that derde me, called me happy: and when all they that sawe me, spake good of me. For I deliuered the poore when he cryed, and so byd I the fatherlesse, ad him that had none to helpe hym. He that shoulde haue bene lost, gaue me a good worde: & the wyddowes hertes prapled me. And why? I put vpon me ryghteousnesse, which couered me as a garment & equyte was my crowne. I was an eye to the bynde, and a tote to the lame: I was a father vnto a poore, & when I knewe not the cause, I sought it out diligently. I brake the charmes of the vnyghteous man, & pluckte the spoule out of hys teeth.

Therefore, I thought verely, that I shoulde haue dyed in my nest: & that my dayes shoulde haue bene as manye as the sandes of the see. For my roote was spred oute by the waters syde: and the dewe laye vpon my cozne. My honoure encreased more and more, and my howe was euer the stronger in myne hande. Vnto me men gaue eare, me they regarded, & wpyth silence they tarped for my counsayll. If I had spoken, they wolde haue it none other wayes, my wordes were so wel taken, amonge them. They wayted for me, as for the rayne: and gaped vpon me, as the grounde doeth to receyue the latter shoure. When I laughed, they knewe well it was not earnest. And the lycht of my countenance wolde they not put out. When I agreed wto theyr waye: I was the cheif, and late as a kynge wpyth hys armye aboute hym.

God that Job suffereth.

BUT nowe they that are yger the I haue me in derpyn: yea, euen they, whose fathers I wolde haue thought scoone to haue set wth þ dogges of my cattel. The power & strenght of theyr handes myght do me no good, for the tyme is but lost among the. For very myserie & hynge, they fled into the wyldernesse a darke place, horrible & waste, plucking vp nettles among the bushes, and the Juniper rootes for theyr meate. And when they were dymen forth, men cryed after the, as it had ben after a thefe. Theyr dwellynge was be-hyde foule brookes: yea, in the canes & denes of the earth. Amonge the bushes went they about crying, and vnder the thornes they gathered them selues together. They were þ chyliden of fooles and vylapnes, whych are bred out of the woelde. * Howe am I their singe, and am become theyr lestenge stocke: they abhorre me, and fye farre from me, ad kayne my face with spetle. For þ Lord hath loosed the strenght of my body, and broughe me lowe. The byddle haue they cast oute of my lyght. Upon my ryght hande ryse þ þogmen agaynst me, they haue hurt my fete treadyng vpon me, as vpo the wayes that they wolde destroe. My pathes haue they cleane marred. It was so easpe for them to do me harme, that they neded no man to helpe the.
They fell vpon me, as it had bene the breakyng in of waters, and came in by heapes to destroe me. Fearfulnesse is tourned a-gaynste me.

MYNE honoure vanyshed awaye moze swyfte then the wynd, and my prosperitie departeth hence, lyke as it were a cloude.
Therfore is my mynde poured ful of heyn-esse, and the dayes of my trouble haue takē hold vpo me. My bones are perced thowowe in the nyght season, and my synnewes take no rest. For the vehemencie of sorowe is my garment chaunged, and accorpyng to the diuersitie of heynesse am I gydded with my coote. He hath cast me into the myre, and I am become like as shes and dust. Althē I crye vnto the, thou doest not heare me, & thoughe I stande before the, yet þ regardest me not.
Thou arte become myne enemye, and wth thy vyolent hande thou takest part agaynst me. In tymes past thou diddest set me vp on hys, as it were aboue the wynde, but nowe hast thou gyuen me a very soze fall. Sure I am, that thou wylt delpyer me vnto death: euen to the lodgyng that is due vnto all menyng. Howe ble not men to do vyolence vnto them, that are destroyed all ready: but where hurte is done, there vse they to helpe.

Wyd not I wepe with him that was in trouble? Had not my soule compassion vpon the poye? yet neuerthelesse, where as I loked for good, euyl happened vnto me: and where as I wayted for lyght, there came darkenesse.
My bowels seeth wthyn me, and take no rest, for the dayes of my trouble are come vpon me. Wekely and lowlye came I in, yea, & wthout any displeasure: I stode vp in the congregacion, & communed with them. But nowe I am a companion of dragons, and a felowe of Estriches. My skynne vpon me is turned to black, and my bones are hysht wth heat: my harpe is tourned to sorowe, & my pype to wepyng.

The. xxxi. Chapter.

neth him selfe to the company of wycked doers, shall not destruccyon of myserye come al my golges? yf I haue walked in vanitye, or yf my fete haue rine to disceyne, let me be weyed in an eul balaunce, that God may se my innocencye. * Vt so be that I haue with-

Here ende the wordes of Job.

The. xxxii. Chapter.

Elisu after the other had synished theyr commu-nicacion retyrouth them of synfulness. For maketh not a man wylle: but the spyrte of God.

S O these thre men wolde styue no more wth Job, because he helde hym selfe a ryghteous man. But Elisu the sonne of Barachell, the Bullite of the hired of Ram, was very soze displeased at Job, because he called him false iust before God. And with Job's thre frendes he was angrie also, because they had founde no resonable aunswere to ouercome Job.

Howe taried Elisu, tyl they had haden communicacion with Job, for why they were elder then he. So when Elisu the sonne of Barachell the Bullite sawe, that these thre men were not hable to make Job answere: he was miscontent: Elisu the sonne of Barachell the Bullite answered hym selfe, and sayde: * Confidynge, that I am yonger, and yf he me of age: I was afrayed & durst not speke forth my mynde. For I thought thus wth my selfe. It becommeth olde men to be the aged to teache wysdome. Every man (no doubte) hath a mynde, * but it is the racion of the Almightye that giveth standynge. Great men are not alwaye neither doth every aged man vnderstand thyng that is lawfull. Therefore, wpll I speake also (heare me) and I wpll shewe also myne vnderstandinge. For when I wayted tyl ye made an ende of your talkynge, & hearde your wysdome, what argumēt ye made in your communicacion: yea, when I had dysgently pondered what ye sayde, I found not one of you that made any good argumēt agaynst Job, that dysceyte coulde make answer vnto his wordes: let ye saye: We haue founde oute wysdome: & shall cast hym downe, and no man. He not spoken vnto me, & I wpll not answere hym as ye haue done (for they were so shewed, that they could not make answer, & speake one worde) but in so much as ye not speake, standynge tyll lyke domine & makynge no answer: I haue a good for my parte, to shewe hym an aunswere, to shewe hym my meanyng: For I am full of wordes, & the spyrte that is wth me, compelleth me.

Beholde, my belly is as the wyne, hath no vente, & bursteth the newe in sondre. Therefore wpll I speake, & I haue a vent: I wpll open my lippes, & answere. I wil regarde no maner of person, no man wpll spare. For yf I wolde about to please men: I knowe not how my maker wolde take me awaye.

that my aucthoritye shall be to heuyn for the.
Howe hast thou spoken in mine eares, and I haue hearde the voyce of thy wordes: I am cleane without any faulte, I am innocent, and there is no wyckednesse in me.

But lo, he hath pyked a quarell agaynst thou not done ryght. I wyll make answer vnto the, that God is moze then man. And why dest thou then stryue agaynst hym? for he shal not gyue the accoures of all his wordes.

For when God doth ones commaunde a thyng, there shoulde no man be curyous to doubte whether it be ryght. * In dreames and visions of the nyght, when slombryng cometh vpon men, that they fall a slepe in (they beddes) he roundeth them in the eares, he infourmeth them, & sheweth them playnly that it is he, whiche wythdraweth man from cruel deliuereth him from pynde, kepeth him from the graue, & his lyfe from the swerde.

He chasteneth hym with spkenesse, and byngeth him to his bedde: he layeth soze punishment vpon his boones, so that his lyfe maye awake with no bzeed, and his soule abhoret to eat any dayntie meate. Insomuch that his body is cleane consumed awaye, and his bones appeare nomoze. His lyfe draweth vnto the graue, and his lyfe to death. Nowe, where be a messenger (one amonge a thousande) sent for to speake vnto man, & to shew him the ryght waye: then the Lorde is mercyfull vnto him, and sayth: he shalbe deliue-red, that he shal not downe to the graue, for I am sufficiently reconpled.

Then shall his fleshe be as well lykynge as it was afore, and shalbe as it was in his youth. For if he submyt hym selfe vnto God he shalbe gracious vnto hym, and shew hym his countenance ioyfullye, and rewardeth him for his ryghtousnesse. Suche a respecte hath he vnto men. Therfore, let a man con-fesse (and saye:) I haue offended, I dyd vnryghtouslye, and it hath done me no good.
For he hath deliuered my soule from destruction, and my lyfe shall se the lyght. Lo, thus sheweth God alwaye with man, that he kepeth his soule from perisshynge, and letteth him enioye the lyght of the lyuyng. Marke well (O Job) and heare me: holde the still, and I wyll speake. But if thou hast anye thyng to saye, then answer me, and speake for thy answer please me. If thou hast nothyng, then heare me, and holde thy tounge, so shall I teache the wisdom.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Elisu prayeth the iustyce of God, wherby subgeth the wynde and gouerneth all.

Elisu proceadynge forth in his answer, sayd: heare my wordes (O ye wise men) he-ken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandynge, for the rare pro-ueth & discerneth the wordes

* and the mouth tasteth the meates: As for iudgement let vs seke it out amonge our sel-ues, that we maye know what is good. And why? Job hath sayde: I am ryghteous, but God doth me wyde. I must nedes be a lyer, though my cause be ryghte, and violently I am plaged where as I made no fault, where is there such a one as Job, that drynkehth vp scornefulnesse lyke water: which goeth in company of wycked doers, & walketh wyth vngodly men? For he hath sayde: Though a man be good, yet is he naught before God.
Therfore heken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandynge.

Farre be it from God, that he shulde meddle wyth wyckednesse: and farre be it from Almyghyte, that he shulde meddle wyth vn-ryghteous dealing: * For he shall rewarde the workes of man, and cause every man to fynde accordynge to his wayes. For sure it is, that * God condemneth noman wrongfully, and the iudgemente of the Almyghyte is not vnyghtous. Who ruleth the earth in his steade? Or whom hath he set to gouerne the whole worlde? To whom hath he gyuen his hert, for to drawe his spyrite and breath vnto him? All flesh shal come togyther vnto nought, and all men shall turne agayne vnto dust. If thou nowe haue understandynge, heare what I saye: and hearken to the voyce of my wordes.

Maye he be a ruler that loueth no ryghte?
Or maye he that is a very innocent man, do vngodly? Is it reason that thou shouldest saye to the kyng: Thou art wycked, or thou art vngodly, and that before the princes?
* He hath no respect vnto the personnes of lordly, and regardeth not the ryche moze the the poore. For they be all the worke of his they dye: and at mydnyght, when the people and the tyrantes rage, then shal they perissh

They that were in the steade of sears dealete lyke vngodly men: and therfoze he punysshed them, because they touned backe from hym, and wolde not consydre all his wayes. In so moche that they haue caused the voyce of the poore to come vnto hym, and now he heareth the complaynt of suche as are in trouble.

D Pf he graunte pardon, who wyl condempne? And pf he hyde awaye his countenaunce, who shalbe able to se it: wherher it be to the people or to anye man, thus wyl he do. For the vngodlynesse of the people, doeth God make an ppoctyte to raygne ouer them.
For somoch then as I haue begonne to talke of God, I wyl not hynde the. Pf I haue goone amysse, enfourme thou me: pf I haue done wronge, I wyl leaue of. Can he do nothyng without the? For thou hast repproued his iudgement. Thou also hast thyne owne mynde, and not I. But speake on what thou knowest. Let men of vnderstandyng tell me, and let a wyse man herken vnto me. As for Job, he hath nethe spoked to the purpose: noz wysely. O father, let Job be well tryed, because he hath answered for wycked men, yee about his synne he doth wyckedlye, trumpheth amonge vs, & multiplieth his wordes agaynst God.

C The. xxxv. Chapter.

Further doth godlynesse ppoct: or vngodlynes hurt to God: but to man.

I Libu spake mozeouer, and sayde: Thinkest thou it right, that thou sayest: I am ryghteous before God. For thou sayest: What aduantage wyl it be vnto the, and what profyte shal thou haue of my synne.
Therfoze wyl I geue answere vnto the: and to thy companions with the: loke vnto the heauen, and beholde it: consyde the cloudes, which are hyer then thou.

B Pf thou hast synned, what hast thou done agaynst hym? Pf thyne offences be manye, what haste thou done vnto hym? Pf thou be ryghteous, what geuest thou hym? What wyl be recreaue of thyne hande? Of suche an vngodlye personne as thou, and of the sonne of man that is righteous as thou pretendest to be: ther is a great crye & complaynt made by them that are opprested with violence, yee euerye man complayneth vpon the crueltye of tyrauntes.

C For suche a one neuer sayeth: Where is God that made me: and that gyueth vs occasyn to praple hym in the nyght: Whiche geueth vs moze vnderstandyng then he doth the beastes of the earth, & teacheth vs moze then he doth the foules of heauen.

Pf anye suche complayne, no man geueth answere, and that because of the wyckednesse of proude tyrauntes. But pf a man cal vpon God, doeth not he heare hym? Doth not the almighty accepte his crye: Whiche thou spea-kest then, shulde not he pardon the, pf thou thy selfe before hym, ad put thy trust in hym?
Then vseth he no violence in his wrath, nether hath he pleasure in curious & depe insycyon. Therfoze doth Job open his mouth but in vayne, and folysly doeth he make many wordes.

C The. xxxvi. Chapter.

Libu sheweth wherfoze God punyssheth and correcteth.

L Libu proceeded forth in talkyng, and sayd: Behold styll a lytle, & I shal shew the what I haue yet to saye on Gods behalfe. I wyl vnto the yet moze of my vnderstandyng: and yee my mater ryghteous. In truly, my wordes shal not be vayne, sayng he is with the that is perfecte in knowyng beholde, the greates God casteth awaye man, for he hym selfe is myghty in power wysdome.

As for the vngodly, he shal not praple him, but shal helpe the poore to they: ryght.
He shal not turne his eyes awaye fro the troune: he shal stabylise them for ever, & they shalbe exalted. But pf they be layde in pyne and chaynes, or bounde wth the bondes of trouble, then wyl he shew them their wyle and the synnes wherewith they haue cruel violence.

He with punysshing and nuryng shal roundeth the in the eares, warneth them to leaue of from they: wyckednesse, and to mende. * Pf they now wyl take heed and serue him, they shal were out they: dayes prosperitie, and they: yeares in pleasure & ioye. But pf they wyl not herken, they shal goe thowowe the swearde, and yerye man they be aware. As for such as be layned crites, they shal heape vp wrath for the lawes: for they cal not vpon hym, though they be his pylsoners. Thus shal they: soules ryse in folysynes, and they: lyfe shalbe condemned among the fornicatours. The poore shal be deliuered out of his affliction, & cometh in the care when they be in trouble. So shal he kepe the (pf thou wylt be content) from the bottomlesse pynt that is death: and pf thou wylt holde the quyet, he shal gyfte the with plenteousnes.

Reuerberesse: thou hast condemned iudgement of the vngodlye, yee: then shal iudgement and sentence shal thou suffer.

For the shall not thy cause be spilled with crueltye, nor pacified with many gyftes.
Thynkest thou, that he wyl regarde thy request? he shall not care for golde, nor for al the that excel in strength. How longe not thou the tyme, till there come a nyghte for the, to let other people in thy steade. But beware that thou turne not asyde to wyckednesse & synne whiche byther to thou hast chosen more then mekenesse. Behold, God is of a mightie hye power: Where is there suche a gyde & lawe gruer as he? Who wyl reprove hym of hys ways? Who wyl save vnto hym: thou hast done wronge.

¶ Consider howe great and excellent hys workes be, to whome all men loue and prayle: yet wonder at hym, and yet they se hym but starte of. Beholde: so great is God, that he passeth our knowledge, neyther are we able to come to the experyence of his yeares. * He turneth the water to small dropes, he dry-ueth his cloudes together for to raine, so that they poure downe and droppe vpon men. He can spede out the cloudes (a coueryng of his Tabernacle) and cause hys lyghte to shyne vpon them, and to couer the bottom of the see.
By these thynges gouerneth he hys people and geueth the aboundaunce of meat. With the cloudes he bydeth the lyghte: and at hys commandement it commeth agayne. The refuge vpon therof sheweth he to his frendes and to the carell.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

¶ Eliph proueth that the wysdome of God is unsearchable.

A This my hert is astonnyed, & moued out of hys place. Heare then the sounde of his voyce, and the noyse þ goeth out of his mouth. He gouerneth every thyng vnder the heauen, & hys lyght reacheth vnto the ende of þ worlde. A roaryng voyce foloweth hym: for his glorious maiesty geueth such a thundre clappe, that (though a mā heare it) yet maye be not perceaue it afterwarde. It geueth an horrible sounde when God sendeth out his voyce: great thynges doth he, which we can not comprehend. * When he commaundeth the snowe, it falleth vpon the erth: As soone as he geueth the rayne a charge, immediatly the fowres haue their strength, & fall downe he sendeth feare vpon every man, that they myght knowe theyr owne workes. The beastes creepe into theyr denes, & take their rest.
Out of the South cometh the tempest, and calde out of the north.

At the birth of God, the frost commeth, and the waters are shed abrode. He maketh the cloudes to do theyr labour in geuyng moystnesse, and agayne with hys lyghte he dryueth awaye the cloude. He distributeth al so on euery syde, accordyng as it pleaseth him to deale out his workes, that they maye do: whatsoeuer he commaundeth them tho-rowe the whole worlde: whether it be to pu-nysh any lande, or to do good vnto the, that seke hym.

¶ Herken vnto this (O Job) stande still, & and consider the wonderous workes of God.
Art thou of counsell with God when he doth these thynges? When he causeth the lyghte to come forth of hys cloudes: Arte thou of hys counsell, when he spreadeth out the cloudes?
Hast thou the perfect knowledge of his wonders: and how thy clothes are warme, when the lande is still thowowe the South wynde?
Hast thou helped hym to spreade out the heauen, whiche is to loke vpon, as it were caste out of cleare metal? Teach vs what we shall saye vnto hym, for we are vnnmete, bycause of darkenesse. Shall it be tolde hym what I saye? Shuld a man speake, or shuld he kepe it backe? For every man seeth not the lyghte that he keepeth clere in the cloudes, which he cleareth when he maketh the wynde to blowe Golde is brought out of the North, but the praple and honour of Gods feare, commeth from God hym selfe. It is not we that can fynde out the almyghtie: for in power, equitye, and ryghtousnesse, he is hyer then can be expressed. Let men therfore feare hym, for there shall noman se hym that is wyle in his owne conceyte.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

¶ The wonders and maruailes that the Lord hath done from the begynnyng.

¶ Then answered the Lord vnto Job: out of the storme and sayde: what is he, that bydeth his mynde with foolyshe wordes? * Gyde vpon thy loynes lyke a man, for I will question with the, & thou gyue me a direct aunswere. Where wast thou when I layed the foundations of the earth? Tell playnely, yf thou hast vnderstandyng. Who hath measured it, knowest thou? Or who hath spede the lyne vpon it? Where vpon stande the pillers of it? Or who layed the corner stone thereof? Where wast thou when the monyng starrs playd me together, and all the chyldren of God reioysed triumphantly
? * Who shut the see with doores when it

hake for the as a chyld oute of hys mothers wombe: When I made the cloudes to be a coner for it, and swaddled it with the darke: When I gaue it my commaundement, makinge doyes and barres for it, sayinge: Hyther to walte thou come, but no further: and here shalt thou lape downe thy proude and hye waues. Hast thou gyuen the moynynge his charge (as soone as thou wast bozne) and shewed the daye spyngge hys place, that it myght take holde of the corners of the earth and that the vngodly myght be shake out.

They tokens and weapons are turned lyke claye, and set vp agayne: as the chaungynge of a garmente. The vngodly shalbe dysappointed of theyr lyght, and the arme of the proude shalbe broken. Camest thou euer into the grounde of the see: or walkeddest in the lowe corners of the depe: haue the gates of death be opened vnto the, or hast thou sene the doores of the shadowe of death: hast thou also perceyued how hode the earth is:

If thou hast knowledge of all this, then shewe me where lyght dwelleth, and where darkenesse is: that thou mayest bringe vs vnto theyr quarters: if thou canst tell the waye to theyr houses.

Canwest thou (as thou wast bozne) how olde thou shouldest be: Wentest thou euer into the treasures of the snowe, or hast thou sene the secret places of fowle, which I haue prepared agaynst the tyme of trouble agaynst the tyme of battayle and warre: By what waye is the lyght parted, & into what lande breaketh the East wynde: Who deuydeth the aboundaunce of waters into ryuers, or who maketh a waye for the lyghte-nyng and thundre, that it watereth and moystrureth the drye and barren groude: to make the grasse growe in places where no bodye dwelleth, and in the wyldernes, where no man remayneth: Who is the father of rayne: Who hath begotten the droppes of dew: Out of whose wombe came the yse: Who hath gendred the coldenesse of the yse: that the waters are as harde as stones, and lye coyled aboute the depe. Wyle thou bynde the swete influences of the seuen starres: Or art thou hable to breake the cyrcle of heauen:

D Canst thou bypunge forth the moynynge starre or the eueninge starre at conuenient tyme, and conuey them home agayne: Knowest thou the course of heauen, that thou mayest set vp the ordynauce thereof vpon the earth: Moreover, canst thou lyft vp thy voyce to the cloudes, that they maye poure downe a great rayne vpon the: Canst thou thundre also that they maye go theyr waye, and be obedient vnto the, sayinge: Lo, here are we: Who gyueth sure wyldome or steadfast vnderstandynge: Who nombereth the cloudes in wyldome: Who styllith the vehemēt waters of the heauen: Who turneth the sters to dust, and then to be clottes agayne: Wyle thou hunt the preye from the lyon, and fede his whelpes lyng in theyr denues, and lurkyng in theyr couches: Who prouideth meate for the rauens, when his yonge are crye vnto God, & flye about for lack of meate:

The xxxix. Chapter.

God speaketh vnto Job, shewynge hym by the example of his wykes that his ryghteousnesse is vnderstande.

Knowest thou the tyme when I the wyld geestes byng forth theyr pounce, amonge the hye rocks: Or playest thou wayte when the byndes be to fauone: reckenest thou the monethes after theyr engendring: that thou knowest the tyme of theyr bearyng: Or when they lye downe, when they cast theyr yong ones, and when they are deliuered of theyr trauayle and payne: how theyr yong ones growe vp, and waxe greete thowge they be byng: When they go forth and retorne agayne vnto them: Who letteth the bynde alle go free, or who looseth the bondes of the mule: Euen I which haue gyuen the bynde nesse to be theyr house, and the mylledale to be theyr dwellinge place. That they may gyue no force for the multitude of people in the cyties, neyther regarde the cryng of the dyspoure: but seke theyr pasture about the maytynes, and folowe the grene grasse. Wyle the Uyncorne be so tame as to do serayce, or abyde styll by the crybbe: Canst thou bynde the poche about the Uincorne in the fowle, to make hym plowe after the in the valley: Wylest thou trust hym (because he is shy) or commyt thy labour vnto hym: Wylest thou beleeue hym that he wyl bypunge hys thy corne, or to carpe anye thyng vnto the barne: Canst thou the fayne wynges of the peacockes, or wynges and fetters of the stozke: For he leaueth his egges in the earth, and layeth them in the dust. He remembereth not, that they myghte be troden with feet, or broken with some wyld beaste. So harde is he vnto his yonge ones, as though they were not hys, and labourer in vayne without any feare. And that because he hath taken wyldome from hym, and hath not gyuen hym vnderstandynge: When his tyme is that he shal lyft vp on hye, he careth not for horse nor man.

Hast thou gyuen the horse his strength, lerned him to bowe downe his neck, so that he letteth hym selfe be dyspoure forth as a Gethopper, wher as the stower wyng that he maketh, is fearfull: he breaketh the grounde with the hooves of his feet, & he in his strength, and runneth to mete the harmet men. He layeth asyde all feare, hys sto-mache is not abated, neyther starteth he a-backe for any swearde. Though the quiers rattle vpon hym, though y spear and wynde gylte: yet ruseth he in fearly, and beareth vpon the grounde. He feareth not the noyse of the trompettes, but as sone as he heareth the shawmes blowe, rushe (sayeth he) for he smellith the battaile as a farr of, the noyse, the captaynes and the shouting.

Commeth it thowowe thy wylsome, that the goshauke flyeth towarde the South: Doth the Eagle mount vp, and make his nest on hye at thy commaundement: He abydeh in stony rockes, and vpon the hye toppes of herde mountaynes, where no man can come from thence seketh he his pzaie, and loketh far about with his eyes. His yonge ones are fed with bloude: * and where any dead body lyeth there is he immediatly.

¶ Job humbled hym selfe vnto God: the description of Behemoth and Leuiathan.

Moreouer, god spake vnto Job and sayd: Can he that struieth with the almyghty, be at rest?
Shuld not he which disputeth with God, geue hym an an-swere? Job answered the Lord sayng: Beholde, I am to vyle a persone to answere the, therefore wyll I lape my hande vpon my mouth. Ones oz twyle haue I spoken, but I wyll say nomore.

Then answered the Lord vnto Job out of the storme, and sayde: * gyde by thy loynes nowe lyke a man, and tel me the thynges that I wyll aske the. Wylt thou disanul my iudgement? Or wylt thou condempne me, that thou thy selfe mayst be made ryghtous In thy power then lyke the power of God: Maketh thy voyce suche a sounde as hys doth. Then arme thy selfe with thyne owne power, vp, decke the in thy ioly aray, pour out the indignacyon of thy wrath: se that thou caste downe all the proude, loke well, that thou makest all suche as be stubburne, to obey: treade downe al y vngodly in theyr place, cast them downe into the dust, and couer theyr faces with darkenes: Then wyll I confesse vnto the also, that thyne owne ryght hande shall saue the.

Beholde, the beste Behemoth (whom I made with the) which eateth haye as an ore: lo, howe strong he is in his loynes, and what power he hath in the nauyll of hys body. He spreadeth out his taylor lyke a Cedre tree, all hys baynes are styrre. Hys synnes are lyke pyres of bzasse, his rydge bones are lyke stanes of yron. Kysse, when God made him, he adorned the wyldernesse for hym, that the mountaynes shulde geue hym grasse, where all the bestes of the feelde take theyr pastyme. He lyeth amonge the reedes in the mosses, the fenes hyde hym with theyr shadowe, and the wyllowes of the bzooke couer hym round about. Lo, without any labour, myght he drynke out of the whole floude, and suppe of Jordan without any tranayle. Who dare laye hand vpon him openly, and undertake to cathe hym? Or who dare put a hoke throrowe his nose, and laye a snare for hym?

Darest thou drawe out * Leuiathan with an angle, or bynde his tounge with a snare?
Canst thou put a ryng in the nose of hym, or boozie hys chaw the thowowe with a naule?
Wyll he make many saye wordes with the (thynkest thou) or flatter the? Wyl he make a couenaunt with the? Or art thou habile for to compell him to do the contynual seruice?
Wylt thou take thy pastyme with hym, as with a byrde, or geue him vnto thy maydes, that thy companions may make a refection of hym, or that he may be parted amonge the marchaunt mē? Canst thou fyll the basket with his skyn: or the fyfthe panyer with hys beade? Darest thou laye hande vpon him? It is beter for the to consider what harme might happen the thowowe, and not to touch him.
For when thou thynkest to haue holde vpon hym, he shall begyle the.

¶ Of the same Leuiathan, wherof is mentioned in the Chapter aloze.

Man is so cruell, that is ha-ble to styre hym vp. * Who is habile to stande before me? Or who hath geue me any thyng afozehande, that I maye re-warde hym agayne? All thyn-ges vnder heauen are myne: I feare him not whether he threaten or speake saye. Who lyfeth hym vp, and stryppeth hym out of hys clothes, or who taketh hym by the byt of his bydle? Who openeth the doze of hys face: for he hath horrible teeth round about.
Hys body is couered with scales, as it were with wyldes lockte in, kepte, and well compact together. One is so ioynted to another that no aye can come in: Pea, one hangeth so vpon another, and stycketh so together, that they cannot be sondred. Hys nelynge is lyke a glystynge fyre, and his eyes lyke the moynynge wyne. Out of his mouth goe for-ches, and out of hys nostrelles there goeth a smoke, lyke as out of an hote sethyng pot.
Hys bzeth maketh the coolest burne, and the flame goeth out of his mouth. In his necke remayneth strength, and nothyng is so laborious for him. The members of his body are iointed so strayte one to another, and cleaue so fast together, that he cannot be moneye,

Job.

His hert is as harde as a stone, and as fast as the stythpe that the smyth smytheth vpon when he goeth, the myghte are asfayde, and feare troubleth them. If any man drawe out a swearde at him, it shal not hurt him: there may neither speare, saueylng nor byestplate abyde hym. He setteth asynuche by a strawe, as by yron, and asynuche by a rotten stocke, as by brasie. He starteth not away for hym that bendeth the bowe: and as for flyng ston-nes, he careth as muche for stubble as for the he couereth his darter no better than a strawe, he laugheth hym to scorn that shaketh the speare: he treadeth the gold in the myre, lyke the sharp potsherdes. He maketh the depe to boyle lyke a pot, and styreth & see togyther lyke an oynment. He maketh & pathe to be sene after him, & depe is his walkyng place.
Vpon earth is there no power, like vnto his for he is so made that he feareth not. If a mā wyl conspyde all the hye thynges, this same is a kynge ouer all the chyldren of wyde.

¶ The repentance of Job. He prayeth for his frendes and his goodes are restorid double vnto him.

¶ Job. xlii. 2.

Then Job answered the Lord, and sayde: * I knowe that thou hast power ouer all thynges, and that there is no thought hyd vnto the for who can kepe his owne counsaile so secrete, but it shal be knowen: Therfore haue I spoken that I vnderstode not, the thynges & are so hye, and passe myne vnderstanding. & hearken thou vnto me also, & let me speake: and were vnto the thyng that I wyl aske the. I haue geuf diligent care vnto the, & now I se with mine eyes. Wherefore I gyue myne owne selfe the blame, and take repentance in the dust and ashes.

¶ Nowe when the Lord had spoken these wordes vnto Job, it fortuneth that the Lord sayde vnto Eliphaz the Themanite: I am displeased with the, and thy two frendes, for ye haue not spoken of me, the thyng that is ryght: lyke as my seruaunt Job hath done.

Therefore, take you nowe seven oxen, and seuen rammes, and go to my seruants Job, and offer vpon your selues a burnt offering, and my seruaunt Job shal pray for you. For wyl I accepte: and not deale with you after your folyshnesse: in that ye haue not spoken the thyng which is ryght, lyke as my ser-uaunt Job hath done.

¶ So Eliphaz the Themanite, & Theman the Dabite, & Sopbar & Aasamathite with theyr wyue, and byd accordyng as the Lord commaunded them. ¶ The Lord also accepted the person of Job, and the Lord turned the captiuitie of Job, wher he was prayd for by frendes: Yea the Lord gaue Job * twyf as much as he had afore.

And then came there vnto hym all his brethren, all his sisters, & all they that had ben of his acquaintance afore, & byd came byed with him in his house, wondryng at hym, and comfortyng hym ouer all trouble, that the Lord had brought vpon hym.
Euery man also gaue hym a certayne summe of money, and a Jewell of golde.

And the Lord made Job ryche the was before: for he had fourtyne. ¶ She-vi. ¶ Camels: a. ¶ Poche of oxen, and a. ¶ Alles. He had seuen sonnes also, and three doughters. The fyrst doughter called he Je-mina, the seconde Kezia, & the thyrde happuch. In al the lande were no women so fayre, as the doughters of Job: and theyr father gaue them enheritaunce among theyr brethren. After this lyued Job an hundred and fourty yeres, so that he sawe * his chyldren, & his chyldren's chyldren into the fourth generacis.

And so Job dyed, beynge olde, & of a parfyte age.

The thyrde psalme.

DOMINE QVID MVLTIPlicATI.

The psalme of Dauid when he fled from the face of Absolon his sonne.

Lord, how are they increased, that trouble me: manye are they, that syte agaynst me. Wany one there be, that say of my soule: there is no helpe for hym in the Lozde.

Delia. But thou, O Lozde, art my defender: thou art my woxshyppe, and the lyfter vp of my heed. I byd cal vpon þ Lozde to my voyce and he hearde me out of hys holy hill. Delia.

I layde me downe and slept, and toke vp agayne, and the Lozde sustayned me.

I wyl not be afrayde for ten thousandes of the people þ haue set them selues agaynst me rounde aboute. Up Lozde and helpe me.
O my God, for thou smyttest all myne enep es vpon the cheke bone, thou hast broken the teeth of the vngodly. Saluatyon belon geth vnto the Lozde, and thy blessinge id v pon thy people. Delia.

VERBA MEA AVRIBVS.

To hym that excelleth in songes of musyke, a psalme of David.

R Under my wordes, O Lord, consider my meditacion. O hearken thou unto the voyce of my callinge, my kynge and my God, for unto the Lord I make my prayer. My voyce shall be heard by thynges. O Lord, carely in the morninge will I direct my prayer unto the, and will loke up. * For thou art the God that hath no pleasure in wickednes: neither shall any euell dwell with the.

Such as be folowes, shall not fraude in thy syghte, thou hatest all them that worke vanitye. Thou shalt destroye them that speake leasing: the Lord will abhorre both the bloud-thyrt, and dyssolute man.

But as for me I will come into thy house: ^{in thy feare will} I will worshippe toward thy holy temple. Leade me, O Lord, in thy right wylenesse because of myne enemies: make thy waye playne before my face.

For there is no faythfulnesse in hye mouthe: they inwarde parties are very wickednes.

* They throte is an open sepulchre: they flatter with thynges. Destroye thou the Lord, let them perishe thowowe their owne ymaginacions, cast them out in the multitude of thy vngodlynesse: for they haue rebelled agaynst the. And let all them that put they trust in the reioyce: they shall euer be greuyng of thakes, because thou defendest them: they that loue thy name shall be topfull in the. For thou Lord wilt geue thy blessinge unto the righteous: and with thy fauourable kyndnes wilt thou defend hym, as with a shield.

I am weary of my groning, euery night walke I my bed, and water my couche with my teares. My bewtye is gone for very trouble, & wyne a waye because of all myne enemyes. * I waye from me all ye that worke vanitye: for the Lord hath hearde the voyce of my weeping. The Lord hath hearde my peticion, the Lord will receaue my prayer. All myne enemyes shall be confounded and sore vexed, they shall be turned backe and put to shame suddenly.

The. vii. psalme.

DOMINE DEVS MEVS.

Signation of David which he sauge vnto the Lord in the busynes of a iud the sonne of Ieremi.

O Lord my God, in the haue I put my trust: save me from all them that persecute me, and deliuer me: Leaste be denoued my soule lyke a Lyon, and teare it in peeces, while there is none to helpe. O Lord my God, * pf I haue done any fache thyng, or pf there be any wickednes in my hand.

Pf I haue rewarded euell vnto hym that dealt frendely with me, ye: I haue bewrayed hym, that without any cause is myne enemye. Then lette myne enemye persecute my soule & take me: pee, let hym treade my lyfe downe vpon the earth, and laye myne honour in duste. Sela. Stande vp, O Lord, in thy wrath: and lyfte vp thy leste, because of the indignacions of myne enemyes: as for me, in the iudgement that thou hast commaunded. And so shall the congregacion the people come aboute the, for they shall thefore lyfte vp thy leste agayne.

The Lord shall iudge the people, geue sentence with me, O Lord, accordinge to my rightnesse, and accordinge to the innocencye that is in me. O let the wickednes of the vngodly come to an ende: but thou the iust. For the righteous God tryeth the very hertes and raynes.

By the commeth of God, whiche prefereth them that are true of herte. * God is a righteous Judge, ^{stronge and patient}, and God is prouoked euery daye. Pf a man will not turne, he will whet his swerde, he hath bent his bowe and made it ready. He hath prepared the instrumentes of death: he hath set his arrowes agaynst the persecutours. Behold, * he traunpleth with mylchefe, he hath increased sorowe, and brought forth vngodlynesse. * He hath grauen and digged a pytte, and is fallen him selfe into f destruction that he made (for other.) For hys trauaple shall come vpon hys owne head: & his wyckednes shall fall vpon his owne pate.

I will geue thanks vnto the Lord accord-yng to his ryghteousnes, and will praple f name of the Lord the moost hyest.

DOMINE DOMINVS NOSTER.

To hym that excelleth in Githith, a psalme of Dauid.

Lord our gouernoure, howe excellent is thy name in all the worlde, thou that hast let thy gloz aboue the heuens: Out of the mouth of very babes and suckynge babes f ozyednyed strength because of thine enemies, that thou myghtest sylle the enemye and the auenger.
 For I will confyde the heuens, euen f wokes of thy syngers: the Moone & the starres which thou hast ozyednyed. What is man, that thou art mynde full of hym: and f sonne of man, that thou wilt test hym: Thou ma-dest hym lower then the angels, to crowne hym with gloz and wozshyppe. Thou ma-dest hym to haue dominyon of the woyses of the handes: and thou haste put all thynges in subiectyon vnder his fete. All thepe and oren, pee, and the beastes of the felde. The foules of the ayre, and the fsh of the see, and whatsoeuer walketh thorowe the pathes of the ftes. O Lord our gouernoure, howe excellent is thy name in all the worlde.

CONFITEBOR TIBI DOMINE.

To hym that excelleth vpon Almyth Labben, a psalme of Dauid.

I will geue thanks vnto the, O Lord with my whole herte, I will speake of all my meruelous woyses. I will be gladde, and reioyce in the, pee, my longes will I make of thy name, O thou mooste hyest. Whyle myne enemies are bzpuen backe, they shall fall, and perthe at thy presence. For thou hast maynteyned my ryghte, and my cause: thou art let in the trone f iudge. Thou hast rebuked the heathen, and destroyed the vngodly, thou hast put out theyr name for euer and euer: O thou enemy destruccions are come to a perpetuall ende: euen as the cyties which thou hast destroyed theyr memorial is perished with them. But the Lord shall endure for euer, he hath also prepared hys seate for iudgment. For he shall iudge the worlde in ryghteousnes, and myn-stre the true iudgment vnto the people. The Lord also will be a defence for the oppressed: & euen a refuge in due tyme of trouble. And they f knowe thy name, will put theyr trust in the: for thou (Lord) hast neuer fayled them that seke the. O praple the Lord, & whiche dwelleth in Sion, heare the people of his do-ynges. For when he maketh inquisycyon for blond, he remembzeth them: and f forget-teth not the complayne of the poore.

Haue merce vpon me (O Lord) conce-dze the trouble whiche I suffer of them that hate me, thou that iprest me vp from the gates of death. That I maye heare all thy praples: with in the postes of f daughter of Sion, I will reioyce in thy saluacyon.

The heathen are suncke downe in the pytte that they made: in the same net whiche they hyd pynely, is theyr owne fote taken.

The Lord is knowen to execute iudge-ment: the vngodly is trapped in f wozyche of his owne handes. A comyderacyon. Sela.

The wycked shall be turned vnto hel, and all the people that forget God: For f poore shall not be alwaye forgotten, the papente abydinge of f iudgement shall not perthe for euer.
 O Lord, and let no man haue f upper hand let the heathen be iudged in thy syghte.

Put them in feare (O Lord) that the heathen maye knowe them selues to be but men. Sela.

The. x. psalme.

VT QUID DOMINE.

Why standest thou farre off (O Lord) and hydest thy face in f nedefull tyme of trouble? The vngodly for his owne lust, doth persecute the poore: let them be taken in f craf-tie wilpnes that they haue ymagined. For f vngodly hath made boast of his owne hertes desyre, & speaketh good of f couetous, whom God abhoyreth. The vngodly is so proude that he careth not for God, neyther is God in all his thoughtes. His wayes are alway greuous, thy iudgements are farre about out of his syghte, and therefore desyleth he all his enemyes. For he hath sayde in his herte: Tuthe I shall neuer be cast downe, there shall no harme happen vnto me. His mouth is full of cursynge, and disceate and fraude, vnder his tonge is vngodlynes & vanytie: he sytteth lurkynge in the cheuys corners of the stretes, & pynely in his lurking dens doth he murder f innoct, his eyes are set agaynst f poore. For he lyeth waiting secretly: euen as a Lyon, lurketh he in his denne: he may rauyn the poore. He doth rauyn the poore, when he getteth hym into his net. He falleth downe and humbleth hym selfe, that the congregacyon of the poore may fall into f hand of his captaynes. He hath sayde in his herte: Tuthe, God hath forgotten. He hydeth away his face, and he will neuer se it. Arise (O Lord God) and lyfte vp thine hande, forget not the poore. Therefore shalde the wyhis herte: tush, thou God carest not for it? Surely thou hast sene it. For thou beholdest vngodlynes and wronge. That thou mayst take the matter into thy hande: the poore comytteth hym selfe vnto the, for thou arte the helper of the frendlesse. Breake þ the power of the vngodlye and malicyous, take awaye his vngodlynes, and thou shalt fynde none.

The lord is kynge for ever and ever, and the heathen are pershed out of the lande. Lord, þ hast hearde the desyre of the poore: þ preparatest they: harte & thyn eare herkeneth thereto. To helpe the fatherles and poore vnto they: right: that the man of the earth be no more exalted agaynst them.

IN DOMINO CONFIDO.

To the chaunter a Psalme of David.

In the Lord put I my trust: howe saye ye then to my soule: that she shuld lie as a byde vnto your pyl? For lo, the vngodly bende their bowe, and make ready they: arrowes within the quiver, þ they may piously shote at them whiche are true of herte. For the foundacyons wylbe cast downe, and what hath the ryghteous done? * The Lord is in his holy temple: the Lordes sette in heauen. His eyes conyder (on the poore) and hys eye lyddes tryeth the chyldren of men.

The Lord aloweth the ryghteous: but þ vngodly, and hym that dellyeth in wyckednes, doth his soule abhorre. Upon the vngodly he shall raygne thares, fyre, and hymistone, storme & tempest: thys shalbe they: porcyon to dyspnye. For the ryghteous Lord loueth ryghteousnes: his countenaunce wyl beholde the thyng that is iust.

SALVVM ME FAC DOMINE.

To hym that excelleth vpon an instrumente of cyght strynges a Psalme of Danyd.

Help (me) Lord, for there is not one godly man lefte. For the faythfull are minished fro amonge the chyldren of men. They talke of vanite, every one woth hys neyghboure, they do but flatter woth they: lyppes and dissemble in they: double herte. The Lord shall rote out all disceitfull lyppes, and the tonge that speaketh proude thynges. Which haue sayde: woth our tonge wyl we preuaile: we are they that ought to speake, who is Lord ouer vs? Now for þ confortles troubles sake of the neaby, * and because of the depe syghthyng of the poore, I wyl vp (sayeth the Lord) and wyl helpe every one, from hym that swelleth agaynst hym, and wyl set the at rest. The wordes of the Lord are pur wordes even as þ spluer, whiche from earth is tryed and purifyed seven tymes in þ trye.

Thou shalt kepe them (O Lord) thou shalt preserue him from this generacyon for ever. The vngodly walke on every hye: when they are exalted, þ chyldren of men are put to rebuke.

He xfolc hath sayde in his heart: there is no God. They are corrupt, and become abhominable in their doings: * there is not one þ doeth good. on (no not one). The Lord looked downe from heuen vpon the chyldren of men, to se if there were any that wolde vnderstande and seke after God. But they are all gone out of the waye, they are all together become abhominable: there is none that doeth good, no not one. on (they) thys is an open reproche: woth they congre they haue dyscreued, the passion of aspyre to haue they: lyppes. ERAVDI DOMINE IVSTICIAM.

A prayer of Dauid.

Care the righte, O Lorde, consydre my complaynte, and hearken vnto my prayer that goeth not oute of fayned lyppes. Let my sentence come forth from thy presence: & let thine eyes loke vpon þ thyng that is equal. * Thou hast proued and vtryed myne herte in the nyght season, þ haste tryed me, and shalt fynde no wychednesse in me: for I am vtterly purposed & my mouth shall not offende. Because of many wo-rdes that are done agaynst the wordes of the lyppes I haue kept me from the waters of the deeper. O holde thou vp my goynges in the pades, that my fete steps app not.

I haue called vpon the, O God, for thou shalt heare me: encline thine eare to me, and hearken vnto my wordes. Shewe thy marue lous louynge kyndnesse, thou that art the saupour of them which put they trust in the from such as resyst thy righte hande. Keepe me * as the apple of an eye. hyde me: vnder þ shadowe of thy wynges. From the vngodly that trouble me: myne enemyes compasse me round about, to take awaye my soule. They are enclosed in they owne fat: & their mouth speaketh proude thynges. They lye waiting in our waie on euery syde, turning they eyes downe to the grounde. Like as a Lyon that is greedy of hys praye, and as it were a Lyons whelpes lurking in secreete places.

Up Lorde, dysapoynte hym and cast hym downe: deliuer my soule from the vngodly, which is as a swerd of thine.

From the men of thy hand, O Lord from the men, I saye, & from þ euell worlde, which haue they porcyon in this lyfe, whose helpe thou spilest wth thy righte treasure. They haue chyliden at they desyre: and leaue the rest of they substance for they babes. But as for me, I wyl beholde thy presence in righte troubles: and when I awake vp after thy likenes I shalbe satisfied with it.

The. xviii. Psalme.

DILIGAM TE DOMINE.

To the chaunter of Dauid the seruante of þ Lord, which spake vnto the Lorde þ wordes of this songe (in the daye that þ Lorde deli-uered hym from the hande of all his ene-myes, & from the hande of Saule) and he sayde.

I wyl loue þ, O Lorde, my strength The Lorde is my stony rocke, & my defence, my saupour, my god, & my might, in whom I wyl trust my bucker, the hozne also of my saluatio, and my refuge. * I wyl call vpon the Lord which is worthy to be prayesd, so shal I be safe fro myne enemyes. * The sorowes of death com-passed me, and the ouerflowynges of vngodlynnesse made me afraide. The paynes of hel came aboute me, the snares of death ouertoke me. In my trouble wyl I call vpon the Lorde, and complayne vnto my God.

So
shall he heare my voyce out of hys (vnto) temple, & my complaynt shal come before hym, it shall entre euen into his eares. * The earthe trembled & quaked, the very foundacions also of the hylls shoke & were remoued, because he was wroth. There went a smoke out of his presence: and a consuming fyre out of his mouth, so that cooles were kyndled at it. He bowed the heauens also, and came downe, & it was darcke vnder his fete. He rode vpon the cherubins, & dyd flye, he came flying vpon the wynges of the wynde. He made darcknesse his secreete place: hys paupers rounde about a bouthe hym, wth darke water and thycke cloudes to couer hym. At the bryghtnesse of hys presence hys cloudes remoued, hayle, stones, & cooles of fyre. The Lorde also thun dred out of heuen, and the west gaue his thun der, haylestones and cooles of fyre.

he sent out his arrows and scattered them, he cast forth lightningpikes, & destroyed them.

The springes of waters were sene, & the foundacions of thy rounde world were discouered at thy choppynge, O Lord, at þy blasting of the breath of thy displeasure. He shall send downe from the heygth to fetch me, and shall take me out of many waters. He shall deliuer me from my strongest enemy, and from them which hate me: for they are to mighty for me They preynted me in þy daue of my trouble: but the Lorde was my upholder.

he brought me forth also into a place of liberty: he brought me forth, even because he had a fauour vnto me. The Lorde shall rewarde me after my ryghteous dealing: accordyng to the cleannes of my handes shall he recompence me. Because I haue kept & wayed of the Lorde: & haue not forsaken my God as the wycked doth. For I haue an eye vnto a dislawe: & wyll not cast out his comaunde mentes fro me. I was also vncorrupt before hym: and eschued myne owne wyckednes.

Therefore shall the Lorde rewarde me after my cruellous dealing: and accordyng vnto the cleannes of my handes in his eye syghte.

With the holy thou shalt be holy, and with a perfect man thou shalt be perfect.

D With the cleane thou shalt be cleane: and with the froward thou shalt learne froward nes: For þu shalt saue the people that are in ad uersyte, and shalt bring downe þe hye looker of the proude. Thou also shalt lyght my can dell, the Lord my God shall make my backe nes to be lyght. For in the Lord I shall discomfyte an host of men: and in the helpe of my god I shall leape ouer the wall.

The waye of God is an vnderpleyd way
 * the worde of the Lorde also is tryed in the fyre: he is y^e defender of all t^he that put the^r trust in hym. For * who is God but the Lord o^r who hath any strength except our God?
 It is god that girdeth me wth strength of war and maketh my waye perfect.

* He maketh my fete lyke hertes fete: and setteth me vp on hye. * He teacheth myne han-des to fyght, and myne armes shall breake euen a bowe of Steele. Thou haste geuen me the defence of thy saluacion: thy ryght hand also shall holde me vp, and thy lounge co-recepon shall make me great. Thou shalt make rowme prougbte vnder me for to go, & my fete steppes shall not slipde. I wyl fo-lowe vpon myne enemies, and ouertake the, neyther wyl I turne agayne, tyl I haue destroyed them. I wyl swyre them, that they shall not be able to stand: but fall vnder my fete: Thou hast gydded me with strength vnto the battayle, thou shalt throw down myne enemies vnder me. Thou hast made myne enemies also to turne their backs vpon me, and I shall destroye them & hate me.

* They shall crye, but there shall none to helpe them: yee, euen vnto the Lorde shall they crye: but he shall not heare them. I wil breake them as smal as the dust before I wind I will cast them out, as the clape in the sieges. Thou shalt deliuer me from all wranglings of the people: and I shall make me the brack of the Heathen. A people whome I haue not known shall serue me.

Alone as they heare of me they shal me: but the straunge chyldren shall dissemble with me. The straunge chyldren shall saye, and be asrapde out of theyr pylons.

The Lord lyueth: a blessed be my strong helper, and praised be the God of my saluation. Euen the God which seeth that I be triged: and subdueth the people vnto me. It is he that deliuereth me from my enemies, and letteth me vp aboue myne aduersaries: thou shalt ryd me from the wicked man.

* For this cause I wyl geue thanks vnto O Lord, amonge the Gentiles a song vnto thy name. * Great prosperitie be vnto his kyng: and the wealth louing

CELI ENARRANT,

To the chaunter, a psalme of David.

The Heauens * declare the glorye of God, and the firmamente sheweth his handy worck. One day telleth another: & one nyght certifieth another. There is nether spech nor langage, but theyr voyces are heard amonge them.
* Their sound is gone into all landes: & their wordes into the endes of the world. In them hath he set a tabernacle for the sunne, which commeth forth as a hyppogrome out of his chamber, and reioyseth as a gyant to runne his course. It goeth forth from the west parte of the heauen, and runneth about vntill the ende of it agayne, & there is nothing left from the heate therof.

The lawe of \S Loyde is an vnderlychew conuerting the soule. The testimony of the Loyde is sure, and giveth wisdom vnto symple. The statutes of the Loyde are right and reioyce the heart: the commaundment of Loyde is pure, and giveth lyght vnto the feare of the Loyde is cleane, & commendeth for ever, & iudgements of the Loyde are true and ryghteous altogether.

Psal. xlii. xliii. xlv. xlvii.

* Psal. xlii.

I O prayse the Lorde ye þe feare him: Magnify him al ye of the seed of Jacob, & feare him all ye seed of Israel. * For he hath not despised nor abhorred the lowe estate of þe poore: he hath not hyed his face fro him, but whē he called vnto him, he hearde him. My prayse is of the in the great cōgregaciō, my vowes wyl I performe in the syght of them that feare him. The poore shall eate, & be satisfied: they that seke after þe Lorde shall prayse hym, your herte shall lyue for euer. All þe endes of the worlde shall remembre them selues, & be turned vnto the Lorde, and all the kyndredes of þe nations shall worshyp before hym. For the kyngdom is the Lordes, and he is the gouernour amonge the people.

G All such as be set vpon earth, haue eaten and worshipped. Al they that go downe into the dust, shall knele before him, & no man hath quickened his owne soule: * (or) seeke shall serue hym: they shall be counted vnto the Lorde for a generation. They shall come, & (or) shall declare his righteousnesse: vnto a people that shall be bozne, whome the Lorde hath made.

DOMINVS REGITME.

A Psalme of Dauid.

I he Lorde is my shepheard: therfore I lack nothing. He shall fede me in a greene pasture, and leade me forth beynde þe waters of comfort. He shall conuert my soule, and bring me forth in the pathes of righteousness for his names sake. Psea, though I walke thorow þe valley of the shadow of death, I will feare no euyl, for thou art w me: thy rod & thy staff comfort me. Thou shalt prepare a table before me against them þe trouble me: thou hast annointed my heed w oyle, & my cup shall be full. But (or) louyng kyndnesse & mercye shall folowe me al þe dayes of my lyfe, and I wil dwel in the house of the Lorde for euer.

A Psalme of Dauid. (in the first daye of the Sabbath.)

* Psal. xlii. b
1. cor. x. 1

1. cor. x. 1

I he * earth is the Lordes, and all that therein is: the compasse of the worlde, and they that dwell therein. For he hath founded it vpon the sees, & prepared it vpon the floudes. * Who shall asende into þe hyll of the Lorde? Or who shall clype vp in his holy place? Euen he that hath cleane handes and a pure hert: and that hath not lye vpon his mynde vnto vanitie, nor sworne to deceyue. (his myght) He shall receyue þe blessing fro þe Lorde, and righteousness from the God of his saluacion. This is the generation of them that seke him, euen of them that seke thy face, O Jacob. Selā. Lyst vp your heedes O ye gates, & be ye lyst vp, ye euer-lastyng doores, & the kyng of glory shall come in. Who is the kyng of glory? It is the Lorde strong & myghty, euen þe Lorde myghtie in battayle. Lyst vp your heedes (O ye gates) & be ye lyst vp ye euerlastyng doores, and the kyng of glory shall come in. Who is this kyng of glory? Euen the Lorde of hostes, he is the kyng of glory. Selā.

C The. xlv. Psalme.
AD TE DOMINE LEVAVI.

Of Dauid.

Vnto þe (O Lorde) wyl I lyst vp my soule. My God, I haue put my trust in the: O let me not be confounded: neyther let myne enemyes triumph ouer me. * For all they that hope in the shall not be ashamed: but such as transgresse without a cause, shall be put to confusion. Shewe me thy wayes, O Lorde: teache me thy pathes. Leade me in thy truthe, & learne me, for thou art the God of my saluacion: in the hath ben my hope all the daye longe. Call to remembrance (O Lorde) thy tender mercyes, and thy loving kyndnesse, which haue ben euer of olde.

O remembre not thy synnes and offences of my youth, but accordyng vnto thy mercy thynke thou vpon me (O Lorde) for thy goodnesse. Gracious and righteous is the Lorde, therfore wyl he teache synners in the waye. Them that be meke shall he guide in iudgemente: and such as be gentle, him shall he learne his way. Al the pathes of the Lorde are mercye and truthe, vnto such as kepe his couenaunt and his testimonies.

* For thy names sake, O Lorde, be merciful vnto my synne, for it is great. What man is he that feareth the Lorde? him shall he teache in the waye that he shall chole.

His soule shall dwell at ease, and his land shall enderit the lande. The secrets of the Lorde is amonge them that feare hym: & he wyl shewe them his couenaunt. Synners are euer lokinge vnto the Lorde, for he shall plucke my fete out of the net. Turne vnto me, and haue mercy vpon me: for I am desolate, and in misery. The sorowes of my herte are enlarged. O hyngre thou me out of my troubles. Loke vpon myne auersitie and my scrype, and forgyue me al my synne. Cōsyde myne enemyes how many they are, and they beare a tyrannous hate agaynst me. O kepe my soule, and deliuer me: let me not be confounded, for I haue put my trust in the. Let perfectnesse and righteous dealinge wayte vpon me, for my hope hath ben in the. Deliuer Israel O God, out of all his troubles.

IUDICA ME DOMINE.

Of Dauid: (also be it in the Sabbath.)

BE thou my * iudge, O Lord, for I haue walked innocently: my trust hath bene also in the Lord therfore shall I not fal. * Examine me, O Lord, & proue me, & trye oute my reynes, and my hert. For thy louyng kyndnesse is before myne eyes, & I wil walk in thy truthe.
I haue not dwelt with vayne personnes, neither wil I haue fellowship with þe disceyt-full. I haue hated the congregacyon of the wicked, and wyl not syt amonge þe vngodly.
* I wyl wash my handes in innocencye, O Lord, and so wyl I go to thyne aulter.

That I maye shewe the voyce of than-ksgyuyng, and tell of all thy wonderous workes. Lord, I haue loued the habita-cion of thy house, & the place where thyne honour dwelleth. O put not vp my soule wth the synners, nor my lyfe with the bloudedrinke. In whose handes is wickednesse, and theyr ryght hande is ful of gyftes. But as for me I wyl walke innocently: O deliuer me, and be mercysfull vnto me. My foote standeth ryght: I wyl praysse the Lord in the congregacions.

The xxvii. Psalme.
DOMINVS ILLUMINATIO.

Of Dauid.

The Lord is my * lyght and my sal-uacion: whom then shall I feare? the Lord is the strength of my lyfe: of whom then shall I be afrayed? When the wicked (euen myne enemyes and my foes) came vpon me, to eate vp my flesh, they stumbled and fell: Though an host of me were layed agaynst me, yet shall not my herte be afrayed: and though there rose vp warre a-gaynst me, yet wyl I put my trust in hym.

One thing haue I despyed of the Lord, whiche I wyl requyre: euen that I maye dwell in the house of the Lord al the dayes of my lyfe, to behold the fayre beauty of the Lord: and to vlyte his temple. For in the tyme of trouble he shall hyde me in his * tabernacle: yea in the secreete place of his dwel-lyng shall he hyde me, and let me vp vpon a * roche of stone. And now shall he lyfte me vpon my heed aboue myne enemyes rounde about me. Therfore wyl I offre in his dwelllyng, an oblation with great gladnesse I wyl synge & speake prayles vnto the Lord.

Herken vnto my voyce, O Lord, when I crye vnto the, haue mercy vpon me, and heare me. My hert hath talked of the: Seke for my face: thy face Lord wyl I see. O hyde not thou thy face fro me, nor caste thy seruant awaye in displeasure. Thou hast ben my incountre, leaue me not, neyther for-saake me, O God of my saluacyon.

When my father and mother forsake me, the Lord taketh me vp. Teache me thy waye O Lord, and leade me the ryght way bycause of myne enemyes. Deliuere me not ouer into the wyll of myne aduersaries, for there are falsse witnessen rylen vp agaynst me, and suche as speake wronge. I wuld utterly haue saynted: but that I pleye ve-rely to le the goodnesse of the Lord in þe land of the lyuyng. O tarpe thou the Lordes

AD TE DOMINE CLAMABO.

A Psalme of Dauid.

Ato the wyll I crye, O Lord, my strength: thynke no scozne of me, lest yt thou make þe as though thou herdest not, I become lyke the that go downe into the pyr. Heare the voyce of my humble petitions, when I crye vnto the, wher I holde vp my handes toward the mercyseate of thy holy temple. O vlycke me not awaye (neither destroie me) with the vngodly and wicked doers * which speake frendly to theyr neyghebours, but ymagin myschefe in theyr hertes. * Retwarde them accordyng to their dedes, and accordyng to þe wyckednesse of theyr owne inuencions. Recompence them after the worke of theyr handes: paye them that they haue deserued. For they regarde not in their mynde the workes of the Lord, nor the operacyon of his handes therfore shall he bryake them downe, & not buyde them vp. Praise be the Lord, for he hath heard the voyce of myne humble petitions. * The Lord is my strength & my shylde: my hert hath trusted in hym, & I am deliued: therfore my hert daunceth for ioye, and in my songe wyl I praysse hym. The Lord is their strength: and he is þe wholsom defence of his annoynted. O laue thy people, & gyue thy blessing vnto thyne enchersaunce: fede them, and let them vp for euer.

EXALTABO TE DOMINE.

A Psalme and songe of the dedicatiō of the house of Dauid.

I Will magnify the, O Lord, for thou hast set me vp, and not made my foes to triumphe ouer me. O Lord my God, I cryed vnto the, and thou hast healed me. Thou Lord hast brought my soule out of hell: thou hast kept my lyfe, from the that go downe to the pyt. Spynge pray- les vnto the Lord (O ye sayntes of his) and gine thanks vnto him for a remembraunce of his holynesse. * For his wrath endu- reth but the twynklyng of an eye, and in his pleasure is lyfe: heynesse maye endure for a nyght, but ioye cometh in the mornynge.

And in my prosperytie, I sayde I shal ne- uer be remoued: thou Lord of thy goodnesse haddest made my hyl so stryge. Thou dyd- dest turne thy face ^(fro me) and I was trou- bled. Then cryed I vnto the, O Lord, & gat me to my Lord ryght truly. What profyte is there in my bloude, when I go downe to the pyt? What the dust gyue thā- kes vnto the? O what it declare the truthe: heare, O Lord, and haue mercy vpo me

D Lord be thou my helper. Thou hast tur- ned my heynesse into ioye: thou hast put of my sackcloth, and gydded me with gladnesse. Therefore shal (euery good man) synge of thy prayse without ceasynge: O my God, I will gyue thanks vnto the for euer.

C The. xxxi. Psalme

IN TE DOMINE SPERAVI.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

I the, O Lord, haue I put my trust: let me neuer be put to confusyon: de- lyuer me in thy ryghteousnesse.

Howe do wne thyne eare to me, make hast to delyuer me. And be thou my stronge rock, and house of defence, that thou mayest saue me. For thou art my stronge rocke, & my castell: Be thou also my gypde, & leade me for thy names sake. Drawe me out of the net that they haue layed pynclie for me, for thou art my strength. * Into thy han- des I comende my spyrte: For thou hast re- deemed me, O Lord thou God of truthe.

I haue hated them that holde of super- stitious vanities, & my trust hath ben in the Lord. I will be glad and reioyse in thy mercy: for thou hast cōspydred my trouble, & hast knowen my soule in aduersities.

Thou hast not put me vp into the hād of the enemye, but hast set my fete in a large rowme. Haue mercy vpon me, O Lord, for I am in trouble, & myne eye is consumed for very heynesse: yea my soule & my body

For my lyfe is warren olde with heyn- nesse, & myne eares with mournynge. My strength faileth me because of mine iniquite and my bones are consumed. I became a reprofe amonge all myne enemyes, but spe- cially amonge my neighbours, and they of myne acquaintance were afrayed of me: they that did se me woldout, conuerped them selues from me. I am cleane forgootten, as a deyd man out of mynde: I am become lyke a broken vessel. For I haue herde blas- phemy of a multitude: and frare is on euery syde whyle they conspyre together agaynst me, and take their counsaile to take away my lyfe. But my hope hath ben in the, O Lord, I haue sayde: thou art my God.

My tyme is in thy hande, delyuer me fro the hād of myne enemyes, and fro them that persecute me. Shewe thy seruante the lyght of thy countenance, & saue me for thy mercyes sake. Let me not be confounded, O Lord, for I haue called vpon the: let the vngodlye be put to confusyon, and be pū- sylvence in the graue. Let the lyng lynes be put to silence, which cruelly, dishonestly & despitously speake agaynst the righte.

O how plectfull is thy goodnesse, which thou hast laped vp, for the p fers the: and that thou hast prepared for the, & put thy trust in the, euen before the sonnes of men.

Thou shalt hyde them pryncely by thy owne ptesence fro the promokynge of all men: thou shalt kepe the secretis in thy tabern- cle, fro the strep of tonges. Thākes be to the Lord, for he hath shewed me maruylous great kyndnesse in a stronge cytie. And whē I made hast, I sayd: I am cast out of sight of thyne eyes. Auerthelesse, I herde a voyce of my prayer when I cryed vnto the.

Gloue the Lord, al ye his sayntes, for the Lord preseruethe the that are saynt, and plenteously rewarde the the pious.

* Be stronge, and be shall stably p- uert, all ye that put your trust in the Lord.

BEATI QVORVM.

An instruction of Dauid.

Blessed is he, whose vanytye is couered. * Blessed is he, who the Lord imputeth no syn, in whose spyrte there is no gyle. For I helde my tonge, my bones consumed, & thowow my dayly complaynyng. For the Hande is heuy vpon my daye and nyght, and my myopsture is lyke the droun in Sumer. Sela. I wyll knowledg my synne vnto the, and myne vnygheousnesse haue I not hyd. I sayde: * I wyll confesse my synnes vnto the Lorde, & so thou forgauest the wickednesse of my synne. Sela. For this shal every one that is godly, make his prayer vnto the in a tyme when thou mayest be foude, but in the great water floudes they shal not come nye hym. Thou arte a place to hyde me in, thou shalt preserve me from trouble: thou shalt compasse me about with thynges of deliuerance. Sela. I wyll enfourme the, and teach the in the waye wherein thou shalt goo: and I wyll gyde the with myne eye. Be ye not lyke horse and mule, which haue no vnderstandyng. Whose mouthes must be holden with byt and bydle, lest they fall vpon the. Great plagis remaine for the vngodly, but whoso putteth his trust in the Lorde, mercye enbraceth hym on euery syde. Be glad, O ye ryghteous, and reioyse in the Lorde: and be ioyful all ye that are true of herte.

EXULTATE IVSTI IN DOMINO.

Deliuere * in þe Lorde, O ye ryghteous, for it becometh wel þe iust to be thankful. * Praise þe Lorde with harpe, syngynge psalmes vnto hym with the lute and instrument of ten stringes. Syng vnto the Lorde a newe songe, syng psalmes lustelie (vnto hym) with a good courage. For the worde of the Lorde is tru, and all his woordes are faythfull. He louet ryghteousnesse and iudgement, the earth is full of þe goodnes of the Lorde. * By the worde of the Lorde are the heauens made: and al the hostes of the by the breath of his mouth. He gathereth þe waters of the see togyther as it were vpon an hepe, and layeth vpon the depe as in a treasure house. Let al þe earth feare the Lorde: stande in awe of him, al ye that dwel in the worlde.

* For he spake, and it was done: he commaunded, and it stode fast. The Lorde byngyth þe conseil of the hepythe to nought, and maketh the deuyces of the people, to be of none effect: (and casteth out þe counsailes of prynces)

The counsaile of the Lorde shal endure for euer: and the thoughtes of his herte from generation to generation. Blessed are the people whose God is the Lorde Jehouah, & blessed are the folke that haue chosen hym to be thei: inheritaunce. The Lorde lohed downe from heauen, and behelde all the chyldren of men: from the habytacion of his dwellyng, he conspydeth all them that dwell in the earth. He fashioneth all the hertes of them, and vnderstandeth all thei: woordes. There is no kynge that can be saued by the multitude of an host, neyther is any myghtie man deliuered by moche strenght.

A horse is counted but a wayne thyng to saue a man, neyther shal he deliuer any man by his great strenght. Beholde, the eye of the Lorde is vpon them that feare hym, and vpon them that put thei: trust in his mercy.

To deliuer thei: soules from death, and to fede them in the tyme of dearth. Dure soule hath paciently taried for the Lorde for he is our helpe and oure shyld. For oure herte shall reioyse in hym, by cause we haue hoped in his holpe name. Let thy mercyfull kynndesse, O Lorde be vpon vs, lyke as we haue put our trust in the.

the dust before the wynde, and the awgel of the Lorde scatryng them. Let theyr waye be darke and slippery, and let the awgel of the Lorde persecute the. For they haue pryncely layed theyr net to destroye me wout a cause, pea euen without a cause haue they made a pyt for my soule. Let a sodayne destruction come vpon him vnawares: and his net that he hath layed pryncely, catch him selfe: that he maye fall into his owne myschefe. And my soule be ioyfull in the Lorde: it shall reioyse in his saluacyon. All my bones shall saye, witnesse did rise vp: they layed to my charge thynges that I knowe not. They rewar ded me euyll for good, to the greates discomfort of my soule. Neuerthelesse, whel they were speke, I put on sacke clothe: and humbled my soule with fastyng and my prayer shall couerne into myne owne bosome.

I behaued my selfe as though it had ben my frende or my brother, I went heuily, as one that mourneth for his mother.

But in myne aduersitie they reioysed, and gathered them togyther: yea, the very abiectes came togyther agaynst me vnawares, makinge mooves at me, and ceased not.

Altho the flatterers were busy mockers, which gnasheth vpon me with theyr teeth.

Lorde, howe longe wilt thou loke vpon this? O deliuer my soule from the calamities which they byng on me, and my dearlyng from the Lyons. So wilt I gyue the thanks in the great congregacion I wyl prayse the amonge moche people.

is not for peace, but they ymagin dyscreet wordes agaynst them that are quyet in the lande. They gaped vpon me with theyr mouthes, and sayd: spe on the, spe on the: we dyd se it with oure eyes. This thou hast sene, O Lorde: holde not thy tonge that is not farre fro me, O Lorde. I wote and stande vpon to iudge my quarrell, auenge thou my cause, my God, and my Lorde. The xxxvi. Psalme.

D. X. IT INIVSTVS.

To the chaunter, of Dauid the seruante of the Lorde.

Merite sheweth me the vngodly: I see the vngodly, that is no feare of God before his eyes: For he flattereth hym self in his owne syght, tyll his abhominable synne be found out. The wordes of his mouth are vnyghteous and full of dyscreit: he hath left of to behaue him self wysely and to do good.

He ymagineth myschefe vpon his bed, and hath set hym selfe in no good waye: whether doth he abhorre any thinge that is good.

Thy mercye O Lorde, reacheth vnto the heauen, and thy faythfulnesse vnto the cloudes. Thy ryghteousnesse standeth lyke the stronge mountaynes: thy iudgements are lyke the greates depe. Thou Lorde shalt saue both man and beast: howe excellent is thy mercye O God: and the chyldren of men shall put theyr trust vnder the shadowe of thy wynges. They shall be satisfied with the plenteousnesse of thy house, and thou shalt gyue them bynke of thy pleasures, as out of the ryuer. For with the is the well of lyf, and in thy lyght, shall we se lyght.

O continue forth thy longyng vnto them that knowe the, and thy ryghteousnesse vnto them that are true of herte. O let not the foote of pryde come agaynst me: and let not the bande of the vngodly cast me downe. There are theyr fall: that work wickednesse: they are cast downe and shall not be hable to stande.

The xxxvii. Psalme. Ecce ego in manu tua NOLI EMULARI.

Ret not thy selfe by cause of the vngodlye: neyther be thou enuyous agaynst synners doers. For they shall soone be cut downe lyke the grasse, and be withered euē as the grene herbe.

But thy trust in the Lorde, and be doing good: dwell in the land and verely thou shalt be fed. Delight thou in the Lorde, & he shall give thee thy hartes desire. Commyte thy way vnto the Lorde, & put thy trust in him, and he shall bringe it to passe. He shall make thy ryghteousnesse as cleare as the lyght, & thy iust dealinge as the noone daye. Holde the styl in the Lorde, and abyde paciently vpon hym: but grue not thy selfe at hym, whose waye doth prosper agaynst the man & doth after euyl counsailes. Leane of from wrath and let go displeasure: fret not thy selfe, els shalt thou be moued to do euyl. Wicked doers shall be roted out: & they that paciently abyde the Lord, those shall inherite the lande.

Yet a lytle while, and the vngodly shall be cleue gone: thou shalt loke after his place: & he shall be a way. But the meke & myghty shall possesse the earth, and shall be refreshed in the multitude of peace.

The vngodly shall consayle agaynst the iust, & shall seth vpon hym with his teeth. The Lorde shall laugh hym to scoorne, for he hath scene, that his daye is comynge. The vngodly haue brauen oute the swerde, and haue bended their bowe, to cast downe the poore and needy, and to slaye suche as be of a ryghte conuersation. Their swerde shall go thorow them: owne hert, and their bowe shall be broken.

A small thyng that the ryghteous hath, is better then great rychesse of the vngodly. For the armes of the vngodly shall be broken, and the Lord vpholdeth the ryghteous.

The Lorde knoweth the dayes of the godlye, and they: inherite aunce shall endure for euer. They shall not be confounded in the perillous tyme, and in the dayes of death they shall haue ynough.

As for the vngodlye, they shall perishe: and synners of the Lorde shall consume, as the fat of lam bes, yea, euē as the smoke shall they consume awaye. The vngodly borroweth and payeth not agayne, but the ryghteous is mercifull and lyderall. Suche as be blessed of God, shall possesse the lande, and they that be curled of hym, shall be roted oute.

The Lord ordyeth a good mans gopuge, and maketh his waye acceptable to himselfe.

Though he fall, he shall not be caste away, for the Lorde vpholdeth him with his hande. I haue bene pounge, and nowe am olde: and yet I neuer the ryghteous forsaken, nor his seede begynne they: & heade.

* The ryghteous is euer mercifull, and lendeth, and his seed is blessed. Flye from euyl, and doo the thyng that is good: and dwell for euer. For the Lorde loueth the thyng that is ryghte, he forsaketh not his that be godly, but they are preserved for euer more: (The vngodly shall be punished:) as for the seed of the vngodly, it shall be rooted out.

The ryghteous shall inherite the lande, and dwell therein for euer. * The mouth of the ryghteous is exerceysed in wysdome, and his tongue wyll be talkyng of iudgement.

The lawe of his God is in his hert, and his goynges shall not slide. The vngodlye seeth the ryghteous, and seeketh occasyon to slaye hym. The Lorde wyll not leane hym in his hande, nor condemne hym when he is iudged. Hope thou in the Lorde, and kepe his waye, and he shall promote thee, that thou shalt possesse the lande: when the vngodlye shall perishe, thou shalt se it. I my selfe haue sene the vngodly in great power, and flourishyng like a grene bay tree: & he vanisshed awaye, & lo, he was gone: I sought him, but (his place) coulde no where be found.

Kepe innocencye, and take hede vnto the thyng that is ryghte, for that shall byngne a man peace at the laste. As for the transgressours they shall perishe togyther, and the ende of the vngodlye is, they shall be roted out at the last. But the saluacion of the ryghteous cometh of the Lorde, whiche is also they: strength in the tyme of trouble.

And the Lorde shall stande by them, and saue them: he shall deliuer them from the vngodly, and shall saue them, by cause they put they: trust in hym.

DOMINE NE IN FVRORE

A Psalme of Dauid for remembraunce.

Reue not to rebuke (O Lorde) in thynge angre: neyther chastise me in thy heuy displeasure. For thine arrowes sticke fast in me, and thy hande preisseth me sore. There is no healty in my flesh, by cause of thy displeasure, neyther is there any rest in my bones, by reason of my syn. For my wickednesse are gone ouer my heed, and are lyke a sore burthen, to benye for me to beare. My woundes synke & are corrupt, thorow my foolishnesse. I am brought into so great trouble and myserye, that I go mournynge al the daye longe.

For my loynes are fylled with a sore disease, and there is no whole part in my body.

I am feble and sore smitten: I haue roted for the very dysquetnesse of my herte.

They also sought after my lyfe, layed snares for me: and they that went aboute to do me euill, talked of wickednesse & ymagined disceyte all the daye longe. As for me, I was lyke a deafe ma & herde not: & as one that is dum, which doth not ope his mouth.

D I became eue as a man that heareth not: and in whose mouth are no reproches. For in the, O Lorde, haue I put my trust, thou shalt answer for me, O Lorde my God. I haue required, & they ^(euen my enemies) shoulde not triump ouer me: for when my sote slypte, they reioysed greatly agaynst me. And I trulpe am let in the plage, and my beupnesse is euer in my syght. For I wyl confesse my wyckednesse, and be sorp for my synne.

But myne enemies lyue, and are myghty: & they that hate me wrongfullpe, are many in nombze. They also prewarde euyl for good, are agaynst me, bycause I folowe the thyng that good is. Forsake me not (O Lorde my God.) Be not thou farre from me.

DIXI CUSTODIAM VIAS.

To the chaunter Jeduthun,
a Psalme of Dauid.

I sayd: I wyl take hede to my wayes & I offende not in my tonge. I wyl kepe my mouth (as it wer w a bydle) whyle the vngodly is in my sight. I helde my tonge, & spake nothyng, I kept silence: yea, euen so good wordes, but it was payne & grefe to me. My herte was hote within me, & whyle I was thus mulyng, the fyze kyndled: and (at the last) I spake with my tonge: * Lorde, let me knowe myne ende, and the nombze of my dayes: that I maye be certified how longe I haue to lyue. * Beholde, thou hast made my dayes as it were a spanne longe, and myne age is euen as nothyng in respecte of the: & verely every man lyuing is altogether vanitie. Selah. For man walketh in a vayne shadowe, and dysquyeteth hym self in vayne, he heapeth vpry chesse: & cannot tell who shall gather them.

And nowe Lorde, what is my hope / trulpe my hope is euen in the. Delpuer me from all myne offences, & make me not a rebuke vnto the foolish. I became domme, & opened not my mouth, for it was thy doinge.

C Take thy plage away from me: I am eue consumed by the meanes of thy heuy hande. When thou with rebukes dost chasten man for synne, & makest his bewtye to consume awaye, lyke as it were a mothe frettyng a garment. Every man therfore is but vanyte. Selah. Heare my prayer, O Lorde, and to thyne cares cōspyr my calling: holde not thy peace at my teares. For * I am a straunger with the, & a sojourner, as all my fathers were. O spare me a lytle, that I maye recouer my strength, before I go by, and be nomore sene.

EXPECTANS EXPECTAVI.

I wayted paciently for the Lorde, & he enclyned vnto me: and hearkened my callynge. He brought me out of the horrible pte, out of myre and claye, and set my fete vpon the rock, and ordred my goinges. And he hath put a newe songe in my mouth, euen a thanksgyunge vnto our God. Many shall feare, and shall put theyr trust in the Lorde.

* Blessed is the man, that hath set his hope in the Lorde, and tourned not vnto the proude: and to suche as go about with lyres. O Lorde my God, great are thy wonderfull workes, which thou hast done: lyke as be al so thy thoughtes which are to vs ward: and yet there is no man that ordreth them vnto vs.

If I wolde declare them, and speake of them, they shoulde be moo then I am able to expresse. * Sacrifice and meate offeringe thou woldeste not haue, but myne eares hast thou opened: burnoffringes and sacrifice for synne hast thou not requyred.

Then sayd I: Lo, I come. In the volume of booke it is wyrtten of me, & I shall fulfyll thy wyl, O my God: I am content to do it: yea, thy lawe is within my herte.

I haue declared thy ryghteounesse in the great congregation: Lo, I wyl not refrayne my lippes O Lorde, & that I knowest I haue not hyd thy ryghteounesse within my herte: my talkyng hath bene of thy truthe and of thy saluacion. I haue not kepte backe thy louynge merce & truthe fro the great congregation. Whither wyl not thy mercy frome O Lorde, let thy louynge kyndnesse and thy truthe alway prelerue me. For innumerable troubles are come aboute me, my synnes haue taken suche holde vpon me, that I am not hable to loke vp: yea, they are more then the heeres of my heed, and my herte hath sayled me. O Lorde, let it be thy pleasure to delpuer me, make haste (O Lorde) to helpe me. Let them be ashamed and confounded togyther that seke after my soule to destroye it: let them be dyspued backwarde & be put to rebuke that wishe me euyl. Let the be desolat & rewarde with shame I say vnto me: spe vpon the, spe vpon the. Let those & seke the, be ioyfull and glad in the: let suche as loue thy saluacion, saye alwaye the Lorde be praysed. To the chaunter, a Psalme for the chyldzen of Cozab.

Clappe poure handes together (all ye people) O synge vnto God wth the voyce of melodye. For the Loꝛde is hye and to be feared, he is the grete kyng vpon all the earth. He shal subdue þ people vnder vs, and the nacyns vnder our feet. He shal he shall chuse out an heritage for vs: euen the worshipping of Jacob whome he loued. Sela God is gone vp with a merry noyse, & the lord with a sounde of trumpet.

Our Singing prayles (singing prayles vnto) our God: Our singing prayles, singing prayles vnto our kynge. For God is kynge of all the earth singing prayles wth vnderstanding. God raggeth ouer the heathen. God sitteth vpon his holy seate. The princyes of the people are ioynd vnto the people of the God of Abraham for God (which is very hye exalted) both defende the earth, as it were with a shield.

MAGNVS DOMINVS.

A songe of a Psalme of the childre of Corah

Greate is the Lord, and byghlye to be praised, in the cytie of oure God, euen vpon his holy hill. The hill of Zion is a fayre place, & the ioye of the whole earth vpon it. North side lyeth the cytie of great kynge God is wel knownen in her palaces, as a sure refuge. For so, the kynge (of the earth) are gathered & gone by together. They marueiled, to se such thynges: they were astonysed, & sodenly caste downe. Feare came there vpon them, and sozow as vpon a woman in her trauaile.

Show shalt breake the thyppes of the see, shewe the East wynde. Lyke as we haue braide, so haue we sene in the cytie of Lord of hostes, in the cytie of our God. God vpon holyst the same for euer. Sela. Wile wayte for thy louing kyndnes (O God) in the myddes of the temple. (O God) accordyng vnto thy name, so is thy prayse vnto the worldes ende: thy ryght hande is full of righteousnes. Let the mount syon reioyse, and the daughter of Iuda be glad because of thy iudgements. Walke about Zion, and go rounde aboute her, & tell the towres therof.

Marche well her bulwokes, set vp her houses, that ye maye tell them that come after. For this God is our God for euer & euer, he shall be our guyde vnto death.

AUDITE HEC GENTES.

To the chaunter, a Psalme for the childre of Corah.

Hearke thys, all ye people: ponder it wth your eares, all ye that dwell in the world. hye and lowe: ryche, and poore, one wth another. My mouth shall speake of wysdome, and my darte shall make of vnderstandyng. I will encline my eare to the parable, & shewe my darte vpon the harpe. Wylde forsynde I haue in the dayes of wickednes: and when the wickednesse of my beles compasseth me rounde aboute: * There be some that put theyr trust in theyr Goodes, and boast them selues in the multitude of theyr ryches. But no man maye deliuer hys brother, nor make agreement vnto God for hym.

* For it coste more to redeme theyr soules, so that he must let that alone for euer. Yee, though he lyue longe: & se not the graue: & for he seeth, that wise men also dye, and perishe together: as well as the ignorant and foolyshe, and leaue theyr ryches for other. And yet they thynke, that theyr houses shall contynue for euer, and that theyr dwelling places shall endure from one generacyon to another, and call the landes after theyr owne names. Neuerthelesse, man wyl not abyde in honoure. Seynge he maye be compared vnto the beasts that perishe: thys is the waye of them. This is theyr foolyshe, and their posterite prayse theyr saying. Sela. They lye in the hell lyke shepe, death gnaweth vpon them, and the ryghteous shall haue dominacyon of them in the morning: theyr bewtie shall consume in the sepulchre oute of theyr dwelling. But God shall deliuer my soule from place of hel, for he shall receaue me. Sela. Be not afrayd though one be made ryche: or of the glory of his house be increased.

* For he shall carpe nothyng a waye with hym when he dyeth, neyther shall his pompe folowe hym. For whyle he lyued, he counted hym selfe an happye man: and so longe as he doeth well vnto thy selfe, men wyl speake good of the. he shall folowe the generacions of his fathers, and shall neuer se lyght. Van beyng in honoure hath no vnderstandyng, but is compared vnto the beasts, that perishe.

The Lord, euen the moste myghty god hath spoken, & called the world from the rising vp of the sunne vnto the goinge downe therof. * Out of syon hath God appeared in perfect bewtye.

Oure God shall come, and shall not kepe silence: there shall go before him a consuming fyre, and a myghty tempest shall be stirred vp rounde about hym.

He shall call the heauen from above, and the earth he maye iudge his people.

Gather my sayntes together vnto me, those that haue made a couenaunte with me, wth sacrifice. And the heauens shall declare his ryghteousnes, for God is Iuge him selfe. Sela.

when the prophet Nathan came vnto hym after he was gone into Bethsabee.

Have mercy vpon me (O God) after thy goodnesse: accordyng vnto the multytude of thy mercyes, doe awaye myne offences. Washe me thorowly fro my wychednes, & cleanse me from my synne. For I knowledg my fautes, & my synne is euer

QVID GLORIAS IN MALICIA.

To the chaunter, an exhortaciō of Dauid when Dauid the Edomite came to him and shewed hym, sayng: Dauid is come to the house I bimelech.

Why boastest thou thy selfe, I chaunter, that I canst do myght?
Where as the goodnes of God

DIRIT INSPIENS.

To the chaunter vpon Mahalah, instruccyon of Dauid.

Why fooly the hodye hath sayde in his herte, there is no God. Consider they, & become abhominable in thyn wychednes: there is none that doth good.

God looked downe from heauen vpon the children of men, to se if there were any that wolde vnderstande & seke after God.

But they are all gone oute of the waye, they are all together become abhomyable:
there is also none that doth good, no not one.
Are not they without vnderstanding & worke wyckedness, eatyng vp my people as if they wolde eate bread: they haue not called vpon God. They were astrayde, where no feare was: for God hath broken the bones of hym that beleged the: & hath put them to confusyon because God hath despyled them.

O that the saluacion were geuen vnto Israel out of Syon: O that the Lord wolde deliuer his people out of captiuite.

Then shoulde Jacob reioyce, & Israel shoulde be ryght glad.

DEVS IN NOMINE TVO.

To the chaunter in melodies, an instruccyon of Dauid, when the zephites came and sayde vnto Dauid: hath not Dauid hys selfe amongst vs?

Salue me (O god) for thy names sake and auenge me in thy strength.

Hear my prayer (O God) & hea-ken vnto the wordes of my mouth.

For straungers are rylen vp agaynst me, and tyrannies (whiche haue not God befoze

LEAUI DEVS.

To the chaunter in melodies, an in-struccyon of Dauid.

Hear my prayer (O God) and hyde not thy selfe fro my peticyon. Take hede vnto me, and heare me, how I morne in my prayer, and am vexed.

The enemye curreth so, and the vngodly cometh on so fast: for they are mynded to doo me sune myschefe, so malyciously are they set agaynst me. My herte is disquieted within me, and the feare of death is fallen vpon me. Fearfulnesse and trembyng are come vpon me, and an horrible drede hath overwhelmed me. And I sayde: O that I had wings lyke a doue, for then wold I flye awaye, and be at rest. Lo, then wolde I get me awaye farre of, and remayne in the wyldernes. Selah. I wolde make hast to escape, because of the storme wynde and tempest.

Destroye theyr tonges (O Lord) & deuyde them, for I haue spyed vnyghtousnes and stryfe in the cytie. Dape and nyght go they about within the walles therof: myschefe all so, and sorowe are in the myddest of it. Wylkednesse is therein, dysscreace, and gyle go not out of her stretes. For it is not an open enemye that hath done me this dyshonoure: for then I coulde haue bozned it: neyther was it myne aduersary, that dyd magnify him selfe agaynst me: for then (by radurature) I wolde haue hys selfe from hym.

* But it was euen thou my companion, my gude, & myne owne familer frende.

We toke swete counsell together, & walked in the house of God as frendes. Lette deathe com hastily vpon them, & let them go downe quycke into hell, for wyckednesse is in theyr dwellnges, and amonge them.

As for me, I wyl call vnto God, and the Lord shal saue me. In the euenyng and monyng, and at none dape wyl I praye (& that instantly) and he shal heare my voyce.

It is he that deliuered my soule in peace from the battayle that was agaynst me: for there were many wyth me. Yee, euen God that endureth for euer: shal heare me, & bring them downe. Selah. For they wyl not turne nor feare God. He lapde hys handes vpon suche as be at peace wyth hym, and he brake his couenaunte. The wordes of hys mouth were softer then butter, hauyng war in hys harte: hys wordes were smother then oyle, & yet be they very swerdes. * O cast thy burthen vpon the Lord and he shal noryshe the and not suffre the ryghteous to fall for euer.

And as for them, thou (O God) shalt byngne them in to the pyt of destruction. The bloud thrustye and dysscreaful men shal not lyue out halfe theyr daies. Reuertheles, my trust shal be in the Lord (O Lord.)

Because thou hast bene my helper, therfore vnder the shadowe of thy wynges will I reioyse. My soule hangeth vpon the, thy right hande hath upholden me. These also like the hurte of my soule, they shal go vnder the earth. Let them fall vpon the edge of the sword, that they maye be a porcyon for fores. But the kynge shal reioyse in God: * all they also that sweare by hym shal be comen-ded for the mowthe of them that speake lyes, shal be stopped.

EXAUDI DEVS ORATIONEM.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

Hear my voice (O God) in my prayer, piersue my lyfe from feare of enemye. hyde me from the gathering together of frowarde, & fro the insurreccyon of wyched doers.
Which haue wher they: tonge lyke a sword & shote out their arrowes, euen bitter wordes that they maye preyenly shote at hym which is perfect: suddenly do they hyt him & feare not they courage them selues in myschefe, & co-men among them selues, how they maye laye shares: and laye, & no man shal se them.

They ymagine wychednes, & practyse it & they kepe secrete amonge them selues, every man in the depe of his hert. But God shal so denly shote at the with a swyft arrow, & they shal be wouided. Yee, they: owne tonges shal make them fall, in so much & who so seeth the shal laugh them to scoone.

And all men that se it, shal saye: this hath god done, for they shal perceaue that it is his woyke. The ryghteous shal reioyse in & lorde and put his trust in hym: & all they & are true of hert shal be glad.

TE DECET HIMNVS.

To the chaunter, a Psalme & songe of Dauid.

Thou (O God) arte prayled in Sion, & vnto the shal the vowe be performed (in Iherusalem) Thou that hearest the prayer vnto the shal all fleshe come. My misdedes preyenly agaynst me: Oh be thou mercyfull vnto our synnes. Blessed is the man whome thou cholest and receauest vnto the:
he shal dwell in thy court: and shal be satis-fyed with the pleasures of thy house, euen of the holy temple. Thou shalte sweue vs wonderfull thynges in ryghtuousnesse (O God) of our saluacion, thou that art the hope of all endes of the earth, and of them that remainye in the broode see: Whiche in hys strength setteth faste the mountaynes, and is girded about with power. Whiche styllith the ragynge of the see, and the noyse of his waues, and the madnes of the people. They also that dwell in the vntermoste partes (of the earth) shal be afrayd at thy tohens, thou that makest the outgoynge of the mornynge and euenynge to prayle the.

Thou visitest the earth, & blestest it: thou makest it very plentious. & be ryuer of God is ful of water, & preparest they: come: for so thou prouidest for the earth. Thou waterest her fozowes, & sendest rayne into & litle va-leyes ther of: & makest it soft with the droppes of rayne, & blestest thyncrease of it. Thou crownest the yere with thy goodnesse: & the cloudes droppe fatnesse. They shal dwelle vpon the dwellynge of the wyldernes: and the litle hylls shal reioyce on euery syde.
The foldes shal be full of shepe, the valleyes also shal stande so thicke with coyne, & they shal laugh and synge.

The. lxxvi. Psalme.

IVBILATE DEO.

To the chaunter. The songe of a Psalme.

Be ioyfull in GOD, all ye landes, synge prayles vnto the honour of his name, make his prayle to be glorious. Saye vnto god, O how wonderfull art thou in thy woyses: & how the greatnesse of thy powre shal thyne enemyes be founde lypers vnto the. & of all the woylde shal woysyppe the, synge of the, and prayse thy name.

Sela. O come hyther & behold the wokes of God, howe wonderful he is in his pynge towarde the chyldren of men. & he turned the see into drye land: so that they went thorow the water one fote: there byd we re-ioyse ther of. He ruleth with his powre foruer, his eyes beholde the people: and such as wyl not beleue, shal not be able to exalte the selues. Sela. O prayse our god (ye people) & make the voyce of his prayle to be heard.
Whiche holdeth oure soule in lyfe, and suffereth not our fete to slippe. For thou (O God) hast proued vs: thou also haste tryed vs, & as spluer is tryed.

Thou broughtest vs into the snare, and laydest trouble vpon our loynes. Thou sufferdest men to ryde ouer our heades, & we went thorow fire & water and & broughtest vs out into a welthy place. I wyl go into the house with burnt offringes, & wyl pay my vowe & which I promised w my lyps, & shalke with my mouth when I was in trouble.

I wyl offere vnto the, fat bent sacrificies with the incence of rammes. I wyl offere bullockes and goates. Sela. O come hyther and berhen all ye & feare God: and I wyl tel you what he hath done for my soule.

I called vnto hym w my mouth, and gaue hym prayles with my tong. Yf I encline to wychednes w my herte, the Lorde wyl not heare me. But God hath heard me, and consydered the voyce of my prayer.

Prayled be God whiche hath not called my prayer: nor turned his mercye fro me.

The lxxvii. Psalme.
DEVS MISEREATUR NOSTRI,
To the chaunter in melodys: a Psalme and songe.

God, * be mercyfull vnto vs, and blesse vs, and shewe vs the lyyght of his countenance: and be mercy full vnto vs. Sela. That thy wape maye be knowne vpon earth, thy sauour healeth amonge all nacions. Let the people praise the Lord: yea let all the people praise the Lord: let the nacions reioyce and be glad: for thou shalt iudge the folke rightously, and gouerne the nacions vpon earth.
Sela. Let the people praise the Lord, O God, let all the people praise the Lord. Then shall the earth bringe forth the her increase, and God, euen our owne God shall giue vs his blessinge. God shall blesse vs, and all the endes of the worlde shall feare hym.

The lxxviii. Psalme.
EXVOCAT DEVS,
To the chaunter, a Psalme and songe of David.

Let God arise, & let his enemies be scatred: let them also that hate him flye before him. Lyke as the smoke vandereth, so shalt thou drowne them awaye: and lyke as ware melted at the fyre, so let the vngodly perishe at the presence of God. But let the righteous be glad, & reioyce before God: let them also be merry and ioyful. Oh synge vnto God, and singe praises vnto his name: magnify hym that rydeth vpon the heauens, as it were vpon an hoyle: praise hym in his name: yea, and re-ioyce before him. * He is a father of the fatherlesse, and defendeth the cause of the wofdowes: euen God in his holy habitation.
He is the God that maketh men to be of one mynde in an hoyle, and byngeth the prisoners out of captiuitie: but letteth the rennagates continue in scarcenesse. O God, when thou wentest forth before the people, when thou wertest thozow the wilderness. Sela.
The earth shoke, and the heauens drowped at the presence of God: euen as Sinai at so was moued at the presence of God, which is the God of Israel. Thou, O God, sendest a gracious rayne vpon thyne enheritaunce, and refressheddest it when it was were. Thy congregacion shall dwell there:
in. For thou, O God, hast of thy goodnesse prepared for the poore. The Lord gaue the worde: great was the company of the preachers. * Kynges with theyr armyes dyd flye, and were discomfyted: and they of the householde deuoyded the people. Though ye dunke ypen amonge the pottes, yet shall ye be as the winges of a dove that is couered with syluer winges, and her fethers lyke golde.

When the Almyghty scatred kynges for theyr sake, the were they as white as snowe in zalmou. As the hyll of basan, so is Gods hyll: euen an hye hyll as the hyll of Basan.

Why hoppe ye so, ye hye hylls? This is Gods hyll, in the whiche it pleaseth hym to dwell: yea, the Lord wyll abyde in it for euer. The charrettes of God are twentie thoulande, euen thousandes of aungels: and the Lord is amonge them, as in the holpe place of Sinai. * Thou art gone vp on hye thou hast led captiuitie captiue, and recey-ued gyftes for men: yea, euen for thyne ene-myes, that the Lord God myght dwell amonge them. Wapled be the Lord dayly euen the God which helpeth vs, and poureth his benefytes vpon vs. Sela. He is our God, euen the God of whom cometh salua-cion: God is the Lord by whome we escape death. God shall wounde the heed of his enemies, and the deere scalpe of suche one as goeth on styll in his wickednesse. The Lord hath sayde: I wyll byynge my people agayne as I dyd from Basan: myne owne wyll I byynge agayne, as I dyd somtyme from the dye of the see. That thy fore maye be dipped in the bloude of thyne enemies, and that the tonge of thy dogges may be red thozow the same. It is well sent, O God, howe thou goest, howe thou, my God and kyng goest in the sanctuarie. The syngers go before, the mynstrels folow after: in symbles are the damels playing with the tymbrels.

Giue thanks O Israel, vnto God thy Lord in the congregacions; from the grounde of the hert. There is lytle Beniamin theyr ruler: and the princes of Iuda theyr counsaile, the princes of sabulon, and the princes of Asephthai. Thy God hath sent forth the strength for to stablysh the thyng, O God, that thou hast wrought in vs. For thy temples sake at Ierusalem: so shall kynges byynge presentes vnto the. When the companye of the speare men, and multitude of the myghty are scatred abrode amonge the beastes of the people (so that they humbly byynge peres of syluer) and when he hath scatred the people that deyle in war, then shall the princes come out of Egypte, the Pazzans lande shall soone stretch out her handes vnto God. Synge vnto God, O ye kyngdomes of the earth: O synge praises vnto the Lord. Sela. Whiche lyteth in the heauens ouer al from the begynnyng: Lo, he doth send out his voyce: yea, and that a myghty voyce. Ascribe ye the power to God ouer Israel: his mayntynance strength is in the cloudes. O God, wonderful arte thou in thy holy places, euen the God of Israel: he wyll giue strength and power vnto his people. Blessed be God.

CThe. lxx. Psalme.
SALVVM ME FAC DEVS.

To the chaunter vpon Solanum of David.

Aue me, O God: for the waters are come in euē vnto my soule. I sticke fast in the depe myre, where no ground is: I am come into depe waters, so that the floudes renne ouer me.

I am wery of crying, my throte is drye: my syght faileth me, for waytyng so longe vpon my God. They that hate me with out a cause, are mo then the heeres of my bed they that are myne enemyes, and wolde de-stroye me gyttlesse are myghtye: I payed the the thynges that I neuer toke. God thou knowest my simplicitie, and my fautes are not hyd from the. Let not them that trust in the O Lord God of hostes, be ashamed for my cause, let not those that seke the be co-founded thowow me, O Lord God of Israel.

And why: for thy sake haue I suffred re-proche: shame hath conered my face. I am become a strainger vnto my brethren: euē an aleaune vnto my mothers childe. For the zeale of thyne house hath euē eaten me, and the rebukes of the that rebuked the are fallen vpon me. I wepte and chastened my selfe with fastyng, and that was turned to my reproche. I put on a sacke cloth also, and they iested vpon me. They that syt in the gate, speake agaynst me, and the drōhardes make songes vpon me. But Lorde, I make my prayer vnto the in an acceptable tyme. Heare me, O God, in the multitude of thy mercye, euē in thy truche of thy saluaciō

Take me out of the myre, that I synke not. Oh let me be deliuered from the that hate me, and out of the depe waters. Let not the waterfloud drowne me: neither let the depe swallow me vp, and let not the pyt shut her mouth vpon me. Heare me, O Lorde, for thy louyng kyndnesse is comfortable: turne the vnto me, accordyng vnto the multitude of thy mercyes. And hyde not thy face from thy seruaunt, for I am in trouble: O haste the, and heare me. Drowne nye vnto my soule, and saue it: Oh deliuer me, bycause of myne enemyes. Thou hast know-en my reproche, my shame and my dishonour myne aduersaries are all in thy syght.

Thy rebuke hath broken my herte, I am ful of heynynesse, I loked for some to haue pi-tie vpon me, but there was noman: neyther founde I any to comfort me. They gaue me gall to eate, & when I was thyrsty they gaue me vynegre to drynke. Let their table be made a snare to take them selues with all, and let the thynges that shulde haue ben for thy wealth be vnto them an occasiō of falling. Let their eyes be blynded, that they se not: & euer bowe thou downe their backs Poure out thyne indignaciō vpon them, & and let thy wrathfull displeasure take holde of them. * Let theyr habytacion be voyde and noman to dwell in theyr tentes. For they persecute hym whom thou hast smyt.

& they talke how they may vexe them whom thou hast wounded. Let them fal from one wyckednesse to an other, and not come into thy ryghtousnesse. * Let them be tynned out of the boke of the lyving, & not to be written amonge the righteous. As for me, O I am poore and in heynynesse, thyne helpe (O God) shal lyfte me vp. I wyll praise the name of God with a longe: and magnifye it with thankesgyuing. This also shal please the Lorde better then a bullocke, that hath hoyes and hoofes. The humble shal con-fesse this, and be glad: seke ye after God, & your soule shal lyue. For the Lorde heareth the poore, and dyspayleth not his pylowes.

Let heauen and earth prayse hym, the see, and all that moueth therein. For God wyll saue Sion, and buylde the cyties of Juda, that men maye dwel there, and haue it in possessiō. The posteritie also of his iustices shal inherite it: and they that loue his name shal dwell therein.

DEVS IN ADIVTORIVM

To the chaunter of David to bypnyng to remembrance (because the Lorde chaun-ced me.)

Aste the, O God, to deliuer me: make haste to helpe me, O Lorde.

Haste the, O God, to deliuer me: make haste to helpe me, O Lorde. * Let them be shamed and confounded, that seke after my soule: let them be turned backward, and put to confusion that wyth me euill. Let them (as they rewarde) be loone brought to shame, that crye ouer me, there, there. But let all those that seke the, be ioyful and glad in the:
and let all suche as deliue in thy saluaciō, saye alwaye: the Lorde be prayed.

As for me, I am poore and in mys-ery, haste the vnto me (O God.) Thou art my helpe & my redemer: O Lorde, make no longe taryng.

ousnesse: encline thyne eare vnto me, & saue me. Be thou my stronge holde (when

DEVS IVDITIVM.

(S. Salomon.) For Salomon.

Pue the kyng the iudgements (O God) and thy rightouſneſſe vnto thy kynges ſonne. Then ſhal he iudge thy people: accordyng vnto righte, defende the poore. The mountaynes alſo ſhall bringe peace, and the lytle hylles rightteouſneſſe vnto the people. He ſhall kepe the ſymple folke by theyr right, defende the children of the poore, and puniſh the wronge doer. They ſhall feare the as longe: as the ſunne and moone endureth, from one genera- tion to an other. He ſhall come downe lyke the rayne in to a ſteece of woll, euen as the droppes that water the earth. In his tyme ſhall the righteous floreyſhe: yea, and a boundance of peace ſo longe as the moone endu- reth. * his dominion ſhal be alſo from the one ſee to the other, and from the floude vnto the worldes ende. They that dwell in the wylderneſſe ſhall knele before hym: his ene- mies ſhall lycke the duſt. * The kynges of Charis and of the Ales ſhall gyue preſen- tes: the kynges of Arabye and Saba, ſhall bringe gyftes. All kynges ſhal ſal downe before hym: all nacions ſhal do him ſeruyce.

For he ſhall delpue the poore when he cryeth: the neadye alſo and him that hath no helper. He ſhal be favourable to the ſymple and neadye: and ſhall preſerue the ſoules of the poore. He ſhal delpue theyr ſoules fro ſaluted and wronge, and deare ſhall theyr bloude be in his ſyght. He ſhal lyue, and vnto hym ſhall be gyuen of the gold of Arabia: Prayer ſhal be made euer vnto him, and day ly ſhall he be prayſed. There ſhall be an heape of corne in the earth, hys vpon the hyl- les: his frute ſhal ſhake like Libanus, ſhall be grene in the cytie, lyke graſſe vpon the erth.

His name ſhall endure for euer: his name ſhal remayne vnder the ſunne among the po- ſterities, which ſhal be bleſſed thowowe him, and all the hepythen ſhall prayſe hym.

Bleſſed be the Lorde God, euen the God of Iſrael: * whiche onely doeth wonderous thynges. And bleſſed be the name of his ma- ieſtye for euer: and all the earth ſhal be ſplend with his maieſtye. Amen: Amen.

VT QVID DEVS REPVLISTI.

In instruction of Asaph.

God, wherfore art thou abste fro vs so longe: why is thy wrath so dote agaynst the shepe of thy pa sture: O thynke vpon thy cōgre gacion whome thou hast purchased & redeemed of olde. Thynke vpon the trybe of thyne enderitaunce and mount Sion wherin thou hast dwelt. Lysse vp thy feete, that thou mayest utterly destroye euery enemy, which hath done enill in the Sanctuary. Thyne aduersaries robe in the myddes of thy con gregacions: and set vp their banners for to kens. He that Hewed tymber afore out of the thy che trees, was knowen to bypnyge it to an excellent worke. But nowe they breake downe all the carned worke therof with axes and hammers. * They haue la tye vpon thy holy places, and haue despyed the dwelling place of thy name, euen vnto the grounde. Yea, they sayd in theyr hertes let vs make hauocke of them all together: thus haue they brent vp all y^e houses of God in the lande. Wile se not our tokens: there is not one Prophet more, no not one is there a monge vs that vnderstandeth any more. O God, how longe shall the aduersary doo this dissonour: how longe shall the enemye blas pheme thy name: For euer: Why withdra west thou thy hande: why pluckest thou not thy ryght hande out of thy bosome, to con sume the enemye: For God is my kynge of olde: the helpe y^e is done vpon earth, he doeth it him selfe. * Thou dydest deaue the thorow thy power: thou brakest the head of the dragons in the waters. Thou smit test the heedes of * Leuiathan in peeces, and ga nest hym to be meate for the people in wy dernesse. Thou broughtest out fountaynes and waters oute of the harde rockes: thou dyleddest vp mynnyng waters. The daye is thyne, and the night is thyne: thou hast pre pared the lyght and the sunne. Thou hast let all the borders of y^e earth, thou hast made sommer and wynter. Remember this, O Lorde, howe the enemye hath rebuked, and howe the foolyshe people hath blasphemed thy name. Deliuere not the soule of thy turtle doue vnto y^e multitude of the enemye and forget not the congregacion of the poore for euer. Loke vpon the couenaunt for all the earth is full of darkenesse, and cruel habitations. O let not the simple go away ashamed: but let the poore and needye cry praye vnto thy name. Arise, O God, mayntayne thyne owne cause: remembre how the foolish man blasphemeth the daye.

Forget not the voyce of thyne enemye: the presumption of them that hate the, encrea seth euer more and more.

The lxxv. Psalme.

CONFITEBIMVR TIBI.

To the chaunter: Destroye not.

A Psalme and songe of Asaph.

Vnto the (O God) do we give than kes: yea, vnto the do we give than kes. Thy name also is so nre, & thou doest wonderous workes declare.
Whē I receiue y^e cōgregacion, I shall Iudge according vnto right. The earth is full and al y^e inhabitours thereof: I heare vp the pillers of it. Selā. I sayd vnto y^e folke: deale not so madly: and to the vngodly, let me not proue hoine. Set not vp your home on lye, & speake not with a lyfnecke. For y^e con fession cometh neyther from the east, nor from

Is the west, nor yet fro the south. And why? God is the Judge: he putteth downe one, and setteth vp an other. For in the hande of the Lorde is there a cuppe, and the wyne is red. It is ful myrte, and he poureth out of the same. As for the dyegges ther of all the vngodly of the earth shall dyncke them, and sucke them out. But I wyl talke of the God of Jacob, and prayse hym for euer.

All the hoines of the vngodly also wyl breake: and þ hoines of the ryghteous shal be exalted.

The lxxvi. Psalme.
NOTVS IN IVDEA.

To the chaunter in melodys, a psalme and songe of Asaph.

In Jewry is God knowne, his name is great in Israel. At Shalem is his tabernacle, and his dwellinge in Syon. There breake the arrowes of the bowe, the shylde, the swerde and the battayl. Sela. Thou art of moze honour and myght then the bylles of the robbers.

The proude are robbed: they haue slepte they slepe: and all the men whose handes were myghte haue founde nothinge. At thy rebuke (O God of Jacob) both the chariot and hoyle is fallen. Thou, euen thou art to be feared: and who maye stande in thy sight, when thou art angrie? Thou dyddest cause thy iudgement to be hearde from heauen: the earth trembled and was still.

When God arose to iudgement, & to helpe all the meke vpo earth. Sela. The fearfulness of man shall couerne to thy prayse: and the fearfulness of them shalt thou restryne.

Proumple vnto the Lorde pour God, and saye it al ye that be confid about him: bying presentes vnto him that ought to be feared. He shall restryne the spyrite of princes, and is wonderful amonge the kynges of the earth.

VOCE MEA AD DOMINVM.

To the chaunter for Jeduthun

a psalme of Asaph.

I will crye vnto God with my voyce: euen vnto God wyl I crye with my voyce: and he shall hearken vnto me.

In the tyme of my trouble I sought þ Lorde: my soze ranne and ceased not in the nyght season: my soule refused comforte.

When I am in heynesse, I wyl thynke vpon God when my heart is vexed, & wyl complayne. Sela. Thou holdest myne eyes waking: I am so feble, that I canot speake. I haue considered the dayes of olde, and the yeres that are past. I call to remembrance my longe: and in the nyght I commaunde with myne owne heart, and searche out my spyrites. Wyl þ Lorde absent him self for euer? And wil he be nomoze intreated?

Is his mercy cleane gone for euer? And is his promyse come vtterlye to an ende for euermoze? Hath God forgotten to be gracious? And wyl he shut vp his lounge kyndnesse in displeasure? Sela. And I sayde: It is myne owne infymitie: But I wyl remembre the peres of the ryght hande of the moost hyest. I wyl remembre the workes of the Lorde, and cal to mynde thy wonders of olde tyme. I wyl thynke al so of all thy workes, and my talking shalbe of thy doinges. Thy waye, O God, is holpe: who is so great a God as thou (our) God?

Thou art the God that doth wonders, and hast declared thy power among people. Thou hast myghtely deliuered thy people, eue þ somes of Jacob and Joseph.

Sela. The waters sawe the, O God: the waters sawe the and were afrayed: the depthes also were troubled. The cloudes poured out water, the ayre thondred: and thynne arrowes wet abroad. The voyce of thy thondre was herde rounde about, the lychtninges shone vpon the grounde, the earth was moued and shoke withall. Thy waye is in the see, and thy pathes in the greete waters: and thy fote stappes are not knowen. Thou leddest thy people lyke shepe, by the hande of Moses and Aaron.

ATTENDITE POPVLE MEVS.

An instruction of Asaph.

Heare my lawe, O my people, encline yur eares vnto the wordes of my mouth. * I wyl open my mouth in a parable, I wyl declare hard sentences of olde. Which we haue herd & knowen: and * suche as oure fathers haue tolde vs. That we shoulde not hyde them fro the chyldren of the generacions to come: but shewe the honoure of the Lorde, his myght, and wondrous workes that he hath done. He made a couenaunt with Jacob, and gaue Israel a lawe * which he commaunded our fozefathers to teache theyr chyldren.

That theyr posteritie myght knowe it, and the chyldren which were yet vnborne. Cordient that when they came vp, they myght shewe theyr chyldren the same.

That they myght put theyr trust in God and not to forget the workes of God, but to kepe his commaundementes. And not to be as their fozefathers: a faythlesse and stubburne generation: a generacion that set not theyr heart aright, and whole spyrite cleaued not stedfastlye vnto God. Lyke as the chyldren of Ephraim, which bringe barnacles and caryinge bowes, turned them selues backe in the daye of battayle. They kept not n of the couenaunte of God, and wolde not walke in his lawe. But forgat what he had done, and the wonderfull workes hat he had shewed for them. Maruailous thynges dyd he in the syght of oure fathers in the lande of Egypt, euen in the felde of zoan.

*Exo. xiii. b

* He deuoyded the see, and let them go thow: he made þ waters to stande on an hepe.

*Exo. xiii. e

Num. xx. b

* In the daye tyme also he led them with a cloude, and all the nyght thowowe w lyght of fyre. He cloude the harde *rockes in the wilderness, and gaue them drinke therof, as it had ben out of the greates depth.

*Exo. xviii. b

He brought waters out of the *stonye rocke, so that it gushyd out lyke the ryuers.

*1. Cor. x. f, a

Yet for al this, they synned moze agaynst hym, and prouoked the moost hpest in þ wilderness. They tempted God in theyr detes: and requyred meate for theyr lust.

They spake agaynst God also, sayinge:

Num. xi. b

¶ Shall God prepare a *table in the wilderness? He smote the stonye rocke in dede, that the water gushyd out, and the streames flowed withal: but can he geue breed also, or prouyde flesch for his people? When þ Lord hearde this, he was wroth: so the fyre was kindled in Jacob, and there came vþ heuie displeasure agaynst Israel. Bycause they blyued not in God, and put not theyr trust in his helpe. So commaunded he the cloudes about, and opened the doores of heauen.

Deut. xxi. a

Isa. xli. b

He rained downe Manna also vþ them for to eate, and gaue the *foode fro heauen.

Num. xi. e

So man dyd eate Angels foode, for he sent them meate plough. He caused the East wynde to blowe vnder the heauen, and thowowe his power he brought in the south-west wynde. * He rained flesch vþ them as thych as dust, and fethered foules lyke as the lande of the see. He let it fall amonge theyr tentes, euen rounde about theyr habitation.

Do they dyd eate, and wer well fylled: for he gaue them theyr owne desyre.

¶ They were not disappoynted of their lust.

* But whyle the meate was yet in t theyr mouthes, the heuie wrath of God came vþ them, and slue the weltheist of them: yea and smote downe, the chosen men that were in Israel. * But for all this, they synned yet moze: and blyued not his wonderous workes. Therfore, theyr dayes dyd he consume in vanitie, and theyr yeres in trouble.

* When he slue them, they sought hym: and turned them earlie, and enquyred after God. And they remembred that God was theyr strength, and that the hpgd God was theyr redeemer. Reuerthelesse, they dyd but flatter hym with theyr mouth, and dysembled with him in their tonge. For their heart was not whole with him, neyther continued they stedfast in his couenaunte.

But he was so mercifull that he forgane theyr misdeedes, and destroyed them not.

¶ Yea, many a tyme turned he his wrath awaye, and wolde not suffre his whole displeasure to aryse. * For he consydred that they were but flesch, and that they were euen a wynde that passeth awaye, and cometh not agayne. Many a tyme dyd they prouoke him in the wilderness, and greued him in the deserte. They turned backe, & tempted God, and moued the holy one in Israel.

They thought not of his hand, and of the daye when he deliuered them from the hand of the enemye. Howe he had wrought his myracles in Egypt, and his wonders in the felde of zoan. * He tourned theyr waters into bloude, so that they myght not drinke of the ryuers. * He sent lye amonge them, and deuoured them vþ: & frogges to bestrope them. He gaue their frutes vnto the *caterpillar, and theyr labour vnto the gnhopper. * He destroyed theyr vyues with hyle stones, and theyr mulberce trees with the frost. * He smote theyr cattel also with hyle stones, & their flockes w hote thomboltes. He cast vþ them the furiousnes of his wrath, angre, displeasure, and trouble and sent euill aungels amonge them.

* He made a way to his indignacion, and spared not theyr soule from death, but gaue theyr lyfe ouer to the pestilence. * And smote al the first bozne in Egypt, the moost principal and myghtyest in the dwellinges of Ham.

But as for his owne people, he led them for the lyke shepe, and caried them in the wilderness lyke a flocke. He brought them out safely: that they shoulde not feare, and ouerwhelmed theyr enemyes with þe

And brought them with in the bosom of his Sanctuarie: euen to his mountayn, which he purchaced with his ryght hand.

* He callt out the heyt he also before them, caused theyr land to be deuoyded amonge the for an heritage, and made the trybes of Israel to dwell in theyr tentes. So they tempted and displeased the moost hpgd God, and kepte not his testimonyes. But tourned theyr backes: and fell awaye lyke theyr fathers, startyng asyde lyke a broken bowe.

For they greued hym with theyr bylters, and prouoked hym to displeasure with theyr pimages. When God hearde this, he was wroth, and toke for displeasure at Israel. So that he forsoke the Tabernacle in Sulo, euen the tent that he had pitched amonge men. He deliuered theyr power into captiuitie, and theyr beauty into enemyes hande. He gaue his people ouer also into the swerde, and was wroth with his enemyes. He fyre consumed theyr strong men: and theyr maydens were not gyuen to maryage. Theyr priestes were slayne with the swerde, and there were no wyddowes to make to make lamentacion. So the Lord awaked as one out of slepe, and lyke a gyaunte entred with wyne. * He smote his enemies in the hynde partes, and put them to a perpetual shame. He refused the Tabernacle of Joseph, and chose not the tribe of Ephraim. * But chose þe tribe of Juda, euen the hill of Sion which he loued.

And there he buylded his temple on hye, and layed the foundation of it lyke þe grounde which he hath made continuallye. * He chose Dauid also his seruauit, and toke him awaye from the shepfoldes. As he was followinge the ewes great with ponge ones he toke hym, that he myght feede Jacob his people, and Israel his inheritaunce. So he fed them with a faythfull and true bert, & ruled them pyndently with all his power.

DEVS VENERVNT GENTES.

A Psalm of Asaph.

God, * the hepythen are come into thy inheritaunce, thy holy temple hane they decayed, and made Ierusalem an hepe of stones. * The deed bodyes of thy seruantes hane they gyuen, to be meate vnto the foules of the ayre, and the fleshe of thy synners vnto the bestes of the lande.

They bloude hane they shed lyke water in every lyde of Ierusalem, and ther was no man to bury them. * We are become an open shame vnto our enemyes, a very scoyne and derision vnto them that are round about vs.

Lozde, how longe wyle thou be angry? Shall thy gelousie burne lyke fyre for the hepythen that haue not knowen the, and vnto thy kingdomes that haue not called vnto thy name. For they haue deuoured Iacob, and layed waste his dwellynge place.

* Remember not our olde synnes, but haue mercy vpon vs, and that soone: for we are come to great myserie. Helpe vs, O God of oure saluacion, for the glorie of thy name: O deliuer vs, and be mercifull vnto our synnes for thy names sake.

* Wherfore do the hepythen saye: where is now thy God? O let the vengeance of thy seruantes bloud that is shed be openly shewed vpon the hepythen in our syght.

O let the sorrowfull syghynge of the praylers come before the: accosynge vnto the greatnesse of thy power: preserve thou those that are appoynted to dye. And as for the blasphemers (wherewith oure neyghbours haue blasphemed the) rewarde thou them O Lozde, euen folde into theyr bolome. So be that be thy people, and shepe of thy pasture, shall gyue the thanks for ever, and wyl alwaye be shewyng forth the thy prayse, from generation to generation.

QVI REGIS ISRAEL.

To the chaunter vpon Sossanin, a tē. Simonpe and Psalm of Asaph.

Hear, O thou shepherde of Israel, thou that ledest Joseph lyke a shepe. Weue thy selfe also thou that syttest vpon the Cherubins.

Before Ephraim Ben Jamin, and Manasses: styre vp thy strength, and come, helpe vs. Turne vs agayne, O God weue the lyght of thy countenance, and we shalbe whole. O Lozde God of hostes, how longe wyle thou be angry with thy people that prayethe? * Thou fedest them with the breed of teares, and gryneth them plenteousnesse of teares to drinke.

* Thou hast made vs a very stryfe vnto our neyghbours: and oure enemyes laughe vs to scoyne. Turne vs agayne, thou God of hostes, weue the lyght of thy countenance: and we shalbe whole. Thou hast brought a vyne out of Egypt: thou hast cast out the hepythen, and planted it. Thou madest rowme for it, and when it had take rote it fylled the land. The hilles were couered with the shadowe of it, and the bowes thereof were lyke the goodly Cedre trees. She stretched out her bzaunches vnto the see, and her bowes vnto the ryuer. Wyllyst thou then broken downe her hedge, that all they which go by, plucke of her grapes? The wyld boze out of the wood doth roote it vp and the wyld beastes of the felde deuoureth it. Turne the agayne, thou God of hostes loke downe from heauen: beholde, and vylit this vyne. And the place of the vyneyarde that thy ryght hande hath planted: and the bzaunche that thou madest so strong for thy selfe. * It is bzient with fyre, & cut downe, and they shall perishe at the rebuke of thy countenance. Let thy hande be vpon the ma of thy ryght hande, and vpon the sonne of man whom thou madest so stronge for thyne owne selfe. And so wyl not we goo backe from the: O let vs lyue, and we shall call vnto thy name. Turne vs agayne, O Lozde God of hostes, weue the lyght of thy countenance, and we shalbe whole.

M* songe shall be alwaye of the louyng kyndnesse of the Lorde, with my mouth wyl I euer be shewing thy truth from one generacyon to another. For I haue sayde: mercye shall be set vpon for ever, thy truth shalt thou stablysh in the heauens. * I haue made a couenaunte w my chosen. I haue sworne vnto Dauid my seruaunt: Thy seide wyl I stablysh for ever and sette vpon thy throne from one generacion to another. Selah. (O Lorde) * the very heauens shall prayse thy wonderous workes, & thy truth in the congregacyon of the sayntes. For who is he amonge & cloudes, that shall be compared vnto the Lorde? And what is he amonge the goddes that shall be lyke vnto the Lorde?

Ps. lxxviii. b.

* Psal. xix. a.

* Psal. lxxviii. b.

God is very greatly to be feared in the councell of the sayntes, and to be had in reuerence of all them & are aboute hym.

O Lorde God of hostes, who is lyke vnto the/thy truth (moost myghty Lorde) is on euery syde.

* Psal. xlii. a.

* Thou rulest the ragynge of the see. Thou stillest the waues therof, when they aryse. Thou hast subdued Egypte and destroyed it, thou hast scattered thyne enemies abroode wryth thy myghty arme. The heauens are thyne, & earth also is thine: thou hast layde the foundacyon of & rounde worlde and all that therein is.

Thou hast made the north and the south. Tabor and Hermon shall reioyce in thy name.

Thou hast a myghty arme, stronge is thy hande, and hye is thy ryght hande. Ryghteousnes and equitye is the habitacyon of thy seate, mercye and truth shall go before thy face. Blessed is the people (O Lorde) that can reioyce in the: they shall walke in the lyght of thy countenance.

They? deliue shall be dayly in thy name, and in thy ryghteousnes shall they make they? boast. For thou art the glory of they? strength, and in thy louyng kyndnesse shall lyft vpon our hornes. For the Lorde is oure defence. The holy one of Israell is oure kynge.

Thou speakest sometyme in vision vnto thy sayntes, and saydest: I haue layde helpe vpon one that is myghty, I haue created one chosen oute of the people. * I haue found Dauid my seruaunt: with my holy oyle haue I annointed him. My hande shall holde hym faste, and myne arme shall strengthen hym:

The enemye shall not be able to doo hym violence, the sonne of wychednesse shall not hurte hym. I shall smyte downe his foes before his face, & plague them that hate hym.

My trouth also and my mercye shall be with hym, and in my name shall his home be exalted. * I wyl sette his dominion also in the see, and his ryght hand in the heauens.

He shall call me: thou arte my father my God, & my stronge saluacyon. And I wyl make hym my & ste bozome, hyer then & kynges of the earth. My mercye wyl I kepe for him for evermore, & my couenaunte shall stand fast with hym.

His seide also wyl I make to endure for ever, and his throne as the dayes of heuen. But of his chyldren forsake my lawe and walke not in my iudgements. * Of they breake my statutes & kepe not my commandementes.

* I wyl visit they? offences with the rod, and they? synne with scourges.

Acuerthelesse, my louyng kyndnesse wyl I not utterly take frome hym, nor suffre my truth to faile. My couenaunte wyl I not breake nor alter the thyng that is gone out of my lippes. I haue sworne once by my holy nesse, that I wyl not faile Dauid.

His seide shall endure for ever, & his seate is lyke as the sunne before me.

He shall stande fast for evermore as the moone, & as the faythful wytnes in heauen. Selah. But thou hast abhorred and forsaken thyne anointed, & art displeased at hym.

Thou hast broken the couenaunte of thy seruaunt, & cast his crowne to the grounde.

All they that go by, spoule hym: and he is become a rebuke vnto his neyghbours.

Thou hast set vp the ryght hande of his enemies: and made all his aduersaries to reioyce. Thou hast taken awaye the edge of his sworde: & geuest hym no victoꝛy in the battaile. Thou hast put out his gloꝛy, & cast his throne downe to þe grounde. The dayes of his youth hast þu shortened: and couered hym with dishonoure. Selah. Lorde, howe longe wyll thou hyde thy selfe: for euer: & shal thy wrath burne lyke fyre? I remembre, howe shorte my tyme is, wherfoze hast thou made all men for naught? What man is he that lyueth and shall not se death: and shall he deuynt his owne soule from the hande of hell? Selah. Lorde, where are thy olde loupnge hyndnesse, whiche thou swoꝛest vnto Dauid in thy trueth? Remembre (Lorde) the rebuke that thy seruauntes haue, & how I do heare in my bolome the rebukes of many people. Wherwith thyne enemies haue blasphemed the, & sclauder the fote steppes of thyne anointed. Pꝛayed be the Lord for euermore Amen.

The. xc. Psalme.

DOMINE REFUGIUM.

A pꝛayer of Moses the man of God.

Lorde, thou hast bene oure refuge from one generation vnto another. Before the mountaynes were broughte forth, or euer the earth & the world were made, thou art God from euersyng & woꝛlde without ende.

Thou turnest man to destruction. Agayne thou sayst: come agayne chyldren of men.

For a thousande yeres in thy syght ar but as yesterdaye, seying that is past as a watche in the nyght. As lone as thou scatrest them, they are euen as asleape, and fade awaye so dely lyke the grasse.

In the mornyng it is grene and groweth up, but in the eueryng it is cutte downe: & withered. If or we consume awaye in thy displeasure, and are asfayde at thy wrathful indignacion. Thou hast set our myneces befoze the, and our secret synnes in the lycht of thy countenance. For when þu art angry, all our dayes are gone: we byngne oure yeres to an ende, as it were a tale that is tolde.

The dayes of our age, are thre scoꝛe yeres and ten: and thoughe men be so stronge þe they come to foure scoꝛe yeres, yet is thy re strength then but labour & sorowe: so loone passeth it awaye, & we are gone.

But who regardeth the power of thy wrath, for euen thereafter as a man feareth, so is thy displeasure. * Teache vs to nombe our dayes, that we maye applye our ber-tes vnto wysdome. Tourne the agayne, (Lorde) at the last, and be gracious vnto thy seruauntes. Satisfye vs w thy mercye and that soone, so shal we reioyce & be glad al the dayes of our lyfe.

Comfozte vs agayne, now after the tyme that þu hast plagued vs, and for the peares wherin we haue suffed aduersytie.

Shewe thy seruauntes thy woꝛke, and they: chyldren thy gloꝛy. And the gloꝛious maiestye of the Lorde oure God be vpon vs: pꝛosper thou the woꝛke of our handes vpon vs. Prosper thou our handy woꝛke.

QVI HABITAT.

Who so dwelleth vnder þe defence of the most hyest shall abyde vnder þe shadowe of the almyghtie. I wyll saye vnto the Lorde: Thou art my hope, and strong holde: my God, in hym wyl I truste. For he shall deliuer the from the snare of the hunter, and from the nopsome peccence. He shall defende the vnder his wynges, and thou shalt be safe vnder his fethers: his saythfulnesse and truth shal be thy sheide and buckler. Thou shalt not be asfayde for any terror by nyght, nor for the arrowe that flyeth by daye. For the pestilence that walketh in the darcknesse, nor for the sykenesse that destroyeth in the none daye. A thousand shal fall besyde the: and ten thousande at thy ryght hande, but it shall not come nye þe. Pee, with thine eyes shalt thou beholde, and se the rewarde of the vngodlye. For thou Lord art my hope, thou hast set thyne house of defence very hye.

There shall no euill happen vnto the, neither shall any plage come nye thy dwelling.

* For he shall geue his angels charge ouer the, to kepe the in all thy wayes.

They shal beare the in theyr handes, that thou hurt not thy fote agaynst a stone.

Thou shalt go vpon the Lion and Adder, the yonge Lion and the Dragon shalt þe treade vnder thy fete. Because he hath set his loue vpon me, therfoze shall I deliuer hym: I shall set hym vp, because he hath knowne my name. * He shall call vpon me, and I wyl heare hym, pee I am with hym in trouble, I wyl deliuer hym, & byngne hym to honoure. Altho long tyme wyl I satisfie hym, and shewe hym my saluacion.

upon flute: vpon a loude instrument & vpon the harpe. For thou Lord hast made me glad thowowe thy workes, & I wyll reioyce in ge-uyng prayse for the operacions of thy handes O Lord, howe glorious are thy workes: thy thoughtes are very depe.

B An vnwyle man doth not well consyde this, & a foole doth not vnderstand it. When the vngodlye are grene as the grasse, & when all the workes of wyckednes do flourish, the shall they be destroyed for euer. But O Lord art the most hyest for euermore. For lo, thine enemys, O Lord, lo thine enemies shall pe-rysh, and all the workers of wyckednes shall be destroyed. But my house shall be exalted, lyke a house of an Anicozne, for I am anoynt ed with fresh oyle. Myne eye also shall se his lust of myne enemies, & myne eare shall heare his despye of a wycked that ryle vp agaynst me. The righteous shall flourish lyke a palme tree, and shall spreade abroode lyke a Cedre in Libanus.

C Suche as be planted in the house of O Lord shall flourish in a court: (of the house) of our God. They shall also bying forth more frute in thep age, and shall be fat & well lykyn.

That they make shewe, howe true O Lord my strength is, and that there is no vnryghteousnes in hym.

DOMINVS REGNAVIT.

A The Lord is kynge, and hath put on glorious apparell, the Lord hath put on his apparell: and gyrded him self with strength: he hath made the rounde world so sure that it can not be moued. Euer sens the world beganne hath thy seate bene prepared thou art from euerlasting. The floudes are rysen (O Lord) & floudes haue lyft vp their noyse, the floudes lyft vp & waues.

The waues of the see are myghtie, & rage horribly: but yet the Lord that dwelleth on hys, is myghtier. Thy testimonys, O Lord are very sure, holynesse becometh thine house for euer.

C The. xciiij. Psalme.
DEVS VLTIONVM.

Lorde God: to whom vengeance belongeth: O God to whome vengeance belongeth, shewe thy self Arise thou Judge of the world, and reward the proude after their deservyn O Lord, howe longe shall the vngodlye: howe longe shall the vngodlye triumph: howe long shall all wycked doers speake so disdain-fully, and make suche proude boostynge They smyte downe thy people, O Lord, and troubleshoot thy heritage. They murder the wyddowe: and the stranger, and put the fatherlesse to death.

And yet they saye. Tush: the Lord shall not se, neither shall O God of Jacob regard it.

Take hede, ye vnwyle among the people O peofoles, when wyll ye vnderstande?

He that planted a care, shall he not heare?
O he that made the eye shall he not se?

He that nutureth the beathen, it is he that teacheth man knowledge, shall he not be punysher?

The Lord knoweth the thoughtes of man, & they are but vayne. Blessed is the man, whome chastenest (O Lord) and teachest him in the lawe.

That thou mayst geue him patience in tyme of aduersyte vntill he be hygher for the vngodly. For the Lord wyl not faile his people, neither wyl he forsake his indertaunce.

Untill righteousnes turne againe in to iudgement. All such as be true of heart shall follow it. Who wyl ryle vp with me agaynst a wycked?

O who wil take my part agaynst the euill doers? If the Lord had not helpe me, it had not sayled: but my soule had bene put to seplence.

But when I sayde: my soule hath synned, thy mercye (O Lord) helde me vp: In the multitude of the sorowes that I had in my heart, thy comfortes haue refreshed my soule.

Wylt thou haue any thing to do with the scoole of wyckednes, whiche ymagyneth mischeffe as a lawe? They gather them together agaynst the soule of the righteous, and condempne the innocent bloude. But O Lord is my refuge, & my God is the strength of my confydence.

He shall recompence them they wycked-nes & destroy them in their owne malice, yet the Lord our God shall destroye them.

That they maye deduce the name of the lorde in Sion, & his worship at Jerusalem: When the people are gathered together, and the kyngdoms also to laude the Lord. He brought downe my strength in my iourney, & shortened my dayes.

But I sayde, O my God: take me not away in the myddest of myne age: as for thy peares, they endure thowowe out all generacions. * Thou Lorde, in the begynnyng hast layde the foundation of the earth, and y^e heuens are y^e worke of thy handes. They shall perishe, but thou shalt endure: they all shall waxe olde as both a garmente, & as a vestment shalte thou chaunge them, and they shall be chaunged. But thou arte the same, & thy pyres shall not faile. The chyldren of thy seruantes shal contynue, & their sede shal stand fast in thy syght.

BENEDIC ANIMA MEA.
Of David.

* Praise y^e Lorde, O my soule, and saye is within me praise his holy name. Praise y^e Lorde, O my soule and forget not all his benefytes. Which forgiveth all thy synne, & healeth all thyne infyrmities. Which saureth thy lyfe fro destruction, and crowmeth the with mercy & louyng kyndnesse. Which he satisfieth thy mouth with good thynges, making y^e frow and lusty as an Aegle. The Lorde excreunt ryghteousnesse and iudgement, for all them that are oppressed with wronge.

He sheweth

he shewed his wayes vnto Moyses, bys wayes vnto the chyldren of Israel.

* The Lorde is full of compassyon & mercy. longe suffering: & of grete goodnes.

he wyl not alwaye be chydnyng, nether kepe his anger for ever. he hath not dele with vs after oure synnes, nor rewarded vs acordyng to our wychednes.

* For loke howe hys the heuen is in com-passon of the earth, so great is his mercy also towarde them that feare hym. Loke howe wyde also the East is from the west, so farre hath he set oure synnes from vs. Pee lyke as a father ppyeth his owne chyldren, euen so is the Lorde merciful vnto them that feare hym.

For he knoweth wherof we be made, & he rememberech that we ar but dust. The dayes of man are but as grasse, for he flooweth as a floure of the felde. For as soone as he wynde geth ouer it, it is gone, & the place therof shal knowe it no more. But the mercifull goodnesse of the Lorde endureth for ever and ever, vpon them that feare hym, & his ryghteousnes vpon chylders chyldren.

Euen vpon such as kepe his conenant and thynke vpon his commaundementes to do them. The Lorde hath prepared his seate in heuen, & he kyngdome ruleth ouer all.

O praye the Lorde ye Angels of his, ye excellent strength: ye that fulfyll his commaundementes, & herken vnto the voyce of his wor-des. O praye the Lord all ye his hoostes, ye seruaunt of his, & do his pleasure.

O speake good of the Lorde all ye workes of his, in all places of his domynon: praye the Lorde, O my soule.

O praise my god, & art becom exceedyng gloriouse, & art clothed wth maiesty and ho-noure. Thou deckest thy self with lyght, as it were with a garment, and spreadest out the heauens lyke a curtayne.

Which layeth the beames of his chambers in the waters, & maketh the cloudes his chaber, & walketh vpon the wynges of the wynde.

he maketh his angels spyes, and his ministers a flaminge fyre. he lapde the foundacyon of the earth, that it neuer shulde moue as any tyme. Thou coueredst it with the depe lyke as with a garment: the waters stande in the hylls. * At thy rebuke they flee, at the voyce of thy thonder they are afraid. They go by as hye as the hylls, and downe to the valleyes beneath: euen vnto the place, whiche thou hast appoynted for them. * Thou hast set them theyr boundes, whiche they shal not passe: neyther turne a-gayne to couer the earth. he sendeth the spryn-ges into the ryuers, whiche runne amonge the hylls. All beastes of the felde drynke therof: and the wilde Asses quencheth theyr thyrste. Besyde them shal the foules of the ayre haue theyr habitation, and syng among the braunches. he watereth the hylls from aboue, the earthe is fylled wth the frute of thy workes. he byngeth forth grasse for the cattell, and grene herbe for the serpyce of men that he may byng foode out of the earth: & wyne that maketh glad the hert of man, and oyle to make hym a chereful countenance, & breadye to strength mans hart. The trees of the Lorde also are full of sappe, euen the Ceddars of Libanus which he hath planted.

Wherem the byrdes make theyr nestes, & the fyre trees are a dwelling for the storkes. The hye hylls are a refuge for the wilde goates, & so are the stony rockes for the conies. he ap-poynted the Moone for certayn seasons and the Sunne knoweth his goyng downe.

Thou makest darcknesse, that it may be ryght, wher in all the beastes of the forest do moue. The Lyons coaryng after theyr pray to seke theyr meate at God. The sunne ar-iseth, and they get them awaye together, and laye them downe in theyr dens. * Whan goeth forth to his worke, and to his labour vntill the eueninge. * O Lorde, howe many folde are thy workes: in wysdome hast thou made them all: & earth is full of thy ryches.

So is the great and wyde see also, wher-in are thynnes creppynge innumerable, bothe small and grete beastes. There go the shyppes, and there is that: * Leviathan, whome thou hast made, to take bys passyme therein: * These waye all vpon the, that I mayest geue them meate in due season. When thou grestest it them, they gather it: and when thou openest thyne hande, they are fylled wth good: When thou hidest thy face, they are troubled when thou takest awaye theyr breathe, they dye: and are turned agayne to theyr dust.
When thou letttest thy breath go forth, they shal be made: and thou shalt renew the face of the earth.

The gloriouse maiesty of the Lorde shal endure for ever, the Lorde shal reioyce in his workes. The earth shal tremble at the loke of hym: yf he do but touche the hylls, they shal smoke. I wyl syng vnto the Lorde as longe as I lyue. I wyl prayse my God whyle I haue my byrge. And so shal my wordes please hym: my loye shal be in the Lorde. As for synners, they shal be consumed out of the earth and the vngodly shal come to an ende: * praise the Lorde, O my soule. Prayse the Lorde.

Praise the Lorde.

True thanks vnto f Lorde for he is gracious: & his mercy endureth for ever. Who can expesse the nuble actes of f Lorde, or shew forth al his prayles. Blessed art they alwaye kepe iudgement & do ryghte con-lines.

Remembre me, O Lorde, accordyng to the fa-uoure that thou bearest vnto thy people: O lyset me with thy saluacyon. That I may se the felicitye of thy chosen, and reioyce in gladnesse of thy people, and geue thanks thyne inheritaunce. We haue synned with our fathers, we haue done amysse, and dealt wickedly. Oure fathers regarded not thy wonders in Egypte, neyther kepte theyr greate goodnesse in remembraunce: but were dysobedient at the see, euen at the reddie se.
Nevertheless, he helped them for his names sake, that he myghte make hys power to be knowne.

* He rebuked the red see also, and it was dryed vp: so he ledde them thowme the deye, as thowme a wyldernes. And he saued them from the aduersaries hande, & deliuered them from the hande of the enemye.

* As for those that troubled them, f waters ouerwhelmed them, there was not one of them left. * Then beleued they his wordes and sange praise vnto hym.

But within a whyle they forgoe workes: and wolde not abyde his counsaile.

But last came vpon them in the wyl-der-nesse, and they tempted God in the desert.
And he gaue them theyr desyre, and sent hauell withall into theyr soule.

They angred Moses also in the tentes, and Aaron the saynet of the Lorde. * So the earth opened and swallowed vp Dathā, and turned the congregacion of Abiram. And the fyre was kindled in theyr companie, the same bent vp the vngodly. * They made a calfe in Horeb, and worshipped the molten image. * Thus they turned theyr gloire into the similitude of a calfe, that eateth hay.

And they forgot God theyr Sauour, which had done so great thynges in Egypt.
Wonderous workes in the lande of Ham and fearfull thynges by the red see.

So he sayd: he wold haue destroyed them had not Moses his chosen stande before him in that gappe: to turne awaye his wrathfull indignacion, lest he shoulde destroye them.

* Yea, they thought scoone of plesaunt lande: and gaue no credence vnto his worde.

But murmured in theyr tentes, and herbered not vnto the voyce of the Lorde.

Then lyft he vp his hande agaynst them to overthrowe them in the wylbernesse. To cast out their seed amonge the nacions, and to scatter them in the landes. * They opened their selues vnto Baal Deor: and eat the of-fyrnges of the deed. Thus they prouoked him vnto angre with their owne inuencions and the plague was great amonge them.

* Then stode vp Phinebes and prayed: and the plague ceased. And that was counted vnto hym for ryghteousnesse, amonge all policies for euermore. * They angred hym also at the waters of streffe, so that he swilled Moses for theyr lakes. Becaule they prouoked his spryite, so p he spake vnadvisedly with his lippes. Neither destroyed they the hepythen, * as the Lorde commaunded them. But were myngled amonge the hepythen, and lerned theyr workes. In so much they worshipped their ydols, which turned to theyr owne decaye. * Yea, they offered theyr sonnes and theyr daughters vnto demys. * And shed innocent bloude, euen the blood of theyr sonnes and of their dought-ters: whiche they offered vnto the ydols of Canaan, & the lande was defyled with bloude.

Thus were they stayned with theyr owne workes: and went a whoyrng with theyr owne inuencions. Therfore was p wrath of p Lorde kindled agaynst his people: in so much, p he abhorred his owne enheritaunce.

And he gaue them ouer into the hand of p hepythen, and they that hated them were lozdes ouer them. Theyr enemyes oppressed them, and had them in subiection. Wany a tyme wold he deliuer the, but they rebelled agaynst hym with theyr owne inuencions, & were brought downe in theyr wyckednesse.

Neuer thelesse, when he sawe theyr aduersitie, he herde theyr cōplaynt. He thought vpo his couenaunt, & ppyed the, accordyng vnto the multitude of his mercyes. Yea, he made all those that had led them away captyue to ppye them. Deliyuer vs (O Lorde oure God) and gather vs from amonge the hepythen: that we maye geue thanks to thy holy name, & make our boost of thy prayse.

* Blessed be the Lorde God of Israel fro euerlastyng and wold be without ende, & let all people saye Amen: Ame. Prayse p Lorde.

Olde not thy tonge (O God) of my prayse. For the mouth of the ungodlye, and the mouth of the dysceitfull is opened vpon me: & they haue spokt agayn me with falsse tonges. They compassed me about also with wordes of hatred, & fought agaynst me without a cause. For the loue I had vnto them, lo, they take now my contrary part: but I gyue my selfe vnto prayse.

Thou haue they rewarded me euill for good: and hatred for my good wyl.

Thou an ungodlye man to be ruler over hym, and let Sathan stande at his ryght hand.

When sentence is gyuen vnto hym, let him be condepned: and let his prayer be turned in to synne. * Let his dayes be fewe, and let an other take his offyce. Let his chyldren be fatherlesse, and his wyfe a wyddow. Let his chyldren be vagaboundes, & beg they; bread: let them seeke it also out of desolate places.

Let the tortourer consume al that he hath, and let the straungers spoyle his labour.

Let there be no man to ppyte hym, naye haue compassyon vpon his fatherlesse chyldren. Let his posteritie be destroyed, and in the nexte generacyon let his name be cleane put out. Let the wickednesse of his fathers be had in remembraunce in the synge of the Lord: and let not the synne of his mother be done awaye. Let them alwaye be before the Lord: that he maye roote out the memorye of them from of the earth. And that because his mynde was not to do good: but persecuted the poore helpelesse man, that he might slaye him that was vbered at the hart.

Praise the Lorde (ye seruantes) O prayse the name of the Lorde.
Blessed is the name of the Lord, from this tyme forth for euermore.

The Lordes name is praysted, from the

DILEXI QVONIAM,

I Am wel pleased that the Lorde hath herde the voyce of my prayer. That he hath enclyned his eare vnto me, therfore wil I cal vpon him as long as I lyue.

* The snares of death compassed me rounde about, and the paynes of hel gat holde vpon me: I shall fynde trouble and heynesse: and I shall call vpon the name of the Lorde (O Lorde) I beseeche the deliuer my soule.

Gracious is the Lorde, and righteous: yea, our God is merciful. The Lorde preserueth the simple: I was in perplexitie, and he helped me. Tourne agayne then vnto thy rest, O my soule: for the Lorde hath rewarded the. And why? * thou hast deliuered my soule from death, myne eyes from teares, and my feet from fallynge. I wyl walke before the Lorde in the lande of the lyuing.

* I beleued, and therfore wyl I speake, but I was sore troubled: I sayd in my heart: * All men are lyers. What rewardes shall I gyue vnto the Lorde, for al the benefices that he hath done vnto me? I wyl receyue the cuppe of saluacion, and call vpon the name of the Lorde.

I wyl paye my vowes now in the presence of all his people, right deare in the syghte of the Lorde, is the death of his sayntes. Beholde (O Lorde) how that I am thy seruant: I am thy seruante, and the son of thy handmayde, thou hast broken my bondes in sondre. I wyl offere to the the sacrificie of thankesgyuinge, and wyl call vpon the name of the Lorde. * I wyl paye my vowes vnto the Lorde, in the syghte of al his people: in the courtres of the Lordes house, euen in the myddest of the, O Ierusalem.

The. cxviii. Psalme.

CONFITEMINI DOMINO.

Gyue thanks vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious: bycause his mercy endureth for euer. Let Israel now confesse (O he is gracious, and) that his mercy endureth for euer. Let the house of Aaron now confesse, & his merci endureth for euer.

Yea, let them now that feare the Lorde, confesse that his mercy endureth for euer.

I called vpon the Lorde in trouble, and the Lorde herde me at large. * The Lorde is my syde, I wyl not feare what man doeth vnto me. The Lorde taketh my parte with them that helpe me: therfore shall I feare my spyre vpon myne enemyes. It is better to trust in the Lorde, then to put any confidence in man. It is better to trust in the Lorde, then to put any confidence in princes.

All nacions compassed me round about, but in the name of the Lorde wyl I destroy them.

They kept me in on euery syde, they kepte me in (I saye) on euery syde: but in the name of the Lorde, I wyl destroie them. They came aboute me lyke bees: and are extirpate, euen as the fyre amonge p thornes: for in the name of the Lorde I wyl destroie them.

Thou hast chynste foze at me, that I myghte fall: but the Lorde was my helpe.

* The Lorde is my strength and my longe and is become my saluacion. The voyce of ioy and health is in the dwellynge of the ryghteous: the ryght hand of the Lorde byngeth myghte thynge to passe. The right hande of the Lorde hath the preeminence, the ryght hande of the Lorde byngeth mightie thynge to passe. I wyl not dye: but lyue and declare the workes of the Lorde.

The Lorde hath chastened & correcte me, but he hath not gyven me ouer vnto death.

Open me the gates of rightousnesse, that I may go into them, and giue thankes vnto the Lorde. This is the gate of the Lorde the ryghteous shal entre into it. I wyl thanke the, for thou hast hearde me: and arte become my saluacion. * The same stone whiche the buylders refused, is become the heed stone in the corner. This was the Lordes doinge: and it is maruapulous in our eyes.

This is the daye whiche the Lorde hath made: we wyl reioyse and be glad in it.

BEATI IMMACVLATI.

Blessed * are those that be vndefiled in the waye: and walke in the lawe of the Lorde: Blessed are they that kepe his testimonies, and seke hym with thyr hole hert. For they whiche do no wickednesse, walke in his wayes. Thou hast charged that we shal diligently kepe thy commaundementes. O that my wayes were made to direct, that I myghte kepe thy statutes. So shall I not be confounded, whyle I haue respect vnto all thy commaundementes. I wyl thanke the with an vnspayed hert, when I shall haue learned the iudgements of thy ryghtousnesse. I wyl kepe thy ceremonies: O forsake me not vterlye. My mouth shall be as a ponge man cleane his waye: Euen by rulyng hym selfe after thy worde. With my whole herte hane I sought the: O let me not go wronge out of thy commaundementes.

* Thy wordes hane I hyd within myne hert, that I shoulde not synne agaynst the. Blessed art thou O Lorde, O teache me thy statutes. With my lippes hane I bene telling of all the iudgements of thy mouth. I haue had as great deelyte in the waye of thy testimonies, as in all maner of rchelle. I wyl talke of thy commaundementes, and haue respecte vnto thy wayes. My deelyte shall be in thy statutes: and I wyl not forget thy worde.

O do wel vnto thy seruante, that I may lyue and kepe thy worde. Open thou myne eyes, that I maye se the wonderous thinges of thy lawe. * I am a stranger vpon earth, O hyde not thy commaundementes fro me.

My soule breaketh out for the very feruente desyre that it hath alwaye vnto thy iudgements. Thou hast rebuked the proud and cursed are they that do erre fro thy commaundementes. O turne fro me shame and rebuke: for I haue kept thy testimonies.

Princes also dyd spe and speake agaynst me, but thy seruante is occupied in thy statutes. For thy testimonies are my deelyte and my counsaylers. * My soule cleueth to the dust: O quicken thou me accordynge to thy word. I haue knowledged my wayes and thou herdest me: O teache me thy statutes. Make me to vnderstande the waye of thy commaundementes, and so shall I talke of thy wonderous workes.

My soule melteth awaye for very heynesse, comfort thou me accordynge vnto thy worde. Take fro me the waye of lpyng, and cause thou me to make moch of thy law.

I haue chosen the way of truthe: and thy iudgements hane I layed before me.

I haue stycken vnto thy testimonies, O Lorde confounde me not. I wyl runne the waye of thy commaundementes, when thou hast set my herte at lybertie. Teache me, O Lorde, the waye of thy statutes: and I shall kepe it vnto the ende. Gyue me vnderstandynge, and I shall kepe thy lawe: pea, I shall kepe it with my whole herte. Make me to goo in the path of thy commaundementes: for therein is my desyre. Enclpne my hert vnto thy testimonies, & not to couetousnesse. O turne awaye myne eyes, lest they be holde vanitpe: and quicken thou me in thy way. O stablish thy worde in thy seruante, that I maye feare the. Take away the rebuke that I am afrayed of, for thy iudgements are good. Beholde, my deelyte is in thy commaundementes. O quicken me in thy rightousnesse. phemers: for my trust is in thy worde.

O take not the worde of truthe yet erlye out of my mouth: for my hope is in thy iudgementes. So shall I alwaye keepe thy lawe: yea, for euer and euer. And I wyll walke at libertie, for I seke thy commaundementes. I wyll speake of thy testimonies also, euen before kynges: & wyll not be ashamed. And my delyte shalbe in thy commaundementes which I haue loued. Whyndes also wyll I lye vnto thy commaundementes whiche I haue loued: and my studye shalbe in thy statutes. O thynke vpon thy seruante, as concernynge thy worde, wherein thou hast caused me to put my trust.

The same is my comforte in my trouble, for thy worde hath quickened me. The proude haue had me excedingly in derision: yet haue I not shynked from thy lawe.

For I remembred thine euertlasting iudgementes. O Lord: and receyued comforte.

I am horribly afrayed for the vngodlye, that forsake thy lawe. Thy statutes haue bene my songes, in the house of my pylgrimage. I haue thought vpon thy name, O Lord: in the night season: and haue kept thy lawe.

* num. xlii. e

This I had, because I kepte thy commaundementes: * Thou art my portion, O Lord: I haue promysed to keepe thy lawe. I made myne humble petition in thy presence with my whole hert, O be mercifull vnto me accordynge vnto thy worde.

I call myne owne wayes to remembraunce, and turne my feet vnto thy testimonies.

I made haste, and prologed not the tyme to kepe thy commaundementes.

The congregacions of the vngodly haue robbed me, but I haue not forgottē thy law.

At mynynge wyll I tpe, to geue thanks vnto the: because of thy righteous iudgementes. I am a companion of all them, that feare the: and kepe thy commaundementes. * The earth, O Lord, is full of thy mercie: O teache me thy statutes.

O Lord, thou hast dealt graciously with thy seruant accordynge vnto thy worde.

mentes. They that feare the wyll be glad when they se me because I haue put my trust in thy worde. I knowe, O Lord, that thy iudgementes are ryght, and that thou of very faithfulness hast caused me to be troubled.

O let thy mercifull kyndnesse be my comfort, accordynge to thy worde vnto thy seruant. O let thy lounge mercies come vnto me, that I maye lye: for thy lawe is my delyte. Let the proude be confounded, for they go wickedlye about to destroye me: but I wyll be occupied in thy commaundementes. Let such as feare the, and haue knowen thy testimonies be turned vnto me.

O let myne herte be sounde in thy statutes, that I be not ashamed. Whyndes hath longed for thy saluacion: and I haue a good hope, because of thy worde.

Myne eyes longe for e for thy worde, sayinge: O when wyll thou comfort me?

For I am become lyke a bottle in the smoke: yet do I not forget thy statutes.

How many are the dayes of thy seruante: when wyll thou be auenged of the that persecute me? The proude haue bygged pyntes for me, which are not after thy lawe.

All thy commaundementes are true, they persecute me falsly: O be thou my helpe.

They had almost made an ende of me vpon earth: But I forsoke not thy commaundementes.

O quicken me after thy lounge kyndnesse, so that I kepe thy testimonies of thy mouth.

O Lord, thy worde endureth for euer in heauen. * Thy truthe also remaineth from one generation to an other: thou hast layed foundation of the earth: and it abydeth.

They continue this daye, accordynge to thyne ordinaunces: for all thynges serue the.

If my delyte had not ben in thy lawe, I shulde haue perished in my trouble. I wyll neuer forget thy commaundementes, for with them thou hast quickened me. I am thine, O saue me: for I haue sought thy commaundementes. The vngodly layed wayte for me to destroye me: but I wyll conspyre thy testimonies. I se that all thynges com to an ende: but thy commaundementes are exceedinge brode.

O Lord: What lone haue I vnto thy lawe: al the day longe is my studye in it. Thou, thou: how thy commaundementes hast made me wyser then myne enemies, for they are euer with me. Understandyng, therfore I hate all wycked wayes. * Thy worde is a lantern vnto my feet, and a lyght vnto my pathes. I hate sworne, and am stedfastly purposed to keepe thy ryghteous iudgementes. I am troubled aboue measure: quicke me O Lord accorpyng vnto thy worde. Let the free wyll offrynges of my mouth please the, O Lorde, and teache me thy iudgementes.

* My soule is alwaye in my hande, yet do not I forget thy lawe. The vngodlye haue layed a snare for me, but yet swarued not I from thy commaundementes. Thy testimonies haue I claymed as myne heritage for ever: and whyr they are the very ioy of myne herte. I haue applyed myne herte to fulfill thy statutes alwaye: euen vnto the ende. I hate them that ymagin euyl thynges, but thy lawe do I loue. Thou art my defence and my lyde, and my truste is in thy worde. I waue fro me ye wycked, I wyll keepe the commaundementes of my God.

Establish me accorpyng vnto thy worde. that I maye lyue, and lette me not be dysappointed of my hope. Holde thou me vp, and I shal be safe: yea, my deylte shal euer be in thy statutes. Thou hast troden downe all them that departe from thy statutes, for they ymagine but disceyte. Thou puttest away all y vngodly of the earth lyke dyssolution: therfore I loue thy testimonies. My flesh trembleth for feare of the: and I am afrayed of thy iudgementes. I deale with the thing that is lawfull and ryght: O gyue me not ouer vnto myne opprellours. Make thou thy seruaunt to deylte in that which is good: that the proude do me no wronge. Myne eyes are wasted away with looking for thy healt h and for the worde of thy ryghtousnesse.

Deale with thy seruaunt accorpyng vnto thy louyng merce: and teache me thy statutes. I am thy seruaunt, O graunte me vnderstandyng, that I maye knowe thy testimonies. It is tyme for the Lorde to laue to thynne hande: for they haue destroyed thy lawe. For I loue thy commaundemen-tes aboue golde & precious stone. Therfore holde I streyght al thy commaundementes and all false wayes I vterly abhorre.

Thy testimonies are wonderfull: therfore both my soule kepe them. When thy worde goeth forth, it gyueth lyght and vnderstandyng, euen vnto the simple. I open my mouth and dye in my breath, for my deylte was in thy commaundementes.

Loke thou vpon me, & be merciful vnto me as thou vset to doo vnto those that loue thy name. O dyde my steppes in thy word: and so shall no wyckednesse haue dominion ouer me. O deliuer me from the wrong full dealynges of men, and so shall I kepe thy commaundementes. Shewe the lyght of thy countenaunce vpon thy seruaunt, and teache me thy statutes. Myne eyes gush oute with water, because men kepe not thy lawe. Righteous art thou, O Lorde: and true is thy iudgement. The testimonies that thou hast commaunded, are exceedinge ryghteous and true. * My zeale hath euen consumed me, because myne enemyes haue forgotten thy wordes: Thy worde is tryed to the vttermost: and thy seruaunt loneth it.

I am small, and of no reputacion: yet do not I forget thy commaundementes. Thy ryghtousnesse is an euerylastyng ryghtous-nesse: and thy lawe is the trueth. Trouble and heuynesse haue taken hold vpon me: yet is my deylte in thy commaundementes. The ryghtousnesse of thy testimonies is euerylastyng: O graunte me vnderstandyng, and I shall lyue. I call with myne hole dert, heare me, O Lorde, I wyll kepe thy statutes. Yea, euen vpon the do I call, helpe me: and I shal keepe thy testimonies. Early in the mornyng do I crye vnto the: for in thy worde is my trust. Myne eyes preuent the nyght watches, & I maye be occupied in thy wor-des. Heare my voyce, O Lorde, accorpyng vnto thy louyng kyndnesse: quicken me accorpyng as thou art wont. They drawe nye that of malice persecute me: and are farre from thy lawe. Be thou nye at hande, O Lorde: for al thy commaundementes are true.

As concernyng thy testimonies, I haue knownen longe syns, that thou hast groud-ed them for ever. O conspyde myne aduersite, and deliuer me: for I do not forget thy lawe.

Avenge thou my cause, and deliuer me: quycken me accorpyng vnto thy worde.

Healt h is farre from the vngodly, for they regarde not thy statutes. Great is thy mercy, O Lorde: quicken me as thou art wont.

Many there are that trouble me, and persecute me: yet do I not swaue from thy testimonies. It greueth me, when I se the transgressours: because they kepe not thy lawe. Conspyde, O Lorde, how I loue thy commaundementes: O quyen me accor-pyng to thy louyng kyndnesse. Thy worde is true from euerylastyng: all the iudgementes of thy ryghtousnesse endure for euermore.

Princes haue persecuted me withoute cause: but my herte standeth in awe of thy wordes. * I am as glad of thy worde, as one that fyndeth greatespoyles.

As for lyes, I hate & abhorre, them: but thy lawe do I loue. Seuen tymes a daye, do I prayse the, because of thy ryghteous iudgementes.

Great is the peace that they haue whiche loue thy lawe, and they are not offeended at it.

Lorde I haue looked for thy sauyng healt h and done after thy commaundementes.

My soule hath kept thy testimonies, and loued them exceedingly. I haue kept thy comaundementes,

The cxxiiii. Psalme.

NISI QVIA DOMINVS.

A longe of the sheares of Dauid.

Yf the Lorde hym self had not bene our syde (nowe maye Israel saye) yf the Lorde hym self had not ben of our syde wyl me rose vp agaynst vs. * They had swallowed vs vp quye, wyl they had so wrathfully displeased at vs. Psea, the waters had drowned vs: and the streame had gone ouer our soule. The deepe waters of the proude had gone euen ouer our soule.

But prayed be the Lorde, which hath not gyuen vs ouer for a praye vnto the; trech. Our soule is escaped, euen as a byrde out of the snare of the fowler: the snare is broken, and we are deliuered. * Our helpe standeth in the name of the Lorde, whiche hath made heauen and earth.

The cxxv. Psalme.

QVI CONFIDVNT.

A longe of the sheares.

I they that: put their trust in y Lorde shalbe euen as the mounte syon, which maye not be remoued, but standeth fast for euer. The hylls stande about Ierusalem: euen so shal the Lorde round about his people: fro this tyme forth for euermore. For the rod of the godly cometh not into the lot of the ryghteous lest the ryghteous put the; hande vnto wickednesse. Do well, O Lorde, vnto the; be good and true of herte. As for such as turne backe vnto the; ydone wickednesse: the Lorde shal leade them forth with the euyl doers: but y peace shalbe vpon Israel.

The.cxxvi.Psalme.

IN CONVERTENDO

A songe of the sayers.

When the Lord turned agayne & captivity of Sion, then were we lyke unto them & dreame. Then was our mouth fylled wth laughter, and our tongue with ioye. Then sayde they among the heathen: & Lord hath done great thinges for them. Pee, the lord hath done great thin-ges for vs already, wherof we reioice. Turne our captivity, O Lord, as the ryuers in the south. They that sowe in teares, shall reape in ioye. He that nowe goeth in his waye wepyng and beareth forth good seede, shall doubt-les come agayne wth ioye, and bypnge hys heaves wth hym.

The.cxxvii.Psalme.

NISI DOMINVS.

A songe of Salomon of the sayers.

Excepte the Lord buyde the house, they labour is but lost that buyd it: Excepte the Lord kepe the Cytie the watchman waketh but in vayne.
It is but losse labour that ye haste to ryle in early, and so late take reste, and eate the brade of carefulnesse: for so he gyueth his be-loued sleape. Lo, chyldren and the frute of the wombe are an heritage and gyfte, that commeth of the Lord. Lyke as the growes in the hand of the giuant, euen so are & poyge chyldren. Happte is the man, & hath his quye-nes full of them, they shall not be ashamed, when they speake with theyr enemyes in the gate.

The.cxxviii.Psalme.

BEATI OMNES.

A songe of the sayers.

Blessed are all they that feare the Lord, & walke in his wayes. For thou shalt eate & laboure of thynne handes. O well is the, and happy shalt thou be. Thy wyfe shall be as the frute-full vine vpon the walles of thynne house.
Thy chyldren lyke the Olive bzaunches runde aboute thy table. Lo, thus shall the man be blessed, that feareth the Lord. The Lord shal out of pou, shall so blesse the, that thou shalt see Jerusalem in prosperitie all thy lyfe longe. Pee, that thou shalt see thy chylders chylren, & peace vpon Israell.

The.cxxix.Psalme.

SEPE EXPVNAVERVNT.

A songe of the sayers.

Now a tyme haue they foughte against me fro my yowth vp (may Israell nowe saye.) Pee, many a tyme haue they vexed me fro my youth vp, but they haue not preuailed against me. The plowers plowed vnder my backe, and made longe furrowes. But & myghty lord hath broken the snares of the vngadly iape.

tes. Let them be confounded and touned backwarde, as manpe as haue euyl wyl at Syon. Let them be euen as the grasse growyng vpon the house toppes, which wythe reth afore that it be plucked vp. Wherof the mower fylleth not his hande, neither he that byndeth vpon the sheaves, hys bosome. So & they whiche go by, saye not so muche: as the Lord prosper pou, we wylth you good lucke in the name of the Lord.

The.cxxx.Psalme.

DE PROFUNDIS.

A songe of the sayers.

Out of the depe haue I called vnto the Lord, Lord heare my voyce.
Oh let thine eares conserue wel the voyce of my complaynt. * For thou Lord wilt be extreme to marke what is done amysse, Oh Lord who maye abyde it?

For there is mercye with the, therfore shalt thou be feared. I loke for the Lord my soule doth wayte for hym, in hys worde is my truste. My soule flyeth vnto the Lord, before the mornynge watche (I saye) before the mornynge watche. O Israell, truste in the Lord, for with the Lord there is mercye, and with hym is plenteous redempcyon. And he shall redeme Israell from all his synnes.

The.cxxxi.Psalme.

DOMINE NON EST EXALTATVM.

Dauid's songe of the sayers.

I saye, I am not hys mynded, I haue no proude lokes. I do not exerceyse my selfe in greates matters, whiche are to hys for me. But I refrayne my soule, & hepe it lowe, lyke as a childe that is weaned from hys mother, pee, my soule is euen as a weaned childe. O Israell trust in the lord, from this tyme forth for euermore.

The.cxxxii.Psalme.

MEMENTO DOMINE DAVID.

A songe of the sayers.

Remembre Dauid, and all hys trouble. * Howe he swore vnto the Lord, and vowed a vowe vnto the mighty God of Jacob: I wyl not come within the tabernacle of my house, nor tyme vp into my bed. I wyl not suffer myne eyes to sleepe, nor myne eye lyddes to slomber: for the temple of my house to take any rest. Untyl I fynde out a place for the temple of the Lord an habitarion for the myghty God of Jacob. Lo, we hearde of the same at Ephrata, & founde it in the woode.

We wyl go into his tabernacle: and falle lowe on our knees before his fote stole.

* Arise, O Lord into thy resting place thou and the arche of thy strength.

DD 1c

Psal. cxxxiii. cxxxiiii. cxxxv. cxxxvi.

Let thy Breastes be clothed with ryghteousnes, and let thy sayntes syng with ioyfulness.

For thy seruante Dauid sake, turne not away thy presence from thyne anointed. * The Lorde hath made a faythfulle othe vnto Dauid, and he shall not hynde from it. * Of the frute of thy body shall I set vpon thy seate. If thy chyldren will kepe my couenaunte, and my testymones that I shall learne them: they chyldren also shall set vpon thy seate for evermore. For the Lorde hath chosen Sion, to be an habitacio for him selfe: he hath longed for her. * Thys shall be my rest for ever, here will I dwell, for I have a deelyte therein. I will blesse her by thynges with increase, and will satisfie her pooze with breade. I will decke her Breastes with helth and her sayntes shall reioyce, & syng. There shall I make: the house of Dauid to flourish: I have ordeyned a lanterne for myne anointed. As for his enemyes, I shall cloth them with shame, but vpon hym selfe shall his crowne flourish.

The cxxxiii. Psalme.

ECCE QVAM BONVM.

A songe of the sayntes of Dauid.

Behold, how good & ioyful a thing it is: brethren to dwell together in vnite. It is lyke & precious ornaments vpon the heade, that cume downe vnto the bearde: euen vnto Arons bearde, and went downe to the skirtes of hys clothyng. Lyke the dewe of Hermon, which fell vpon the hyll of Sion. For there the Lorde promysed his blessing, & lyte for evermore.

The cxxxiiii. Psalme.

ECCE NVNC BENEDICIT.

A songe of the sayntes.

Behold, (now) * prayse the Lorde, all ye seruantes of the Lorde, ye by nyght stande in y^e house of y^e Lorde. * (cume in the court of the house of our god) * Lyfte vp your handes in the sanctuary, and prayse the Lorde. * The Lord that made heauen and earth, geue the blessing out of Syon.

The cxxxv. Psalme.

LAUDATE NOMEN DOMINI.

G* Prayse the Lorde, laude ye the name of the Lord, prayse it, O ye seruantes of the Lorde. Per that stand in the house of the Lorde, in the court of y^e house of our god.

O prayse the Lorde, for y^e Lorde is gracious: O syng prayse vnto his name, for it is louely. * For wher the Lord hath chosen Jacob vnto hym selfe, & Israel for his owne possessyon. For I knowe that the Lorde is greute, and that our Lorde is aboue all goddes. What soeuer the Lorde pleased, that byd he in heauen and in earth, in the see, and in all depe places. * He byngeth forth the cloudes from the endes of the worlde, & sendeth forth the lychtenynges with the rayne, bynging & wyndes out of his treasuries.

* He smote the fyrst bozne of Egypt, both of man and beast. * He hath sent toke and wonders into the mydd of the land of Egypt, vpon Pharao and all his seruantes. * He smote dyuerse nacions, and slewe myghty kynges. * He honoureth the Amorites, and Og the kyng of Basan, and all the kyngedomes of Canaan: * And gaue theyr lande to be an heritage, curan heritage vnto Israel his people. Thy name O Lorde, endureth for ever, so dothe thy mercy. O Lorde, fro one generacion to another. * For the Lorde will anenge hy people, and be gracious vnto his seruantes.

* As for the ymagines of y^e heathen, they are but syluer and golde, the worke of mens handes. They haue mouthes and speake not: eyes haue they but they se not. They haue eares, and yet they heare not, neither is there any breath in theyr mouthes. They that make them, are lyke vnto them, and so are all they that put theyr trust in them. Praise the Lorde ye house of Israel, prayse the Lorde ye house of Aaron. Praise the Lorde ye house of Levi, ye that feare the Lorde, praise the Lorde. Praise be to the Lorde our of Syon, whiche dwelleth at Ierusalem. Hallelulah.

The cxxxvi. Psalme.

CONFITEMINI DOMINO.

G* Gene thankes vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for ever. O geue thankes vnto the God of all goddes, for hys mercy endureth for ever. O thanke the Lorde of all Lorde, for his mercy endureth for ever. * Alliche onely doth great wonders, for his mercy endureth for ever. Alliche by his excellent wyldome made the heauens for his mercy endureth for ever. Alliche layde out the earth aboue the waters, for his mercy endureth for ever. * Alliche he hath made great lychtes, for his mercy endureth for ever. ERIP ME.

To the chaunter, a psalme of David.

Deliver me, O Lord, from the evil man, and preserve me from the wic ked man. Which ymagyn mischefe in their hertes: a sere vp styfe al dape long. They have sharped their tonges lyke a serpent: * Adders popson is under their lyppes. Sela. Kepe me, O Lord, from the handes of the vngodly: preserve me from the wycked men, whiche are purposed to over throwe my goynges. The proude haue layde a snare for me: and spyed a net abroode wryth coordes: pee, & set traps in my waie.

Sela. I layde vnto the Lord: thou art my God, heare the voyce of my prayers, O Lord. O Lord God, thou strength of my health, thou hast couered my heed in the dape of battayle. Let not the vngodly haue his desyre, O Lord, let not his mischeuous yma ginacyon prosper: lest they be to proude.

Sela. * Let the myschefe of theyr owne lyppes fall vpon the heed of them, that com passe me aboute. Let hote burnynge cooles fall vpon them: let them be cast into the fyre and into ppyt: & they neuer ryle vp agayne.
A man full of wordes shal not prosper vpon the earth: euil shal hunt the wycked person, to ouerthrowe hym. Sure I am, that the Lord wyl auenge the poore, and mainteyne the cause of the helpelesse. The ryghteous also shal geue thanks vnto thy name, and the iust shal continue in thy syght.

DOMINE CLAMAVI.

A Psalme of David.

Lord, I call vpon the: hast thou vnto me, and consyder my voyce, when I crye vnto the. Let my prayer be set forth in thy syght: as the incense, & let ppyt vnto the. * Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth: & kepe ppyt of my lyppes. O let not myne herte be inclined to any euil thing: let me not be occupped in vngodlye woordes, with ppyt men that woerde wyckednes, least I eate of such thynges as please them. Let the ryghteous rather smyte me frendly & repproue me. But let not theyr ppyt balmes, bryake myne heade: pee, I wyl praye yet a gaynst theyr wyckednes. Let their iudges be ouerthrowen in stony places: that they maye heare my wordes: for they are swete. Our bones lye scattered before ppyt, lyke as when one breaketh a heueth wood vpon the earth.
But myne eyes loke vnto the, O Lord God: in the is my trust, O cast not out my soule. Kepe me from ppyt snare which they haue layde for me, & from the traps of the wycked doers. Let the vngodly fall into theyr owne nets together: and let me euer escape them.

VOCE MBA AD DOMINVM.

The instruccyon of David, a prayer when he was in the caue.

I* Cried vnto the Lord to my waie: I crye, euil vnto the Lord: did I make my supplicacyon. I powred out my complayntes before hym, and shew ed hym of my trouble. When my lyppes was in heaynes, thou knewest my path: in the waie wherin I walked haue they ppyt ly layde a snare for me. I looked also vpon my ryghte hande, and se, there was no man woulde knowe me. I had no place to flee vnto and no man cared for my soule. I cryed vnto the, O Lord, and sayde: thou art my hope & my ppyt in the lande of the lyuyng.

Consyder my chylapute: for I am brought very lowe. O deliuer me from my persecu tors: for they are to stronge for me. Ryng my soule out of ppyt, that I maye geue thes vnto thy name: whiche thyng yet I wyl graunte me, then shall the ryghteous reioyse vnto my company.

The. cxliii. Psalme. DOMINE EXAULTA.

A Psalme of David. op. when his soule was persecuted hym.)

Hear my prayer, O Lord, and con sider my desyre: heke vnto me for thy crueth and ryghteousnes sake.
And entre not into iudgement of thy seruaut: for in thy syght shal no man liuyng be iustified. For the enemy hath persecuted my soule: he hath smytten my lyfe downe to the grounde: he hath layde me in darchenes, as the men that haue bene longe deade. Therefore is my lyppes vnto the me: and my hert within me is desolate.

* Yet do I remembre the tyme past, I made vpon all thy woordes: pea, I receyue my lyfe in the woordes of thy bandes. I stretche forth myne handes vnto the: my soule gaspeth vnto the as a thyrstye lande. Sela. * Hear me, O Lord, and that soone: for my lyppes wereth saynt, hyde not thy face from me, lest I be lyke vnto them that go downe into the pyt. O let me: heare thy loyngge hymnes by tymes in the moorning, for in ppyt is my trust the thou me the waie that I shuld walke in, for I lyt up my soule vnto the.
Deliuer me, O Lord, from myne enemies: for I fye vnto the to hyde me. Teach me to do the thyng that pleasest the, for thou art my God, let thy loyngge spyrte leade me forth vnto the lande of ryghteousnes. An ken me, O Lord, for thy names sake, and for thy ryghteousnes sake hyngge my soule out of trouble. And of thy goodnes slaye myne enemies, and destroye all them that be my soule, for I am thy seruaut.

EXALTABO TE DEVS.

A thankesgyunge of Dauid.

* I will magnifie the, O GOD, my synge, and I will prayse thy name for euer and euer.

Euery daye
I will geue thanks vnto the, and prayse thy name for euer and euer. Create is the Lord, and marueylous is thy power. One synge there is none ende of his greatnes. One synge shall prayse thy workes vnto another, and declare thy power. As for me I will be talking of thy workes, thy glory, thy prayse, and wonderous workes. So that men shall speake of ϕ myght of thy mar-uelous actes, and I will also tell of thy gre-atnes.

The memoypall of thyne aboundant kyndnes shall be shewed, and men shall synge of thy righteousnesse. * The Lord is gracious and mercypfull, longe sufferynge, and of great goodnesse. The Lord is louing vnto euery ma, and his mercy is ouer all his workes. All thy workes prayse the, O Lord and thy sayntes geue thanks vnto ϕ . They shewe the glory of thy kyngdome, and talke of thy power. That thy power, thy glory, & myghtynesse of thy kyngdome, myght be knowen vnto men. * Thy kyngdome is an euerlastynge kyngdome, & thy dominyon endu-reth thozowt out all ages.

The Lord vpholderh all such as fall, and lifteth vp all those that be downe. * The crye of all waite vpon the, O Lord, and thou geuest them theyr meate in due season. Thou openest thyne hande, and fyllest all thynges liuynge with plenteousnesse. The Lord is righteous in all his wayes, and holy in al his workes. The Lord is nye vnto all them * that call vpon hym, yee all such as call vpon hym saythfully. He will fulfyll the desyre of them that feare hym, he also will heare theyr crye, and will helpe them. The Lord preserueth all them that loue hym, but scattereth abroode all the vngodly. My mouth shall speake the prayse of the Lord, & let all fleshe geue thanks vnto hys holy name for euer:
and euer.

The Proverbes of Salomon. Ho. xxviii.

The Proverbes

of Salomon.

The first Chapter.

The people of wisdom. We make not barren but the deceptious pronocacpon & insynge of synners. Wydome is displayed her to be despyred of all men, & prophesyeth destruction vnto her despyrers.

The Proverbes of Salomō the sonne of Dauid kyng of Israel: to lerne wysdome, & to perceauie the instruccyon and to perceauie the wordes of vnderstanding: and ther by to receyue prudence, righteousnes iudgmet & equite.

That the very simple myght haue wylte, and that the yonge men myght haue knowldege and trewe vnderstandynge. Wy hearynge, the wyse man shal come by moze wyldome: and he that is endued with vnderstan-dynge, shal opteyne wytte to perceyue a parable, and the interpretacyn therof, the wor-des of the wyse, and the darcke speches of the simple. * The feare of the Lorde is the begynning of wysdom. But folles despyse wis-dome and instruccyon. Wy sonne, heare thy fathers doctryne: and forsaake not the lawe of thy mother: for that shal byng grace vnto thy heade, and shal be as a chene about thy necke.

Wy sonne, consent not vnto synners if they entyle y, and saye: come with vs, we wyl lape wapte for bloude, and lurke ppyue-ly for the innocent without a cause: we shal swallowe them vp lyke the hel, and deuoure them quike and hole, as a thole that go down into the pyt. So shal we fynde all maner of crueltye, and fill our houses with spoy-les. Call in thy loe amonge vs: & let vs haue all one purse.

Wy sonne, walcke not thou vnto: restrayne thy tote from theyr waye. For they: sette runne to euell: and are hasty to shed blood. But in wayne is y net layd forth before the bydes eyes, yea theyr selues lape waye one for anothers blood and one of them wolde slep another. These are the way-es of all suche as be couetous, the one wolde conspyre anothers lyfe. * Wysdome cryeth wtute, and putteth for the her voyce in the stre-tes. She calleth before the congregacyn in the open gates, and sheweth her wordes tho to the cytie, saying: O ye chyldren, howe longe wyl ye loue chylde synnes, howe longe wyl the thornes delte in scorninge, and y wylde be enemyes vnto knowldege? O turne you vnto my correccyon: lo I wyl expelle my mynde vnto you, and make you vn-derstand my wordes. * I haue called, and ye refused it: I haue stretched out my hand: and no man regarded it: but all my counsell haue ye despyred: and set my correccyon at naught therefore shal I also laugh in your destruccyon, and moke you, when that thyng that ye feare cometh vpon you: euen when the thyng that ye be asfayde of, falleth in soden-ly lyke a storme, and your mysery lyke a tempest: yea, whe trouble & heynnes cometh vpon you. Then shal they call vpon me, but I wyl not heare: they shal seke me carely, but they shal not fynde me. And y because they: hated knowldege: and receyued not the feare of the Lorde: but abhorred my counsell, & despyred all my correccyon. Therefore shal they eate y frutes of theyr owne waye, & be fylled wylthey: owne inuencyons, for y turning a way of the vnyse shal slepe them, & the prosperyte of foolles shal be their owne destruccyon.

* But who so hardeneth vnto me, shal dwell safely, & be sure from any feare of euell.

The ii. Chapter.

Wydome is to be embraced and set by. And an aduouterous woman is to be eschued.

Moune, yf thou wylt receyue my wordes and kepe my comaundementes by the, that thou wilt enclynne thine eares vnto wysdom, applye thyne hart then to vnderstandynge. For yf y cryest after wysdom, and callest for knowldege: yf y sekest after her as after money, and dyggest for her as for treasure, then shalt thou vnderstande the feare of the Lorde, and fynde the knowldege of God.

* For it is the Lorde that geueth wysdome, out of his mouth cometh knowldege and vnderstandynge. He hydeth vp helth for y ryghteteous. He preserueyth the welfare of the righte-teous, and defendeth them that walke synce-rely: he kepeth them in the ryght path, & preserueth the waye of suche as leue hym with godlynes. Then shalt y vnderstande ryghte-teousnesse, iudgement, & equitye: yea, & euery good path. When wysdom & treth into thyne hart & thy soule delte in knowldege: the shal counsell preserue the, & vnderstandynge shal kepe the. That thou mayst be deliuered fro the euell waye, and from the man that speaketh frowarde thynges. From such as leane the bye strete, and walke in the wayes of darkenelle: whiche reioyce in doyng euell, and de-lyte in wicked thynges: whose wayes are cro-ked, & they frowarde in theyr pathes.

That y mayst be deliuered also * from y straunge womā, & from her that is not thine owne: whiche geueth swete wordes, forsaketh the husbāde of her youthe, and forget-teth the couenaunt of her God. For her house is enclyned vnto death, and her pathes vnto bell. All they that go in vnto her come not a-gayne, neyther take they holde of the way of lyfe. Therefore, walke y in the waye of suche as be vertuous, & kepe the pathes of the ryghteteous. For the iust shal dwell in the lande, & they that be perfecte shal remayne in it: but the vngodlye shal be roted out of the lande, & the wycked doers shal be roted out of it.

So shall thy barnes be fylled with plenteousnesse: and thy presses shall flowe ouer with swete wyne. My sonne despyse not the chastenynge of the Lorde, neither saynt when thou art rebuked of hym. * For whom the Lorde loueth, hym he chasteneth, and yet delyteth in hym, euen as a father in his owne sonne. She is a tree of lyfe to them that laye holde vpon her, and blessed is he that kepeth her fast. With wysdome hath the Lorde layde the foundacyon of the earth: and the reule vnderstandynge hath he stablyshed the heauens. Thowow his wysdome the deapthes bryake vp, & the cloudes droppe downe the dewe. My sonne, let not these thynges departe from thyn eyes: but kepe my lawe & my counsell, that thou mayst haue the pleasure of long lyfe and vnderstanding: for they shall be lyfe vnto my soule, and grace vnto my mouth. Then shalt thou walke safely in thy waye: and thy fote shall not stumbe. * If thou slepest, thou shalt not be afrayde: but shalt take thy rest, and slepe sweetely. Thou needest not to be afrayde of any soden feare, neither for the vyolent rushynge in of the vngodly, when it commeth. For the Lorde shall stand by thy syde, & kepe thy fote, that thou be not taken. The curse of the Lorde is in the house of the vngodly: but he blesseth the dwellynge of the ryghteous. As for the scoffer, he doth not he laughe them to scoffer: but he getteth grace vnto the lowly. The wyse shall haue donoure in possession: but shame is the promocyon that foolles shall haue.

The .v. Chapter.

Wysdome and her frutes ought to be searched.

Take care, O ye chyldren, the fatherly exhortacyon, and take good hede, & ye maye learne wysdome. For I haue geuen you a good doctryne, forsake not ye my lawe. For when I my self was my fathers deare sonne, and tenderly beloued of my mother: he taught me also, & sayde vnto me: * Let thyn hart receaue my wordes kepe my commandementes, and thou shalt lyue. Set the wysdome: and get the vnderstandynge: forgette not the wordes of my mouth, & thou shalt not be shamed from them. For sake her not and she shall preserve the: loue her & she shall kepe the.

The chiefe popnt of wysdome is, that I be wyllynge to optayne wysdome: and before al the goodes to get & vnderstanding. * Make moche of her and she shall promote the: yea, yf thou embrace her, she shall bringe the vnto honoure. She shall make the a gracious deed, and garnyshe the with a crowne of glory. Heare my sonne, and receaue my wordes: and I prayes of thy lyf shall be many. I haue shewed the, the waye of wysdome, and led into the ryght pathes. So that yf thou goest therein, there shall no strappynes bynde the: and when thou runnest, thou shalt not fall.

Take faste holde of doctryne, and let her not go: kepe her, for she is thy lyfe. * Come not in the pathes of the vngodly: and walke not in the waye of the wycked. Abhorre it, & go not therein: departe asyde, and passe ouer by it. For they cannot slepe, except they haue fylled some myschete: neyther take they any reste, except they haue fylled some harme. For they eate the breade of wyckednesse, and drynke the wyne of robbery. The pathes of the ryghte wyse shyneth as the lyght that is euer bygydter and bygydter vnto the perfecte daye. But the waye of the vngodly is as the darcknes: they knowe not where they falle. * My sonne, marke my wordes, and encline thyn eare vnto my saynges. Let them not departe from thyn eyes, but kepe them euen in the myddes of thyne

For they are lyfe vnto all those that de be farre fro the. Let thine eyes beholde

Come not asyde, neither to þ ryght hande,

¶ The v. Chapter.

Thou shalt be as a vine and as a figge tree, the fruit of which shall be as the fruit of the vine, and the fruit of the figge tree. The fruit of the vine shall be as the fruit of the vine, and the fruit of the figge tree shall be as the fruit of the figge tree.

MY son, gyue hede vnto my wysdome, & bowe thine eare vnto my prudence: that thou mayest regard good counsaile, and þ thy lippes may speake knowledge.
For the lippes of an harlot are a dropping pome combe, and her throte is moze glystening then oyle. But at the last she is as bitter as wormwood, & as sharpe as two edged swerde. Her fete go downe into death, and her steppes pearle thozowe into hell. Wherefore, thou dwelling with her wilt ponder þ path of lyfe: so vntedfast are her wayes þ thou canst not knowe them.
Hearke me now thetherfore (O my sonnes) & departe not from the wordes of my mouth.
Kepe thy waye farre from her, and come not nye the doores of her house. That thou gyue not thy strenght vnto other, & thy ea-re vnto the cruel. That other men be not spt-led with thy goodes, and that thy labours come not in a straunge house. Yea, that thou wonne not at the last (whē thou hast spent thy body and iust grene pouth) and tē say: Alas, why hated I nurtoure / why dyd my brethelpe correctione / Wherefore was not I obeynt vnto the voyce of my teachers, and hearkened not vnto them that enfourmed me / I am come almost into all mysfortune in the myddest of the multitude & congregation. Wyne of the water, of thine owne well, of the ryuers that runne oute of thine overfluynges. Let thy welles flowe out abounde, that there maye be ryuers of waters in the streetes: but let them be onely thine owne, and not straungers with the. Let thy well be blessed, and be glad with the voyce of thy pouth. Louyng is the hynde, and friend in the roo: let her be as a lye satysfye the, and holde the ever content with her loue.
Why sonne, why doyle thou haue pleasure in a harlot, and embrace the bosome of another woman / For every mans wayes are open in the syghte of the Lorde, and he pondereth all theyr goynges. The wyckednesse of the vngodly shall cathe hym selfe, & with the snares of his owne synnes shall he be trapped. He shall dye without amendement, & for his great foolishnesse he shall go astraye.

¶ The vi. Chapter.

The flouthfull and sluggish is perished and dyeth in wiche. The scismatiche is reproved. Admony-shon to be earnestly answered.

MY sonne, þ thou be suretie for thy neighbour, and hast fastened thine band for an other man, þ art bound with thine owne wordes, & taken in thine owne speache. Therfore my sonne, do this, & thou shalt be discharged: whē thou art come into thy neygbbous daunger. So thy wayes then loone, hūble thy selfe, & with thy frendes intreate thy creditoure: let not thine eyes slepe, nor thine eye lpydes flambe. Saue thy selfe as a doo from the hande of the hunter, and as a byrde from the hande of the fowler. Go to the cymmet (thou slouggarde) consyde her wayes, and learne to be wyle. She hath no gupde, no ouerfear, nor ruler: yet in the somer she pzyoudereth her meat, and gathereth her fode togyther in the haruest. How longe wilt thou slepe thou sluggish man / When wilt thou aryse out of thy slepe / Yea slepe on thyll a lytle, a lombe a lytle, folde thine hādes togyther yet a lytle, that thou mayest slepe: so that pouertie come vnto the as one that traunpieth by the waye and necessitie lyke a weaponed man.

An vngodly person, a wicked man goeth to a frowarde mouth, he wyneketh with his eyes, he tokeneth with his feet, he poynteth with his fyngers, he is euer ymagynynge mischefe and frowardnesse in his herte, and caueth disorde. Therfore shall his destructio come hastely vpon him, so deonly shall he be al to by-ken, and not be healed. These syre thinges doth the Lord hate, and the seuerth he viter-ly abhorreth: A proude lōke, a lpyng tonge, handes that shed innocent bloude, an herte þ goeth aboute with wycked ymaginacyons, feet that be swift in running to do mischefe, a false wytnesse that byzyngeth vpon lyes, and such one as soweth disorde among byrdes.
My sonne, hepe thy fathers commaundement, and forsake not the lawe of thy mother. Put them vp togyther in thine herte, and bynde them about thy necke. That they may leade the where thou goest, presterne the whē thou art a slepe, and þ when thou awakest, thou mayest talke of them. For the commandement is a lanterne, and the lawe a lpyghte: þa chastryng and nurtour in the way of lyfe, that they maye hepe the from the euyl woman, and from the flatteryng tonge of the harlot,

harlot: that thou lust not after her beauty in thyne herte, and lest thou be taken with her fayre lookes. An harlot wyl make a man to begge his breed, and a woman wyl hunt for the precious lyfe. Hape a man take fyze in his bosome, and his clothes not be bzent:

Doe can one go vpon hote coles, and his fete not be hurt: Euen so, whoso euer goeth into his neyghbours wyfe and toucheth her can not be vngyltpe. * Wendo not vterly despyse a thefe that stealeth, to satisfie his soule when he is hungrye: but yf he maye be gotten, he restozeth agayne seuen tymes as moche, or els he maketh recompence with al the good of his house. But whoso comyteth aduoutre with a woman, he is a foole, and byngeth his lyfe to destruction. He getteth him self also shame and dishonour, such as shall neuer be put out. For yf gelosye and wyath of the man wyl not be in created: no, though thou woldest offre him great gyftes to make amendes, he wyl not recepue them.

The vii. Chapter.

God ought to be feared and honoured. His com-mandementes ought to be kept: wanton appetites and desyres ought to be quenched.

of the wyndowe of my house I looked tho-rowe the larysse, and behelde the symple people: and among other ponge folkes, I spied one ponge foole, goinge ouer the stretes, by the corner in the way towarde the harlottes house, in the twilight of the euenyng, when it began now to be nyght & darke. And be-holde, there met him a womā * with open tokens of an harlot, onely her hert was hydde.

* Eccl. 1. 1. a

She was full of loude wordes, & readye to dally: whose fete coulde not abyde in þ house now is the without, now in the stretes, and lapeth a bayte in euery corner, she caught þ ponge man, kyssed hym, & was not ashamed lapinge: I had a vowe of peaceoffrynges to paye, and this daye I perfourme it. Therfore came I forth to mete the, that I myght seke thy face, & so haue I founde the. I haue deckte my bed with couerpynges & clothes of Egypt. My bed haue I made to smell of Myrr, Aloes, and Cynamon. Come let vs lye togyther, & take our pleasure til it be day lyght: & we wyl emoye the pleasures of loue.

For the good mā is not at home, he is gone farre of. He hath taken the bagge of money with hym: and wyl retorne home at the appointed solempne feast. Thus with many swete wordes she ouercame hym, & with her flatterynge lyppes she entyled hym sodaynly to folow her: as it were an or led to þ laugher, ter, and lyke as it were a foole that laugheth when he goeth to the stockes to be punished so longe tyll she had wounded his leuer with her dart: lyke as if a byrde basted to þ snare, not knowyng that the peryl of his lyfe layd ther vpon. Heare me now therfore, O my chylidren, & marke the wordes of my mouth.

Let not thyne hert wandre in her wayes, and be not thou deceyued in her pathes. For many one hath she wounded, & cast downe: yea, many a stronge man hath ben slayne by the meanes of her. Her houses are the waye vnto hell, and byngge men downe into the chambres of death.

The viii. Chapter.

The prayse of the wysdome of God.

Doeth not * wysdome crye: doeth not vnderstandinge forth her voyce? Standeth she not in the hye places in stretes and wayes: doeth she not crye before the hole cite and in the gates where men go out and in?

It is you, O ye men (sayeth she) whom I call. Vnto (the chylidren of men) do I crye by my voyce. Take hede vnto knowlege O ye ignorant: be ye wise in heart O ye fooles.
Gyue eare, for I wyl speake of great matters, & open my lyppes to tel thinges that be ryght. For my throte shalbe talkyng of truth, & my lyppes abhorre vngodlynesse.

All the wordes of my mouth are ryghtous: there is no frowardnesse nor falschod therein.

They are al playne to such as wyl vnderstande, and ryght to them that synde knowledge. Recepue my doctrine, and not spliuer: and my knowlege moze then syne gold.

* For wysdome is moze worth then precious stones: yea, all thinges that thou canst despyse, maye not be copared vnto it. I wy-sdom haue my dwellynge with knowlege, and prudent counsayl is myne owne. The fear of the Lorde abhorreth wychednesse, pyde, dysdayne, and the euill waye: and a mouth that speaketh wicked thinges, I vtterly abhorre. I can gyue counsayl, and I obferre thinges: I haue vnderstandyng, I haue strength. * Thowowe me kynges ragnen: thowowe me counsailers make iust lawes.

Thowowe me do prynces beare rule: and all iudges of the earth execute iudgement. I am louynge vnto those that loue me: and * they that seke me early shall synde me. Rycheand honour are with me: yea, excellent goo-des and ryghtousnesse. My frute is better then golde and precious stone, and myne en-crease moze worth then syne splur. I wyl gyfte

gyde the in the waye of ryghtousnesse, and in the brete of iudgement. That I maye lende prosperitie to those that loue me, and to encrease theyr treasure. * The Lorde hym selfe had me in possession in the begynnyng of his wayes, or euer he beganne his workes afore tyme. * I haue bene ordeyned from euerylastyng, and from the begynning of euer the earth was made. When I was borne, there were neyther depthes nor springes of water. Before the foundations of the mountaynes were layed: yea, before all hylles was I borne. The earth and all that is vpon the earth was not yet made, no not the grounde it selfe. * For when he made the heauens, I was present: when he set vp the depthes in ordre, when he haged the cloudes aboue, when he fastened the springes of the depe. When he shut the see within certayne boundes, that the waters shoulde not go ouer theyr markes that he comaunded.

When he layed the foundations of the earth I was with hym, ordeynyng all thynges: de-uyng daylye, and reioyng alwaye be-fore hym. As for the rounde compasse of this worlde, I make it iopful: for my deylete is to be amonge the chyldren of men. Therfore hearken vnto me, O ye chyldren, blessed are they that kepe my wayes. O gyue eare vnto me, ye wyse, and refuse it not. Blessed is the man that heareth me: wat-tyng dayly at my gates, and grynge at-tribute at the postes of my doores. For who so synndeth me, synndeth lyfe: and shal ob-ayne fauoure of the Lorde. But who so of-fendeth agaynst me, hurteth his owne soule.

All they that hate me, are the louers of death. * The ix. Chapter. * Whoso moueth all men to embrace her. The prosperite of an wyse.

Wisdom hath buylded her selfe an house, and heuen out seven pylers, she hath kylded her vtyaples, pou-tyng out her wyne, and prepared her table. She hath sent forth her maydens to crye vpon the hyst place of the cytie. Whoso is ignorant, let hym come hether. And to the vnwyse she sayde: O come on ynce waye, eate my byerd, and drynke my wyne which I haue poured out for you. Take ignorance, and ye shall lyue: and that ye go in the waye of vnderstandyng. Whoso reioyseth a scozeful personne, getteth hym selfe dishonoure: and he that re-ioyseth the vngodly shapneth hym selfe.

Reioyce not a scozner, lest he owe the euyl thyll: but rebuke a wyse man, and he wyll loue the. Gyue a discrete man but an occasi- on, and he wyll be the wyse: teache a ryghtous man, and he wyll increase in knowledge.

ges, is vnderstandyng. For thozowe me thy dayes shalbe prolonged, and the peares of thy lyfe shalbe many. If thou be wyse thy wysdome shal do thy selfe good: but if thou thynekst scozne thereof, it shalbe thyne owne harme. A foolishe restlesse woman full of wordes, and suche a one as hath no knowledge, spitteth at the doze of her house, & in the hye places of the cytie, to call suche as go by, & that walke streygth in their wayes. Whoso is ignozant (sayth she) let him com hether, & to the vnwyse she sayth: stolen wa- ters are swete: & the byed that is pryuelye eaten, hath a good taste. And he doeth not consydre, & they are but deed which be there, and that her gettes are in the depe of hell. * For of that wyll be iorned vnto her, that go downe to hell: but he that auoydeth from her, shalbe saued.

The x. Chapter.

In this Chapter and in all that foloweth vnto the chetyse, the wyse man exhorteth by diuers senten- ces, which he alleth paraboles, to folowe better, and styue byces. And sheweth also what profyt com- meth of wysdome: and what hyndraunce proceas- dyth of foolishnesse.

Proverbes of Salomon.

A wyse sonne maketh a glad fa- ther: but an vndiscrete sonne is an heuynesse vnto his mother.

Treasures that are wyckedly gotten, profyte nothinge: but ryghtousnesse deliuereth from death. * The Lorde wyll not let the soule of the ryghtous suffer hunger, but he taketh away pryche- lles of the vngodly. A ydle hand maketh pooze, but a quyk labouryng hand maketh ryche.

Whoso regardeth lechages, sedeth the wynde: and doeth but folowe bydes that haue taken theyr flyght.

Whoso gathereth in Sommer, is wyse: but he that is slouggish in haruest, bringeth hym selfe to confusyon. Blessynges are vpo the heed of the ryghtous, and the mouth of the vngodly kepeth myschefe in secrete.

The memorizall of the iust shal haue a good repozte, but the name of the vngodlye shal synke. A wyse man wyll receyue warnyng, but a pratyng fool shalbe pun- nyshed. * He that leadeh an innocent lyfe, walketh surely: but whoso goeth a wronge waye, shalbe knowen. * He that wyneketh with his eye, wil do some harme: but he that hath a foolishe mouth, shalbe beaten. The mouth of a ryghteous man is a well of lyfe, but the mouth of the vngodly kepeth myschefe in secrete. Enyll wyll styreth vp streyfe: but loue couereth the multitude of synnes.

reth to do good, but the vngodly vseth his encrease vnto synne. To take hede vnto the chastenynge of nourtour, is the waye of lyfe but he that refuseth to be reformed, disce- ueth hym selfe. * Dissemblyng lppes kepe hatred secretelpe: and he that speaketh anpe sciaundze, is a foole. Where moch babbling is, there must nedes be offence: and he that re- frapneth his lppes, is wylse. An innocent tonge is a noble treasure: but the herte of the vngodly is nothyng wozth. The lppes of the ryghtous fede a whole multitude: but fooles shall dye in theyr owne foolpe.

The blessing of the Lorde maketh ryche men: as for careful traual, it doth nothyng therto. A foole doth wyckedly, and maketh but a spozte of it: but wysdome ruleth the ma- that hath vnderstandynge. The thyng that the vngodly are afrayed of, shal come vpon them: but the ryghtous shall haue theyr de- lyze. The vngodly passeth when the tem- pest cometh: but the ryghtous remayneth sure for euer. As vynegre is to the teeth, & as smoke is vnto the eyes, euen so is a flou- grysh person to them that sendeth hym forth.

The feare of the Lorde maketh a longe lyfe, but the peres of the vngodly shalbe shor- tened. The patient abydyng of the ryght- ous shalbe turned to gladnesse: but the hope of the vngodly shall perishe. The waye of the Lorde gyueth courage vnto the godlye, but it is a feare for wycked doers. * The ryghtous shall neuer be ouerthrowen, but the vngodly shall not remayne in the lande.

* The mouth of the iust wyl be talkynge of wysdome, but the tonge of frowarde shal perishe. The lppes of the ryghtous are occupped in acceptable thynges: but the mouth of the vngodly taketh them to the worst,

The .xi. Chapter.

False balaunce is an abhomi- nation vnto the Lorde: but a true weyght pleaseth hym. Where pybde is, there is shame also and confusion: but where as is low- lyne, there is wysdome. The innocent dealynge of the iust shal leade them: but the wyckednesse of suche as dissemble, shal be theyr owne destruction. * Ryche, helpe not in the daye of vengeance: but ryghtousnesse deliuereth from death. The ryghtousnesse of the innocent ordyeth his waye: but the vngodly shall fal in his owne wyckednesse.

The ryghtousnesse of the iust shal deli- uer the: but the wicked shalbe taken in theyr owne vngodlynesse. * When an vngodly man dyeth, his hope is gone: the confidence of ryche shal perishe. The ryghtous shal be deliuered out of trouble, and the vngod- ly shal come in his stede. Thowsof the mouth of the dissembler is his neyghbour destroyed:

but thowsof knowledge shall the iust be de- lyuered. * When it goeth well with the ryghtous, the cyrie is merpe: and when the vngodly perishe, there is gladnesse. When the iuste are in wealth, the cyrie prospereth: but when the vngodly haue rule it decayeth. A foole bypnyeth vpon a sciaundze of his neygh- bour: but a wylse man wyl kepe it secret.

* A dissemblyng person wyl discover pre- vious thynges, but he that is of a faythful herte wyl kepe counsaile. * Where no good coun- saile is, there the people decaye: but where as many are that can gyue counsaile, there is wealth. * He that is suretye for a stranger hurteth hym selfe: and he that meddeth not with suretyshyppe is sure. A gracious ho- man maynteyneth honestie, as for the wy- ked, they maynteyne ryche. * He that is merciful, doth hym self a benefyte: but who so hurteth his neyghbour, is a ryant.

The labour of the vngodly prospereth not, but he that soweth ryghteousnesse shal re- ceyue a sure rewarde. Lyke as ryghtous- nesse byngeth lyfe: euen so to cleue vnto vyl byngeth death. The Lorde abhorreth them that be of a fayned herte, but he hath pleasure in the that are of an vnderpyed conuersati- on.

The wycked amendeth not for plage vpon plage: but the seed of the ryghtous shalbe mu- ltiplied. A fayre woman without discrete ma- ners is lyke a ring of gold in a swines snout.

The desyre of the ryghtous is acceptable: but the hope of the vngodly is indignacion.

* Some man gyueth out his goodes, and is the richer: but the pygarde (hauyng nough) wyl departe from nothyng, and yet is euer in pouertie. * He that is lyberall in gpyng, shal haue plentie: and he that watereth, shal be watered also hym selfe. * Whoso bor- roweth vpon his coine, shalbe cursed amonge the people: but blessing shal lyghte vpon the heed that gyueth lode. He that laboureth for honestie, synndeth his desyre: but who so seketh after myschefe, it shal happen vnto hym. He that trusteth in his ryche, shal haue a fall: but the ryghtous shal stand as the grene leafe. Whoso maketh disquie- nesse in his owne house, he shal haue wyne for his heritage, and the foole shalbe seruant to the wylse. The frute of the ryghtous is a tree of lyfe: and he that endeuoreth hym selfe to wyne mens soules, is wylse.

* If the ryghtous be recompensed vpon earth, howe moche more then the vngodly and the synner?

The .xii. Chapter.

Who loueth wysdome wyl be con- trect to be reformed: but he that ha- teth to be repproued is a foole. * A good ma is acceptable vnto the Lorde: but the wicked pynaginer wyl be condemn- ed. A man can not endure in vngodlynesse: but the

the rate of the ryghtous shall not be moued.
A wycked woman is a crowne vnto her husbande: but she that behaueth herselfe vnhonestly, is a corruption in his bones.

The thoughtes of the ryghtous are ryghte: but the ymaginations of þe vngodly are discortall. The talkynge of the vngodly is downdeyr maye lape wayte for bloude: but the mouth of þe ryghtous wyl deliuer them.

God ouerturneth the estate of the wycked: and they stande not: but the house of the ryghtous shall stande stedfast. A man shall be rewarded for his wysdom, but a foole shall be despised. * A simple man which labour-eth and worketh, is better then one that is giggous and lacheth byed. A ryghtous man shall encrease the lyfe of his cattell, but the vngodly haue cruell vertes. * He that sylleth his lande shall haue plenteousnesse of byed: but he þe foloweth yblessed, is a very foole.

(Who hath pleasure to continue at the wyne, lea-ueth his house in his owne destruction.)

The desyre of the vngodly hunteth after mischance: but the rote of the ryghtous byyn-neth forth frute. The wycked falleth into shame, thowhe the malice of his owne mouth, but the iust shall escape out of all peril.

Every man shall enioye good, according to the frute of his mouth, and after the labour of his handes shall he be rewarded.
Labourer a foole taketh in hande, he thinketh he hath done well: but he that is wyse, wyl be counsaied. A foole vttereth his wrath in al his wordes: but a discreete man couereth his mouth.

A iust man wyl telle the truthe, and shewe thynges that is ryght: but a false witness shall be perished. A sleanderous person ppycheth his almyde, but a wyse mannes tonge is reuerent. A true mouth is euer constaunt: but a dissimbling tonge is soone channged.

They that ymagin euyl in theyr mynde, wyl discorde: but the counsaillers of peace shall haue tope folowynge them. There shall be no fortune happen vnto the iust, but the vngodly shall be fylled with myserye. * The Lorde abhorreth lying typpes: but they that laboure for truthe please hym.

He that hath much and ynge, both hyde wyse dome: but a discreete heart ruleth out his foolishnesse.

A diligent hande shall beare rule: but the idle shall be vnder tribute. * He ynnelle the word of man: but a good worde maketh glad agayne. The ryghtous ex-ulteth in his ryghte: but the waye of the vngodly wyl discorde them selues.

The discreetull man shall not rest, that he is in paynynge, * but the ryche of the vngodly is of great value. In the way of ryghte there is lyfe: and in the same waye there is no deat.

The xliij. Chapter.

Allyse some wyl berken to his fathers warnynge, but he that is scornful, wyl not heare wyl he is repproued. A good man shal enioye þe frute of his mouth but he that hath a frowarde mynde, shall be spoyled. He that keepeth his mouth keepeth his lyfe: but whoso openeth his lippes to e-uyl, destroyeth hym selfe. The dogarde wolde sayne haue, & can not get his desyre: but the soule of the diligent shal haue plentie.

A ryghtous man abhorreth lyes: but the vngodly shameth both other and hym selfe.

Ryghtousnesse keepeth the innocent in the waye: but vngodlynesse doeth ouerthrowe the synner. * Some men are ryche, though they haue not bynne: agayne, some men are poore, haunynge great ryche. With goodes euery man deliuereth his lyfe, and the poore wyl not be repproued. The light of the righteous maketh ioyfull, but * the candle of the vngodly shal be put out. Among the proude there is euer strepe: but among thole that do all thynges with aduysment, there is wysdome. Clapnetle gotten goodes are soone spente: but they that be gathered togyther with the hande, shall increase. A longe tarying for a thyng that is deferred, greuneth the herte, but when the desyre cometh, it is a tree of lyfe. Whoso deliuereth any thyng shal be hurt for the same: but he that feareth the commaundment, shal haue the reward.

(A discreetull souer shall haue no good, but a discreete seruant shall do well, and his waye shall prosper.)

The lawe is a well of lyfe vnto þe wyse, that it maye kepe hym frome the snares of death. Good vnder it and bynne greuneth fauour but harde is the waye of the deliuerers.

A wyse man doth all thynges with discretion: but a foole wyl declare his folie.

An vngodly messenger falleth into mys-chance: but a saythfull ambassadour is whol-some. He that thynerth scozne to be refomed, cometh to pouertie & shame: but whoso regardeth correction, shall come to honour.

When a desyre is brought to passe, it deliueth the soule: but faules count it abhomination to departe from euyl. He that goeth in the compaignie of wyse men, shal be wyse: but whoso is a companion of foolles, shal be vnto.

Whiche foloweth vpon synners, but the ryghteous shall haue a good reward.

He that is vertuous, leaueth an enheritaunce vnto his chyldren: & * the ryche of the synner is layed vp for the iust. There is plenteousnesse of fode in þe felde of þe poore but þe felde not wel ordred, is without frute.

He that spareth the rod, hateth his soule: but whoso loueth hym chasteneth hym by tymes. * The ryghteous eateth, and is satil-fyed: but the bely of the vngodly hath neuer ynough.

Wise women uphoide theyr house: but a foolyshe wyfe plucketh it downe. He that walketh in the ryghte path of the Lorde, feareth hym: but he that turneth hym self from his wayes, deluyeth hym.

In the mouth of the foolyshe is the rod of pynde, but the lippes of the wyse wyl presterue them.

Where no oxen are, there the crybbe is emptye: but where the oxen labour, there is moche frute. A fawful witnesse wyl not dissemble, but a false recorde wyl make a lye.

A scornfull body seeketh wisdom, and findeth it not: but knowledge is easy to come by, vnto him that wyl vnderstande. He that thou medle not with a foole in whō thou perceuest to be no knowledge.

The wisdom of hym that hath vnderstanding, is to take hede vnto his waye: but the foolyshe of the vntowle discerue.

Fooles make but a spoote of synne, but there is a faworable loue amōg the righteous.

The best seleteth his owne lynes by tennes neyther shall the straunger be partaker of his tope. The house of the vngodly shalbe overthowen: but the tabernacle of the ryghteous shal stande.

There is a way which some men thinke to be ryght: but the ende thereof leadech vnto death. The herte is sorrowfull euen in laughter, and the ende of myrrth is heynesse. A backsydyng herte shal be fylled with his owne wayes, but a good mā shal lye of his frutes. An ignorant body beleueth all thynges: but whoso hath vnderstanding, loketh well to his goynges.

A wyse man feareth, & departeth from euyl, but a surpous foole goeth on presumptuously.

An impacient man dealeth foolyshe: but he that is wel aduysed, is hated of the foole.

The ignorant haue foolyshe in possession, but the wyse are crownded with knowledge. The euyl shal bothe them selues before the good: and the vngodly shal wape at the doxes of the righteous.

The pooze is hated euen of his owne neyghbours: but the ryche hath many frendes.

Whoso deluyeth his neyghbour doth amysse, but whoso is led in he that hath pytie of the pooze.

(He that puereth his craft in a lye, lounch to be merittful)

Withouth doubte they erre that ymagyne wychednesse, but they that muse vpon good thynges, vnto suche shal happen mercy and fawfulnesse. In euery labour there is some profyt. But onely vayne wordes, byynge forth penury.

Richesse are as a crowne vnto the wyse, but the ignorant of foolies is very foolyshe.

A fawful witness deluyeth lounes, but a discreitful witness byngeth forth lyes.

The feare of the Lorde is a stronge holde, and his chyliden are vnder a sure defence. The feare of the Lorde is a well of lyfe, to auoyde the snare of death.

The encrease and prosperitie of the churche is the kynges honoure, but the decaye of the people, is the confusion of the prynces.

He that is pacient, hath much vnderstanding, but he that is soone displeased, manifesteth foolyshe.

A merry herte is the lyght of the body: but rancoure consumeth awaye the bones.

He that doth a pooze man wrong, blasphemeth his maker: but whoso hath pytie of the pooze, doth honour vnto God.

The vngodly is cast a way for his iniquitie, but the ryghteous hath a good hope euen in death.

Wisdom resteth in the herte of hym that hath vnderstanding, and it shalbe knowne amonge them that are vnderstand.

Ryghtousnesse setteth vp the people, but the sacrifice of the hepythen is vntowle.

A discreit seruant is a pleasure vnto his kyng: but one that is not honest, prynceth hym vnto wryth.

The xv. Chapter.

A soft and were putteth downe displeasure: but fromwarde wayes prynceth vnto angre.

The tonge of suche as be wyse, shalbe knowlledge ryght: as for a foolyshe mouth it babbleth out nothing but foolishnesse.

The eyes of the Lorde loun on myrry place, beholdinge both the good and bad.

A whollome tonge is a tree of lyfe: but he that abuserh it, hath a broken mynde.

A sole deluyeth his fathers correction, but he that taketh hede vnto he is reppoured, shal haue the more vnderstanding.

(Whoso resisteth the discipline of the Lorde, shall come to very much poverty: but he that ymagineth of a vngodly shalbe rotten out.)

The house of the ryghteous is full of ryche, but the encrease of a vngodlye are nye destruction.

A wyse mouth pouereth out knowledge, but the herte of the foolyshe doth not so.

The Lorde abhorreth the sacrifice of the vngodly, but the prayer of the ryghteous is acceptable vnto hym.

The waye of the vngodly is an abhominacion vnto the Lorde: but whoso foloweth ryghtousnesse, hym he loueth.

He that forsaketh the ryght waye, shalbe soze punysshed: and whoso hateth correction shal dye.

The hell with her payne is hewen vnto the Lorde: how moche more then the hertes of men.

A scornfull body louneth not one that rebuketh him: neyther wyl he come vnto the wyse.

A merry herte maketh a chearfull countenancer, but an impacient herte compellerh a man to lye.

The best of hym that hath vnderstanding doth seke after knowlledge: but the mouth of foolies is fed with foolyshe.

All the wayes of the pooze are mylerable: but a quene

There is a continual feast. * Better is a lytle with the feare of the Lorde, then great treasure with sorowe. Better is a measure of potage with loue, then a fat ore with enuy wil.

* An angry man styreth vp styffe, but he that is patient stypleth disorde. The waue of a southful ma is as it were hedged with thornes: but the strete of the righteous is wel fenced. * A wyle sonne maketh a glad father, but an vndiscrete bodie shameth his mother. A foole reioyleth in foolish thynges, but a wise man loketh well to his owne goynges. Vnauyused thoughtes shal come to nought: but where as men are that can use good counsaile, there is stedfastnesse.

A ioyful thyng it is to a man, when his counsaile is folowed: and very pleasaunt is a word spoken in due season. The waue of the leadeth vnto heauen, that a man shulde beware of hell beneath. The Lorde wyll breake downe the house of the proud, but he shal make fast the bozders of the wyddowe.

The Lorde abhorreth the ymaginacions of the wyched, but pure wordes of innocency are pleasaunt vnto him. The couetous man rooteth vp his owne house, but who so hath rewardes shal lyue.

¶ The Lorde hath mercy and fapth as spynes poured, & the feare of the Lorde doth euerie one edifye wyll.

The hert of the righteous studeth his answere afore: but the wyched mannes mouth smyth out myschefe. The Lorde is farre from the vngodly, but he heareth the prayer of the ryghtous. Lyke as the cleauesse of the spere reioyleth the herte, so doeth a good name fide the bones. The eare that hearkeneth to the reformation of lyfe, shal dwel amonge the wyse. He that refuseth to be reformed, despyleth his owne soule: but he that submyteth hymself to correction, is lyfe. The feare of the Lorde is the right fence of wysdome: and lowlynesse goeth be fore honour.

The .xvi. Chapter.

As may wel purpose a thing in his hert, but the answer of the tonge cometh of the Lord.

* A man thynketh all his wayes to be cleane, but it is the Lord that iudgeth the mynides.

* Comyt thy workes vnto the Lorde, & what thou deuysest, it shal prospere. The Lord doth al thynges for his owne sake, & he kepeth the vngodly for the day of wyche. The Lorde abhorreth all such as be of a proude hert, his hande is agaynst they, & they shal not escape as innocents.

* The Lorde hath mercy and fapthfulnesse, synners be forgynen, and who so feareth the Lorde shal be safe. When a mans wayes please the Lorde, he maketh his very enemies to be his frendes. Better it is to haue a lytle thinge with ryghtousnesse, then greates riches wrongfully gotten. * A man deuyseth a waye in his hert, but it is the Lorde that ordyeth his goynges. When the prophete is in the lypyes of the kynge, his mouth shal not go wronge in iudgemente.

* A true measure and a true balunche are the Lordes iudgement, he maketh all weyghtes. It is a greates abhominacyon, when kynge are wyched: for a kynge seate shulde be holden vp with ryghtousnesse. Ryghteous lypyes are pleasaunt vnto kynge: and he that speaketh the truthe, shal be beloued. The kynge displeasure is a messenger of death, but a wyle man wyll pacifye hym.

The cherefull countenance of the kynge is lyfe: and his lounge fauoure, is as the euening dewe.

* To haue wysdome in possession, is better then to haue golde: and to get vnderstanding, is rather to be chosen then to haue syluer. The path of the ryghtous is to eschue euyl, & who so loketh well to his wayes kepeth his owne soule.

Presumptuousnesse goeth befoze destruction, and after a proude stomake there foloweth a fall. Better is it to be of humble mynde with the lowly, then to deuyde the spoyles with the proude. He that handereth a matter wylse, obteyneth good: & blessed is he that putteth his trust in the Lorde.

Who so hath a wyle vnderstandynge, shal be called to counsaile: and he that can speake fayre shal haue the more lernynge. Vnderstandynge is a well of lyfe vnto him that hath it: as for the chastyng of foolles, it is but foolyshe. A wyle herte ordyeth his mouth wylse, and ameneth the doctrine in his lypyes. Raye wordes are an hony combe, a refreschyng of the mynde, and health of the bones.

* There is a way that men thynke to be ryght, but the ende therof leadeth vnto death. A troublous soule dysquyeteth her selfe, for her owne mouth hath brought her thereto. An vngodly personne styreth vp styffe, and in his lypyes he is as an hate burninge fyre. A froward bodie cauleth styffe: & he that is a blabbe of his tonge, maketh deuylon amonge prynces.

A wyched man begyleth his neyghbour, and leadeth him into a waye that is not good. The vngodly that loketh bakely with his eyes, ymagyneth myschefe: and when he moueth his lypyes, he wyll doo some harme. Age is a crowne of wysshyp, & it be founde in the waue of ryghtousnesse.

A patient man is better then one stronge: and he that can rule him selfe, is more worth then he that wynneth a cytie. The lottes are cast into the lappe, but the ordyng therof standeth all in the Lorde.

The .xvii. Chapter.

Better

Better is a dype mouel with quyetnes then a house full of fat offsprynge with stryfe. * A discrete seruauit shal haue more rule then the sonnes that haue no wil-dome, and shall haue lyke heritage with the bzythzen. * Lyke as syluer is tryed in the fyr, and golde in the foynace, euen so doth the Lozde pzooue the hertes. A wycked body gyueth audience to false lypyes, & a froward person gyueth eare to a discreyffull tongue.

* Whoso laugheth the pooze to scozne, blasphemeth his maker: & he that is glad of another mans hurte, shall not be unpunished.

Chyldzen chyliden are a wozypppe vnto the elders: and the fathers are the honour of the chylde. Speach of aucthoritie becometh not a foole, moche lesse a lynging mouth then belemeth a pzynce. A rewarde is a pzyceous stone vnto him that hath it: but vnto whom soeuer it turneth it maketh hym vnwole.

Whoso couereth an othter mans offence, se-keth loue: but he that discloseth the fault, letteth the pzyce agaynst him self. One repzoofe only doth moze good to hym that hath vnderstandyng, then a C. stryppes vnto a foole.

* A sedicious person seketh myschefe, and therfoze is a cruell messenger sente agaynst hym. It were better to come agaynst a thebreer robbed of her whelpes, then agaynst a foole: (trustyng) in his foolishnesse. * Whoso rewardeyth euill for good, the plage shall not departe from his house. The begynnyng of stryfe is, as when a man maketh an issue for water: therfoze of the metyng be, leane of chrencon. The Lozde hateth as well hym that iustifyeth the vngodly, as him that con-demneth the innocent. What helpeth it to gyue a foole treasure in his hande, where as he hath no mynde to bye wysdome?

* Whoso buryeth his house to hys, seketh destruction: and he that refuseth to learne, shall come into myschefe. He is a frende that alway loueth: and in ad-uersitie a man shal know who is his brother.
* Whoso promyseth by the hande, and is suretye for his neyghbour, he is a foole.

He that deipseth in syn, loueth stryfe: and whoso letteth his dooze to hys, seketh after a fall. Whoso hath a frowarde hert obtey-neth no good: & he that hath an onerthwarte tonge, shall fall into myschefe. He that be-getteth a foole, begetteth his sorow, and the father of a foole can haue no ioye. * A mery herte maketh a lustye age, but a sorowfull mynde dzyeth by the bones. The vngodly taketh gyftes out of the bosom, to wze the wayes of iudgement. * Wysdome shyneth in the face of him that hath understandyng, but the eyes of foolles wandze thozowne out all landes. * An vndiscrete sonne is a grese vnto his father, and an deuynesse vnto hym in ether. To punish the innocent, and to pzyt the pzynces that gyue true iudgement are both euill. * A wyse man bzyeth a few wozdes, and he is a man of vnderstandyng, that maketh moch of his spzyte. * Pea a de-ry foole (when he holdeth his tonge) is counted wyse: and to haue vnderstandyng when he shutteth his lypyes.

The. xviii. Chapter.

Accompanyeth hym selfe with all stedfast and wholesome doctryne, that hath a feruent desyre to it, and is sequestrate from compaigne. A foole hath no deipste in vnderstandyng, but only in those thynges: wherein his herte reioyseth. When the vngodly cometh, then meth also dysdayne, and with the dysonest person cometh shame and dishonour. The wozdes of a wyse mas mouth are lyke depe waters, and the well of wysdome is lyke full streame. * It is not good to regarde the perfonne of the vngodly, or to put backe the ryghteous in iudgement. A foolles lypyes are euer bzywolyng, and his mouthe prom-keth vnto battayle. A foolles mouth is his owne destruction, & his lypyes are the snare for his owne soule. The wozdes of a sedunderer are verpe woundes, and goo thozowne vnto the innermoost partes of the bodye.

Whoso is slouthfull & slacke in his laboure, is the bzother of hym that is a waster.

The name of the Lozde is a stronge castell, the ryghteous flyeth vnto it, and is in safe-garde. But the ryche mans goodes are his stronge holde: yea, he taketh them for an wall rounde about hym. After pzyde commeth destructio: and honour after lozys.

* He that gyueth stence in a matter before he heare it, is a foole: and wozytpe to be confounded. A good stomacke dzyeth awaye a mas diseale: but wofe the spzyte is verch, who maye hyde it? A wyse hert laboureth for knowledge, and a pzydent eare seketh vnderstandyng. Liberalitie byzyngeth a man to honour and wozypppe, and letteth hym amonge great men. The rightous decla-reth his owne cause spzyte hym selfe, & his neyghbour come, he shall fynde hym.

He lot pacifyeth the variaunce, and parteth the myghty asoundze. A bzother though he be grieved w offence, yet is he moze wozyth a very strong castell: & they p holde togyther are lyke p barre of a palace. A mas hely shal be satysfied with p frute of his owne mouth and with the increale of his lypyes shal be spilled. Death and lyfe are in the iudgment of the tonge, and they that loue it shal enioye the frute therof. * Whoso syneth wozytpe, syneth a good thyng: and recepueth a wholsome benefyte of the Lozde.

The. xix. Chapter.

Better is the poze & lyueth godly: then & blasphemeth & is but a foole. Where no dyscrecyon is, there the soule is inclined to & thing that is ne good, & is swift on fote, soffereth. A folish man maketh a man to go out of his way, and thus is his hart vnpacient agaynst & Lozde. A folish man maketh many frendes: but & poze is forsaken of his neyghboure. * A false wynter shall not remayne unpunished: and he & that lyes shall not escape. The multitude lygeth upon greute men: and everie man loveth hym that giveth rewardes. As in & poze, he is hated among al his byeth: & his frendes withdowen from hym wyl be aske them & cause, they dysdayne to knowe hym. He & is wyse, loveth his owne harte, and keepeth vnderstandyng, & he maye prosper. A false wynter shall not remayne unpunished: and he that speaketh lyes shall perishe. Pleasure becommeth not a foole, and more unseemly is it, a bond ma to have greute of pyntes. A wyse man can put of his pleasure: and it is his honour to let some thing passe.

The kynges dissaunte is lyke the rooing of a Lyon: but his frendshyppe is lyke the dede upon the grasse. * An vnderstandyng man is the deuynges of his father: & a byanlyng wyse is lyke the top of an house, where shal be it is ever byapping. House and ryche maye a man have by & herpage of his frendes: but a discrete woman is the gift of & Lozde. Slouthfulnes byngeth slepe, and a lene accustomed with crasse shal suffre hunger. Altho so keepeth the comaundement, he keepeth his owne soule: but he & regardeth not his waye, shal dye. He that hath pytie upon the poore, lendeth vnto the Lozde: & loke what he wyl out, it shal be payd hym agayn. Chaunge thy soule while there is hope: but let not thy soule be moued to slaye hym.

A man of great wrath beareth a payne: though thou once deliuer him, thou must be alwiche for hym. O geue eare vnto goddys counsell, and be contente to be reformed, that thou mayest be wyse in thy latter dayes. * There are many deuices in a mans harte: but the counsell of the Lozde is the best. It is a mans worthynesse to be good: & better it is to be a poze man the than a rich man. The frare of the Lozde byngeth a man to lyfe: and he shal rest the hole nyght in peace. A slouthful man quitereth his handes from his belome, as into the pot: and wyl not payne to put it to his mouth. * If thou smylest a scozefull personne, the ignoraunt shal take better hede: and if thou repourest one that hath vnderstandyng: he wyl be the wyser. He that hurteth his father or quitereth out his mother, is a shamefull and an vnwoorthy soune. Wy soune, heare no more the doctrine that leadeth the vnto errors from the wordes of vnderstandyng. A false wynter laugheth iudgment to scozne: & the mouth of the vngodly eateth wickednes. Punishments are ordeyned for the scozefull: and stryppes for foolis backes.

The. xx. Chapter.

Wine maketh a man to be scozefull and stronge byynke causeth a man to be vnguyet: who so deliecteth therin, shal neuer be wyse. * The kyng ought to be feared as the rooing of a Lyon who so prouoketh him vnto anger offendeth agaynst his owne soule. It is a mans honour to kepe himselfe from stryfe: but they & haue pleasure in byaulnyng are foolis euery one. A slouthful body wyl not go to plowe for rolde of the wynter: therfore shal he go a begging in sommer, & haue nothyng. Wylse counsell in the hart of man is lyke a water in the depe of the erth: and a man that hath vnderstandyng byngeth it forth. Many there be that wolde be called good doers: but where shal one fynd a true saythfull man.

Altho so leadeth a godly and an innocent lyfe: is ryghteous, & happy shal his chyldren be whom he leaueth behynde him. A kyng & sitteth in the trone of iudgement, and loketh well aboute hym, bypueeth a waye all euil. * Altho can save, my hart is cleane, I am innocent from synner. To vse two maner of weyghtes, or two maner of measures, both these are abhominable vnto & Lozde. A chyld is knowen by his conuersacyon, whether his workes be pure and right. The care to heare the eye to se: the Lozde hath made them both. Delyte not thou in sleape, lest & come vnto pouertie, but open thyne eyes, that thou mayst haue bread ynough. It is nought it is nought (sayth he that byeth any thyng) but when he cometh to his owne house, then he boasteth of his peny worth.

A man & hath a mouth of vnderstanding hath many pzeious stones & costely Jewels. * Take his garment & is surety for a straunger: and take a pledge of hym for the vnknowen mans sake. Euery man lyketh & byade that is gotten wryth disceate: but at the laste his mouth shal be fylled with granel.

Thowowe counsell, the thynges that men deuyse go for warde: and no dyscrecyon ought warres to be taken in hande. The crafty disceatful bewrayeth secret counsell: and to hym that custometh a stryppage lippes wyne not the selfe. * Altho so curseth his father and moother: his lyght shal be put out in the myddest Euery man thinketh bys owne waye to be ryghte: but the Lorde iudgeth the hartes. * To do ryghteousnes and iudgement is more acceptable to & Lord then sacrifice. A presumptuous lorde, a proud stomache: and the plotting of the vngodly, is synne. The deuices of one that is diligent bypne plentifullesse: but he that is vnadvised cometh vnto pouertie. * Who so hoodeth up ryches with the disceitfulness of his tongue, he is vaine and a foole, and lyke vnto them & seke theyr owne death. The robberies of the vngodlye shall be theyr owne destruction: for they wyl not do that: pnyge that is ryghte. The wales of the froward are straunge: but the workes of hym that is cleane are ryghte. * It is better to dwel in a corner vnder & host toppe, then with a bawlyng woman in a wyde house.

The soule of the vngodly wyssheth euell: & hath no pytie vpon his neighbour. * When scozefull is punysshed, the ignoraunte take the better beade: and when he seith the wyle men prosper, he wyl receaue the more vnderstandyng. The ryghteous man wylsely consydereth the house of the wycked: and for theyr wyckednes God ouerthroweth the vngodlye. * Who so stoppeth his eares at the cryng of the poore: he shall crye hym selfe, and not be hearde. A prey reward paypeth dyspleasure: and a gyfte in the holome, shylleth furiousnes. The Juste delpeth in doyng the thyng that is ryghte: but ouer the workers of wyckednes hangereth destruccyon. The man that wandereth out of the waye of wyldome, shall remayne in the congregacyon of the dead. * He that hath pleasure in bankettes, shall be a poore man. * Who so lyteth in wyne and delicates, shall not be ryght. The vngodly shall be grefe for the ryghteous and the wycked for the iust.

* It is better to dwell in a wyldernes with a chyldinge and an angry woman, than wyle mannes house, there is greafe treasoure and oyle: but a foolyshe body spendeth up al. * Who so foloweth ryghteousnes and mercy fyndeth both lyfe, ryghteousnes, and honoure. A wyle man wynneth the Cytye of the mygty: and as for the strength & theyr traistrin, he bypnereth it downe. * Who to keepeth his mouth and his tonge, & same keepeth his soule from troubles. He that is proude & presumptuous, is called a scozefull man, whiche in wrath dare worke malicously. The vngodlynes of the flouthfull is his owne death: for his handes wyl not labour. He counteth and despyeth all the daye longe: but the ryghteous is alwaye greuyng, and keepeth his backe.

The sacrifice of the vngodly is abhominacyon: howe muche more when they offer thyng that is gotten by wyckednes. * A full wytnes shall perishe: but he that is a true witness holdeth speaketh that he hath heard. A vngodly man goth forth rashly: but the iust refozmeth his owne waye. * There is no wyldome, there is no vnderstandyng, there is no counsell agaynst the Lord. * The host is prepared agaynst the daye of battayle: but the Lorde geueth victoarye.

* A good name is more worth then greafe ryche, and louyng glorioure, is better then syluer and golde. The ryche and poore are together, the Lord is the maker of them all. A wyle man seeth the plage and bydeth hym selfe, but the foolyshe go on synne and are punysshed. The ende of lowynesse: the feare of God is ryche, honoure, prosperitie and health.

Thornes and snares are in the waye of frowarde: but he that doeth kepe his soule, wylle from suche. * Teache a chyld in his yowth what waye he shuld go: for he shall not leaue it, when he is olde. The ryche ruleth the poore: and the bozowen is seruauant to the iudger. He that soweth wyckednesse shall reape sorow: and the rodde of his crueltie shall perishe. * He that hath a louyng eye shall be blessed: for he geueth of hym bryde vnto the poore. * Who so geueth reward, shall receaue honoure: but he taketh alwaye the soule of such as receaue them. * Caste out the scozefull man, & so shall stryfe go out w him: pea vncyuncle slander shall cease. * Who so delpeth to be of a cleane herte and of gracious lippes, the kyngs shalbe his frende. The eyes of the Lorde preferre knowledge, but as for þe wo-rdes of þe dyspiterful, he bringeth the to naught.

The thoughtfull bodye sayeth: there is a Lyon without, I myght be slayne in the strete.

The mouth of an harlot is a depe pit, wher in he falleth that the Lorde is angrie wth.
all. Folywrenesse stycketh in the herte of the lode, and the rodde of correccyon shal dyspue it awaye.

¶ Who so doeth a pooze man change to increasse his owne riches, and genereth vnto the ryche to please him, at þe last cometh to pouertie hym selfe. ¶ Wyl sonne, howe dome thyne care, & herken vnto the wordes of wysdome, applye thy mynde vnto my doctrine: for thou shalt be excellent þe thou kepe it in thyne hert, and practyse it in thy mouth, that thou mayst put thy trust in the Lorde.

I haue shewed the this daye: the thyng that thou knowest. Haue not I warned the wery the the tyneth, and that thou with the verpte myghtest and were them that sende vnto the:

þe that thou robbe not the pooze, because he is weake, and oppresse not the symple in iud-gement: for þe Lorde hym self wyl defende their cause, and do violence vnto them þe haue vled violence. Make no frendshipp with an angrie dyspiterful man, and kepe no company wth the fu-rions: lest þe learne his wayes, & receaue hurt in thy soule. ¶ Be not þe one of them that bind thy hande vpon promysse, & are suretye for dyspiterful causes: for if thou haue nothing to paye, they shall take awaye thy bed from vnder the. ¶ Thou shalt not remoue the lande marke, whiche thy foze elders haue set.

¶ Desert thou not, þe they whiche be dyspiterful in thy bulmyne, stand before kynges, and not amonge the symple people?

For he that deliuered them, is myghtie, euen he shal defende they cause agaynst þe. Apply thyne hert vnto correccyon, & thyne eare to þe wordes of knowledge.

¶ Withholde not correccyon from þe chyld for þe thou beatest hym wth the rod, he shal not dye therof. ¶ Wyl symple hym wth the rod, þe shal delyuer his soule from hell. ¶ Wyl sonne þe thy not thyne herte be gelous to folowe synners, but kepe the styll in the feare of the Lorde all the daye longe: for the ende is not yet come, & thy paciet abiding shal not be in vayne. ¶ Wyl sonne, geue eare, and be wysle: and let strypte thyne hert in the waye of þe Lorde.

¶ Kepe no company wth wyne bybbers and epotous eaters of flesch: for such as be dys-kards & riotous shal come to pouertie, & he þe coate. Geue eare vnto thy father that begat

Labour for to get the truth: sell it not away and so do by wysdome, nourter, & vnderstandyng: for a ryghteous father is maruelous glad of a wysle sonne, & he þe begetteth a wysle chyld shal haue great pleasure of hym. Do so that thy father & mother may be glad of þe ken in hande, & where as are many that can geue counsell, there is the victorie. Wylde doome is to hye a thynge for a foole, for he dare not open his mouth in the gate. He that ymagyneth mylchefe, maye wel be called an vngacious personne. The thought of a foolyshe is synne, and the scornful is an abhominacion vnto men. If thou be ouersene and negligēt in tyme of nede, then is thy strength but shal deliuer them that go vnto death, & are led a-way to be slayne, & be not negligent therein: if thou be able to do them good.

B If thou wylt saye: I knew not of it. Thinkest thou that he which made the herbes, doeth not consider it? and that he which regardeth thy soule, seeth it not? Shal not he recompence euery man according to his workes? Wylst thou eatte hony & the swete hony combe, because it is good & swete in thy mouth. Eue so shal the knowledge of wylde doome be vnto thy soule, as soon as thou shalt gotten it. And thou shalt haue long dayes: yea, thy hope shal not be in vayne. Lape no prey wayte (o wycked man) vpon the house of the righteous and disquiet not his resting place. * For a iust man falleth seuen tymes, & riseth vp agayne: but the vngodly fal into wickednes. * Reioyce not thou at the fall of thine enemy, & let not thine heart be glad when he stumbleth. Lest the Lord (when he seeth it) be angry, & turne his wrath from hym vnto the.

C Let not thy wrath and gelousy moue thee to folow the wycked and vngodly. And why the wycked shal haue no posterite, and the candle of the vngodly shal be put out. * Wylst thou, feare thou the Lord, & the kynge, & kepe no company with them that styde back from his feare: for they destruction shal come suddenly and who knoweth the aduersitee that may come from them both? These are also sayings of the wyse. * It is not good, to haue respecte of any personne in iudgment. He that sayeth to a vngodly: thou art righteous him shal the people curse: yea, the comente shal abhorre him. But they that rebuke the vngodly, in them doth God deliue, and a rycher blessing shal come vpon them. Euery man shall hye his lips that geueth a good answer.

D If thou make vp thy worke that is without and loke well vnto that which thou hast in thy felde & then buyde thine house. Be no false witness against thy neighbour and speake no falshode with thy lippes. Saye not: I will handle hym, euen as he hath dealt with me, and wyl rewarde euery man according to his deeds. I went by the felde of the slouthfull, & by the vineyarde of the foolyshe man. And lo, it was all couered with nettles, & stode full of thistles, & the stone wall was broken downe. * This I sawe, & considered it well: I looked vpon it, & toke it for a warning. See, slepe on thy lippes a lytle, stumble a lytle, folde thy handes together yet a lytle: so shal pouerte come vnto thee as one that tranapleth by the waye, & needeth lyke a wepned man.

C The .xxv. Chapter.

These also are the parables of Salomon, whiche the men of Ezechiah kynge of Iuda copped out.

I T is the honoure of God to kepe a thynge secrete, but the kynges honoure is to searche out a thynge.

The heauen is hye, the earth is depe, and the kynges herte is vnsearchable. Take the dross from the syluer, & there shal be a cleane vessel therof. Take awaye vngodlynesse from the kynge, and his seate shal be stablished with ryghteousnes. But not fogeth thy selfe in the presence of thy kynge, & prese not into the place of great men. * Better is it, that it be layde vnto thee: come vp hyer, then thou to be put lower in the presence of thy kynge whome thou seest with thine eyes. * Be not halfe to go to the lawe, lest haply thou do some offence after thy strep be ended, whereby thy neyghbour put thee to shame. Handle thy matter with thy neyghbour hym selfe, & discouer not another mans secrete, lest when men heare thereof, it turne to thy dishonoure, and least thine euell name do not cease.

on Grace and frendshyppe both desired, which is that thou kepe so: thy seith, lest thou be reproued. * A wynde spoken in due season, is lyke appells of golde in a grained worke of syluer. The correccion of a wyse is to an obedyent care, a golden chayne & a Jewell of golde. Lyke as the wynter colde in the hartelst, so is a saythful messenger to them that send him: for he refresheth his masters mynde. Who so maketh great boast: and geueth nothynge, is lyke cloudes and wynde without rayne. With pacyence is a prynter pacified, and a soft tong is rigourousness broken. If thou syndest hony, eat so muche as is sufficient for thee: lest thou be ouer full, & perbake it out agayne. * Withdrowe thy fote from thy neyghbours house: lest he be wery of thee, & so abhorre thee. Who so beareth false witness agaynst his neyghbour, he is a verye clubbe, a sword, & a sharpe arrowe. He hope that is put in a falle man in tyme of nede, is lyke a rotten toth & a slippery fote. Who so taketh a waye a mans garment in a colde wyther, is lyke vnynerge vpon chalke, or lyke hym that synneth longes to an deuy hert. * Lyke as the muche doeth a garment: and a woman the tree, so doth the deuy of a man herte the hert. * If thyne enemy danger, fede him: if he thirst, geue him drinke: for so shalte thou heape cooles of fyre vpon his head, and the Lord shal rewarde thee. The North wynde bloweth awaye the rayne, euen so doth an earnest sober countenance a backbiteres tonge. * It is better to lye in a corner vnder the rose, then with a bawling woman in a wyde house. A good report out of a far cometh

countre is lyke colde water to a thyrsty soule. A pynchous man fallynge do wne before the wynd, is lyke a troubled wel, and a spring that is destroyed. Lyke as it is not good to eate to muche hony, * euen so he þ wyl search out hye thynges, it shalbe to heup for hym.

He that cannot rule hym selfe, is lyke a cytie whiche is broken downe, and hath no walles.

The. xxvi. Chapter.

LYke as snowe is not mete in somer nor rayne in haruest, eue so is wo: ship vnseemely for a foole. Lyke as the byrde and þ swallow take their hygge and fle here and there, so the curse that is giuen in vayne, shal not lpgde vpon a mā. * Into þ hoile belongeth a whyp, to þ Ass a bydle, and a rodde to the fooles backe. Geue not the foole an answe after his fooly shyness lest thou become lyke vnto hym, but make þ foole an answe to his fooly shynesse, lest he be wyle in his owne conceate.

He is lame of his fete, yea broken is he in hant, þ comitteth any message to a foole.

Lyke as in a lame man his legs ar not equal, enso is a parable in a fooles mouth. He þ letteth a foole in hye dignite, þ is euen as þ a man put a ston in a syngre. A parable in a foole's mouth is lyke a thorne that pricketh a wyse man in the hand. * (Gerau is he that hath knowe all thynges, he rewardeth the foole & recompenseth þ trasgessours.) A man of experyence discerneth al thynges wel: but he þ putteth þ foole to scy lxxendeth þ stryfe. * Lyke as þ dog turneth agayne to his vompte, euen so a foole beginneth his fooly shyness agayne a freide. Of thou seest a man that is wyle in his owne conceate there is more hope in a foole then in hym.

* The slouthfull sayth: there is a Lyon in the waye, and a Lyon in the mydd of the streets. Lyke as the doze turneth aboute vpon the benches, euen so doth the slouthfull welter hym selfe in his bed. * The slouthfull body thrusteth his hande into his bosome, & it greueth hym to put it agayne to his mouth. The lagarde thynketh hym selfe wylser then sent men that lye and reach. * Who so goeth by and medleth with other mēs stryfe: he is lyke one that taketh a dog by þ eares. Lyke as a mad man þ casteth fyre brandes, & woteth deade-ly asowes and dartes, euen so doth a dyslem-ber with his neygghbour. And then sayth he. * I dyd it but in sporte. * Where no wood is, there the fyre goeth out: Euen so where the tale betrailer is taken awaye, there the fyre ceaseth. * Cooles hyndle heate, and hood þ fyre: euen so doth a bawling felowe lxxe up vayne.

A talebearers wordes are lyke men that lxxe with hammers, but they pearse the in-ner partes of the body. * Tenemous lxxes and a wycked herte, are lyke a potsharde con-nered with splat drossle. An enemye shalbe knowen by his talking, and in the meane sea-son he pmagineth myschefe, but when he spea-keth saye, beleue him not: for there are seuen abhominacions in his hart. * Who so kepeth e uyl wyl secretly to do hurte, his malysce shal be the wedd before the whole congregacyon.

* Who so dysgeth up a pyt, shal fall therin: and he þ welseth a ston, shal stromble vpon it hym selfe. A dissembling tonge bateth one that rebuketh hym, & a flaterpyn mouth woz-keth myschefe.

The. xxvii. Chapter.

Ake not thy boaste of to morow * for þ knowest not what maye happen to daye. Let another mā praysle the, and not thynne owne month: yea, other folkes lxxes and not thynne. The ston is heup, and þ land weygthie: but a fooles wozath is heuper then them both.

Wozath is a cruell thyngre, and furiousnesse is a very tēpest: but who is able to abyde enuy. An open rebuke is better then a secret lone. * Raptful are the woundes of a louer, but the kysses of an enemye are cruell. He that is full abhorreth an hony combe: but vnto him that is hongry, euery so wze thyngre is swete.

He that ofspmes lxxeteth, is lyke a byrde that forsaketh her nest. * Balme and swete incense make the: þert mery: so is the swete counsell of a mans frende that agreeth to his purpose. Thynne owne frende and thy fathers frend se thou forsake not: but go not into thy bzothers house in tyme of thy trouble. * For better is a frende at hande, then a bzother far of. * My sonne, be wyle: and thou shalt make me a glad herte, so that I shal make answeere vnto my rebukers. A wyle man lxxnge the plage, wyl hyde hym selfe, as for fooles they go on styll, and suffre harme. * Take his garment that is surety for a straunger, and take a pledge of hym for þ vnkownen mans sake. He that is to halste to prayse his neygghbour aboue measure, shalbe taken as one that ge-ueth hym an euell reposte.

* A bawlyngre woman and the rose of þ house dxxppynge in a rapyne daye, maye wel be compared together. He that refrayneth her, refrayneth the wynde, and holdeth þ oyle fast in his hande. Lyke as one pzon wottereth another, so doth one man comfote an other. * Who so kepeth his fygge tree, shal enioye þ fruytes therof: euen so, he that wayteth vpon his master, shal come to honoure. Lyke as in one water there appere dyuerse faces, euen so dyuerse men haue dyuerse fertes. Lyke as hell and destruccyon are neuer full, euen so * the eyes of men can neuer be satisfied.

Though thou shouldest buye a foole to a pestel in a mortar lyke fymenty coyne, yet wyl not his foolynesse go from hym. ¶ Se that thou knowe the nombze of thy catel thy selfe, and loke well to thy flockes. For cyches abyde not alwaye, & the crowne endureth not for ever. The hepe groweth, & grasse cometh up, & herbes are gathered in the mountaynes. The lamberes shal cloth the and for the goates thou shalt haue money to thy husbandry. Thou shalt haue goates mylke ynoughe to fede the, to upholde thy howsholde, and to susteyne thy maydens.

In the vngodly lyeth when no man chalet hym: but & ryghteous standeth styffe as a Lyon. ¶ Because of synne the lande doth oft chaunge her pynte: but the iowre men of vnderstandynge and wysdome, a Realme endureth longe. One pooze man oppressinge another by violence, is lyke a contynnall rayne that destroyeth the frute.

* 1. Cor. ii. 14.

* Wis. xii. 1.

They that forsake the lawe, prayse the vngodly: but suche as kepe the lawe, abhorre them. ¶ Wycked men discerne not the thyng that is ryght, but they that seke after & Lorde discusse all thynges. ¶ A pooze man leadyng a godly lyfe, is better then the ryche & goeth in frowarde wayes.

Who so kepeth the lawe, is a chyld of vnderstandynge: but he that is a companion of ryotous men, shameth his father. He that by vsury and vniust gaires gathereth riches he shal lape them in store for a man that wyl ppyte the pooze. ¶ He that turneth awaye his eare from hearynge the lawe, hym praye shalbe abhominable. ¶ Who so leadeh the ryghteous into an euell waye, shal fall into hym owne pyte, but the iust shal haue the good in posselion. * Gen. xlii. 1.

Well is hym that standeth alwaye in a we as for him that hardeneth his hert, he shal fall into myschere. Lyke as a roaring Lyon, and an hongry beare, eue so is an vngodly prince ouer the pooze people. ¶ Where the prince is withoute vnderstandynge, there is greate opprellion and wronge: but yf he be lyke a one as hateth couetousnesse, he shal longe raygne. ¶ He that by violence sheddeth any mannes bloude: shalbe a renegate vnto hym grave, and no man shalbe able to socoure him. ¶ Who so leadeh a godly and an innocent lyfe shalbe saued: but he that goth frowarde wayes shal once haue a fall.

A man that dealeth faythfullye, shalbe fylled wyth blessinges, and he that maketh to muche haste for to be ryche, shal not be vngytie. To haue respecte of persons in iudgement is not good. And why? A man wyl do wronge: yea, euen for a pece of breade. He that wyl be ryche to soone, hath an euell eye: and considereth not, & pouerte shal come vpon hym.

He that folowynge my preceptes rebuketh a man, shal fynd moze fauoure at & last, then he & flattereth hym. ¶ Who so robbeth his father and mother, and sayeth it is no synne: the same is lyke vnto a destroyer.

foure that passeth my knowledg.

The waye of an Aegle in the ayre, the waye of a serpent ouer a stone, the waye of a shippe in the see: and the waye of a man with a pong woman. Suche is the waye also of a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke, whiche wyppeth her eth: As for me, I haue done no harme.

Thowowe thre thynges the earth is disquy-ted, and the fourth waye it not beare: Tho-rowe a seruaunte that beareth rule. Tho-rowe a foole that hath to muche byade, tho-rowe a wyfe that hath by hatred when she is maryed, and thowowe an handmayden that is eye to her maistres. These be foure thynges in the earth, the which are very lytle: but in wysdome they excede the wyse. The em-

The wordes of kynge

Lamuel, and the lesson that hys mother taught hym.

A Sonne (why do ye so) thou sone of my bodie: O my dere beloved sonne: geue not ouer thy strength and wapes vnto women, which are the destruccyon euen of kyn- ges. O Lamuel, it is not for kynges, it is not (I saye) for kynges to dyspnye wyne, nor prin- ces stronge dyspnye: (for) there is no secret in dronkenesse ragyneth, lest they beyng dronken, forget the lawe, and peruerthe the iudgement of all pooze mens chyldren. Geue stronge dyspnye vnto such as be condemned to death and wyne vnto those that mourne: that they maye dyspnye it, and forget theyr misery and aduersyte.

Be thou an aduocate, for the dombe and stande in iudgemente thy selfe, to speake for all suche as be locourlesse in thys transp[ro]p[er]te world. Open thy mouth, defende the thinge that is lawfull and ryght, and the cause of þe pooze and helple.

Who so synneth an honest saythfull wo- man, she is much moze woorth then perles. The hert of her husband maye safely trust in her, so that he shall fall in no pouertye.

She wyll do hym good and not euell, al the dayes of her lyfe. She occupieth wol and flaxe, and labourerth gladly with her handes. She is lyke a marchanthes wypp, þe byngeth her vitayles from a farre.

She is vp in the nyght season: to prouyde meate for her housholde, & fede for her may-dens. She consydereth lande, and byeth it, and with the frute of her handes she planteth a vyneyarde. She gyrdeth her loynes with strength, and courageth her armes. And þe she perceaueth that her houswyferye doth good, her candle goeth not out by nyght. She lay- eth her fyngers to the spynndle: and her hande taketh holde of the distaffe. She openeth her hand to the pooze, yea she stretcheth forth her handes to such as haue nede. She feareth not that the colde of wynter shall hurte her hande for all her housholde folkes are clothed with charlet. She maketh her selfe sayre orna- mentes, her clothing is whyte sylke and pur- ple. Her husbände is muche set by in the ga- tes, when he syteth amonge the rulers of the lande. She maketh cloth of sylke and selleth it, and deliuereth gyrdels vnto the marche. Strength and honoure is her clothyng, and in the later day she shall reioyce. She openeth her mouth with wysdom, and in her tonge is the lawe of grace.

She loketh well to the wapes of her housholde: and eateth not her bread to vyfyn. Her chyldren shall asple, and call her blef- sed: and her husbände shall make much of her. Many daughters there be that gather ches together, but thou gost aboue them all. As for fauour, it is deceyfull, and bewote is a vayne thyng: but a woman þe feareth the lord. She is woorthy to be pray- sed. Geue her of þe frute of her handes, and let her owne workes prayse her in the ga- tes.

The Ende of the Prouerbes of Salomon.

The booke of the Preacher: otherwise called Ecclesiastes.

The fyrst Chapter.

¶ All that is in this world is but vanitie.

Here are the wordes of Preacher the sonne of David, king of Jerusalem. * All is but moost vanitie (sayth the preacher) and all is moost vanitie (I saye) and but playne vanitie. For what els hath a man of all labour that he taketh vnder the sunne? One generaciō passeth away, another cometh: but the earth abyedeth still. The sunne ariseth, the sunne goeth downe, and returneth to his place, that he may there rise by agayne. The wynde goeth toward the south, & turneth vnto north, fetcheth his course, whiche he about, & goeth forth, & his circuit returneth agayne to hym selfe.

* All floures runne into seer, and yet is seer it selfe not fylled: for loke vnto what place floures runne, thence they come to floure agayne. All thynges are so harde to be knowen that no man can expresse them. * The eye is not satisfied wth sight: the eare is not fylled wth hearyng. * The thing that hath ben, cometh to passe agayne: and the thing that hath ben done, shalbe done agayne: There is no newe thing vnder the sunne. Is there anye thing wherof it may be sayd: lo this is newe?

For it was longe agoon in the tymes that haue ben before vs. The thinge that is past is out of remembraunce: Euen so the thynges that are for to come, shal nomore be thought vpon amonge them that com after. I my self the Preacher was kynge of Israel at Jerusalem, and byd apply my minde to seche out and search for knowledge of all thynges that are done vnder heauen. Suche trauaile and labour hath God gyuen vnto the chyldren of men, to exercise them selues therein.

Thus haue I consydred all the thynges that come to passe vnder the sun: and lo, they are al but vanitie & vexacion of mynde. The croked cannot be made streyght, nor seer thing that is vnperfect, cannot be accepted wth thynges that are perfect. I continued wth myne owne heart, sayng: lo, I am com to a great estate, & haue gotten moze wysdome, then al they that haue ben before me in Jerusalem. Yea, my heart had great experience of wysdome & knowlege: for ther vnto I applied my minde, & I might knowe what were wysdome & vnderstanding, what were error & foolishnesse: and I perceyved, this was also but a vexaciō of mynde: for where moche wysdome is, there is also much trauaile and disquietnesse: and seer knowledge a man hath, the moze is his care.

The ii. Chapter.

¶ Aboundaunce of riches, of pleasure, and of buythynge are vayne thynges.

When sayd I thus in my heart: Now I go to, I wyll take myne ease, and haue good dayes. But lo, that is vanitie also: in so moche, that I sayd vnto the man gyuen to laughter: thou art mad, and to my self: what doest thou? So I thought in my heart, to geue my self vnto wyne, and agayne to applye my mynde vnto wysdome, and to comprehend foolishnesse vntill the tyme that (amonge all the thynges which are vnder the sun) I myght se what were best for men to do, so longe as they lyue vnder heauen.

* I made gorgeous saye woorkes. I buylded me houses, and planted vineyardes. I made me orchardes and gardens of pleasure and planted trees in them of al maner frutes: I made pooles of water, to water the grene and frutefull trees withal. I bought seruantes and maydens: and had a great household. As for catel and shepe, I had moze substance of them, then all they that were before me in Jerusalem. I gathered syluer and golde together: euen a treasure of kinges and landes.

I prouided me syngers and women, which coulde playe on instrumentes, to make me my self and pastyme. I gat me psalteries and longes of musycke. And I was greater, and in moze woorthyn then all my predecessours in Jerusalem. For wysdome remayned with me: and loke whatsoeuer myne eyes desyred, I let the haue it: and wher in soeuer my heart deuyted or had any pleasure, I withhelde it not from it. Thus my heart reioysed in all that I byd: and this was my portio of al my trauaile. But when I consydred all the woorkes that my handes had wrought, and all the labour that I had taken therein: lo, all was but vanitie and vexacion of mynde, and no thyng of anye value vnder the sunne.

Then turned I me to consydre wysdome, error and foolishnesse: for what is amonge men, that might be compared to me & mynge in suche woorkes? and I sawe that wysdome excellith foolishnesse, as farre as light doeth darkenesse. For a wyse man hath his eyes in his head, but the foole goeth in the darkenesse: I perceyued also & they bothe had one ende. The thoughte I in my mynde. If it happen vnto the foole as it doeth vnto me, what nedeth me then to labour any moze for wysdome? So I confessed within my heart, that this also was but vanitie. For the wyse are euer as lytle in remembraunce as the foolish: for seer dayes shal come wth al shalbe forgotten: yea & wise man dyeth as well as a foole.

Thus begane I to be weyre of my lyfe, in somoche that I coulde awayne wth nothing that is doone vnder the sunne, for all was but vanitie & vexacion of mynde: yea I was weyre werpe of all my labour, which I had taken under the sunne, because I shoulde be sayne to leaue them vnto an other man that cometh after me: And who knoweth whether he shalbe a wise man or a fooler? And yet shal he be lord of all my labours, which I with such wylsome haue taken under the sunne. This is also a vayne thyng.

So I turned me to restryne my mynde from all suche traunple, as I toke under the sunne: for somoch as a man shoulde werp him selfe with wisdom, with vnderstanding and oportunitie, and yet be sayne to leaue his labours vnto an other, that neuer sweet for them. This is also a vayne thyng & great myserye. For what getteth a man of all the labour and traunple of his mynde, that he taketh under the sunne, but heynesse, sorowe, and dysquyetnesse all the dayes of his lyfe? Iulomoch, that his herte can not rest in the nyght: this is also a vayne thyng. * Is it not better then for a man to eate and drynke, and his soule to be mery in his labour? Yea, I sawe that this also was a gyfte of God.

For who wyl eate or go more lustely to his worke the? And wher God gyueth to a man that is good before hym, wylsome, vnderstanding and gladnesse. But vnto the synner he gyueth werinesse. (and superfluous care) that he maye gather, and heape together the thynges that afterwarde shalbe gyven vnto hym, whom it pleaseth God. This is nowe a vayne thyng: yea a very dysquyetnesse and vexacion of mynde.

The .iii. Chapter.

All thynges come in theyr tyme, and passe awaye in theyr tyme.

Very thing hath a tyme: yea, al that is vnder the heauen hath his conuenient season. There is a tyme to be bozne, and a tyme to dye. There is a tyme to plant, & a tyme to plucke vp the thyng that is planted. A tyme to slaye, and a tyme to make hole. A tyme to breake downe, and a tyme to build vp. A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laugh. A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to daunce. A tyme to cast awaye stones, and a tyme to gather stones together. A tyme to embrace, and a tyme to restryne from embracyng. A tyme to wyne, and a tyme to lese. A tyme to spare, and a tyme to spende. A tyme to cut in peeces, and a tyme to loue together.

* A tyme to kepe silence, and a tyme to speake: A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate. A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peace. What hath a man els (that doeth any thyng) but weynesse and labour? For as touchyng the traunple and carefulnesse, whiche God hath gyue vnto men, I se that he hath gyue it them, to be exercised in it. All this hath

he ordeyned maruaylous goodlye, to merye thynges his due tyme. He hath planted ignorance also in the hertes of men, that they shoul not comprehende the grounde of his workes which he doeth from the beginning to the ende. So I percepued, that in those thynges there is nothyng better for a man, then to be mery and to do well as longe as he lyueth. For all that a man eateth and drynke: yea whoso euer a man enioyeth of all his laboure, that same is a gyft of God. I consydered also that what soeuer God doeth, it continueth for euer. And that nothyng can be put vnto it, nor taken from it, and yet God doeth it to the intent, that men shoulde feare hym. * The thynges that hath bene, is nowe: and the thynges that is for to come, hath ben afore tyme, for God resteth agayne the thynges that was past. Wherefore, I sawe vnder the sunne vngodlynesse in the stede of iudgement, and iniquitye in stede of ryghtousnesse. Then thought I in my mynde: God shal separate the ryghtous from the vngodly, and then shal be the tyme and iudgement of all counseyles and workes. I communed with myne owne herte also, concernyng the chyldren of men: howe God hath chosen them, and yet lette them appeare, as though they were beastes: for it happeneth vnto me as it doth vnto beastes: and as the one dyeth, so dyeth the other: yea, they haue both one maner of byeth: so that (in this) a man hath no premyser aboue a beaste but all are subdued vnto vanitie.

They go all vnto one place, for as they be all of dust, so shal they all turne vnto dust agayne. * Who knoweth the spryng of man that goeth upwarde, and the byeth of the beaste that goeth downe to the earth? Wherefore I percepued that there is nothyng better for a man, then to be ioyful in his labour: for that is his porciō. But who wyl bringe hym to se the thynges that shal come after hym.

The .iiii. Chapter.

The meynes of the innocent, the superfluous labours of men. The chyldre that is poor and weyre.

I turned me, and consydered all the violence wronge that is doone vnder the sunne: and beholde, the treasures of such as were oppressed: and there was noman to cosort them, or wolde deliuer and defende them from the violence of theyr oppressours. Wherefore, I iudged those that are deed, to be more happye then those that be alpye: yea, him that is yet vbozne to be better at ease then they be, because he seeth not the miserable workes that are done vnder the sunne.

Agayne, I sawe that all traunple and diligence of labour that euery man taketh in this, was done of enuy agayns his neyghbour.

This is also a vayne thyng, and a vexacion of mynde. The foole foldeth his handes together, and eateth vp his owne flesch. One sayeth (sayeth he) is better with rest, then both the handes full with labour & trauaile of mynde. Whereouer, I tourmed me, and beholde yet another vanitie vnder the sunne.

There is one man, no mo but hym selfe alone, hauing neyther chyldre nor vnto other: yet is there no ende of his carefull trauaile: his eyes cannot be satysfied with rycheesse, ^{as yet} he can not remember hym selfe, and care: for whom do I take such trauaile? For whose pleasure do I thus consume awaye my lyfe? This is also a vayne and myserable thyng. Therefore, two are better then one: for they maye well enioye the profyte of theyr labour. For if one of them fall, his companyon helpeth hym vp agayne: But woo is hym that is alone: for if he fall, he hath not an other to help hym vp. Agayne, when two slepe togyther, they are warme: but how can a body be warme alone? One maye be overcome, but two maye make resistance. A theye folde gabble is not lyghely broken. A poore chyldre beinge wise, is better then an olde kynge that dyeth, and cannot beware in tyme to come.

* Some one cometh out of prison, and is made a kynge: and another whiche is bozne in the kynngdome cometh vnto pouertie.

And I perceyued that all men lyuyng vnder the sunne, go with the seconde chyldre, that shall stande vp in the stede of the other.

As for the people that haue bene before hym, and that come after hym they are innumerable. And they that come after hym shal merite of hym. This is also a vayne thyng and a vexacion of mynde. When thou comest into the house of God, kepe thy foote, & hame up, that God which is at hande may heare: that thou greeue not the offsprynge of loles: for they knowe nought but to do euyl.

The. v. Chapter.

[¶] Abstention to beate of each communication. He ought not to meruayle at the oppression of the poore. He counten is not satysfied with his rycheesse.

Be not hasty with thy mouth, and let not thine herte speake anye thyng rashly before God. For God is in heauen, and thou vnder earth, therefore let thy wordes be fewe. For where moche carefulnes is, there are many dreames: and where many dreames are, there men maye heare so much. If thou make a vowe vnto God be not slacke to performe it. As for foolish voves which be no pleasure in them: If thou promise thyselfe, paye it: for better is it that thou make a vowe, then that thou shouldest promise, and not pay. Dure not thy mouth to saye the lyke for to synne, neyther save thy soule by the tynge: that it is thy igno-raunce. For then God wyll be angry at thy voyce, and destroye all the wyshes of thyne handes. And why? where as are many dreames and many wordes, there are also dyners vanities: but loke that thou feare God. * If thou seekest the poore to be oppressed, & wrong fullye dealt withall, so that equitye & ryght of the lawe is wrested in the lande, maruayl not thou at suche a thyng, for one great man kepeth touch with an other, and the myghty men are in auctoritie ouer the poore. The increase of the earth upholdeth all thyng: yet the kynge hym selfe is maptayne by his handes. He that loueth money wyll neuer be satysfied with money: and whoso deliteth in rycheesse shall haue no profyte therof. This is also a vayne thyng. Where as moche rycheesse is, there are many also that spende the away. And what pleasure moze hath he that possideth them, sayunge that he maye loke vpon them wth his eyes? A labouryng man slepeth sweetly, whether it be litle or moche that he eateth: but the aboundance of the ryche, wyll not suffre hym to slepe. Yet is there a soze plague, which I haue sene vnder the sun, (namely) ryches kept to the hurt of him that hath them in possession. For oft tymes they perishe with his greate mylere and trouble: and if he haue a chyldre, it getteth nothyng.

* Lyke as he came naked out of his mothers wombe, so goeth he thither agayne: and carryeth nothyng awaye with hym of all his labour. This is a myserable plague that he shall go awaye euen as he came. What helpeth it him then that he hath laboured in the wynder? All the dayes of his lyfe also he did eate in the darke, wth greate carefulnesse, synnesh, and sorow. * Therefore me thynke it a better and a fayrer thyng, a man to eate and drynke and to be refresshed of all his labour, that he taketh vnder the sunne all the dayes of his lyfe which God greeueth hym, for this is his porcion. For vnto whomsoeuer God greeueth rycheesse, goodes and power, he greeueth it hym to enioye it, to take it for his porcion and to be refresshed of his labour: this is the gyfte of God. For he thynketh not moche how longe he shall lyue, for almoste as God spylleth his herte with gladnesse.

The. vi. Chapter.

[¶] The mylere of the ryche and counten. The difference of a foole and a wyse man.

There is yet a plague vnder the sun, and it is a general thyng amonge men: when God greeueth a man rycheesse, goodes and honour, so that he wanteth nothyng of all that his herte can desire: and yet God greeueth hym not leane to enioye the same, but another man spendeth them

The Booke

Whem. This is a vayne thing and a miserable plage. If a man beget an hundred chyldren, and lyue many yeres, so that his dayes are many in nombze, and yet can not enioye his good, neyther be buryed: as for hym I saye: that an vntymely byrth is better then he.

For he cometh to nought, and spendeth his tyme in darkenesse, and his name is forgotten. Whereouer, he seeth not the sunne, & knoweth not of it: and yet hath he moze rest then the other. Yea, though he lyued two thousand yeres, yet hath he no good lyfe. Come not all to one place: All the labour that a man taketh is for hym selfe, and yet his desyre is neuer fylled after his mynde. For what hath the wyle moze then the foole? What helpeth it the wyle, that he knoweth, to walke with fooles before the lyuynge? The cleare syght of the eyes is better then that the soule shoulde walk after desires of the lust. Howbeit, this is also a vayne thing, and a disquietnesse of mynde. The thinge that hath ben is named all readye, and knowen that it is euen man him selfe, neyther maye he go to lawe wth him that is myghtyer then he. Many thinges there be that encrese vanitie: and what hath a man els? For who knoweth what is good for man lyuynge, in the dayes of his vayne lyfe, which is but a shadowe? O who wyl tell a man what shall happen after hym vnder the sunne.

The vii. Chapter.

That which passeth our strengthes and wyettes, ought we not to seke after.

9. 10. 11. 12.
Cant. 1. 1. 1. 1.

A* Good name is moze worth, then precious oymment, and day of death is better the day of byrth. It is better to go into an house of mournynge, then into a banquettyng house. For there is the ende of all men: and he that is lyuynge, taketh it to heart: grauntie is better then to laughe: for when the countenance is deny, the heart is re-fourmed. The heart of the wise is in the mour-nyng house, but the heart of the foolys is in the house of myrth. * It is better to gyue eare to the challyngynge of a wise man, then to heare the songe of fooles. For the laughyng of fooles is lyke the crackynge of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a vayne thinge.

9. 10. 11. 12.

The wyle man hateth wronge dealynge: and abhorreth the heart that coueteth rewar-des. Better is it to consyde the ende of a thing then the begynnynge. The patient of spylle is better then the hys mynded. Be not haste-ly angere in thy mynde, for wyath resteth in the belome of fooles. Wape not thou: What is the cause, that the dayes of the olde tyme were better then they that be now? for that were no wise question. Wisdome with ende rtyaunce is good: yet better is it to them that without care maye beholde the sunne. For wysdome defendeth as wel as money, and excellent knowledge and wysdome graunt lyfe vnto him that hath it in possessio. Consy-der the workes of God, howe p^r no man can make the thinge streyght which he maketh cro-ked. Also wel the tyme of prosperitie, & reme-ber the tyme of misfortune: for God maketh the one by the other, so that a man can finde no thing els. All thinges haue I consydered in the tyme of my vanitie: that the iust man perissheth for his ryghtousnesse sake, and the vngodly lyueth in his wickednesse. Therefore, * be thou neyther to ryghtous nor ouerwyle that thou perissh not: be neither to vnyghtous also nor to foolishe, lest thou dye before thy tyme. It is good for the to take holde of this, and not to let it go out of thy hand. For he that feareth God, cometh forth to them all.

Wysdome graunteth moze courage vnto the wyle, then ten myghty men of the citie: for there is not one iust vpon earth that doth good and synneth not. Take no vowe vnto eny worde that is spoken, lest thou heare thy ser-uaunt curse the: for thine owne heart knoweth that thou thy selfe also hast oft tymes spoken ill by other men. All these thinges haue I proued in wisdom: for I thought to be wyle * but he went farther fro me the he was be-foze, yea, and so depe that I might not reach vnto her. I applied my mynde also vnto knowledge, and to seke and searthe oute science, wisdom and vnderstanding: to knowe the solupnesse of the vngodlye, and the errorre of dofynge fooles. And I founde, that * a woman is betterer then death, for she hath cast abrode her heart as a net that men fysh with:
and her handes are cheynes. Whoso pleasech God, shall escape from her: but the synner wyl be taken with her.

Behold (sayeth the preacher) this haue I diligently searched out and proued. One thing must be consydered with an other, that a man may come to knowledge: which as yet I seke and fynde it not. Amonge a thousand men I haue founde one, but not one woman amonge all. Lo, this onely haue I found, that * God made man iust and ryghte, but they sought many inuencions.

The viii. Chapter.

The kynges commaundment ought to be obeyed. Glorie is one of the chiefe thinges vnder the sunne.

Who is wise? Who hath knowledge?
To make an answer: A mans wis-dome * maketh his face to shyne: but vngamefastnesse putteth it out of fauour. I must kepe the kynges commaundment, and the oth that I haue made vnto God. Be not hasty to goo out of his syght, and se thou continue in no euill thing, for whatsoeuer it pleasech him that doth be.
Lyke as when a kyng graunteth a charge, his commaundment is myghty: Euen so, * who maye say vnto hym: what dost thou? * Altho so he hath the commaundement, shall fele no harme: but a wyle mans hert discerneth the tyme and iudgement. For euery thyng wyl haue oportunitie & iudgement, and this is thyng that maketh men full of carefulnesse, and sorowe. And why? a man knoweth not what is for to come: for who wyl tel hym?

Neither is there any man that hath power ouer the spyrte, to kepe styl the spyrte nor to haue any power in the tyme of death: is it not he also that can make an ende of the battyle: neyther maye vngodlynesse deliuer them that meddle wit hall.

All these thynges haue I consydered, and applied my mynde vnto euery woꝛke that is vnder the sunne: how one man hath lordshipp vpon an other to his owne harme. For I haue sene often the vngodlye broughte to theyr graues: and yet they haue returned into the cytie agayne, and came from the place of buryment, which in the cite were growen out of memoꝛy, as were those also that ly-ed well. This is also a vayne thyng.

Because now that euyl woꝛkes are not hastily punished, the hert of man gyueth hym lett me vnto wyckednesse. But though any personne offende an hundred tymes, and God defer, gyuynge hym longe lyfe: yet as I here, that it shall go wel with the that fear God, because they haue hym before they eyes. Agayne, as for the vngodlye, it shall not be well with hym, neyther shall he enioy his dayes, but euen as the shadow: it shall be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vanitie vpon earth: There be many men, vnto whome it happeneth, as though they had the woꝛkes of the vngodly.

Agayne, there be vngodly, with whome it goeth as though they had the woꝛkes of the ryghtous. This haue I called also a vayne thyng. Therefore I commend glad-nesse, because a man hath no better thyng vnder the sunne, then to eate and drynke, and to be merry: for that shall he haue of his labour all the dayes of his lyfe, whiche God gyueth hym vnder the sunne. And so I applied my mynde to learne wysdome, and to knowe the trauayle that is in the worlde (and I of suche a fashyon, I suffred not myne eyes to slepe, neither daye nor nyght) I vnderstode of all the woꝛkes of God, but it is not possible for a man to attayne vnto the woꝛkes that are done vnder the sunne: and though he bestowe his labour to seke them oute, yet can he not reache vnto them: yea, though he a wyle man wyl undertake to knowe them, yet shall he not fynde them.

The ix. Chapter.

It is not meete for a ryghtousnesse of his owne woꝛke, whether he be worthy of loue or hate, a man ought to be merry with his wyfe. A pꝛecept of wysdome.

E all these thynges purposed I in my mynde to seke out. The ryghte-ous and wyle: yea, and their seruati-tes also, are in the hand of God: and there is no man that knoweth either loue or hate, but all thynges are before them. It happeneth vnto one as vnto an other: it goeth with the ryghtous as with the vngodly:
* with the good and cleane, as with the vncleane: with hym that offereth, as with hym that offereth not: lyke as it goeth with the vertuous, so goeth it also with the synner.

As it happeneth vnto the perjured so happeneth it also, to hym that is afrayed to be forsworne. Amonge all thynges that come to passe vnder the sunne: this is a misery that it happeneth vnto all alpe. This is the cause also that the hertes of men are full of wyckednesse, and madde foolysheenesse is in theyr hertes, as long as they lyue, vntil they dye.

And why? as long as a man lyueth, he hath an hope: for a quicke dogge (saye they) is better then a deed Lyon: for they that be lyuynge, knowe that they shall dye: but they that be deed, knowe nothyng: neyther deserue they any moze. For theyr memoꝛial is forgotte, so that they be neither loued, hated nor enuyed: neither haue they any moze part in the worlde in al that is done vnder the sunne.
So thou thy wyfe then, eate thy bread with ioye, and drynke thy wyne with a glad hert, for thy woꝛkes please God. Let thy garmentes be alwaye whyte, * and let thy heed lack no oymment.

* Use thy selfe to lyue ioyfully with thy wyfe whom thou louest, all the dayes of thy lyfe which is but vayne, that God gyueth vnder the sunne, all the dayes of thy vantage: for that is thy porcyon in this lyfe, of all thy labour and trauayle that thou takest vnder the sunne. What so euer thou takest in hande to do, that doo with all thy power, for in the graue that thou goest vnto, there is neyther woꝛke, counsaile, knowledge, nor wysdome.

So I turned me vnto other thynges vnder the sunne, and I sawe, that in runnyng it helpeth not to be swyft: in battayle it hel-peth not to be stronge: to fedynge, it helpeth not to be wyle: to richesse, it helpeth not to be subtyll: to be had in fauour, it helpeth not to be comynge: but that all lyeth in tyme & fortune. For * a man knoweth not his tyme, but lyke as the fyshes are taken with the angle, and as the byrdes are caughte with the snare: Euen so are men take in the peryllous tyme, when it cometh todaynly vpon them.

This wysdome haue I sene also vnder the sunne, and me thought it a great thyng.
There was a litle citie, and a fewe me with in it: so there came a great king and besieged it, and made great bul woꝛkes agaynst it.
And

The Booke

And in þe crite there was founde a pooze mā (but he was wyse) which with his wisdom deliuered the crite: yet was there no bodye that had any respect to sucche a simple man.

Then sayd J: wisdom is better the strength.
Neuertheless, a simple mans wisdom is despyed, and his wordes are not hearde.

A wyse mans counsaile that is folowed in silence, is farre above the cryinge of a ca-ptayne amonge fooles. * For wisdom is better then harnesse: but one withyft alone destroeyeth much good.

II. reg. xxii. c.

The .i. Chapter.

The difference betwixt a foole and a wyse man.
Fortunate and happye is that realme, which hath a wyse prince.

Deed hys doeth corrupte sweete opynit, and maketh it to stink.

Even so ofte tymes he that is made for wisdom and honour is abhorred because of a lytle foolishnesse.

A wyse mans hert is vpon the right hande, but a fooles herte vpon the left.
A foole wyl thewe hym selfe when he goeth by the waye: yet thynketh he that euery man doth as foolishly as hym selfe. If a principall spryte be gyven the to heare rule, * be not ne-glecte then in thine office: for he that ca take cure of hym selfe, anoydeth great offences.

* Roma. xii. b

An other plague is there, whiche I haue sene vnder the sunne: namely, the ignoraunce that is commonly amonge princes: in that a foole sytteth in great dignitie, and the riche are set downe beneth: I haue sene seruantes ryde vpon horses, and princes goinge vpon theyr feet as it were seruantes. * But he that dyggeth vpon a pyt shall fall therein hym selfe: and whoso breaketh downe the hedge, a serpent shal bite hym. Whoso remoueth the stones, shal haue trouble withall: and he þe beweth wood, shalbe hurte therewith.

* ppo. xxi. b.
Ecclie. xxv. a

When an yron is blunt, and the poynt not sharpened, it must be whet agayne, and that wyl might. Eue so doth wisdom folowe diligence. A babler of his tonge is no better the a serpent that syngeth without wysynge.

The wordes out of a wise mans mouth, are iracions: but the lypyes of a foole wyl de-stroye hym selfe. The begynnyng of his tal-kyng is foolishnesse, and the last word of his mouth is sharke madnesse. A foole is full of wordes, and a man can not tell what shal come to passe, who wyl then warne him of it that shal folowe after hym. The labour of the foolish is greuous vnto them, whyle they knowe not howe to go into the crite.

Woe be vnto the (O thou lande) whose kyng is but a childe, and whose princes are early at theyr bankettes. But well is the (O thou lande) whose kyng is come of nobles, and whose princes eate in due feasts, for necessitie & not for lust. The yowes stouthfull nesse þe balles fall downe, and thow the yow handes it rapeth in at the house. Weate ma-keth me to laugh, and * wyne maketh them mery: but vnto none are all thynges obedient. With þe hyng no euyl in thy thought, and speake no hurt of the crite in thy pryue chambre: for a byrde of the ayre shal betray thy voyce, and wich her fethers shal she bewape thy wordes.

The .ii. Chapter.

My chesse ought to be distributed vnto the wyse.

If thy breed vpo wete faced, and so shalte thou fynde after many dayes. Gyne parte seven dayes, also vpon þe. Wyl for thou knowest not what mperce shal come vpon each.

Whe þe cloudes are ful they pour out raine vpon the earth. And when the tree falleth (whether it be towarde þe South or North) in what place soeuer it fall, there it lyeth.

He that regardeth the wynde, shal not low and he that hath respecte vnto the cloude, shal not reape. Now, lyke as thou knowest not the way of the spryte how it entred into þe lytle body being yet in þe mothers wombe, Eue so thou knowest not þe workes of God, whiche is the workemaster of all.

Ceasse not thou therefore with thy handes to sowe the seede, wbe ther it be in the monyng or in the eueninge: for thou knowest not whether this or that shal prosper, and yf they both take, it is the better. The lyght is swete, and a pleasant thyng is it for the eyes to loke vpon the sunne. If a mā haue many peres, and be glad in them all, let hym remembre the dayes of darkenesse, whiche shalbe many, and that foloweth: all thynges shalbe but vanitie. Be glad then (O thou pouge man) in thy youth, and let thy hert be mery in thy pouge dayes: folowe the dayes of thyne owne hert, and the lust of thine eyes but be þe sure, that God shal hyng the vnto indgement for all these thynges.

The .iii. Chapter.

From one youth ought we to contynue, and regarde the goodnesse of God.

Get away displeasure out of thine hert, & remoue euyl from thy body: for childhode and youth is but va-nitie. Remembre thy maker the so-ner in thy youth, or euer þe dayes of aduersite come, & of þe peres draw npe, wbe thou shalt saye: I haue not pleasure in them, before the sun, þe lyght, þe moone & starres be darkened, & of the cloudes turne agayne after þe raine, when the keepers of þe house shal tremble, and wbe the stronge men shal bowe them selues, when þe mynners stand still, because they be so few, and wbe þe sight of the widowes shal war

their dyngme, when the doores in the stretes shal be layed downe: when men shal crie in the voyce of the byrd, and when all the daughters of mulier shal be broughte lowe: when men shal feare in hye places, and be afraid in the stretes, when the Almond tree shal wither, and be laden with the grethop-pe, and when all lust shall passe, because man hath his longe home, and the mourners shall be in the stretes. O ever the silver lace in the wynde, O the golden well be houn-der. O the pease be broken at the wel, and the olive upon the osterne. Then shall the dust be agayne vnto earth, from whence it came, and the spyrte shall retourne vnto God which gaue it. All is but vanitie, the preacher sayd, al is but playne vanitie.

The preacher was yet more wyse, and gave the people knowledge: he gaue good counsaile, and the grounde, and set forth the wayes: his diligence was to fynde out acceptable wordes, ryght scripture, and the wordes of truthe. For the wordes of the wyse are like pyches and naples, that perceyve, where with the stufte gathered together by: for they are gyuen of one shep-herde only. Therefore beware (my soune) of the wordes that is beside this: for to make much of them, it is an endlesse wythe: & to beare with them, it is to beare with the bodye.

Let us heare the conclusion of all thyng that hath bene sayd, and heere his commaunde-mentes: for that toucheth all men.

For God shal iudge all workes and secreete thynges, whether they be good or evyll.

led Ecclesiastes.

The Ballet of Bal-lettes of Salomon: called in Latyn, Canticum Canticorum.

The first Chapter.

A myghty signe of the spiritual and bodie loue betwene Christ the spouse, and the church or congregation his spouse.

That he word kisse me with the kysses of his mouth: for thy loue is more pleasaunce the wyne, & that because of the good and pleasaunt sa-uours of thy most precious balmes.

Thy name is a sweete smellynge oynment when it is shed forth, therefore doe the maydens loue the, & drawe thou me vnto the: we wil runne after the. The kynges dath broughte me into his priue chambers. We will be glad and reioyse in the: we thik more of thy loue then of wyne. They that be righ-tous loue the. I am blacke (O ye daughters of Jerusalem) lyke as the tentes of the Ce-darenes, & as the hangynge of Salomon, but yet am I saye and wel fauoured with balme: Maruel not at me, I am so blacke: for why the sunne hath dyed vpon me. My mothers chyliden had euill wyl at me, they made me the keper of the vineyardes: but myne owne vineyardes haue I not kept. Tell me of hym whom my soule loueth where thou feedest the shepe, where thou makest the rest at y noone daye: for why shal I be lyke hym, that goeth wraunge about y flockes of the shepheardes?
If thou knowe not thy selfe (O thou sayest among womē) the go thy way forth after y foote stepes of the shepe, and fede thy gootes besyde the shepherdes tentes. Vnto the doore of Pharaos charrettes haue I compared the, O my loue. Thy chek is as thy necke is beautifull as the turtles, and hanged with spanges and goodly lewels: a neckbande of gold will we make the with syluer buttons.

When the kynges sittyth at the table, he shall linell my hardus: a bondell of myrrer is my loue vnto me: he will lye betwixt my breastes: a clustre of Camphyr in the vine-yardes of Engaddi is my loue vnto me.

O how saye art thou (my loue) O how saye art thou: thou hast dounes eyes.

O how saye art thou (my beloued) how well fauoured art thou: Our bed is deckt w floures, the seynge of our houses are of Cedre tree, and our crosse ioyntes of Cyprisse.

The ii. Chapter.

I am the lyte of the seide, And rose of y valleyes: as the rose amonge the thoz-nes, so is my loue amonge the dought-ters. Lyke as the apple tree amonge the trees of the wood, so is my beloued amonge the sones. My delecte is to lye vnder his shadowe,

howe, for his frute is swete vnto my throte he byngeth me into his wyne seller, his banner spred ouer me is loue. Set aboute me cuppes of wyne, cofort me with apples: for I am specke of loue. * His left hande lyeth vnder my heed, and his ryghte hande shall embrace me. * I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, by the roses and byndes of the felde, that ye wake not by my loue, nor touch her: tyl she be content her selfe. We thynke, I heare the voyce of my beloued: lo, there commeth he hoppinge vpon the mountaynes, & leapynge ouer the lytle hilles. He beloued is lyke a roo or a ponge harte. Beholde, he standeth behynde our wall, he looketh in at the wyndow, and peepeth thowow the grate. My beloued and I were, and sayd vnto me:

O stande by my loue, my beutyfull, and go to thine owne: for lo, the winter is now past the rayne is awaye and gone. The floures are come vp in the felde, the tyme of the byr-des syngynge is come, and the voyce of the turtle doue is hearde in our lande. * He syng-eth byngeth forth her synges, & the vynes beare blossomes, & haue a good smel. O stand by then & come my loue, my beutyfull: & com I say (O my doue) out of the caues of y rocks out of the holes of the wall: O let me se thy countenance, and heare thy voyce, for swete is thy voyce, and saye is thy face. Get by the fores, yea the lytle fores, that burte y vynes: for our vynes beare blossomes. * My loue is myne, and I am his: which fedeth amonge the roses, vntyll the daye bryake: and till the shadowes be gone. Come agayne (O my beloued) and be lyke as a Roo, or a ponge harte vpon the wyde mountaynes.

The.iii. Chapter.

In myght in my bed I sought hym, who my soule loueth: yea, diligently sought I hym, but I founde hym not. I will get vp (thought I) and go aboute the cytie, in the wapes, in all the streates wll I see him who my soule loueth: but woe I sought hym I founde hym not. The watchmen also that go about the cytie founde me.

25 So when I was a lytle past them, I founde hym whom my soule loueth. I haue gotten holde vpon him, and will not let hym go, vntill I bynge hym into my mothers house, and into her chambze that bare me.

* I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, by the Roses and byndes of the felde, that ye wake not by my loue, nor touche her tyll she be content her selfe. Who is this, that cometh vp out of the wildernesse lyke vapours of smoke, as it were a smel of myr, frankincence, and all maner spices of the Apotecaryer. Beholde, about Salomons bedstede there stande thre score valeant men of the moost myghtye in Israel. They holde swordes euery one, and are expert in warre.

Euery man also hath his sword vpon his thygge, because of feare in the nyght: hym Salomon had made hym self a palace of the wod of Libanus, the pillars are of syner, the couerynge of golde, the seate of purple, the grounde is pleasantly paved with loue, by the daughters of Jerusalem. So forth, O ye daughters of Syon and beholde: hym Salomon in the crowne, wherwith he may ther crowned him in the day of his mariage and in the daye of the gladnesse of his daye.

The.iiii. Chapter.

O howe saye art thou my loue, how saye art thou: thou hast done great belyde that which lyeth by me.

* Thy beete lockes are lyke the wolle of a flocke of gootes that be shorne vpon mount Silead: Thy teeth are lyke the shepe of the same bigne, which went by from the washing place: where euery one beareth two teeth, and not one vnfrutefull amonge them. Thy lyppes are lyke a rose coloured pbande: thy wordes are louely, thy chekes are lyke a pome-granat within thyne beetes. Thy necke is lyke the tower of Dauid builded with costly stones, lyinge out on the lydes wher vpon there hange a. O. Gylden: yea, all the weapons of the gyantes. * Thy two bre-stes are lyke two twinnes of young Roes, which fede amonge roses. O that I might go to the mountayne of myrr, & to the hill of frankincense: tyl I day bryake, & till the dewes be past awaye. Thou art all saye, (O my loue) and no spot is there in the. Can to me from Libanus (O my spouse) cometh me from Libanus, loke fro the top of Amana, from the top of Danir, and Hermon, from the Lyons dennes, and fro the mountaynes of leopardes. Thou hast with loue bewitched my herte, O my syster, my spouse: I haue bewitched my herte with one of thyne eyes and with one cheyne of thy necke. O how saye art thy brestes, my syster, my spouse: Thy bre-stes are moze pleasaunt then wyne, and the smell of thyne oynmentes passeth all spices.
Thy lippes, O my spouse, drop as the honey cobe: yea, mylk and honny is vnder thy tong, and the smell of thy garmentes, is lyke the smell of Libanus. A garden well locked is my syster, my spouse: a gard: well locked, and a sealed wel. The frutes that are planted in are lyke a verrey paradys of pomegranates, with swete frutes: as Camphyre, Cardus, and Daffro, Calamus and Dymam, with all swete smellyng trees: Myrr, Aloes, and all the best spices: a well of gardes, a well of lyuyng waters, which ranne downe fro Li-banus. Tyl thou nocht wynde, come thou south wynde, & blowe vpon my gard, that the smel therof may be carped on euery spore: yea, & my beloued may come into his gard, and cate

of the sweete frutes þ growe therein.

The. v. Chapter.

I come into my garden. O my spouse, my spouse: I haue gathered my spice with my spice. I haue eaten my my honey combe, I haue dröke my my mylike. Eate, O ye frendes, eate, O ye beloued.

As I am a slepe, and my hert is wakynge. Thine voice of my beloued, when he knoc- ket. Open to me, O my spouse, my lone, my lone, my beloued: for my heade is full of dew and the lockes of my heare are full of þ nyght roses. I haue put of my cote, howe can I turne agayne? I haue washed my fete, how can I stee them agayne?

Thou put in þys hande at the hole, and my hert was moued within me. I stode vp to myne into my beloued, & my handes drop- ped with myrrour, & the myrrour ranne downe my fingers vpon the locke. I opened vnto my beloued, but he was departed and gone. Rowe when he spake, my herte was gone: I soughte hym, but I coude not fynde hym: I cryed vpon hym, neuertheles, he was not answere. So the watchmen that were about the cytie, founde me: smote me, & rebuked me: Pea, they þ kept the walles, toke away my kercheafe fro me.

I charge you therefore, O ye daughters of Ierusalem, if ye fynde my beloued, if ye tell him howe I am lyke for lone.

What manner of man is thy lone aboute o- ther louners? O þ fayrest amonge women: O what can thy lone do, moze then other louners that charge vs so straitly?

As for my lone, he is whyppe and redde co- lored, a goodly person among ten thousand. His herte is as the most fyne golde, þ lockes of his heare are bushed, and blacke as a crow. His eyes are as the eyes of doves by the wa- ter sides, as though they were washed w- th myrrour and are set lyke perles in golde. Hys shouers are lyke a garden bed, wherein the A- rabs plant all manner of swete thyn- ges. Hys lippes are lyke roses that droppe sweete myrrour. Hys handes are lyke the fingers haupnge encloied the pzyous stones of Charlis. His bodye is as the pure myrrour, sette ouer with Sapphires: His leg- ges are as the pylers of Darbel, sette vpon bases of golde. Hys face is as Libanus, whiche is the bewyche of the Cedre trees.

The wordes of his mouth are swete: pee, he is as the lily, such a one is my lone. O ye daughters of Ierusalem, such a one is my lone.

The. vi. Chapter.

Whither is thy lone gone then (O thou fayrest amonge women) whither is thy lone departed: We wyll like hym whiche. O ye lone is gone downe into þys garden, vnto the swete smelling beddes þ he maye refrethe hym selfe in þ garden, & gather roses. My lone is myne and I am his, which sedeth amonge the roses.

Thou art bewyppfull, o my lone, as is the place of Chirza, thou arte fayre as Ierusalem fearfull as an armye of men, wpth they banners. Turne away thine eyes fro me, for they haue set me on fyre. * Thy heary lockes are lyke a flocke of goates shorne vpon þ mount of Silead. Thy teeth are lyke a flocke of shorne shepe, whiche go out of the walpyng place: where euery one beareth twyns, & not one vnfrutefull amonge them. Thy chekes are lyke a peece of a pomgranate. Within thy volupers. There are xlv. Quenes. lxxx. wy- ues, and damelles without nombze. One is my doue, one is my derlyng. She is the onely beloued of her mother, & dere vnto her that bare her.

When the daughters sawe her, they sayd she was blessed. Pea: the Quenes and wyues praysed her. What is she this þ loketh forth as the moynge: fayre as the moone, cleare as the sonne, and fearfull as an army of men with they banners. I went downe into the nut garden to se what gre w by the brookes, & to loke if the vyneyard flourished, or if þ pom granates were shot forth. I knewe not that my soule had made me the chariot of þ people that be vnder tribute. Turne agayne turne agayne. O thou perfect one turne agayne, turne agayne, & we wyll loke vpon the. What wyll ye le in þ Salampre: She is lyke menof warre spynge in a company.

The. viii. Chapter.

Howe pleasaunt are thy treadin- ges with the shoes, thou Dynces daughter: Thy thynges are lyke a fayre irwel, whiche is wrought by a connyng wojske maker.

Thy nauell is lyke a rounde goblet, whiche is neuer without drinke. Thy wombe is like a hepe of wheat þ is set about with roses.

* Thy two brestes are lyke two twyns of ponge roes. Thy necke is as it were a tower of puerpe: thynne eyes also are lyke the water poles þ are in Helebon, belyde þ porte of Ba- thrabbim: thy nose is lyke the towre of Liba- nus, which loketh towarde Damascus.

That head þ standeth vpon þ is lyke Car- mel: & the heare of thy heade is lyke purple, & lyke a kynge going forth w his garde about hym. O howe fayre and louely art þ my der- lyng in pleasures. Thy stature is lyke a Dalme tree, & thy brestes lyke the grapes. I sayde I wyll clyme vp into the Dalme tree, & take holde of þys hye bzaunches.

Thy brestes also shalbe as the wyne cisterns the smell of thy nostrilles like as the smell of apples.

The Ballet.

B apples, and thy lawes lyke the best wyne.

Whiche goth strayte vnto my beloued, and brasteth forth by the lippes of fannycient elders. There wyll I turne me vnto my loue, & he shal turne him vnto me. O come on my loue, we wyll go forth into the felde, and take our lodgyng in the vylages. In the mornynge wyll we go le the vynesparde: we wyll se yf the vyne be spronge forth, yf f grapes be growne, & if the pomgranates be shot out. There wyll I geue the my brestes: the Wandragozas geue their swete smel: and be syde oure dozes are all maner of pleasaunte frutes, both newe & olde: which I haue kepte for the, o my beloued.

The viii. Chapter.

I That I myght fynd the without, and kysse the, whom I loue as my brother whiche sucke my mothers brestes: and that thou shalt not be despysed, I wyll leade & bringe the into my mothers house: that thou myghtest teache me, and that I myght geue the dryncke of spiced wyne, and of the swete lappe of my pomgranates. His left hande shal be vnder my heade, and his ryght hande shall embrace me.

o Cant. ii. 1.

I charge you, O ye daughters of Ierusalem that ye wake not vp my loue, nor touche her, tyll she be content her selfe. What is the this, that cometh vp from the wyldernesse, & leaeneth vpon her loue? I waked f vp among the apple trees, where thy mother conceaued the, where thy mother (I saye) brought f into the worlde.

O let me as a scale vpon thine hert, & as a scale vpon thine arme: for loue is myghty as the death, and gelously as the hell. Her cooles are of fyre, and a very flame of the Lord: so f many waters are not able to quench loue, ne ther maye the strenges drowne it.

Yee, yf a man wolde geue all the good of his house for loue, he shulde count it nothing. Our syster is but ponge, and hath no brestes: what shal we do for our syster, when she shal be spoken for? Yf she be a wal, we shal buyd a syluer bulwarke there vpon: yf she be an open doze, we shal fasten her wyth boches of Cedre tree. I am a wall, and my brestes lyke towres, then was I as one that hath founde fauoure in his syght. Salomon hath a vynesparde at Baal Hamon, and this vynesparde belpyered he vnto the keepers: f every one for the frute ther of shulde geue hym a thousand peces of syluer.

My vynesparde is in my syght: thou O Salomon must haue a thousande, and f keepers two hundred wyth the frute. Thou that dwellest in the gardens, O let me haue the hopee, that my companions maye seeke in the same. O get the awaye, my loue, and be as a Roo: as a ponge bert vpon the smellynge mountaynes.

The booke of the prophete Esay.

The fyrst Chapter.

Esay propheseth that the anger of God shal come upon Jerusa lem, because of thys synnes.

The vision of Esay the sonne of Amos, whiche he sawe upon Juda & Jerusalem: in the dayes of Azia, & Joathan, Ahaz & Iehoziah kynges of Juda. heare: O heauen, & hearken o earth. For the Lord hath spoken. I haue noyshed & broughte up childen, but they haue done wickedly against me. The ore hath knowne his owner, & the shep his masters cryb: but Israel hath receaved no knowledge, my people hath no understanding. Alas for this synful nacyon, a people of great iniquite: a fro ward generation, unmercifull children. They haue forsaken the Lawe, they haue prouoked the holy one of Israel vnto anger, & are gone bakward. Wherfore shuld ye be plagued any more? For ye are continually awake. The whole head is synke and the herte is heavy. From the sole of the fote vnto the head, ther is no whole part in all your body, but all are wounded, botches, sores, & frowes which can netther be helped, bound vp, nor ealed with any ioyntment.

For land & lenth wast, your cities are bzene by your enemyes deuoure your land, and ye will be sayne to stande, & loke vpon it: and it is desolate, as it were with enemyes in a battayle. Whereouer, the daughter of Sion is left alone like a cotage in a vineyard, lyke a lodg in a garden of cucumbers, lyke a beleaged cytie. And except the Lord of hostes had leftte a fewe aloue: we shulde haue bene as Sodom, and lyke vnto Gomorra.

Heare the worde of the Lord: ye Lordes of Sodom: and hearken vnto the lawe of our God, thou people of Gomorra. Why offer ye many sacrifices vnto me? I am full of the burnt offrynges of wethers, and of the fatted beastes. I haue no pleasure in the blood of bullockes, lambes, & goates. When ye appeare before me, who requyrezth you to stande within my porches? Offer me no more oblations, for it is but lost labour. Incense is an abhominable thyng vnto me. I make me awaye with your newe Moones, your feastes, and solempne dayes. Your sacrifices are also in wayne. I hate your newe moones, and fastynges, euen from my very herte. They make me wery, I can not abyde them. When you hold out your handes, I wyl close myne eyes fro you. And though ye make many praylers, yet wyl I heare nothing at all, seying your handes are full of bloude.

Wathe you, make you cleane, put awaye your euell thoughtes out of my syght, cease from doyng of euell. Learne to do ryght, applye your selues to equite, deliuer the oppressed, helpe the fatherlesse to his ryghte, let the widowes complaynt come before you. Now go to (sayth the Lord) let vs talke together. Though your synnes be as red as scarlette, they shalbe as whyte as snowe. And though they were lyke purple, they shalbe as whyte as woll. If ye be louyng & obedyent ye shal enioye the best thyng that groweth in the lande. But if ye be obstynate & rebellious, ye shal be denouced wth the sword: for thus the Lord hath promysed with his owne mouth.

Howe happeneth it then that the ryghteous Cytie (whiche was full of equyte) is become vnfaithfull as an whoze? Ryghteousnesse dwelt in it, but now murderers. The siluer is turned to dross, and the wyne myxted with water. The prynces are wycked and companions of theues. They loue gyftes altogether, and gape for rewardes. As for the fatherles, they helpe hym not to his ryghte, netther wyl they let the widowes causes come before them. Therefore sayth the Lord God of hostes, the myghtye one of Israel: Ah, I muste ease me of myne enemyes, and auenge me of myne aduersaries. I shal lape my hand vpon the, and burne out the dross from the synest and purest, and put out all thy tyme, & set thy iudges agayne as they were somtyme and the Senatours as they were from the begynnyng. Then shalt thou be called the ryghteous cytie, & saythfull cytie. Sion shal be redeemed with equyte, and they shal turne agayne vnto her in ryghteousnes. For the transgressours and vngodly, and such as are become vnfaithfull vnto the Lord must altogether be utterly destroyed.

And except ye be ashamed of the oke trees wherein ye haue so delited, and of the gardens that ye haue chose: ye shalbe as an oke whose leaues are fallen awaye: & as a garden that hath no moystnes. And as for the glorie of these thynges it shalbe turned to drie strawe and he shal make them to a spark. And they shal both burne together, so that no man shalbe able to quench them.

The seconde Chapter.

Of the commynge and death of Chyde, and of the callinge of the heathen.

This is the worde that was opened vnto Esay the sonne of Amos upon Juda and Jerusalem. It wyl be also in the laste daye, that the byll where the house of the Lord is buil ded, shalbe the chiefe amonge hylls, and exalted aboue all lytle hylls. And all nacyns shal pzeace vnto hym, and the multitude of people.

The Prophecy.

Mich. iiii. a.

of people shal go, speaking thus one to another: Up, let vs go to the hil of the Lord and to the house of God of Jacob: that he maye shewe vs his waye, and that we may walke in his pathes. For the lawe shall come out of Sion, and the worde of the Lord from Ierusalem, and shall geue sentence amonge the heathen, and shall resourne the multytude of people: they shall breake theyr swordes also into mattocks, & theyr speares to make fythes. And one people shal not lyft vp a weapon agaynst another, neither shal they learne to fyght from thensforth.

B Come ye (O house of Jacob) let vs walke in the lpyght of the Lord. But thou hast forsaken thy people the house of Jacob, because they go farre beyonde theyr fathers in Sodomites (whome they haue as the Whyllyspnes had) & in straunge chyldren they thinke them selues to haue ynough. Theyr lande is ful of syluer and golde, neither is there any ende of theyr treasure: Theyr lande is also ful of houses, and no ende is there of theyr chareys. Theyr lande also is full of vayne gods, and befoze the worke of theyr owne handes haue they bowed them selues, yea euen befoze the chynge that theyr owne fyngers haue made: There knyleth the man, there falleth the man downe befoze them, so that he canst not byng hym a waye from thence.

C And therfoze get the into some rocke, and hyde the in the grounde for feare of the Lord, and for the gloze of his maiestye: Whiche casteth downe the hygh lokes of presumptuous personnes, and byngeth lowe the pryde of man, and the Lord onely shall be exalted in that daye. For the daye of the Lord of hostes shall go ouer all pryde and presumption vpon all them that exalte them selues, and shall byngne them all downe: vpon all hygge and stoute Cedre trees of Libanus, and vpon all the oaks of Basan, vpon all high hylls, and vpon all stoute Mountaynes, vpon all coltype towres, and vpon all stronge walles, vpon all hyppes of the see, and vpon euery chynge that is gloupyous & pleasaunte to loke vpon.

D And it shall byngne downe the pryde of man, and lape mans presumptuousnesse full lowe, and the Lord shall onely haue the victory in that daye. But the Idols shall vterly be rote out. Wen shal crepe into holes of stone, and into caues of the earth, for feare of the Lord, and for the gloze of his maiesty: What tyme as he shall make hym vp to condempne the earth. Then shall man cast a waye his goddesses of siluer, and his goddesses of golde (whiche he neuerthelesse had made to honoure them) vnto holes and Backes. And they shall crepe into fycaues and rockes, and into the clyftes of harde stones, for feare of God, and for the gloze of his maiesty, when he ryseth to condempne the earth. Feare not ye then any man, whose byeth is in vayne streis. For what is he of reputacyon?

The. iiii. Chapter.

Of the prophecies that at the coming of Christ an strength & power shalbe put forth at Ieruz.

R O Lord, the Lord God of hostes doeth take away from Ierusalem and Iuda all possession and power, all meate and drynke, the captayne and the souldyar, the iudge and the Prophete, the wyse and the aged man, the Prynce of Ispytter olde, and the honozable: the Sennators and men of vnderstandynge: the mapster of craftes and ozatours. And I shal geue them chyldren to be theyr prynces, and babes shal haue the rule of you. The people also shalbe pylled and polled, and one shal euer be doing violence and wryonge to another. The hope shall presume agaynst the elder, and the vyle persone agaynst the honozable. Yee, one shal take a frende of his owne kynred by the bosome, & saye: thou hast clothynge, thou shalte be our heade, for I mayst kepe vs from theyr fall and perell.

Then shall he swaie and saye: I cannot helpe you. Moreover, there is neither meate nor clothynge in my house, make me no rule of the people. For Ierusalem and Iuda must decaye, because that both theyr wordes and counsels are agaynst the Lord, to pynche the presence of his maiesty vnto anger. The chaungynge of theyr countenance bewrayeth them, yee they declare theyr owne synnes them selues, as the Sodomites, and hyde they not. Alas be vnto theyr soules, for they haue rewarded euell vnto them selues. Byd the ryghteous do well, for they shall enioye the frutes of theyr iudges. But woe be to the vngodly and vnyghteous, for they shall be rewarded after theyr workes. Chyldren are extorcyoners of my people, and women haue rule of them.

O my people, the leaders decaunt the, & beprau the waye of thy fote stepes. The Lord is here to commen of the matter, and standeth to geue iudgment of the people: The Lord shal come forth to reason w the Sennators & Prynces of his people. It is ye I haue burnt vp my vineyarde, the poore is in yone houses. Wherefoze do ye oppresse my people, and marre the faces of the poore, sayth the Lord God of hostes.

Moreover, thus sayth the Lord: Behold the daughters of Sion are become so proud, and come in with stretched out neckes, and vayne wanton eyes: sayng they come in trippynge so nycey with theyr fete: Therefore shall the Lord haue the heades of the daughters of Sion, and shal discover theyr warre. In that

In that daye ſhall the Lorde take awaye the gawgonneſſe of theyr apparel, and ſpanges of ſilke, and ſcarles, and colars, bzaceletes, & ſpurs, the goodly ſhoulders, wyde and bzoyered rayment, bzooches, and headebandes, ringes and garlandes, holy daye clothes and bzoyles, hercheſes and pynges, glaſſes and cyphers, bonets, and taches.

And in ſteade of good ſuell, there ſhalbe ſpunge amonge them. And for theyr gzybles there ſhalbe looſe bandes. And for well ſet ſhoes there ſhalbe baldnes. In ſteade of a ſtocke, a ſacke clothe, and for theyr betwyte wyrdnes, and ſunne burnynge. Your bzuyles and myghtye men ſhal perſyſh with ſpunge in a tye.

At that time ſhal theyr gates mourne and complayne, & they ſhall ſpeake as deſolate folke vpon the earth.

C The. iiii. Chapter.

For want of men, ſeuē women deſyre to haue one man.

In that daye ſhall ſeuē wyues take holde of one man: and ſaye, we wyll laie all our bzoyles and clothynge together in common: ſo that we maye be called thy wyues: ſo that thy ſhamefull reſpoſe maye be taken from vs.

After that tyme ſhall the Lorde be betwixt them and myghtye, and the ſtrete of the earth ſhall be ſayde as a ſtrete for thoſe Iſraelytes that ſhall bzoyne therof. Then ſhall the remnant be in Iſrael, and the remnant at Jeruſalem be in Iſrael. Namely all ſuche as are wyte amonge the livinge at Jeruſalem: what ſhall the Lorde ſhal waite awaye the ſylphure of the daughters of Zion, & poure out from Jeruſalem with ſpunge and judgement, and with ſpunge. And ſpunge, vpon all the bzoyles of the bzoyles of Iſrael vpon theyr whole congregacion, ſhal the Lorde poure a cloude & ſmoke by daye, and the ſpunge of a ſmoking ſpunge by night: ſo that theyr glorie ſhal be preſerued. And Jeruſalem ſhal be a tabernacle for a ſhadow, be ſide of ſhadowe in ſpunge tyme: a place and ceyle where a man maye kepe hym from wynde and rayne.

C The. v. Chapter.

For the ſake of his bzoyne, with an eſpectacion of judgement and bzoyne.

On wyll I ſpunge my beloued frend a ſong of my frend, becauſe of his bzoyne. My beloued frende ſhal be a vineyard in a very ſenteſull place.

He was hedged, & he was walled rounde about, and planted it with goodly grapes.

And he was hedged it with bzoyles, and he was hedged it with bzoyles: And afterwarde he was hedged that it ſhoulde bzoyne hym grapes: it bzoyne forth thornes. Now therfore ſaye I ſayle of Jeruſalem and whole Iuda: Judge I praye you betwixt me, and my vineyard. What moze coulde haue bene done for it that I haue not done? Wherefore then hath it geuen thornes: where I looked to haue had grapes of it?

Well, now I ſhall tell you howe I wyll do with my vineyard. I wyll take the bzoyne from it, that it maye perſyſh, & breake downe the wall, that it maye be troden vnder ſote. I wyll laie it waſte, that it ſhall neyther be bzoyged nor cut, but beare thornes and bzoyres. I wyll alſo for bzoyde the cloude that they ſhall not rayne vpon it. As for the bzoyne of the Lorde of hoſtes: it is the bzoyne of Iſrael, and whole Iuda bzoyne plantynge. Of theſe be looked for equitie, but le there is bzoyne: for rightcouſnes, lo: It is but miſery.

Unto them that ioyne one houſe to another, and bzoyne one lande to nygh vnto another, that the poore can get no moze ground and ſhe maye dwell vpon the earth alone.

Theſe bzoynges are in the eares of the Lorde of hoſtes: ſhal not many greater & moze bzoyngs houſes be ſo waſte, that no man ſhall dwell in them? And ten akers of bzoyne ſhall geue but a quarte, and theyr bzoyles of ſede ſhall geue but an Epha.

Unto them, that ſpeake by early to folowe bzoyne, and to them that contemne ſo vntill nyght, and tyll they be ſette on ſpunge with wyne. In thoſe companies are bzoyres and lutes, tabzets and pypes, and bzoyne. But they regarde not the woꝝke of the Lorde and conſyde not the operacion of his handes: Therfore cometh my folke alſo into captiuitie, becauſe they haue no vnderſtandynge.

Theyr glorie is ſampted with hunger, and theyr pynde is marred for bzoyne. Therfore gapeth hell, and openeth her mouth marvellous wyde: that theyr pynde, bzoyne and weith with ſuch as reioyce therein, maye deſcende into it.

Thus hath man a ſal, & is bzoyne lowe and the bzoyne of the proude ſhal be layde downe. But the Lorde of hoſtes ſhal be exalted in judgement, and God that is bzoyne, is bzoyne in bzoyne: Then ſhall the bzoyne eate in order, and the bzoyne mens landes that were layde waſte, ſhall ſtraungers denoue. Unto them, that bzoyne wickednes vnto them & cordes of vanitie & ſyn, as it were with a carte rope.

Whiche vſe to ſpeake on this maner: let hym make haſte now, and go forth with his woꝝke, that we maye ſe it. Let the counsell of the bzoyne of Iſrael come, & bzoyne nre, that we maye knowe it.

Unto them & call euell good, & good euell, whiche made darcheneſſe bzoyne, and lyght darcheneste, that make sowre swete, & swete sowre. Who be vnto them that ar wyse in theyr owne lyght, and thynke them selues to haue vnderstandynge. Who be vnto them that are stronge to suppe out wyne, & expect men to let vp dronkenness.

These geue sentence with the vngodlye for rewards, but condemne the iust cause of the ryghteous.

Therefore lyke as fyre lyketh vp & straw and as the flame consumeth the stubble: Eue so theyr rooe shalbe as corrupcion: and theyr blossom shal vanyshe a waye lyke dust: for they haue caste awaye the lawe of the Lorde of hostes, & blasphemed the woorde of the holy maker of Israel.

Therefore is the wrath of the Lorde kindled also agaynst his people, & he waketh his hande at them: yee, he hath smytten, so that theyr pylles byd tremble. And theyr carcasses byd lye in the open stretes, lyke mycre. And in all thys, the wrath of God hath not ceased, but his hande is stretched out still. And he shall geue a token vnto a straunge people: and call vnto them in a farre countre: & beholde, they shall come hastily with speede. There shall not be one faynte nor feble amonge them, no not a sluggyshe nor slepery personne. There shall not one of them put of the gyrdle frome his loynes, nor loose the latched of his shoo. His arrowes are sharpe, & all his bowes bent. His horse hooves are lyke aspynt, and his carte wheles lyke a storme wynde. His crye is as it were of a Lyon, and he roareth lyke a Lyons whelpes. They shall roare, and hantche vp the praye, and no man shall recouer it, or gette it from them. In that daye they shall be so feare vpon them, as the see. And yf we loke vnto & lande, behold: it shalbe all darcheneste & sorowe. Yf we loke towarde heauen behold, it shalbe darcke.

The vi. Chapter.

¶ Eloy sawe the glory of the Lorde/ and was sent to prophesie the desolacion of Ierusalem.

In the same yere that kyng Oziah dyed, I sawe the Lorde sittyng vpon an hygh and gloruous seat, and his trayne fylled the temple. And aboute hym stode Seraphyns, wherof euery one had syxe wynges. With twayne eache covered his face, with twaine his fete, and with twayne byd he flye. They cryed also ech one to another on this maner: holy, holy, holy is the Lorde of hostes. The whole woerde is full of his glory. Yee, the greatest and dozecheues moued at his cryng, and the house was full of smoke. Then I sayde, O wo is me: for I am loste in a smache as I am a man of vncleane lypes, & dwell amonge people & hath vncleane lippes also: for mine eyes haue sene the kyng and Lorde of hostes.

Then flew one of the Seraphyns vnto me hauynge a hote cole in his hande, whiche he had taken from the altare with the tonges and touched my mouth: and said, lo: this hath touched thy lippes, and thy syne vncleane is taken awaye, and thy synne forgiven. Also, I heard the voyce of the Lorde sayng on this maner: Whome shall I sende, & who wyll be our messanger? Then I sayde here am I: sende me. And he sayde, go, and tell this people: * ye shall heare in dede, but ye shall not vnderstande: ye shall playnly see and not perceaue.

Harden the heart of this people, stoppe their eares, and shut their eyes that they se not wyth theyr eyes, heare not wyth theyr eares, and vnderstande not wyth theyr hertes, and conuerter: and be healed.

Then spake I: Lorde, howe longe? he answered: vntill the Cyties be utterly wasted without inhabytours, and the houses without men, tyll & lande be also desolate, and be vnbuylded. For the Lorde shal take the men farre awaye, so that the lande shal lye waste a longe season, yet in it shall succede ten kynges, and the lande shal retorne and be layde waste. And as the Terebint tree and oke in wynter cast theyr leaues, & yet haue theyr sappe in them: so shal & holy sebe contynue in theyr substance.

The vii. Chapter.

¶ The Syrians moue betwixt agaynst Ierusalem/ & vngodlye shall beate a chyche.

It happened in the tyme of Ahaz: the sonne of Iotham, which was & sonne of Oziah kyng of Iuda: that Razin the kyng of Syria, and Berchah & sonne of Romelpah, kyng of Israel, went toward Jerusalem to besiege it, but Razin was not able to wyne it. Howe when & house of Dauid (that is Ahaz) heard of this, Syria & Ephraim were confederate together: his herte quaked (yee & the hertes also of his people) lyke as when a tree in & felde is moued with the wynde.

Then sayde God vnto Eloy: gomete Ahaz (thou and thy sonne Heur Jashub) at the brade of the ouer pole, in the forepath by the fullers grounde, & saye vnto hym, take heed to thy selfe: and be still, but feare not, neither be faynte derted, for these two captes: that is for these two smokynges sycheuans the wrath and furyousnes of Razin the Syrian, and Romelpey sonne: because that the kyng of Syria Ephraim, & Romelpey haue wickedly compyred agaynst the saynt. Alle wyll go vp agaynst Iuda, bere them, & bynne them vnder vs, and set a kyng: then turne the sonne of Tabell.

For the

For thus ſayeth the Lord God therto: It ſhal not ſo go forth: neyther ſo come to paſſe, for the heade of the Siryans is Damal-cus, but the heade of Damalcus is Raſlyn.
And after ſyue & thye ſcore yere, ſhall Ephyra be no more a people. And the Cytie of Ephraim is Samaria, but the heade of Samaria is Romelies ſonne. If ye beleue not, it ſhall be ſhewed vnto you: that ye are vnfaithful to god therefore, God ſpake once agayne vnto Ahaſyphinge, requyre a token of the Lord thy god, whether it be toward the depth beneath or toward the depth aboue. Then ſayde I: I will requyre none: neyther will I trouer the Lord.

The Lord answered: Then here to, ye of the houſe of Dauid: is it not enough for you ye be greuous vnto men, but ye muſt greue my God alſo? And therefore the Lord ſhall geue you a token: Beholde a virgin ſhal con-ceiue and beare a ſonne, and (thou hyſ mother ſhalt call his name Emanucl. Butter and honey ſhal he eate, that he maye knowe to reſiſt the euell, and choſe the good. For oz e-uer the chyldre come to knowledge: to eſchue the euell, and choſe the good, the lande (that was ſo abhorred) ſhal be deſolate of both her kyngeſ. The Lord alſo ſhall ſende a tyme when I, vpon thy people, & vpon thy fathers houſe (ſuch as neuer came ſence the tyme I ſpake departed frome Iuda) thoroowe the kinge of the Aſſyrians. For at the ſame tyme ſhall the Lord whyſtle for I ſpyes that are aboute the water of Egypte, and for the kynge in the Aſſyrians land. Theſe ſhal come and ſhall lyght all in the deſolate valeyes, in the holes of ſtones: vpon all thorny and buſhy places.

At the ſame tyme: ſhall the Lord haue the fear of the head and the ſete and I beard come of, with the caſure that he ſhal hyer be poude the water: namely, with the kynge of the Aſſyrians. At the ſame tyme ſhall a man ſpye with a cowe, and two ſhepe. Then becauſe of the aboundance of mycke, he ſhall make butter and eate it. So that euery one that remaineth in the lande, ſhall eat butter & honey. At the ſame tyme all vnyardes (though there be a thouſande vynes in one and more ſolde for a thouſande ſyluerlinges, ſhall be turned to bzeares and thornes. Lyke wiſe ſhal come into I lande with arrowes and bowes, ſo ſhal all the lande become bzeares and thornes. And as for all bylles that men doe ſowe, there ſhall not come vpon them any ſeare of bzeares and thornes. But I will ſhall be dyuent thither, and the ſhepe ſhall fede there.

The viii. Chapter.

The ſeruaunce of the lande by Emanucl. The ſonne of peace, of which many ſhall ſumme.

Oreouer, I Lord ſayde vnto me Take the a great leafe, & wypte in it, as men do w a penne, make haſtye ſpede to robbe, & haſte to the ſpoile. And I called vnto me faithful witnelles to recorde. Aziah I preſt, & zachariah I ſonne of Zachariah. After that went I vnto the prophetiſſe, I had conceiued and bore a ſonne. Then ſayde I Lord to me geue him this name: a ſpedie robber: an haſty ſpyer. For why, oz euer I chyldre ſhall haue knowledge to crye father, and mother: ſhal I crye of Damalcus & the ſubſtaunce of Samaria be taken awaye by the ſpyer, before the kynge of the Aſſyrians.

The Lord ſpake alſo vnto me, ſayinge: for ſo muche as thys people reſuſeth the ſpyll rennyng water of Silo, and put they deſpyte in Razin and Romelies ſonne: Beholde, the Lord ſhall bynge myghty and great floudes of water vpon them: namely, the king of the Aſſyrians with all hyſ power: Whiche ſhal clyme vp vpon al his floudes, and renne ouer all they banckes. And ſhal bzeake in vpon Iuda, flowynge and encreaſynge in power, tyll he gette hym by the necke. He ſhall ſpyl alſo the wydenes of thy land w his bzode wynges, O Emanucl. Bzeake downe (o ye people of Aſſur) and ye ſhal be bzoken downe herken to all ye of farre countrees.
Huſte you, and you ſhal be broken downe, prepare you to batell and you ſhal be tozne in peeces: take your counsell together, yet muſt your counsell come to noughte, go in hande withall, yet ſhall it not proſpere: for God is with vs. For the Lord ſpake thus to me in I powre of his hande, & warned me, ſaying vnto me: that I ſhoulde not walke in the waye of this people.

He ſayde moreouer: rounde w none of the who ſoeuer ſaye, ponder people are bounde together: feare them not, neyther be aſrayde of them, but ſanctifye the Lord of Hoſtes, lette hym be your feare and bzeade. For he ſhal be the holy place to ſtepe to, & ſtone to ſto-ble at: the rocke to fall vpon, a ſnare and net to both the houſes of Iſraell, and the inhaby-tonges of Ieruſalem. And many ſhal ſtomble fall, and be bzoken vpon hym: yee, they ſhal be ſnared and taken.

Some laye the wytnelles together & ſcale the lawe with my diſcyples. Thus will I wayte vpon the Lord that hath turned hyſ face from the houſe of Iacob, and I will loke for hym. But lo, as for me: and the chyldren whiche the Lord hath geuen me: we are a token and a wonder in Iſraell, for the Lord of Hoſtes ſake, which dwelleth vpon the hyll of Syon.

And yf they ſaye vnto you: alke counsell at the doothayres, ſpyers, charmers, and coniuers, then make them this anſwere.

The Prophecy.

Luke. xxi. 20.

Is there a people any where, that asketh not counsell at his God? Should men runne vnto the deed for the lving? If any man want lvyght, let hym loke vpon the lawe, and f testimonie, whether they speake not after this meanynge. If he do not this, he stumblith and suffereth hunger. And if he suffer hunger he is out of patience, & blasphemeth his king and his God. Then loketh he vpwarde, and downe warde to the earth, & beholde: there is trouble and darchnes, veracion is rounde aboute hym, and the cloude of error. And out of suche aduersitye shall he not escape. Euen tyme as in tyme past: it hath bene well sene, that the lande of zabalou & the land of Nephtaly (where thowowe the see waie goeth ouer Iordane into the land of Galilee) was at the fyrste in lytle trouble: but afterwarde soze dyed.

The .ix. Chapter.

The prophecies of Chythes natyng & dominyon.

The people that walke in darchnes haue sene a great lvyght. As for them that dwel in the lande of the shadow of dea th, vpon them hath the lvyght shyned. Thou hast multiplied the people, & not increased theyr ioye.

Mich. vi. 1.

* They reioyce before the, euen as men make mery in haruest, and as men that haue gotten the victoie, when they deale the spoyle.

For thou hast broken the pole of the peoples burthen: the staffe of hys shoulder, and the rodde of hys oppressoure, as in the dayes of Sadian.

And truly every battayl that the warry our accmplisheth, is done w consuled nolye and despyng theyr garmentes w blond. But this batayl shalbe w burnyng & consuming of fyre. For vnto vs a chyld is borne, & vnto vs a sonne is geuen. Vpon his shoulder doth f hyngdome lye, & he is called with hys owne name wonderful. The gener of counsell, the myghtie God, f euellasyng father, f pryncer of peace, he shal make no ende to encrease the kyngdome and peace, and shal lye vpon the seate of Dauid and in his kyngdome, to set vp the same, and to stablyshe it with equitye and ryghteousnes, from henceforth for euermore. This shal the gelousy of the Loyde of hostes byng to passe.

The Loyde sent a woide into Jacob, the same is come into Israell. And all the people of Ephraim shal knowe, and they that dwel in Samarya, that sape with pyre and hys stomaches, on this maner. The tyle woide is fallen downe, but we wyll buylde it with squared stones. The Solbery tymbre is hys den, but he shal let it vp agayne with Cedre. Nevertheless, the Loyd shal prepare Ra- in the tempe agaynst them, and so othe theyr aduersaries, that f Solbery shal lye holde vpon them before, and the Solbery behynde, and so deuoure Israell with open mouth.

After all this is not the wraoth of f Loyde ceased, but yet his hande stretched out still. For f people turneth not vnto hym that chastyseth them, nether do they seke the Loyde of hostes. Therefore hath the Loyde rote out of Israell both head and tayle, by nyght and twygge in one daye.

By the head is vnderstande the sennoure and honourable man, and by the tayle the prophet that preached lyes: For all they which enfourme the people: that they be in ryght case, such be disceauers. Such as men thyncke also to be perfecte amonge the, are but castawayes.

Therefore shal the Loyde haue noplen- sure in theyr ponge men, nether fauour theyr fatherlesse and wydowes. For they are all together ypocrites and wyched, and all their mouthes spake foly. After all this, is not the Loydes wraoth ceased: but yet hys hande is stretched out still. For vngodlynes burneth, as a fyre in the bypers and thornes. And as it were out of a fyre in a woode: as a rede buishe, so ascendeth the smoke of theyr pyre.

For cause of the wraoth of the Loyde of hostes, is the lande full of darchnes, and the people be consumed, as it were with fyre no ma doth spare his brother, but he robbeth on the ryght hande: and doth fawne, he ro- teth on the left hande, and he shal not haue p- nough. Euerye man shal eate the flesh of his owne arme. Danasles shal eat Ephraim, and Ephraim, Danasles, and they both shal eate Iuda. After all this, is not the Loydes wraoth ceased, but yet his hande stretched out still.

The .x. Chapter.

The threyned the appoyntours of the poore, and the threyned agaynst Samaryth.

Woe vnto them that make vnyght- teous lawes, and deuyll thynge: which be to harde for to kepe: when thowowe the poore are oppressed on euerye syde, and the Innocentes of my people robbed of Judgement: that wydowes maye be theyr praye, and that they maye rob the fatherlesse. What wyll ye do in tyme of the vyltacyon, and when destruction shal come from farre? To whome wyll ye come for helpe / and to whome wyll ye geue poure honoure, that he maye hepe it / that I wythdraw my hande, ye come not amonge pysoners, as lye amonge the deade? After all this, is not the wraoth of the Loyde ceased, but yet his hande stretched out still.

Mo be alſo vnto Aſſur, which is a ſtaffe of my wrath, in whole hand is the rod of my punishment. I ſhall ſende hym amonge thoſe hypocriſyſe people, amonge the people that haue deſerued my diſſauour that I ſend him, that he maye betterly robbe them, ſpoyle the lande, and ſet them downe, lyke the myſe in the ſtrete. howbeit, his meaning is not ſo, nether ſpyneth his beert on this faſſion. But he ymagineth onely, how he maye roote out and deſtroye moche people, for he ſayeth: are not my princes al kynges? Is not Calno as cruel to wyne as Charchamis? Is it harder to conquere Hamath then Arphad? Or is it harder to overcome Damalcus, then Hamaria? As who ſaye: I were hable to wyne the kyngdome of the Idolatrers and theyr goddes: but not Jeruſalem, and Samaria. Shall I not to doo vnto Jeruſalem and theyr ymages, as I dyd vnto Samaria and theyr ydols?

Wherefore the Lorde ſayeth: A ſoone as I haue perſourmed my hole worke vpon the hyl of Syon and Jeruſalem, then wyl I lyfte the noble and ſtout beert of the kyng of Aſſyria with his proude lokes. For he ſtan-deth thus in his owne conceyte: This doo I by the power of myne owne hand, and I ſhall ſhowe my vyldeſſe: For I am wyſe: I haue remoũed the landes of the people, I haue theyr treaſures: and (lyke one of the wyſes) I bypne them from theyr hye ſea-son. My hande hath founde out the ſtrength of the people, as it were a neſt. And lyke as eggs that were layed here and there, are gathered together. So doo I gather all countries. And there is noman that darre be ſo bold, as to touche a ſerper, that darre open his mouth, as ones wyſper.

Shall the are boott it ſelfe agaynſt hym that beweth therewith? or doth the ſaw make any haggynge agaynſt hym that ruleth it?
That were euyl lyke, as if the rod dyd exalt it ſelfe agaynſt hym that beareth it: or as though the ſtaffe ſhulde magnifie it ſelfe, as who ſaye: it were no wood. Therefore ſhall the Lorde of hoostes ſende hym amonge his enemyes, leaneſſe: and burne vpon his gloiye, as it were with a fyre. But the lyght of Jeruſalem ſhal be that fyre, and his ſacrifary ſhal be that flame, and it ſhal kyndle and burne vpon his thornes and byerres in one daye: yea, all the praye of his wooddes and felde ſhal be burned with bodye and ſoule. And they ſhal be as an hoost of men, whoſe ſtanderde ſhal be ſpying. The trees alſo of the felde
ſhal be as an hoost of men, whoſe ſtanderde
ſhal be ſpying. The trees alſo of the felde
ſhal be as an hoost of men, whoſe ſtanderde
ſhal be ſpying. The trees alſo of the felde
ſhal be as an hoost of men, whoſe ſtanderde
ſhal be ſpying.

After that daye ſhall the remnant of Jeruſalem ſuch as are eſcaped out of the houſe of Jacob, ſeeke ſommoſe comfort at hym that haue them, but with ſaphefulneſſe ſtandeth

Shall they truſt vnto the Lorde, the holye one of Iſrael. The remnant, euen the poſteritie of Jacob ſhall conuert vnto God the myghtye one. For though thy people (O Iſrael) be as the ſande of the ſee, yet ſhal the remnant of them conuert in him. Perfect is the iudge-ment of him that ſtewardeth in ryghtcouſneſſe, and therefore the Lorde of hoostes ſhal perfectly fulfill the thyng that he hath determy-ned in the myddelt of the hole worlde. Therefore, thus ſayeth the Lorde God of hoostes: Thou my people, that dwelleſt in Syon, be not afrayed, for the kyng of the Aſſyrians: he ſhall ſmyte the with a rod, and ſhal wag his ſtaffe at the, as the Egyptians dyd ſome tyme: But ſooncafter ſhall my wrath and myne indignacion be fulfilled in the deſtruction of them.

Wherefore, the Lorde of hoostes ſhal prepare a ſcourge for him, lyke as was ſlaugh-ter of Madian vpon the rocke of Oreb. And he ſhall lyft vp his rod ouer the ſee, as he dyd ſometime ouer the Egyptians. Then ſhall his burthen be taken from thy ſhoulders, and his yoke from thy necke: yea, the ſame yoke ſhal be corrupt for very fatneſſe. he ſhal come to Aſiah, and go thowoe toward Hyggon: at Wichmas ſhal he lay vp his barnelle, and go ouer the foorde. Gibeon ſhal be theyr reſtyng place: Ramath ſhal be afrayed: Syben ſhaule ſhal ſpe awaye. The voyce of the noble of thy hoſtes (O daughter Gall) ſhal be heard vnto Lays and to Inatboth, which alſo ſhal be in trouble. Madmena ſhal treble for feare, but the citizins of Gabin are manly, yet ſhal he remayne at Aſob that daye. After that ſhal he lyft vp his hand agaynſt the mount of the daughter Syon, the hyl of Jeruſalem. But ſe, the Lorde God of hoostes ſhal take awaye the proude from thence with feare. he ſhall he we downe the proude, and fell the hye mynded. The buſhes alſo of the wood ſhal be roote out with yron, and Liba-nus ſhal haue a myghtye fall.

C The. xi. Chapter.

The propheſy of the natiuitie of Chriſt, and of his people: of the remnant of Iſrael, and of the ſaue of the Herethen or Gentiles.

And there ſhall come a rod ſouth of the kindred of Iaſai, and a bloſ-ſom ſhal ſpryng out of his roote.
The ſpyrit of the Lord ſhal lyght vpon him: the ſpyrite of wiſdom and vnderſtandynge, the ſpyrite of counſaile and ſtrength, the ſpyrite of knowledge, and of the feare of the Lorde: and ſhal make hym firm in the feare of God.

For he ſhall not gyne ſentence, after the change that ſhal be brought before his eyes, neither remove a matter at ſuch hearing: but wyl ryghtcouſneſſe ſhal he iudge the poore, and wyl

The Prophecye

and with his pynesse shall he reforme the simple of the worlde.

He shall smyte the worlde with the rodde of his mouth, and wth the breath of his mouth shall he slaye the vngodlye. Rychtousnesse shall be the gyde of his loynes: truthe and faythfulnesse, the gydyng v^o of his reynes.

¶ The wolfe shall dwell with the lambe: and Leoparde shall lye downe by the goot. Bul-locks, Lyons, and cattel shall kepe company together, so that a litle childe shall rule them.

The cowe and the beere shall fede together and they yonge ones shall lye together. The lyn shall eate strawe lyke the ore o^r p^r cowe.
The chyld whole be sucketh shall haue a de-syre to the serpentys nest, and w^hen he is weaned, he shall put his hande into the cockatryce berne. Woman shall do euyl vnto an other, no man shall destroye an other, in all the byll of my holynesse. For the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lorde, euen as the see flo-weth ouer with water.

And in that day shall the Gentyles enquire after the roote of Jesse whiche shall be set vp for a toke vnto the people, and his dwelling shall be glorious. At the same tyme shall the Lorde take in hande agayne, to conquere the remnant of his people (whiche shall be left a-lyue) from the Assyrians, Egyptians, Ara-bians, Chaldeans, Egyptians, Caldees, An-tiochians: and from the Ilandes of the see.

¶ And he shall set vp a token amonge the Gentyles, and gather together the disperced of Israel: yea, and the outcastes of Iuda from the four corners of the worlde. The hatred of Ephraim also and enemyes of Iuda shall be cleane rooted out. Ephraim shall beare none euyl will to Iuda, and Iuda shall not hate Ephraim: but they boeth together shall lye v^o the shouldeys of the Philistines toward the west, and spoyle them together & dwell toward the East. The Idumytes and the Moabites shall let their handes fall, and the Ammonytes shall be obediens vnto them.

¶ The Lorde also shall cleane the tonges of the Egyptians see, & with a myghty wynde shall he lyft vp his hand ouer Nilus, and shall smyte his seven streames, and make men go ouer drye shod. And thus shall there be a way for his people, that remauneth from the Assyrians, like as it happened to the Israelites what tyme they departed out of the lande of Egypt.

The .xii. Chapter.

The songe of the church for the obtayninge of the holye and ouercommynge of the worlde.

¶ So that then thou shalt saye: O Lord I will thanke the, for thou wast displeased at me: but refrayne thou fro thy wrath, and comforte me. Beholde, God is my saluacion in whom I wil trust, and not be afrayed. For the Lord God is my strength and my songe, he also is becom my saluacion.

Therefore with lope shall ye haue matter out of the welles of the Shauoure, and then shall ye saye: gyue thanks vnto the Lorde, call vpon his name, declare his countsaies amonge the people, kepe them in remembraunce for his name is excellent. O synge praises vnto the Lorde, for he hath done great thynges, as it is knowne in all the worlde. Crye out, and synge thou that dwellest in Syon: for great is the holy one of Israel in the middest of the see.

The .xiii. Chapter.

The propheth of the destruction of Babylon: the captiuitie and p^rcommynge agayne of the people.

his is the heuy burthen of Babylon, which saye the sonne of Amos byde. Lye v^o the baner vpon the hye hold, cal vnto the, holde v^o poure hande, that the princes maye go in at the doore. I haue sent for my deputies and my grauntes (sayth the Lorde) whiche shall execute wrath: I wyl call for suche as triumphe in my glorie.

There is a people of a multitude in smoltynes, lyke as of a great people, a rustynge as though the kyngdomes of the nacyons came together. (And the Lorde of hostes mustereth his army to battaile.) They com-out of a farre countrie, from the ende of heauen: Euen the Lorde him self with the mynsters of his wrath, to destroye the hole lande.
Journe ye, for the day of the Lord is at hand and shall come as a destroyer fro the almightie.
Therefore shall al handes be lette downe and al mens hartes shall melt away, they shall stand in feare, carefullnesse and sorowe shall come vpon them, and they shall haue payne, as a woman that travaileth with chyld.
One shall be abashed of an other, and they faces shall burne lyke the flame of fyre.

Beholde, the daye of the Lorde shall come terribly, and ful of indignacion, furor, and wrath to make the lande waste, and to roote out the synners therof. For the starres and planetes of heauen shall not gyue their light, the sunne shall be darkened in the eysynge, and the moone shall not shyne with his light.
And I wyl punyssh the wychednesse of the worlde, and the synnes of the vngodly, sayth the Lorde.

The hye stomokes of the proude wyl I take awaye, and wyl lye downe the boos-tyng of tyrantes. I wyl make a man dearer then syne golde, and a man to be more worth then a golden wedge of Ophir.

Therefore I wyl shake the heauen, and the earth shall remoue oute of her place: in the wrath of the Lord of hostes, and in the day of his fearful indignacion. And Babylon shall be as an hunted o^r chased doe, and as a shepe that noman taketh vp. Eueryma shal come to his owne people, & slye eche one into his owne lande. Whoso is found alone, shal be destroyed. And who so gather together shal be destroyed with the swerde.

Ther children shal be slayne before they knowe their houses spoiled, and they wyues before they knowe their houses spoiled. For lo, I shal bynge up the heathen agaynst them, whiche shal not regarde silver, nor be desirous of gold. With bowes shal they destroye the ponge chyldren, & haue supper upon women with chyldre, and their sires shal not spare the chyldren. And Babelon (that gloire of kyngdomes and beautye of the Caldees honour) shal be destroyed as God destroyed * Sodoma & Gomor.

It shal not endure for euer, neither shal there be any more dwelling there, from generacio to generacion.

The Arabians shal pytche no tentes there neither shal the Sheperdes make their followe there any more: but fearfull wyld beastes shal lye there, and the houses shal be full of great oules. Estriches shal dwel there, and owes shal haue there, wyld cattes shal crye in the palaces, and dragons shal be in pleasant houses. And as for Babilons tyme, it shal laste, & her dayes shal not be prolonged.

Chapter. xliii.

The returne of the people from captiuitie. The pros-peritie of the people of God, and affliction of theyr enemies. The pyre of Babilon.

But the Lorde wyll be merciful unto Jacob, and wyll yet chole Israel agayne, and let them in theyr owne lande. Strangers shal cleane vnto them, and get them to the house of Jacob.

The people shal take them and carpe them home to theyr owne lande. And make them to inherite the house of Israel in the land of p Land, that they may be seruantes & handemaydes of the Lorde. They shal take those prisoners whole captiues they had ben afore and make those that had oppressed the. When the Lorde now shal bring the to rest fro p trauail, feare, and harde bondage, that thou wilt laden withal: then shalte thou vse this sentence vnto the kynge of Babylon, & say:

How happeneth it that I oppressour leaue the? In the golden tyme come to an ende?

The Lorde hath broken the sceptre of the un-godly, and the rod of the lordly. Which whē it is broken, my people shal be free from the tyranny of the king, & shall be persecuted without compayson.

And therefore the hole world is now at rest, and my people: and men synge for ioye.

Come, then the Kynges & Cedres of Lyban, reioyse at thy fall, saying: Now that thou art layed downe, there com no mo vp to thee: nor shall any more be builded vnto thee.
Thou shalt be as the chymney, and for thy sake hath the Lord God, and all my people men & princes of the earth. All kynges of the erth stand vp from their seates, that they maye all an-swere, and speake vnto the. Art thou become weake also as we? art thou become lyke vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pryde is layed downe into the pyre, and so is the melody of thy instrumentes. Woymes be layed vnder the, and woymes be thy coueryng.

DHow art thou fallen from heauen (O Lucifer) thou sayest moynynge chylder: how hast thou gotten a fall euen to the ground, and art become weaker then the people? For thou saydest in thine herte: I wyll clyme vp vnto heauen, and exalte my throne aboue, besyde the starres of God, I wyll lye also vpon the holy mount toward the North, I wil clyme vp aboue the cloudes, and wyll be lyke the hyghest of all. Yet thou shalt be brought downe to the depe of hell. They that seeke the shall narrowly loke vnto the, & theynke in the selues, saying: Is this the man that brought all landes in feare, and made the kyngdomes afraide? Is this he that made the world in a maner waste, and layed the cities to the grounde, which let not his prisoners go out?

EThe kynges of the nations lye euerie one in his owne house with woith, and thou art cast out of the graue lyke a fylthy abhominable haunch: lyke as deed mens rap-ment that are shot thorow with the swerde and go downe to the stones of the deepe: as a deed cooyle that is troden vnder feet: and art not buried with them. Euen because that thou hast wasted thy land, and destroyed thy people. The generacion of the wycked shal be without honour for euer. Let there a way be sought to destroye theyr chyldren, that be in theyr fathers wyckednesse that they come not vp agayne to possesse the lande, and fyll the world full of enemies.

FI wyll stande up agaynst them (sayth the Lorde of hostes) and root out the name and remnant, sonne, & sonnes sonne of Babilon (sayth the Lorde) & wyll geue it to p Otters, and wyll make water puddles of it. And I wyll swepe them out with the besome of destruction, sayth the Lorde of hostes. The Lorde of hostes hath sworne an oth, saying It shal come to passe as I haue determyned, and shal be fulfilled as I haue deuyed. So p Assyria shal I destroy in my lade, and vnto my most praynes wyll I treade him vnder fote vnto the thowse his yoke shal come fro them and his burthen shal be taken from theyr shoulders. This denyle hath God taken thowse the hole world: and this is his hande stretched out ouer all people. For yf the Lorde of hostes determyne a thing: who is able to disannul it? And yf he stretcheth forth his hande, who maye holde it agayne?

The same yere that kynge Ihasyber, God threatened on this maner: Reioyse not (thou

The Prophecye

(thou whole Palestina) because the rod of him that beareth the is broken: for out of the serpenters rote there shall come an adder, and the frute shall be a fyre flyinge worme. But the fyrst borne of the poore shall be fed, and the symple shall dwell in safetie. Thy roote also wyl I destroye with hunte, and it shall slay thy remnant. Mourn thou poore, wepe thou cylie, for (O whole lande of Palestina) thou art laped waste, for there shall come from the north a smoke that not one alone may abyde in his place. Who shall then answer the messengers of the Gentyles? For the Lorde hath stablished upon, and the poore of his people that be therein, do put theyr trust in hym.

The. xv. Chapter.

Chap. xv. agaynst Moab.

In this is the heuy burthen vpon Moab. Ar of Moab was destroyed, and overthrowen in a nyght season: like also in Moab was destroyed, and perished in the nyght. They went vnto the ybols house euen to Dibon to the hye places to wepe for Rebo, & Moab dyd moune for Medba: All theyr bedes were balde, and all theyr berdes shanen. In theyr stretes as they grydded about with sackcloth. In all the toppes of theyr houses and stretes shall be nothing but mourning & weping. Helbon and Eleale shall cry, that their voyce shall be herd vnto Iabaz. The wozthyes also of Moab shall bleate out, and crye for very sorowe of theyr myndes: Who shall my heart be for Moabs sake. They shall flye vnto the crite of zoar whiche is lyke a fapze younge bullocke of thre yere olde, for they shall al go vnto Luthy weping. Euen so by the wape toward Horonaim they shall make lamentacio for theyr vter destruction. For the waters of Atrim shall be dyed vp, by reason wherof the grasse is withered, the herbes destroyed, & the grene thynges gone. For the resydue that he hath done, they are sorow. As for theyr substance, the enemies haue caried them to the brooke of the wyllowes. For a crye went ouer the hole lande of Moab: vnto Eglaim and vnto Ber Elin was there nothing but mourning, because the waters of Dunon were ful of bloude for the Lorde shall sende moze bloude vpon Dunon, and lyons vpon the remnant of the land, & on them that are escaped fro Moab.

The. xvi. Chapter.

The destruction of Moab.

In Ende the Lorde of the world a labe fro the rocke that lyeth towarde the desert, vnto the hyl of the daughter Spon. For as for the daughters of Moab, they shall be as a treblyng byde put oute of haruest, for they shall carie them vnto Arnon: gather your counsaile, com together in iudgement, couer vs w your shadow in the myddaye, as the nyght doth byde the chaced, and bewraye not them that are fled, let my persecuted people dwell amonge you. Moab, be thou theyr refuge agaynst the destroyer: for a aduersary is brought tonought the robber is vndone, the tyraunt is washed out of the lande. And in mercy shall the seats be prepared, and he shall sit vpon it in truth in the tabernacle of Dauid, iudgyng and lekyng iudgement, and makynge haste vnto ryghteousnesse. We haue herd of the pyde of Moab, he is very proude, presumptuous, arrogant and ful of indignacio and wayne are his lyes. Therefore shall Moab make lamentacion because of the Moabytes (that shall be slayne) yea, they shall wape all together. Because of the foundations of the cite that is made of hycke, shall ye complayne: euen ye lame people that are left onely behynde.

For the vynes of Helbon are cut downe: As for the vyne of Sybna, the lordes of the hepten haue broken downe her principall braches: they are com eue vnto Jazer, they went on wandryng vnto the wyldernesse. Her goodly braches were thyowen downe as they wente ouer the see. Therefore wyl I moune for Jazer, and for the vine of Sibna I wyl poure my teares vpon the. Helbon and Eleale, for the crye of thynne enemies is fall vpon thy sommer frutes, and vpon thy haruest. The mirth and chere is taken away out of the plentyful feilde, and in the byneardes, there shall be no sope nor gladnesse.

The treader shall treade out no wyne in the presses, the soge of theyr mery chere haue I layed downe. Wherefore, my bowels shall romble lyke an harpe for Moabs sake, and myne inward partes, for the ctyes sake that is made of hycke. And it shall come to passe, that when it is sene that Moab shall be made wery of his hyl chapels, he shall come to the temple to praye, but he shall not be habile.

So then, this is the saying that the Lorde hath spoken concernynge Moab, syns that tyme. But now the Lorde hath spoken, saying: In thre yeres, whiche shall be as the yeres of an byzed seruaunte, shall the gloire of Moab be turned into confusion, & howeout all his multitude, which is very great. And that whiche remaineth, shall be very small and feble.

The. xvii. Chapter.

The prophecye agaynst Damascus.

In this is the heuy burthen vpon Damascus: Behold, Damascus is taken awaye, to be nomore a cylie, but shall be an heape of broken stones. The waste ctyes of Aroer shall be foldes for cattell, whiche shall lye there, and there shall be none to fraye them awaye: Ephraim also shall nomore be stronge

Orange, and Damascus shall no longer be a strong hold, and the remnant of Syria shall be the glory of the childre of Israel, sayth the Lorde of hostes. And in that day it shall come to passe, that Jacob shall be made verpe nate, and the fatnesse of his flesh shall ware downe. And he shall be as one that gathereth up come in harvest, euē like him whose arme reapeth sheares of corne. He shall be also lyke him that gathereth eares of corne in the valley of Rephaim. Some gatherynge in dede shall there be left in it, euē as in the shakynge of an Olive tree, there remayne two or thre beryes in the top of the vppermost bough, and three or fyue in the bryde fruitful bryanches thereof: sayth the Lorde God of Israel.

Then shall man turne agayne to his mater, and his eyes shall haue respect to the holp me of Israel. As for the alters whiche are by some handeworke, he shall not regarde them, and the thinges that his fyngers haue made (as grones and pynges) those shall be reckoned by his eye vnto. In that daye shall their stronge cyties be as the forsaken shrubbes & bryanches, whiche they lefte, by cause of the drythen of Israel: and the lande shall be desolate. By cause thou hast forsoght God thy saluacion, and hast not ben mynde of thy stronge rock: therefore shalt thou set pleasant plantys, and shalt graffe the bryanche of an egre mannes vyne. In that daye shalt thou make thy plante to growe, and early in the morninge shalt thou make thy seed to flower. The harveste shall be gone in the daye of unexpectance, and there shall be sorrowe with the daye of comfote.

Thou shalt be to a multitude of moche people which shall make a sounde lyke the noyse of warre. And the violence of the nacion, whiche shall rage lyke the rushynge in of many waters: Such lyke many waters shall the people rage. God shall rebuke hym, and he shall be farr of. He shall be chased away lyke a sheewe vpon the mountaynes before the wynde, and lyke a thing that turneth before the wynde. At euē beholde, there is trouble: and as euē it be morninge: so he is gone.
This is the paynt of them that oppresse vs, and the lot of them that robbe vs.

The xliij. Chapter.

The prophete agaynst Egypt.

That lande that trusteth vnder the shadowe of wynges, that lande which is beyond the waters of Ethiopia: Sendyng messengers by the sea, in vessels of rebes ouer the water.
They haue hence (ye spedye messengers) to a nation that is scatred abrode, & robbed of that they had a fearful people from theyr begynninge hitherto: a nation troden downe by lytynges, whose lande the floudes haue spoyled. All the inhabitours of the worlde and in dwellers of the earth, loke vp when he setteth vp a token in the mountaynes, & bearken whē he bloweth with the trompe. For so the Lorde sayde vnto me: as for me, I wyll take my rest, and loke vpon the matter in my ha-bitacion, lyke a sayre heate after the rayne, and lyke a cloud of dew in the heate of harvest.

For afore the harvest when the bryanche is growen, there shall come ripe frute out of the floure: and he shall cut downe the increase with sythes, and the bryanches shall he take awaye with hookes: Thus shall they be left to gather vnto the foules of the mountaynes and to the bestes of the earth: for in somer the byrdes shall remayne vpon it, and euery beast of the lande shall be vpon it in the wynter.
In that tyme shall there a presente be brought vnto the Lorde of hostes: euē a people that is scatred abrode, and robbed of that they had, that same people which haue bene fearfull from theyr begynnyng hitherto, a nacyō troden downe by litle and lytle: whose lande the floudes haue spoyled: To the place of the name of the Lorde of hostes, euē to the mount Syon.

The xliij. Chapter.

The prophete agaynst Egypt.

He deuere burthen of Egypte: Beholde, the Lord rydeth vpon a swifte cloude, and shall come in to Egypte, and the ydols of Egypt shall tremble at the presence of hym, and the bette of Egypt shall quake in the myddes of her. And I wyll set the Egptians one agaynst an other, so that one bryther shall fyght agaynst an other, and one neighbour agaynst an other, cytye agaynst citty: and realme agaynst realme. The minde also of Egypte shall be cleane without coun-sayl whā it selfe, and I deuyce that they take wyll I destrope, so that they shall seke coun-sayle at ydols, & at sojourners, at workers of spyches and at soothsayers. And the Egyptians wyll I gyue ouer into the hande of a mar-naplous cruel lord, and a myghty kynge shall haue domynion ouer them, sayeth the Lorde God of hostes: The waters of the see shall fayle, and the ryuer shall decrease, & be dryed vp. The waters shall be drawen out: the ry-uers of Egypt shall be emptyed and dryed vp the reedes and flagges shall be cut downe.

The grasse in the ryuer and by the ryuers bank, and al that groweth by the ryuer shall wyther awaye, and be brought to nought.
The fyshers also shall mourne, and all they that cast angle into the water, shall make lamentation, and they that lay forth theyr net besyde the waters shall be rooted out. More-ouer, they that worke in flax and make fyne woolles, shall be confounded: and so shall they that weue open woollens. For their open woollens

The Prophecie

workes shall be euen destroyed, and all they that make poudes and stues for fyllie shall come to nought.

But ye foolyshe princes of zoan, ye wyse counsailers of wharao, whose wyse is turned to foolyshe nesse, how saue ye vnto wharao, I am come of wyse men, and of auncient kyn- ges: Where are thy wyse men? Let them tell the (yf they can) what the Lorde of hostes hath deuised vpon Egypt.

C The princes of zoan are become fooles, the princes of Soph are disceyued, they haue disceyued Egypt, euen they that were taken for the chiefe kyndred therof. In the myddest of it hath the Lord poured the spyrite of wickednesse: and they haue disceyued Egypt in euery worke therof, euen as a drunken man stachereth in his vompte. Nether shall the heed of taryle, the bryanche of reede be hable to do any worke in Egypt. In that day shall Egypte be lyke vnto women: It shall be a- frayed, and stande in feare at the mocyon of the hande of the Lorde of hostes, whiche he shaketh ouer it. And Egypte shall be afrayed of the land of Iuda: so that euery one which maketh mention of it, shall be afrayed therat bycause of the counsaile of the Lord of hostes which he deuyleth for it.

In that daye shall fyue cyties in the lande of Egypte speake the language of Canaan, and sweare by the Lorde of hostes: the citie of desolacio shall be called one of the. In that daye shall the altare of the Lorde be in the myddes of the lande of Egypt, and this title besyde it: VNTO THE LORDE. And it shall be a token and a wytnesse vnto the Lorde of hostes in the lande of Egypt. For they shall crye vnto the Lorde, bycause of such as trouble them, and he shall sende them a sauyour, and a great man to deliuer them.

D And the Lorde shall be knowen in Egypt, and the Egyptians shall knowe the Lord in that daye, and do sacrifice and oblation: yea they shall vowe a vowe vnto the Lorde, and performe it. The Lorde also shall smyte Egypt sore, and heale them agayne, and they shall be conuerted vnto the Lord, and he shall be intreated of them, and shall heale them. In that daye shall there be a comen waie out of Egypt into Assyria, and Assyria shall come into Egypt: and Egypte into Assyria: so that the Egyptians and the Assyrians shall serue the Lord together. In that daye shall the nation of Israel be the chyde with Egypt and Assyria: and they shall be blessed in the myddes of the lande: which lande the Lorde of hostes hath blessed, sayinge: blessed is my people of Egypte: Assur also is the worke of myne handes: and Israel is myne inheritaunce.

C The .xx. Chapter.

C Against Egypt and ethiopia.

In the pere that Thartan came vnto Asdod (when Sargon the kynge of Assyria had sent him) and had fought agaynst Asdod, and taken it. At the same tyme spake the Lorde by the hande of Elai the sonne of Amos, say- ing: Go, and take of the lacke cloth from thy loynes, and put of thy shoe fro thy fote. And he dyd so, walkynge naked and barefoote.

And the Lorde sayde: lyke as my seruauit Elai hath walked naked and barefoote for a signe and wondre thre yeres vpon Egypte, and Ethiopia: Euen so shall the kynge of Assyria take awaye out of Egypte and out of Ethiopia, children and olde men, naked and barefoote, with theyr loynes vncouered, to the great shame of Egypte.

They shall be brought in feare also, and ashamed one of another: Ethiopia of Egypt and Egypt of Ethiopia, conspynginge what gloze they wer in afore. And they that dwel in the same Ile, shall saie in that daye: Beholde, thus are we regarded. Whither shall we flye for helpe, that we may be deliuered from the kynge of Assyria? And howe shall we escape?

C The .xxi. Chapter.

C Against Babylon, Humes, and Arabia.

In the burthe of the wasteler: Euen as the storme wetter that passeth thowowe at noone day, to come from the wilderness, to that horrible lande. A greuous vision was shewed vnto me: Let one disceyful offender come agaynst an other, and one destroyer agaynst an other. Up Elam, laye siege of Media, all their growinge haue I layed downe. Therefore are my loynes fylled wth sorowe: heynesse hath take holde vpon me as the pages of a woman: I am transparynge. It made me stoupe wher I herde it, and it vexed me wher I sawe it. My bert panted, fearfulness came vpon me. The night of my voluptuousnesse hath be turned agaynst me into feare. Whyle they garnished the table, I watchman looked: And whyle he was eating and dypnyng (it was sayd) vpon ye captaynes take you to poure wynde. For thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me: Go, and set a watchman, to tell what he seeth. And he sawe a charret, which two horsmen sat vpon, with the carpage of an Asse, and the carpage of a camell. So he looked and toke diligens here. And the ypon cresp, Lorde, I stand waiting all the hole daye, and am appoynted to kepe my watche euery nyght. And beholde, here cometh a charret of men, with two horsmen. And he answered, and sayde: Babylon is fallen, is fallen: and all the ymagys of her goddes hath be smytten downe vnto the grounde. Thou art he whom I must chuse, and thou and thou belongest to my coine floore. This that I herde of the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel haue I shewed vnto you.

C The burthen of Duma: he calleth vnto me out of Seir: Watchman what hast thou elsured by night: Watchman, what hast thou sured by night: The watchman sayde: The moynynge cometh, and so doeth the night. If ye wyll aske me any questyon, the night returne, and come agayne.

C The burthen concernynge Arabia: In the pleasant groundes of arabia shal ye tary all night, euen in the stretes of Dedanum. The inhabitours of the lande of Tema brought much water to hym that was thyspe, they sprinkled hym with their bzede that was fied awaye. For bycause of swordes are they become fugityue, euen for the drawn swerde, and for the bente bowe, and bycause of the prouenselle of warre. For thus hath the Lorde sayd vnto me: There is yet a pere ac-cusinge to the peres of an hyred seruauant, and all the glory of Cedar shal faile.

And the nombe of them that shal escape from the bowes, shal be mynished by the myghte chyliden of Cedar: for so the Lorde God of Israel hath spoken.

C The. xlii. Chapter.

C A prophete agaynst Jerusalem.

I The burthen of the valley of vision What hast thou to doo here, that thou climest vnto þ house toppes: Thou that art ful of occupynge, thou sedicious and proude cytie: thy flayne men are neyther put to death with swearde: they liued in battayle. All thy captaynes are fugityue togyther, the Archers haue taken them prisoners. All they that are founde in the ar in captiuitie togyther, bycause they had faile of. Therfore sayde I: let me alone, and I will make lamentation. Ye shal not be able to comfort me, bycause of the destruction of the daughter of my people. For this is a daye of trouble, of ruine, and of destruction: that the Lorde wyll bypunge to passe in the valley of vision, breakynge downe the wall, and crynge vnto mountaynes.

I All bare the quyer with a charret of fote men and horsemen, and the cytie of Ier: the wall shal be open. Thy chere valleye also shall be full of charrettes, and the horsemen set thyspe directly towards the gate. And in that daye wyll the enemye take awaye the treasure of Iuda: and then wylldest thou loke backe at the atmour of the house of the fore. Ye haue lene also the broken places of þ wall of Iuda, how that they are many, and ye haue gathered together the waters of þ lower pool. As for the houses of Ierusalem, ye haue destroyed them, and the houses haue ye broken downe to make the wall stronge. Ye haue made ye made byrwyne the two wal-les, for the waters of the olde poole and haue not regarded the maker thereof, neyther had respect vnto hym that toke it in hande.

C And in that daye wyll the Lorde God of hostes call men vnto weppynge and mour-nyng, to baldnesse and grydyng about with lacke cloth. And beholde, they haue iope and gladnesse, slayinge oren and kyllynge shepe, eatynge flesh, and dzyngynge wyne. * Let vs eate and dzyngke, for tomozo we we shal dze.
And it came to the eares of the Lorde of hos-tes: This iniquitie shal not be poned fro you tyl ye dze, sayth þ Lorde God of hostes.

C Thus sayth the Lorde God of hostes: So get þ vnto ponder treasurer, eue vnto * Heb-na, which is the ruler of the house. What hast thou to do here: whom hast thou herer that thou shouldest here herewe the oute a sepulchre, as it were one that hereweth hym out a sepulchre on dze, or that graueth an habytation for hym selfe in an harde rocke.

D Beholde, I thou man, the Lorde shal carry the awaye into captiuitie, and shal surely couer the with confusion. The Lorde shal turne the ouer lyke a ball with his handes: and shal sende the into a farre countre: There shalt thou dze, and there (in stede of the cha-rettes of thy pompe) shal þ house of thy lord haue confusion. I wyll dzyue the from thy place, and out of thy dwellyng shal he ouerthrowe the. And in that daye shal I call my seruauant Eliakim the sonne of Helkia. And with thy garmentes wyll I clothe hym, and with thy gyrdle wyll I strengthe hym: thy power also wyll I comyt into his hande, and he shal be a father of luche as dwel in Jerusalem, and in the house of Iuda.

E * And the kepe of the house of Dauid wyll I laye vpon his shoulder, so that he shal ope and no man shal shut. He shal shut, and no man shal open. And I wyll fasten hym as a naple in a sure place, and he shal be the glorious seate of his fathers house. Wo: couer, al generacions and posterities shal hange vpon hym all the glorie of they fathers house, all vessels both great and small, and all instrumentes of measure and musyke. In that day (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) shal the naple that is fastened in the sure place, departe, be broken, and fall: and the burthen that was vpon it, shal be pluckt awaye: for so the Lorde hath spoken.

ye shippes of Thariss, for there commeth such destruction, that ye shal not haue an house to entre into: Out of the land of Cit-tim haue they knowledge of this plage.

chaunted of zidon, and such as passe ouer the see, haue made the pleceous. The corne that groweth by the great waters of Nilus, and the frutes of the ryuer were her vntaples, so that it became a comen mart of the nations. Be ashamed thou zidon, for the see (euen the strength of the see) hath spoken, sayinge: I haue not trauayled nor brought forth chyldren, nor nourished vp ponge me or brought vp virgins.

When tydynge commeth to the Egyptians, they shalbe soze for the rumour & goeth of tyre. Get you to Tharlis, mourne ye that dwelle in the Ile. Is not this that glorious cytie of yours, which hath bene of olde antiquitie. Her owne feet shal carpe her forth to be a sojourner into a farre countrey. Who hath deuised this agaynst Tyre (that giueth garlandes vnto other cyties) whose marchantes are princes: and whose captaynes are honourable in the worlde. Euen the Lorde of hooftes hath deuyled this, to put downe the pyrde of all luche as be glorious, and to mynysh the all them that be proude vpon earth.

Get the out of the land vnto the daughter of Tharlis: seinge thou hast nomoze strength.
He that smote the kyngdomes togyther, holdeth out his hands ouer the see: euen the Lorde him self hath gyuen a commaundement agaynst the same comen place of marchan-dyse, that they shal vterly destroy & myght therof. And he sayd: Make nomoze thy dost (O virgin thou daughter zidon) thou shalt be brought downe: yea, get the ouer vnto Ci-tim, where neuer thelesse, thou shalt haue no rest. Beholde, this people came not of Caldees: but Assur made them strong with great whippes. They set vp the stronge holdes ther-of, & destroyed his palaces: and he brought it in decaye. Mourne, ye whippes of Tharlis for your strength is brought downe.

And in that daye shall Tyre be forgotten seuentye yerres (accorpyng to the yerres of one kyng) and after the ende of the seuentye yeres shall Tyre synge as doth an harlot.

Take an harpe, and go about the cytie (thou harlot that hast ben forgotten) make sweete melodye, synge mo songes, that thou mayest be had in remembraunce. And after the ende of seuentie yerres shal the Lorde vsit Tyre and she shall conuerte vnto her rewarde, and shall commyt fornication with all the kyng-domes of the earth that are in the worlde.

They occupying also and they rewarde shalbe holy vnto the Lorde. They gaynes shall not be layd vp nor kept in store, but it shall be theys that dwell before the Lorde, that they maye eate ynoughe, and haue clothyng sufficient.

The. xliii. Chapter.

A prophete of tribulation to come vpon the worlde because of syn.

Behold, the Lorde maketh the earth waste and empye: he turneth it vp sydede wone, & scattereth abode the inhabitours therof: And the yere shalbe as the people: and the master as seruant: the mastresse lyke the mayde: the seller lyke the byer: he that lendeth vpon vsurye, lyke hym that borroweth vpon vsurye: the creditour as the better. The worlde shalbe cleme wasted and vterly spoyled, for so the Lorde hath spokn. The earth is soze, and columeth away: the worlde is feble and perissheth, the proude people of the erth are come to nought.
The earth also is become vnprofytable vnder the inhabitours therof, which haue tras-gressed the lawes, chaunged the ordinaunce, broken the euerlastyng couenaunt.

Therfore hath the curse consumed the erth, and they that dwell therein, are falle into passe. Therfore the inhabitours of the erth are perished with dought, and fewe me are left behynde. The wyne sayeth: I vine hath no myghte, all they that haue bene merce of berte are come to mournyng. The myrth of tabzettes is layd downe, the noyse of luche as haue made mery, is ceased: the ioye at the harpe is at an ende. They shall dymke no more wyne with myrth, stronge dymke shal be bytter to them that dymke it. The cytie of vanitie is broken downe, euery house is shut vp, that noman may come in. In the streets is there a cryng bycause of wyne, all chere is vanisshed awaye, the myrth of the worlde is gone: in the cite is left desolacion, and the gate is shuyt ten with destruction.

For in the myddes of the worlde, euen amonge the people, it shal come to passe, as at the thakynge of Olpyes, and as the grapes are whē the wineharuest is done. They shal lyft vp their voyce, and make a mery noyse: and in magnifyng of the Lorde, shall they crye out of the west. Therfore prayle ye the Lorde in the halles, euen the name of the Lorde God of Israel, in the Iles of the see.
From the uttermost parte of the earth haue we herde prayles and myrth, bycause of the ryghtous. And I sayde: I knowe a thyng in secrete: I knowe a thyng in secrete: woe is me, the trasgressours haue offended: the trasgressours haue greuously offended. Fearefulnesse, the pyt and the snare are vpon the, O thou that dwellest on the earth. It shal come to passe, & whosoever escapeth the fear full noyse, shal fall into the pyt. And he that commeth vp out of the pyt, shal be taken with the snare. For the wyndowes from on hyghe are open, and the foundacions of the earth are moued.

The earth is vterly broken downe, the earth hath a loze rapne, the earth quaketh exceedyngly. The earth shal reile to and fro, lyke a byonderde: and shalbe remoued lyke a tent.

the iniquite therof shal be hypon it. It shal fall, and not ryle agayne. And in that daye shal þe Lord visible be aboue þe is on þie: & the kinges of the world þe ar vpon the earth. And they shal be gathered together, as they þe in þe pple: & they shal be vnto þe. * The mone shal be abashed, and the sunne ashamed when the Lorde of hostes shal raygne in mount Sion and in Ierusalem with worshippe, and in the sight of such as shal be of his counsell.

The xxv. Chapter.

The Church crying to God for his workes.

Thou art the Lorde my God, I wyl magnify the, I wyl geue thanks vnto thy name. For þe hast brought wonderful thynges to passe, according to thine old counsels truly & faithfully.
Thou hast made of a citie a heape of stones & brought a stronge to wne into decaye. The habitation of strangers hast þe made to be no more, neither shal it be builded any moze. Therfore shal þe mightie people geue glory vnto þe Lorde of the valeaunt. Heirthen shal feare þe.
For þe hast bene a strength vnto the pooze, & a refuge for þe ney in his trouble. A refuge agaynst euil weather, a shadowe agaynst the heat. For the blast of ragynge men is lyke a floure that casteth downe a wall.

Lyke as thou byngest heate downe out of a hye place: so shalte þe suppress the nople of synners. The heate is in the shadowe of thy hande: the bryanche of the myghty shal be brought lowe. And in this mountayn shal the hostes make vnto al people a feast of plemous & delicate thynges, even of most pleasant & deinite bythes. And in this mountayne shal the Lorde destroye þe couerpyng, & the people are wrapped in, & the hanging þe is vnto al nacjons. * As for death he hath destroyed it for ever. * And þe Lord God shal take away teares from all faces, and the remour of þe people shal he take awaye out of the earth. For so the Lord hath sayde.

And in that daye it shal be sayde: Lo, this is our god, we haue wayted for him, * and he shal save vs. This is þe Lord in whome we haue troued, we wyl be mery and reioyce in the sal-uacion that cometh of hym. For in this mountayne shal the hande of the Lorde cease and there shal be thynges vnder hym, even as there is thynges vpon the ground. And he shal stretch out his hande in the myddes of the sea (as he that swymmeth, casteth out his hande to swyme) and with the strength of his handes shal he byng downe their payde.
The strong hold also and defence of thy wal shal he overthrowen and cast downe and bring them to the ground, euen vnto dust.

In that daye, le that ye synge of the Congregation whiche is the vynyarde, that byngeth forth & best wyne. Euen I the Lorde do hepe it. In due seasons shall I water it, & least the enemye do it any harme, I wyl both myghte and dawe pfecte it. There is no displeasure in me eis: when I vynyarde byngeth me forth byeers and thornes: I wolde go thowowe it by warre, and burne it vntogether. Let it take holde of my strenght, and it shalbe at one with me, euen at one that it be w me.

C The xxviii. Chapter.

C A prophecie of the pryde of Ephraim, and a gaudie cause pteakes and pteachens.

Whe vnto the crowne of pryde eu * to the dronken people of Ephraim whose gret poye is as a floure & fadeth awaye vpon the heade of the valley of luche as be in welth, and are overlade wpth wyne. Beholdest here cometh a vehement and soze dawe from I Lorde lyke an onmeasurable hayle and peryllous tempest, euen lyke the force of myghte and hozyble waters & violently beareth downe all thynges. The crowne of the pryde of the droncken Ephraimites shalbe troden vnder foote: so that the floure of his sayrenes and bewtpe, whiche is in the heade of the valleye of fatnes, shall fade awaye, as doeth an vntymely rype fyg afore haruest. Which when a man spret, he loketh vpon it, and whyle it is yet in his hande, he eateth it vp.

In that daye shal the Lorde of hostes be crowne of glozy, & diamonde of be wte vnto the respyde of his people. He wylbe also a spete of pertyte knowledg to him & speteth in iudgement, & strenght vnto them that turne awaye the battel to the gate of the enemyes. But they are oute of the waye by reason of wyne: yee, farre oute of the waye are they to the stronge dyncke. * The preste also and the prophet are gone astraye by the meanes of strong dyncke, they are droncken w wyne they go amysse thowow stronge dyncke: they saye in prophecying & stamble in iudgement. For tables are so full of vomyte & fylthynes that no place is cleane. Whom then shal such one teach knowledg: And who shal be make to vnderstande & thynge that he heareth: For they are as ignozauite as ponge chyldzen, & are taken from the mycke, & are weyned.

For they that be luche muste haue after one lesone, another lesone: * after one comadement, another commaundement, after one rule another rule, after one instruccyon another instruccyon, there a lytle and there a lytle. For he that speaketh vnto thys people is euen as one that vseth endenesse of spech, & a straunge language. Yf any man saye vnto them: lo, this is the rest where with ye maye ease hym that is wey, this is the rest wher they wyl not herken. * Therfore, the woide of the Lorde lesone vpon lesone, commaundement vpon commaundement, rule vpon rule instruccyon vpon instruccyon, there a lytle & there a lytle shalbe vnto them an occasyon of stomblyng that they maye go on, & fal backward, be byused, tangled and snared.

Wherfore, heare the woide of the Lorde ye mockers, ye that haue rule of thys people, which is at Ierusalem. Because ye haue sayd we haue he haue made a couenaunte wth death, and wth hell are we at agrement. And though ye go forth a soye plage, it shall not come vnto us. For we haue made falshode our re-uerence, & vnder baner are we hyd. Therfore saith the Lorde God: Beholde, I laye in foundacyon a stone, even a tryed stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundacib wtho belongeth, let hym not be to hastye.

Agrement also wth I laye to the rule and balance to the balance: so y^e the dayle shall take awaye your bayne confidence as a stone, and the p^{re}ny place of poure refuge shall the waters r^une ouer.

And thus the couenaunt that ye made wth hell, shall be dissolued: and your agrement that ye made wth hell, shall not stande. Yee, when the soye plage goth forth, ye shall be tro under it. From the tyme that it goth forth, I shall take you awaye. For ear ly shall I make manynge euery daye: yee, both day and nyght shall I go thow^{er}de: and when the wther of is perceined, it shall geinde ver y^e. For the bed is narrowe, and not large: and the covering so small that a man cannot wthin hym self under it. * For the Lorde shall be as in mount: Barazin, & shall be wthach as in the valley: * Gideon, y^e he maye do wth his strange wothche and bypnyge to p^{re}nt his acte, his strange acte.

Some thow^{er}de if y^e be no mockers, lest ye maye be increas: for I haue heard the Lorde of hostes, that there shall come a thow^{er}de vpon the whole earth. Heare ye ye, a thow^{er}de vpon my wothche, coldye & pon nyghte. Wthch not y^e put hand vnto plow of the daye, and openeth & breaketh the clot of his gronde, y^e he maye sower: when he sowereth it playn, wyl he not sp^{re}de abrode the seedes, and sowe comyn, & cast in wthete by maner, & the appoynted barbe and eye in their place: God wyl instruct him to haue harvest, euen his god wyl teach hym. For ye shall not be thyselfed wth an darow wthal a carte whele be brought thow^{er}de the comyn: but the fyched are beaten out wth a staffe, and comin wth a rod. But the seide y^e whele is made of, is thyselfed, though it be not alwaye a thyselfynge. And the carte whele must be brought ouer it, lest he geinde it wth his teth. This also cometh of the Lorde of hostes, which wothkerth wth won derfull wthdomme, & bypnygeth excellent woth-derfull p^{re}nt.

the boke is geuen vnto hym that is not lear woyche say of hym that made it, he made not me: And doth an earthen vessel saye of hym that fashioned it, he had no understanding? Is it not harde at hande, that Lybanus shalbe turned into a lowe felde, and that the low felde shalbe taken as the wood? And in that daye shal deaffe men heare the woordes of the booke, and the eyes of the blynd shal se out of the cloude & out of darcknes.

E The meke spreted also shalbe mercy in þe Loyde, and the pooze amonge them that be lowly, shal reioyce in the holpe one of Israel. For he that dyd violence, is broughte to nought, and the scoynfull man is confumed: and they rote out that were bakke so soone to vnryghteousnes, makynge a man to synne in the woerde, and that toke hym in a snare: whiche reponed them in the open place: and they that haue turned the cause of the ryghte ous to naught. Therfore thus sayeth þe Loyde vnto the house of Jacob, euen thus sayeth he that redeemed Abraham: * Jacob shal not now be confounded, nor his face pale. But when he seeth his chyldren the woiche of my handes in the myddes of hym, they shal sanctifye my name, & prayse the holy Loyde of Jacob, and feare þe God of Israel. They also þe haue bene of an erronpouse sprete shal come to understandinge, and they that haue bene scoynfull, shal learne doctryne.

Agaynst the that forsake the counsell of God & truste to the counsell of men. The prophet also sheweth the remnant of the people, that after the destruction of Iherusalem went into Egypte.

A Las, for those dyslobedyente chyldren, (sayth the Loyd) * that they wyl take counsell without me. Alas, that they wyl take a secrete aduysce, and not out of my sprete, and therfore adde they synne vnto syn. Euen they that walke to go downe into Egypte, & haue asked no question at my mouth but seke strength in the myght of Pharao, & trust in the shadow of Egypt. Therfore shal the strength of Pharao be poure confusyon, and the truste in the shadowe of Egypte your shame. For his captaynes were at ioan, and his ambassadours cam vnto hanes. * They were all ashamed of the people that could do them no good, and that myght not helpe the, nor shewe them any piosyte, but were they confusyon and rebuke.

B The heuy burthen of the beastes of the southe in a lande of trouble and anguryshe, frome whence shal come the yonge and olde Lyon, the vpper and lxxv serpent that flyeth agaynst them that vpon coltes beare they: rydes, and vpon camels they: treasures, to a people that can do them no god. For bayne and nothyng woith shal the helpe of the Egyptians be. Therfore haue I cryed vnto Iherusalem. They shal haue strength ynough, if they wyl settle they: myndes in quietnes. * Nowe therfore, go thy waye, and wyte this befoze them in a table, & note it in a booke that it maye synally remayne & be kepte styll for euer. For this is an obstinat people: and dissembling chyldren, chyldren that refuse to heare the lawe of the Loyde.

C For they saye vnto the seers: We not and to them þe be cleare of indgment: loke not on ryght thynges for vs: but speake saye woordes vnto vs: loke out errors, get you out of this waye, departe out of this path, & turne the holy one of Israel from vs. Therfore thus sayth the holy one of Israel: Because your vertes syle agaynst this woerde, and because ye trust in wonge dealyng & peruerse indgement, & put your confydence therein.

Therfore shal ye haue this myschefe for your destruccyon & fall, lyke as an hye wall that falleth, because of some ryfte or blaste, whole breakyng cometh sodenly. * And the hurte therof is lyke an earthen vessel, whiche breaketh without helpe: so þe in the burstyng of it, there is not founde one shewer to ferche fyre in, or to take water withal out of þe pyte.

D For thus sayth the Loyde God, euen the holy one of Israel: In repentance & in * rest shal ye be safe: in quietnes & sure confydence shalbe your strength. But ye haue had no lyst thereto, for ye haue sayde: No, but we wyl elcape thowto hoxen. (Therfore shal ye lie) and we wyl get vs by vpon swifte beastes. And therfore shal your persecutours beset you. * A thousande shal syle at the rebuke of one, and at the rebuke of syue shal ye all syle, tyll ye be leste as a thynne mast vpon the top of a mountayne, and as a brake vpon an hye. * Therfore doth þe Loyde cause you to wepe that he maye haue mercy vpon you: to repentente, that he maye haue the pitemynce, when he is gracious vnto you. For þe Loyde is þe God of iudgement. Blessed are all they that hope in hym.

E If the people remayne in Syon, and at Iherusalem, thou shalt not be in heynnes: but at the voyce of thy complaynte shal be haue mercy vpon þe. And whē he heareth it he shal geue the an answer. And though the Loyde geue you the bread of trouble: & the water of aduersyte, thy rayne shalbe no more so thant but thyne eyes shal se thy rayne. Per, & thyne eare shal heare the talking of hym that doth speake behynde the.

F * This is þe waye, walke ye in it. Turne not asyde, neyther to the ryght hande nor to the lyft. Ye shal destroye also the couerynge of your syluer ymages, and the deckyng of your golden ydols. Euen as sylthynes shal ye put them a waye. And thou shalt saye vnto it. Get the hence. Then shal God geue rayne vnto thy seede, that thou shalt sowe the grounde withal, and breade of þe increas of the the earth, which shall be fat and very plentiful. In that day also, shall thy cattell be in large pastures. The oxen shall graze as the young asses, that eat the ground shall eat cleane prouender, which is poured wth the wynde and the fanne.

Finally, vpon every hye mountayne & hill shall there be ryuers & streames of water, in the day of the great slaughter, when the wicked shall fall. Moreover, the lycht of the sunne shall be as the lycht of the sunne, and the sunne lycht shall be leuen folde, and haue as much hye as in leuen dayes belyde, when the Lorde wyndeth vpon the soke of hys people, and smyth the stroke of theyr wounde. Behold, the same of the Lorde cometh from here, and his presence is so dore, that no man is able to abyde. His lyches are full of indignacion, and his tonge is as a consuming fire. His bryth is as a vehement floude of water that reacheth vnto the necke. That bryth is as a wynde that bloweth awaye the heathen in the spue of his ire. And his bryth is as a byrd of prey in the chawes of the people.

And ye shall syng, lyke as in the nyghte, when the holy solenitie begynneth. And ye shall haue gladnes of hert, lyke as when one smyth with a pyper vnto the hyll of the Lorde, and to the mooste myghty one of Israel. And the Lorde shall cause his glorious name to be heard, and shall declare his strength vnto the world with a terrible countenance, and with a flame of a consuming fyre, with a consuming pyre, with a powder, and with a sword. For thowme the voyce of the Lorde shall be destroyed, which he smyth men with the rodde. And it shall come to passe, that whithersoener he goeth, he shall cleane vnto hym, which the Lorde shall lay vpon hym with tabrettes and harp, and with greute warre shall he fyght agaynst his host. For the fyre of payne is prepared from the begynnyng: yee, euen for the daye of the Lorde. This hath the Lorde made in the depe: and made it wyde: & burning is the fyre, and muche woode. The bryth of the Lorde, which is a ryuer of brymstone shall burne it.

¶ He smyth them that forsake God, and take the name of men.

When they goe downe in Egypte for helpe, and truste in houses, and put their confidence in charrettes, because they be manye, and in horsemen, because they be lustye and strong. But they regard not the holy one of Israel, and they aske no questyon at the Lorde. When as he neuerthelesse (byng the best of all) smyth the wyched, and yet goeth not downe by wynde, when he steppeth forth, and taketh the victorie agaynst the household of the srowarde, and agaynst the helpe of euell doers. Nowe the Egyptians are men, and not God, and theyr horses fleshe & not spere. And as soone as the Lorde stretcheth out hys hande, then shall the helper fall, and he that shulde haue bene helped, and theyr shal all together be destroyed. For thus hath the Lorde spoken vnto me: Lyke as the Lyon cryeth: Lyons whelpe roareth vpon the praye that he hath gotten, and is not afrayde though the multitude of shepherdes crye out vpon hym, neither abashed for all the braye of them. So shall the Lorde of hostes come downe to fyght for mount Syon, and defende his hyll. Lyke as byrdes floure about theyr nestes, so shall the Lorde of hostes kepe, laue, defende, and deliuer Jerusalem.

Therefore, O ye chyldren of Israel, turne agayne, from that infidelitie, wherein you drowned your selues. For in that daye euery man shall cast out his ydols of syluer and his ydols of golde, which he haue made with your owne handes vnto your spure. I also shall be slayne with the sword, not with a mans swearde, neither shall the swearde of any man deuoure hym: And he shall fle from the slaughter, and his seruantes shall be distressed in theyr hertes. He shall go for feare to his stronge holdes, and hys princes shall fle from his badge. This hath the Lorde spoken, whose lycht burneth in Zion, & his spere in Jerusalem.

Holde, a kynge shall gouerne after the rule of ryghteousnes, & the princes shall rule, accordyng to the balance of equyte. And that man shall be vnto men as a defence for the wynde, and as a refuge for the tempest: lyke as a ryuer of water in a drye place, & the shadow of a great roche in a drye lande. The eyes of the sepyng shall not be drye, & the eares of them that heare, shall take diligent hede.

The herte of the vnwyse shall attayne to knowledge, and the vnparfytte tonge shall speake playnely and dyspynctly. Then shall the folke the nygarde be nomore called gentle, nor the churle lyberall. But the nygarde wyl be nugarly minded, and his hert wyl worke euell, and playe the hypocrite, and ymagyne abhominacions agaynst God, so make the hongry leane, and to withholde dysynche from the churche. These are the perious weapons of the churlyche, these be his shamefull counsels: that he maye begyle the pooze with deceitfull wordes: yee, euen there as he shulde geue sentence with the pooze. But the lyberall person ymagyneth honest thynges, & cometh vpon for liberalitie vnto promocioun

The Prophecy.

C Up (ye cyche and ydell women) herken vnto my voyce. Ye careles cyties, marke my wordes. After yeres and dayes shall ye be brought in feare, O ye careles cyties. For haruest shall be out, & the grapegatherig shall not come. O ye ryche ydell cyties ye that feare no pael. Be abashed, you that lyue in abodinance: tremble, you that lyue carles: caste of your rayment, make your selues bare, put sacke cloth about you. For as the infantes wepe when they mothers teates are dryed: so shall you wepe for your saye felde and frutefull vyneyardes. My peoples selde shall bypunge thornes and thystles: and so shall it be cū in euery house of voluptuousnesse and in euery cytie that reioyseth. The places also shall be broken, & the greatly occupied cyties desolate. The towres and bulwarckes shall become demnes for euermore, the pleasure of mulcs shall be turned to pasture for shepe: vnto the tyme that I spere be powred vpon vs from aboue.

D Then shall the wyldernes be a frutefull felde, and the plenteous felde shall be rehened for a woode. Then shall cūytie dwell in the desert, and ryghteousnes in a frutefull lande. * And the rewarde of ryghteousnesse shall be peace, and her frute rest & quietnes for euer.

* And my people shall dwell in the pynes of peace, and in sure dwellinges in safe places of consoite. And when the baple falleth, it shall fall in the woode, and the cytie shall be set lowe in the valley. O howe happy shall ye be, when ye shall safely sowe your seed besyde all waters, and dryue thyside the fret of your oren and asses.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Exhortacion agaynst the Syrians. A descrey: upon of them that shall be the Lozde.

2 W O to the that destroyest, whē thou wast not destroyed, thou breakest the leage, where as none hath broken it with the: for when thou shalt leane destroyinge, * thou thy selfe shalt be destroyed. And when thou cealest from breahynge the leage, then shall they breake it to the. O Lozde, haue mercie vpon vs: we haue put our hole trust in the. Be an arme to suche carely: and * our helth, in the tyme of trouble. At that confuse nople, the people fled, and at thyn exaltynge, the heathen were scattered. And the spoyles shall be gathered (which shall be poures) as are the gatherynge of Buzbas. And the multitud goyng to it shall be as locustes rummyng to and fro.

3 The Lozde is exalted, for it is he that dwelleth an hyc: he hath fylled Shion with iudgement and ryghteousnes. And a sure stablyshynge of the tymes shall be strength, healt, byldome & knowlodge: and y very feare of the Lozde shall be the treasure of it. Beholde, the messengers shall crye without: & they andol-sadours of peace shall wepe bitterly. The stretes are wast, there walketh no man therein. God hath broken the appoyntment, & cyties are cast awaye, & men are nothing regarded. O desolate earth is in heynnes. Libanus is thamed: & herwt dothone. Saron is like a wilderness: Basan and Chamel are spoyled of they frutes: and therfore sayeth the Lozde, I wyl vp nowe: now wyl I be annūced: now wyl I be exalted as a myghty God. * Ye shall conceaue stubble, & beate strawe, & your spere shall be the spere, & it maye consume you & the people shall be burnt like lyme, & as thornes burne & are betwen of, and cast in the spere. Now herken to ye that are farre of, how I haue done, & confydre my power, ye that be at hande.

The synners at Shion are a frayde, a fearefulness is come vpon the ypocrites, what is he amonge vs, save they, that shall dwell by a conspangynge spere: which of vs maye abyde an everlasting heat: * he that leaseth a godly lyf, save I, & speaketh the truthe. He that a thoweth gaynes thowme by violence & discrey: he that hath his hand & he touche no rewarde: which stoppeth his eares, & he heare no counsell against his innoct bloud: which holdeth downe his eyes that he se none euil. He it is that shall dwell on hyc: whose sauergarde shall be in a bulwarcke of rockes, to hym shall be gummeate, & his waters shall not faile. Thyn eyes shall se & hyng in his gloze: euen & hyng of & far countreis that they se: thyn heart shal doped for feare thynkyng thus. * What shall then become of a scriber of the recepyt of our money: what of hym that taxed our sayest houses? There shall not se a people of a straung tong to haue so diffused a language, & it may not be vnderstand, neyther so straunge a speech but it shall be perceaued. There shall Shion be sene the heade cytie of our solempne feastes. There shall thyn eyes se Ierusalem & glorious habytacil: * the tabernacle that neuer shall remoue: whose nayles shall neuer be taken out wyldre about ende: whose cordes euerychone shall neuer corrupte: for the glorious matelty of the Lozde shall there be vident amonge vs: as a place, where saye wyldre synners & streames are, thowowe the which shall nether galey rowe, nor great shyppe saile. * For the Lozde is our iudge, the Lozde is our lawe geurr. The Lozde is our hyng, and he hym selfe shall be our sauoure. There are the cordes so layde abrode, that they can not be better. And therfore they haue not tyed theyr masse, nor tyed abrode theyr saile. Then there is dealed great spoyls: per, lame men comne after & pray. There speth no man that sayth: I am sycke, but all euell is taken awaye from the people that dwell there.

Jerusalem is besieged by Sennacherib in the time of kinge Dectian.

L 2* the. xiiii. yere of kyng hezekias came Sennacherib kyng of the Assirians dooing, to lape seage vnto all þe stronge cyties of Iuda, to conquer them. And the kyng of þe Assirians sent Rabshakeh from Lachis towarde Jerusalem agaynst kyng hezekias, with an exceeding hoste which let hym by the conspyte of þe ouer pole in the wape þe goeth thowowe the fullers land. And so there came forth vnto him Eliakim hezekias sonne the president, Sobna the scribe, and Ioah Abasars one the secretoary.

And Rabshakeh sayde vnto them: Tell hezekias, that the greate kynge of Assyria sayth thus vnto hym: what presumption is this, that thou trustest vnto I sayde, Surely I trustest in vayne wordes, when coun-cell and strength are necessarye to battaile.

Eze. 33. 1. a

oels wher to trustest þ, that þ calltest thy self of from: * lo, thou puttest thy trust in a broken staffe of rebe (I meane Egypt) which be that leaneth vpon, it goeth into hys hande & thuteth hym thorow. Euen so is Pharaos þ kyng of Egypt, vnto all them that trust in hym. But þi þ woldest saye to me: We trust in the Lord our God. A goodly God in dede: whose hye places and altares hezekia toke downe and commaunded Iuda and Ierusalem to worshyppe onely before the alter. Howe therfore deliuer hostages that thou rebelle nomore agaynst my Lorde the kyng of Assi-rians. And I wyll geue the two thousande horses: yf thou be able to set men vpon them.
Howe darest þ resist the power of the smallest pryncce, that my Lorde hath: howe darest thou truste in the charettes and horsemen of Egypt? Wozeouer, thynckest thou þ I am come vp hither to destruye this lande woute the lordes wyl? The Lord sayde vnto me: go vp into the lande, that thou mayst destroy it.
Then sayde Eliakim, Sobna and Ioah vnto Rablaketh. Speake to vs thy seruantes (we praye the) in the Assyrians language, for we vnderstand it well. And speake not to vs in the Jewes tonge, lest þ folke heare whiche lyeth vpon the wal. Then answered Rabla-keth: Thinke ye, þ the kyng sent me to speake this only vnto the Lord and the? hath he not sent me to them also that lye vpon the wall? þ they maye be compelled to eate theyr owne donge, and dryncke theyr owne stale & pou-er? And Rablaketh stode styffe, and cryed wyth a loude voyce in the Jewes tonge, and sayde Howe take hede, howe the great kyng of the Assyrians geueth you warning. Thus sayth the kyng: Let not hezekias disceane you: for he shal not be able to deliuer you. Wozeouer let not hezekias conforthe you in the Lorde, when he sayth: the Lord without doubt shal defende vs, and shal not geue ouer this cytie into the handes of the kyng of the Assyrians belene hym not. But thus sayth the kyng of Assyria: opteyne my fauoure, encline to me, so may euery man enioye his vineyardes and fygge trees, and dryncke the water of his cesterne, vnto the tyme that I come my selfe, and bynge you into a land that is lyke your owne: wherin is wheate and wyne, whiche is both sowne wyth seede, and planted wyth vineyardes. Let not hezekias dysceane you when he sayth vnto you: the Lorde shal de-liuer vs: * Wygde the goddesses of the Gentiles kepe euery mans lande, from the power of the kyng of the Assyrians: Where is the God of Hemath and Arphad? Where is the god of Sepharuaim? And who was able to defende Samaria out of my hande? Or whiche of all the Goddesses of these landes hath deliuered theyr countrey out of my power? is the Lorde in dede able to deliuer Ierusalem from my hande? Vnto this hezekias messaun-gers helde theyr tonges, and answered not one worde for the kyng had charged them that they shulde geue hym no answer.

So came Eliakim hezekias sonne the prync-dent, Sobna the scribe, and Ioah Alphas sonne the secretoary, vnto hezekias to rent clothes, and tolde him þ wordes of Rablaketh.
¶ The xxxvii. Chapter.

¶ Hezekias humbled hym self before the Lord. The temple of Benadabed in the temple of the angel of the Lord, and he hym selfe is killed of his owne sonnes.

When hezekias herde that, he rent his clothes, & put on a sackcloth and wente into the temple of the Lord but he sent Eliakim þ prync-dent, Sobna þ scribe, with the eldest prynces clothed in sacke vnto þ prophet Eliakim the sonne of Amoz, & they sayde vnto him: Thus saith hezekias: this is the day of trouble, of plage and of blasphemye: for the chylidren are come to the place of bythe: but there is no power to bringe them forth. The Lorde thy God (no doubt) hath well considered the wordes of Rablaketh, whome þs Lorde kyng of the Assyrians hath sent to defpe & blasphemie the liuinge God: with such wordes as the Lorde thy God hath hearde ryght wel. And therfore, lyfte vp thy prayer for the remnaunte, that yet are left. So the seruautes of þ kyng hezekias came to Eliakim And Eliakim gaue them this answer: Saye thus vnto your Lorde: thus sayth the Lorde: Be not afrayde of þ wordes that thou hast hearde wherewith the kyng of the Assyrians seruautes haue blasphemed me. * Beholde: I wyll cause a wynde to go ouer hym alone as he heareth the rumoure, he shal go agayne into his countrey: there wyll I destroye hym with the sword in his owne lande. * Howe when Rablaketh returned, he founde þ kyng of Assyria layenge sege to Libnas, for he had vnderstande þ he was departed from Lachis.

¶ For there came a rumoure þ Charakes kyng of Ethiopia was come forth to war agaynst hym. And when the kyng of Assyria hearde that he sent other messaungers to kyng hezekias with this commaundement: Saye thus to hezekias kyng of Iuda. Let not thy god dysceane the, in whō thou hopest, and layest.
Ierusalem shal not be geuen into the handes of the kyng of Assyria. For lo, thou knowest well howe the kynges of Assyria haue handled all the landes that they haue subuerted, and hopest thou to escape? Where the people of þ Gentyles (whom my progenitors conquered) deliuered at any tyme thowowe their goddesses? * As namely, Gozan, Haran, Re-zerph, and the chylidren of Eden, whiche were of the cite Sepharuain, Ena & Ana: Now when hezekia had receyued the lettre of the meſſengers, and read it, he went vp vnto the houſe of the Lorde, and opened the lettre before the Lorde: and hezekia prayed before the Lorde on this manner. O Lorde of hoſtes thou God of Iſrael, which dwelleſt vpon * Cherubin. Thou art the God, that onely is God of all the kyngdomes of the worlde, for thou onely haſt created heauen and earth. * En- dene thyne care Lorde & conſpyde, open thyne eyes, O Lorde, and ſee, and ponde all the wordes vpon Sennacherib, which hath ſent his embaiſage to blaſpheme the ſpynge God.

It is true, O Lorde, that the kynges of Aſſyria haue conquered all kyngdomes and lan- des, and caſt theyr goddes in the fyre. Not- withſtanding thoſe were no goddes, but the wyſes of mens handes, of wood, or ſtone, therefore haue they deſtroyed them. Welſpue then, O Lorde our God, from the handes of Sennacherib, that all kyngdomes of the earth maye knowe, that thou onely arte the Lorde. Then Eſaye the ſonne of Amos ſent vnto hezekia, ſayinge: Thus ſapeth the Lorde God of Iſrael. Where as thou haſt made thy prayer vnto me, as touchynge Senna- cherib the kyng of Aſſyria, this is the an- ſwer that the Lorde hath gyuen, con- cerning him. Welſpyed art thou, & mocked (O daughter of Sion) he hath taken his heed at the, O daughter of Ieruſale. But thou Se- nacherib: * who haſt thou deſpyed and blaſ- phemed? Agaynſt whom haſt thou liſted by thy voyce, & exalted thy proud lokeſeue agaynſt the holie one of Iſrael. Thou with thy ſervantes haſt blaſphemed the Lorde, and thou holdeſt thou of thy ſelfe. I wyll couer þe mountaynes and ſides of Libanus with my hoſtmen. And there wyl I cut downe þe Cedre trees and the fayreſt Kyre trees,

I wyl vp into the heygth of it, and into the deſert of his ſymbole wooddes. If there be no water, I wyl graue and drynke. And as for waters of defence, I ſhall dype them vp with the feet of myne hoſt. Yea, haſt thou not hearde, what I haue taken in hande, and brought to paſſe of olde tyme? That ſame wyl I do nowe alſo: and waſte, deſtroy and drynge ſtrong ctyes vnto heapes of ſtones. For theyr inhabitours ſhal be lyke lame me, brought in feare and confounded. They ſhal be lyke the graſſe and grene herbes in þe ſelde lyke they vpon houſe toppes, that with- out afore it be growen vp.

I knowe thy wayes, thy going forth and thy comynge home: yea, and thy madneſſe agaynſt me. Therefore thy ſurpouſneſſe agaynſt me, and thy pryde is come before me. I wyl put my pygne in thy noſe, and my byt- tle byt in the chawes of the, and turne the a- bout, turn the ſame way thou cameſt. I wyl gyue the alſo this token (O hezekia) this pere ſhalte thou eate ſuche as groweth of it ſelfe: and the ſeconde pere, that which ſpyn- geth agayne of the ſame: and in the thyrde pere, ye ſhal ſowe and reape: yea, ye ſhal plant vyneyardes, and enioye the frutes therof.

And ſuche of the houſe of Iuda as are eſ- ſcaped, ſhal come togyther, and the remnant ſhal take rote beneth, and byrnyng forth frute aboute. For the eſcaped ſhal go out of Ieru- ſalem, and the remnant fro the moſt ſib.

And this ſhal the gelouſye of the Lorde of hoſtes byrnyng to paſſe. Therefore thus ſapeth the Lorde, concernynge the kyng of the Aſ- ſyrians. He ſhal not come into this ctye, and ſhal ſhote no arrow into it, there ſhal no ſhild hurt it, neyther ſhal they caſt dycthes about it. The ſame way that he came, he ſhal re- tourne and not come at this cite: ſapeth the Lorde: And I wyl kepe and ſaue the ctye, (ſapeth he:) for myne owne, and for my ſer- uant Dauids ſake.

* Thus the Kingell of the Lorde wente forth, and ſue of the Aſſyrians hoſt, an hun- dred foure ſcore, and fyue thouſande. And when men aroſe vp earlye in the mornynge: Beholde, they were ſlayne, and all laye full of deed bodyes. So Sennacherib the kyng of the Aſſyrians brake vp and dwelt at Ni- nine. Afterwarde it chaunced, as he prayed in the temple of Neſrah his God, that Adia- malech and Sarazer his owne ſonnes ſlew hym with the ſwerde, and fled into the land of Armenia. And Aſarhadon his ſonne ray- gned in his ſtede.

¶ The xxxviii. Chapter.

NO longe afore this was hezekia ſpyke vnto the death. * and the pro- phete Eſaye the ſonne of Amos, came vnto hym, and ſayde: Thus commaunderthe the Lorde: Set thyne houſe in ordre, for thou muſt dye, and ſhalt not eſ- cape. Then hezekia turned his face toward the walle, and prayed vnto the Lorde, and ſayde: Remembre (O Lorde) that I haue walked before the in truthe, and a ſtedfaſte herte, and haue done the thyng that is plea- ſaunt to the. And hezekia wept ſore. Then ſayde God vnto Eſay: Go and ſpeake vnto hezekia: The Lorde God of Dauid thy fa- ther ſendeth the this worde: I haue hearde thy prayer, and conſpyd thy teares, * be- holde, I wyl put ſtene peres mo vnto thy lyfe, and deliuer the and the ctye alſo, from the hande of the kyng of Aſſyria, for I wyl defende the ctye: * And take the this token of the Lorde, that he wyl do it, as he hath ſpo- ken: Beholde, I wyl retourne the ſhadowe of Aſhaz diall, that nowe is layed out with þe

Beholde yowr God, beholde, the Lord God shall come with power, and beare rule with his arm. Beholde, he byngeth his treasure with hym, and his workes go before hym.
He shall fede his flocke lyke an herdman. He shall gather the lambs together with his arm, and carpe them in his bosome, & shall tenderly entreate those that beare yonge.

Who hath holden the waters in his fyst?
Who hath measured heauen wth his spanne, & hath comprehended all the earth of f^r woide in his measure: Who hath weyed f^r mountaynes wth scales in a balace: Who hath refourmed the mynde of f^r Lord: or to who hath he shewed his counsaile: Or who is of his counsaile to teache hym: or who hath gyuen him understanding and hath taught him the path of iudgement: Who taught him cōnyng and opened to hym the wape of vnderstanding?

Beholde, all people are in cōparison of hym as a hope to a bucket full, & are cōfited as the leek thing that f^r balace wepeth. Yea, & as he teacheth v^o as a very lytle thing. Like as he is not sufficient to minstre fyre for his burnyng, and all the bestes thereof, are not prouyde to one sacrifice. All people in cōparison of hym are reckened as nothing, & yf they be compared with hym, lesse then nothing, and that is not. To who then will ye lyken God: or what similitude will ye set v^o v^o to hym: What the carner make him a carued image: & shall f^r goldsmith couer him with gold, or cast him into a fourme of syluer plate: Or yf he make the ymage maker: that the ymage man which is disposed, maye haue honourage to set v^o also like out and chose out: f^r is not rote, and carue therout an ymage: f^r moueth not: knowe ye nothyng, & hearde ye neuer of it: hath it not been preached vnto you syns the begynning:

hath ye not bene enscourmed of this, by the saluacion of the earth, that he spyteth vpon the circle of the woide, and that all f^r inhabitours of the woide are in cōparyson of him, but as grethoppers: That he speydeh v^o heauens as a couerpyng, & that he stre-tcheth them out, as a tent to dwell in: That he bringeth princes to nothing, and the iudges of the earth to dust: so f^r of the it may be sayd they be not placed no: lowe agayne, neyther shall he be adored agayne in f^r earth. For as soon as he bloweth vpon the, they wither & like away, lyke f^r strawe in a whylewinde.

To who nowe will ye lyken me, & whom shall I be lyke, sayeth the holy one: Lyfte vp your eyes on hye, & cōsidre: who hath made these thynges, whiche come out v^o so greate power: he can call them al by their names.
There is nothyng hyd vnto the greatnesse of his power, strenght, & myght. Howe maye the Jacob thynke, or how maye Israel saye, My wayes are hyd fro the Lord, & my God knoweth not of my iudgements. Knowest thou not, or haste thou not hearde, that the euerlastyng God, the Lord which made all the corners of the earth, is neyther wery nor faynt: & that his wysdome cannot be cōpre-hended: but that he getteth strenght vnto the wery, and power vnto the faynt: & whyden are wery and faynte, and the strongest men fall: But vnto ch: that haue the Lord before they eyes, shall strenght be increased.

Agles wynges shall growe vpon the. Whē they runne they shall not fall: and when they go, they shall not be wery.

man from the rylsyng of the Sunne, and called him to go forth: who cast downe the people, and subdued f^r kynges before hym: that he may throwe them al to the grounde with his swerde, & scattre them lyke stubble with his bower: he foloweth v^o them, and goeth safely him self. And that in a way where before his fote had not trode. Who hath made and created these thynges: eue he that called the generacions from the begynnyng: Euen I the Lord, which am f^r fyst, and with the last. The ples sawe it, & did feare, and the endes of the earth, were a shamed, drewe nye, & cam hyther. Every mā exhorted his neygh-bour, and brother, & bad him be strong. The carpenter cōforted the goldsmith, & the goldsmith f^r hāmer mā, saying: Guee will do very well in it. It shall be good, f^r we fasten this cast worke: & the they fastened it with nay-les, that it shoulde not be moued. But thou Israel art my seruaunt: thou Jacob art elect thou art the seede of Abraham my beloued, thou art he who I led fro fendes of f^r earth thy God, to strenght the, helpe f^r, and to kepe the wth this right hāde of myne. Beholde, all they f^r resist the: what com to cōfusiō & shame and thynne aduerlaryes: what be destroyed and ter the: what not find the. Thy destroyer: what streets. And a brysed reed shall be not brysed and the smokyng flaxe shall be not quenched:

therin) I God haue called the in ryghtous-nesse, and led them by the hande. * Exod. xxi. b wyl I also defende the, & gyue the for a counsaunt of the people, and to be the light of Gentyles. That thou mayest open the eyes of the blynde, * let oute the prisoners from theye bondes, & them that syt in darkenesse, out of the dongeon house. Euē I am the Lord & this is my name: * And my glory wyl I gyue to none other, neyther myne honour to grauen ymages. Beholde, olde thynges are come to passe, & newe thynges do I declare.

And o: euer theye come, I tell you of them.

Spyng vnto the Lord, a newe songe of thanksgyving. blowe out his prayle from the ende of the world. Theye that be vpon see, and all that is therein prayle hym, & Iles and theye that dwell in them. Let the wyldernesse with the cryes lyft up her voyce, & to menes also that theye of Cedar dwell in. Let the be glad that syt vpon rockes of stone, and let them crye downe from the hye mountaynes ascrybyng glozpe vnto the Lord, and ma-gnifyng hym amonge the Gentyles. The Lord shall come forth as a gyant, and take a stomake to him lyke as a fleshy ma of war.
he shall roze & crye, & ouercome his enemies.

I haue longe holden my peace, sayth the Lord: I haue bene still and refrayned my selfe, but now I wyl crye lyke a trauelyng woman, and at ones wyl I de strophe, and be noure. I wyl make waste both mountaynes & hyll, & drye vpon every grene thyng that groweth theron. I wil drye vp the floudes of water, and drynke vp the ryuers. I wyl byrninge the blynde into a strete, that theye knowe not, and leade them into a fote path that theye are ignoraunt in. I shall make darkenesse light before them, and the thyng that is croked to be streygth. These thynges haue I done vnto them, and not forsaken them. * Theye are fallen backe: yea, and let them be ashamed earnestly, that hope in ydols, and sape to fal-sponed ymages: ye are our Goddes.

heare, O ye deafe men, and sharpen your sightes to se (O ye blynde): who is blynde but my seruant: O so deafe as my messenger, whom I sent vnto them / For who is follynde: (saye they) as the perfect mā and so bynde as the Lordes seruauunt. Thou vnderstandest moche, and kepest nothinge: the eares are open, & noman heareth. The Lord is merciful vnto them for his rygheousnesse saye: that his worde myght be magnified & glorified: But the people them selues is robbed and troden vnder the foote, chapynd in bondage, and they all (I saye) be shut into prison houses. * They be carped awaye cap-tyues, and noman doth loose them. They be troden vnder foote, & noman doth labour to loose them agayne. * But who is he amōg you that pōndreth this, that consydreth it, & saith it for a warnynge in tyme to come?

* Who suffred Jacob to be troden vnder foote, and Israel to be spoyled? Wpōd not the Lord? Because we haue synned agaynste him, and haue had no delste to walke in his lawes, neither bene obedient vnto his lawe.
Therefore he hath poured vpo him his wrath his displeasure and stronge battayle, which lyeth hym on euery syde, yet wyl he not vnderstande. He burneth hym vp, yet synketh it not into his herte.

The xliii. Chapter.

(God promysed to sende his Chyrch, which shuld purifie his people. He forspoke chaunce for his owne sake.)

Elt nowe, the Lord that made the, O Jacob, and he that fastioned the: O Israel, sayeth thus: I care not, for I haue redeemed the. * I haue called the by name, thou art myne owne. * If thou goest thoume f water, I wil be with the, that the thynge fonder shoulde not plucke the away.
* And if thou walkest thowme the fyre, it shall not burne the, and the flame shall not bynde vpon the. For I am f Lord thy God the holy one of Israel, thy Sauour. I gaue Egipt for thy deliuerance, the Moynans, & the Madeces for the: because thou wast deare in my syght, and because I set by the, and loued the. I wyl gyue ouer all men for the, and deliuer vp all people for thy sake, feare not:
for I am with the. * I wyl byynge thy seed to the East, and gather the together fro the West. I wyl saye to the South: let go. And to the South, hepe not backe: but byynge me my sonnes from farre, & my daughters fro the ends of f worlde. Namely all those that be called after my name. For them haue I created, fastioned, & made for myne honour.
* Byynge forth that people, which is blinde and yet hath eyes, which are deafe although they haue eares. * If all nations come in one and be gathered together: which amōge the shall declare such thynge, and tell vs what is to come. Let them byynge the: wptnesse shall they be free: eis, let them heare, and say: it is true. Pon at my wptnesse, (sayeth the Lord) and my seruauunt, whome I haue chosen: therefore be certified & gyue me sayth full credence: and consydre, * that I am he, before whome there was neuer any god, and that ther shalbe none after me. I am, euen I am the onely Lord: and beside me ther is no Sauour. I gaue warnynge, I made whole, I taught you, when there was no strange god amōge you. And this recorde must ye beare me your selues, (sayeth the Lord) that I am God. And euen he am I from the begynnyng, and * there is none that can take any thyng out of my hande. I do the worke and who shal be hable to let it.

Thus sayeth the Lord the holy one of Israel your redemer: * for your sake I haue let to Babylon, and brought downe the strongest of them. All they are fugityue with the Chaldees that boost them of the: they saye: Euen I the Lord your holy one which haue made Israel, and am your kyng. Thus sayeth the Lord: (* euen he that maketh a waue in the see, & a footpath in the myghty waters) * which byyngeth forth the char-rettes and hoyses, the hoost and the power of warre, that they may fal and neuer rise, and be extinct, lyke as towne is quenched.

Remembre not thynges of olde, and regarde nothing that is past: Beholde, I shal make a newe thyng, and secretly shal it appeare, and shall you not knowe it? I wyl make streets in the deserte, and ryuers of water in the wyldernesse: The wyldre beastes shall wo: they ppe me: the dragons, and the yong Estriches. * For I shal gyue water in the wyldernesse, and streames in the desert: that may gyue drinke to my people, who I chose.
This people haue I made for my selfe: and they shall shewe forth my prayse. For thou (Jacob) woldest not call vpon me, but thou haddest an vnlust towarde me, O Israel.

Thou gauest me not thy beastes for burnt offringes, neyther dydest thou honour me with thy sacrificies. Thou boughtest me no deare lyce with thy mony, neyther pourest the fat of thy sacrificies vpon me. * Howbeit, I haue not bene chargeable vnto the in offeringes, neyther greuous in incense. But thou hast hast laden me with thy synnes, and we-tyed me with thyn vngodlynesse.

* Where as I yet, eue I am he onely that for myne owne selues sake doo awaye thyn offices, and forget thy synnes: so that I wyl neuer thynke vpon them. But me now in re-membraunce (for we wyl reason together) and shewe what thou hast for the, to make the rygheous. * Thy fyist father offended me, and thy rulers haue synned agaynste me. Therefore, I eyther suspended, or slue the cheefest princes. I byd curse Jacob, and gaue Israel into reproche.

Chap.

The Prophecye

Chap. xlv. promysed to depute his church.

S Hearre now, O Jacob my seruuant, and Israel who I haue chosen, for thus sayeth the Lorde, that made the, fastioned the, and helped the, euen from thy mothers wombe. Be not afrayed, O Jacob my seruauant, thou sayest thus who I haue chosen. * For I shall poure water vpon the drye grounde, and riuers vpon the thyrstye. * I shall poure my spyrite vpon thy seede, and myne encrease vpon thy stocke. They shall growe together lyke as the grasse, and as the wyllowes by the waters syde. One shall saye: I am the Lordes.
Another shall call hym selfe after the name of Jacob. The thyrde shall subscrybe wryth his hande vnto the Lorde, and gyue hym self vnder the name of Israel.

Thus hath the Lorde spoken, euen the kyng of Israel and his redemer, the Lorde of hostes: * I am the fyrst and the last, and without me is there no god. If any be lyke me, let hym call for the the thynge past, and openly shewe it, and lay it playne before me, what hath it chaunced syns I appoynted the people of the worlde, and what shalbe shorty, or what shall come to passe in tyme longe to come, let them shewe these thynge. Be not abashed nor afrayed. For haue not I euer tolde you hyther to: and warned you? Ye can beare me recorde your selues. Is there anye god excepte me, or anye maker, that I shoulde not knowe hym?

All caruers of ymages are but vayne, and the carued ymages that they loue, can do no good. They must beare recorde them selues, that (seinge they can neyther se, nor vnderstande) they shalbe confounded. * Who dare then make a god, or fashion an ymage, that is profitable for nothyng? * Beholde, al the felowshyppe of them must be brought to co-fuspion. And truly all the workemasters of them are men, they shal all be gathered togy-ther, they shal stande, tremble, and be confounded one with another: The smith maketh an axe, and tempereth it with hoothe cooles, and fastioneth it with hammers, and worketh it with all the strength of his armes: yea, some time he is faynt for very hynge, and so thus saye, that he hath nomore power. The carpenter (or ymage caruer) taketh measure of the tymbre, and spreadeth forth his lyne: he marketh it with some colour, he playneth it, he ruleth it, & squareth it, and maketh it after the ymage of a mā: and accordyng to the beutie of a mā: yf it maye stande in the temple.

C Woodcutter, he goeth out to hewe downe cedre trees. He bynggeth home cymes and Oues: and takynge a bolde corage, he seketh out the best tymbre of the wood. He hym selfe hath planted a yvne tree, wherby the rayne hath welled, which wood serueth for me to burne. Of this he taketh and warmeth hym selfe withall: he maketh a fyre of it to bake bryed. And afterwarde maketh a god thereof, to honour it: and an ydol to knele before it.

One pece he burneth in yf fyre, with an other he roseth flesh, yf he maye eate roste his bely full: with the thyrde he warmeth hym selfe, and sayeth Aha, I am well warmed, I haue bene at yf fyre. And of the residue he maketh hym a god, & an ydol for hym selfe. He kneleth before it, he worshippeth it, he prayeth vnto it, & sayeth: deliuer me, for thou art my god.

* Yet men neyther cōspyre nor vnderstand, because they eyes be stopped, that they can not se: and they hertes, that they cannot perceyue. They pōndre not in they myndes, for they haue neyther knowledge nor vnderstandynge, to thynke thus. I haue byent one pece in the fyre, I haue baked bryed with the coles therof, I haue rosted flesh withall, and eaten it: shall I nowe of the residue make an abhomynable ydol, and fall downe before a rotten pece of wood? Thus he doth but lese his labour, and his herte whiche is dysceyued doth turne hym asyde: so that none of the can haue a fre cōscience to thynke: may not I erre?

Cōspyre this! O Jacob and Israel, for thou art my seruauant. I haue made the, that thou mightest serue me. O Israel, forget me not. * As for thyne offences, I haue dyscū-thym awaye, lyke the cloudes, and thy syn-nes as the myst. Turne the agayne vnto me for I haue redeemed the.

We glad ye heauens, who the Lorde hath made, for the Lorde hath dealeth graciouslye with his people, let all that is here beneth vpon the earth be ioyfull. Reioyse ye moun-taynes and wooddes, with all the trees ther-of: for the Lorde hath redeemed Jacob, and wyl shewe his gloype vpon Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde thy redemer, euen he that fas-tioned the from thy mothers wombe. * I the Lorde do all thynge my selfe alone. I only spredde out the heauens, and I onely haue layed the foundation of the earth by myne owne selfe. I destroye the tokens of wytyches and make the sothsayers fooles. As for the wyle, I tourne them backwarde, and make they conynge foolysynelle.

He doth let by purpose of his seruauant and fulfilleth the counsaile of his messengers. Concernyng Ierusalem, he sayeth: It shalbe inhabited. And of the cyties of Iuda: They shalde buylded agayne, and I wil repaye their decayed places: he sayeth to the ground: be drye. And I wyl drye by the waterfloodes. He sayeth of Egipt: he is myne herdman: so that he shall fulfyll all thynge after my wyl. He sayeth also of Ierusalem: It shalbe buylded, and of the temple: It shall be fast grounded.

haue made the earth, and created man vpon it. With myne handes haue I spred forth heauen, and gyuen a commaundement for all the host thereof. I shall wake him vp with rygh-tousnesse: and ordeyne all his wayes. * He it all I shall myde my cytie, and let out my prisoners: & that neyther for gyft nor rewardes, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. Thus sayeth the Lorde: The scorpions of Egypt, the marchautes of the Assyrians and Sabers, shall come vnto the weddyng, they shall be thyne, they shall fo-lowe the, & go with cheynes vpon theyr feet.
They shall fall downe before the, and make supplicacyon vnto the. For God (without whom there is none other god) shall be with the. * O how profound art thou O God, thou God and Saupour of Israel! Confounded are they all, and put to dishonoure: they are some hence together with shame, euen the makers of ymages. But Israel shall be saued in the Lorde, which is the euerlasting saluacyon.
He shall not come to shame nor confusyon worlde without ende. For thus sayeth the Lorde: * euen he that created heauen, & God that made the earth, that fashioned it, and set it forth. He dyd not make it for nought, but to be inhabited. Euen I the Lorde, without whom there is none other. * I haue not spoken secretly, neyther in darke places of the earth.

It is not for nought, that I sayde vnto the seed of Jacob: seke me. I am the Lorde, which when I speake, declare the thyng that is ryghtous and true: gather you, and come to-gyther, drawe nye hyther, you that escaped of the people. * Haue they any understandyng, that set vp the stocks of their ydols, & praye vnto a God, that can helpe the? draw nye, come hyther, and let them alke counsaile one at an other, and thewe forth. What is he that told this before? or who spake of it euer syns the begynnyng? haue not I the Lorde done it? * without whom there is none other God: the true God and Saupour, and there is els none but I. * And therefore turne you vnto me (all ye endes of the earth) that ye may be saued: for I am God, and there is els none.
I sweare by my selfe, out of my mouth commeth the worde of ryghtousnesse, and that make no mā turne: * but all knees shall bowe vnto me, and all tungen shall sweare by my name, sayyng: Verely, in the Lorde is my ryghtousnesse and strength. To hym shall men come: but all they that thynke scozne of hym, shall be confounded. And the hole seed of Israel shall be iustified, and make theyr boost in the Lorde.

The xlvi. Chapter.

Abolacyon is expounded. The death that cometh by Chyrt is prophesied.

Bel is fallen, Babel is broke downe whose ymages were a burthen for the beastes and cattell, to ouerlade them, and to make the wey. They are sonke downe, and falle together, for they maye not ease them of theyr burthen, therfore must they go into captiuitie.

Harken vnto me, O house of Jacob, and all ye that remaine yet of the householde of Israel: whom I haue bozne from your mothers wombe, and brought you vp fro your byrth, tyll ye were grownen. I, which shall beare you vnto your last age. I haue made you: I wyl also noyssh the you, beare you, and saue you. * Whom wyl ye make me lyke, or to whom wyl ye make me equall or compare me that I shoulde be lyke hym, in falschyp or ymage, that I maye be lyke him? * Ye foolers (no doubt) wyl take out syluer and gold out of your purses, and weye it, and byge a goldsmith to make a god of it: that men maye knele downe and worshippe it. * Yet must he

The. xlviii. Chapter.

The bypocryse of the Jewes is reuioued. The Lorde alidone wyl be wyddowed, which hath chosen be, and which securreth be to his owne sake.

Care this, O thou house of Jacob, ye that are called by the name of Israel, and are come out of one Roche with Juda: whiche swore by the name of the Lorde, and beate wytnesse by God of Israel (but not with truthe & ryght) which are called * free men of the holy cyrie, and are grounded vpon the God of Israel, * whose name is the Lorde of hostes.

The thinges that I shewed you euer syns the begynnyng haue I not brought them to passe immediatlye as they came oute of my mouth, and declared them, & they are come. Howbeit, I knowe that thou art obstinate, and that thy necke hath an yron veyne, and that thy byrde is of byasse. Neuerthelesse, I haue euer syns the begynnyng shewed the of thinges for to come, and declared them vnto the, or euer they came to passe: that thou shaldest not say: myne ydol hath done it, my carued or molten ymage hath shewed it. Thou herdest it before & beholde, it is come to passe and whether can ye prophete of thynges to come: But as for me I told the before at the begynnyng, nowe and secretly thynges that thou knowest not of. * And some done nowe not of olde tyme, wherof thou neuer heardest before they were brought to passe: that thou canst not saye: Beholde, I knewe of them: Moreouer, there be some wherof thou hast neither herde noz knowen, neyther haue they bene opened vnto thyne eares afore tyme. For I knewe that thou wouldest maliciously offende, therfore haue I called the a transgressour, euen from thy mothers wombe.

Reuerthe

Acuerthelesse, for my names sake, I wyl wylde my wylde: & it shalbe for my honour sake, yf I pacyently forbeare the, & do not take the out. Beholde, I haue pouged y not as syluer. * I haue chosen the in y fier of affliction: & that only for myne owne sake ye: euen for myne owne sake wyl I do this wylde, what dishonoure wolde they do to my name: herken vnto me, O Jacob, and Israel whome I haue called.

C whiche hath layde the foundacon of the the heauens. As one as I call them they are there. Gather you all together, and herken: wylde of yonder goddess hath declared this:

The Lorde hath a loue vnto him, and he shal performe bys wyl agaynst Babel, and destroy his power agaynst the Chaldees. I my ye and heare this: haue I spoken any thyng luchly, since the begynnyng: when a thing begynneth, I am there.

Wherefoze, the Lorde God and his spete hath sent me. And thus sayth the Lorde God the redeemer, the holy one of Israel. I am the Lorde thy God, which teach the * profytable thynges, and leade the thy waye, that y shul mmandementes, then had thy welthyng bene

Babilon, lyke from the Chaldees with a menyng speake of thyng, declare it a broode, & go forth vnto y ende of the world, saye: The Lorde hath redemed his seruante Jacob, that he suffered no thurst, he leade them thowow the wyldernes, and caused y waters to flow out vnto them from out of y rock. * He claue the rocke a sondze, and the water gushed out as for the yngodly, they haue no peace, say the Lorde.

Elpes, herken vnto me, and take bede ye people from fere. The Lorde hath called me from my birth, and made men yon of my name fro my mothers wombe: he hath made my mouth: lyke a swarpe sword vnder the shadowe of his hande hath he deff me, and yd me in his quyer as a good warde, and sayde vnto me. Thou art te my seruante Israel. * I wyl be honoured in the.
Then answered I: I haue losse my labour, I haue spent my strength in wayne.

Acuertheles I wyl comyt my cause & my woyche vnto the Lorde my God. And nowe sayeth the Lorde, euen he that hath yoned me fro my mothers wombe to be his seruante, y I maye bynging Jacob agayne vnto him: how beit Israel wyl not be gathered vnto hym agayne. In whose syght I am great, which also is my Lorde, my God and my strength.
And he sayde: it is but a small thyng that y art my seruante, to sette by the hyurednes of Jacob, and to restore the destruccyon of Israel. * For I haue made the y lyght of the Gen-tyls, that y mayst be my helth vnto the ende of the world.

Wherefoze, thus sayth the Lorde the redemer and holy one of Israel: because of the ab-horryng and despysing amonge the Gentyles, concernyng the seruante of all them that beare rule. Kynges and Prynces shal se, and arple and worship, because of the Lorde that is saythful: and because of the holy one of Israel, which hath chosen the. And thus saith y Lorde: * In the tyme accepted haue I hearde the, and in the daye of saluacyn haue I helped the. * I wyl preserve the and make the to be the attonement of the people, y thou mayst helpe vp y earth agayne: and possesse agayne the desolate herytages. * That thou mayst saye to the prisoners: go forth, and to them y are in darcknes: come into y lyght, they shal se in the hye wayes, and get theyre pasture in all hye places.

* They shal nether hunger, nor thurst, heat nor colde shal not hurt the. For he y fauoreth them, & all leade them, & geue them drinke of the spring wels. I wyl make wayes vpon al my mountaynes, and my fote pathes shalbe exalted. And beholde, they shal com from far lo, some from the north and west, some from the lande of Sinis, whiche is in the south.
* Reioyce ye heauens: & syngye prayles, thou earth. Talke of loye ye hylls, for God hath conforted his people, & wyl haue mercy vpon his that he in trouble.

But Sion sayde: * God hath forsaken, & my Lorde hath forgotten me. Wyl a wyfe forget the childe of her wombe, and not pitie the sonne whom she hath bozne: And though she do forget, yet wyl I not forget the. Be-holde, I haue wyrtten y vp vpon my handes thy wals are euer in my syght. They make haste to buylde the vp agayne. As for those that ouerthrew the, and made the wast, they shal departe from the. * Lyfte vp thyne

They shal byrnyng the chyldren in theyr lap-pers: and carpe thy daughters vnto the vpon theyr shoulders. For kynge shall be thy nur-syng fathers, & Quenes shal be thy nursyng mothers. They shal sal before the with their faces flatte vpon the earth: and lycke vp the dust of thy fete: that thou mayst knowe how that I am the Lord. * And who so putteth his trust in me, shal not be confounded. Who spoyled the Spawnt of his praye: or who tak-eth the pylsoner from my gyfte? And thershal be taken from the gyaunt: and the spoyles deliuered from the violence, for I wyl maynteyne thy cause agaynst thynne aduersaries, and saue thy sonnes. And wyl fede thynne enemye wth theyr owne flesch, & make them drinke of theyr owne bloud: as of swete wyne. And all fleshe shal knowe, O Jacob, that I am I Lord thy sayour, thy noble redeemer.

The I. Chapter.

The Arwes are retyoned, and also called.

Thus sayth the Lord: * where is I byll of your mothers deuorment that I sent her a waye: or who is I vsurer, to whom I solde you? * Behold for your owne offences are ye solde, and because of poure transgressyon, is poure mother forsaken. For why wolde no man receaue me, when I came: and when I called, no man gaue me answer. * Is my hande shortned that it myghte not helpe: or haue I not power to deliuer: lo, eat a worde I dryncke vp the see, * and of waterfloodes I make drye land: so that for want of water the fy: corrupte and dye for thirste. * As for heauen, I clothe it with darcknes, and put as it were a sacke vpon it.

The Lord God hath geuen me a wel leaned tonge, * so that I can comforte the which are troubled: yea, and that in due season, he wakeneth myne care vp by tymes in the monyng: by tymes in the moynge. I saye: he wyl waken myne care, that I mighte herken as to the scole masters. * The Lord god hath opened myne care, therfore can I not saye: nape, nor wep: as we my selfe: * but I offre my backe vnto the smiters, and my chekes to the nyppers. * I turne not my face fro shame and spytyng: & the Lord God shal helpe me therfore shal I not be confounded. I haue bar-dened my face lyk a stony stone, for I am sure I shal not come to confusyon. He is at hande that iustifieth me, who wyl then geue me to lawe: Let vs stande one agaynst another: yf there be any I wyl reason wth me, let hym come here forth to me. * Behold, I Lord god stander by me, what is he then that can condempne me: lo, * they shal be all lyke as an olde cloth, the moth shal eat them vp.

Therfore, who so feareth I Lord among you, let hym heare the voyce of his seruante, Who so walketh in darcknes, and no lighte shyneth vpon hym, lette hym put his trust in the name of the Lord, and holde hym by his God. But take hede, ye all kynde a fyre of the wrath of God, and strare by the cooles: walke on in I glysternge of your owne fyre and in the cooles I ye haue kyndled. This cometh vnto you fro my hand, namely I ye shal sleepe in sorowe.

The II. Chapter.

Of consolacion and comforte is promysed vnto the sayth full.

Herken vnto me, ye I holde of right teousnes, & ye that seke the Lord.
Take hede vnto I stone, wherout ye are broken, & to the graue wherout ye are digged. Consolre: * Aba-ham your father & Sara that bare you: how I called hym alone, & blessed hym, & encrea-sed hym. Therfore shal I Lord comfort Shon and repayre all her decay: making her desert as a paradise: & her wilderness as I garde of the Lord. With I Ioye shal be founde there, thakelgeuynge & the voyce of prayse. Haue respect vnto me the, O my people both bygh & lowe and laye thine care to me: * for a law & an ordinaunce shal go forth fro me, to lyghte the Gentyls. It is harde by that my healeth & my ryghteousnes shal go forth, & the people shal be ordred with myne arme.

The plandes, I is the Gentyls, shal hope in me, and put their trust in myne arme. Lys-t vp your eyes toward heauen, and loke vpo the earth beneth. * For the heauens shal vanysh awaye lyke smoke, and the earth shal ware olde lyke a cloth, & they I dwell therein shal perishe in lyke maner. But my saluaci-on shal endure for euer, and my ryghteousnes shal not cease. Herken vnto me ye that haue pleasure in righteousnes, I people that I bea-rest my law in thynne heart. * Feare not I cru-eltye of men: be not afrayde of theyr blasphemys and reuylnges: * for woymes & mothes shal eat them vp lyke cloth & wol. But my ryghteousnes shal endure for euer, & my sayynge helth from generacion to generacion. Make vp, wake vp, and be strong. O thou arme of I Lord, wake vp: lyke as in tyme past, curhym whiche is my ryghteous seruaunte: he shall inlyte the multitude, for he shall beare awaye they synnes. Therfore wpll I gene hym the multitude for hys parte: and he shall deuyde the spoyle with the strongest, because he geueth ouer his soule to death: * And is re-kened amonge the transgressours, which ne-uerthelesse hath taken awaye the synnes of y multitude, and made intercessyon for them doers.

The liiii. Chapter.

Of the great domynion of Chypt. The indignacy-on of God endureth but a shorte space: but his mercye is euerslastyng.

BE glad now, * thou barren y bea-rest not, reioyce: syng, and be merept thou that arte not with chyldre: for the desolate hath many chyldren then the married wyfe, sayth y Lord. Make thy tentes wyder, and spredde out the hangynges of thine habitacon: spare not, laye forth thy cordes, and make fast thy stakes: for thou shalt be multiplied on the ryght syde & on the left, and thy sede shall haue the Gentyles in possession and dwell in the desolate cyties.

Feare not, for thou shalt not be confounded: Be not ashamed, for thou shalt not come to confusyon. Yee, thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth, & shalt not remember the disho-noure of thy wydowheade. For he y made y shall be thy Lord, * & husband (whose name is: the Lorde of hostes) & thy redemer shall be cuen the holy one of Israell: the Lorde of the whole worlde. For the Lorde hath called the beyng as a desolate sorowfull woman, & as a yonge wyfe that hath broken her wedlocke sayth the Lord.

* A litle whyle haue I forsaken the, but a greate mercyfulnes shall I take the vpon me. When I was angry, I hpd my face from thee for a lytle season, but thyow euerslastyng mercye haue I pardoned the, sayth the Lorde thy redemer. * And this is vnto me as y water of Noe: for lyke as I haue sworne that I wpll not byrnyng the water of Noe any more vpon the worlde: so haue I sworne y I wpll neuer be angry with the, nor reppone y: the mountaynes shall remoue, & the hylls shall fall downe: but my louyng kyndnes shall not moue, and the bonde of my pce shall not fal downe from the: sayth the Lorde thy mercyfull louer. Beholde the poore, overwhelmed with tempest and without comforte. I wpll make thy walles of prepyous stones, and thy foundacyon of Sapphyres, thy wyndowes of Chrystal, thy gates of tyne cleare stone: & all thy borders of pleasaunt stones.

* Thy chyldren shall all be taught of god, & I wpll geue them plenteousnes of peace. In ryghteousnes shalt y be grounded, & be farre from oppresyon: for the whiche thou needest not be affrayde, nether for bynderaunce, for it shall not come nye the. Beholde, the alcaunt that was farre from me, shall dwel with the and he y loynerh a batayle agaynst the shall pe-rysh. Beholde, I make the limpth that bloweth the coles in the fyr, and he maketh a wea-pen after his handy worcke. I make also the waster to destroye: but all the weapens that are made agaynst the: shall not prosper.
* And as for all tonges, y shall respyt y in iudgment, y shalt overcome them, & condecyrne them. This is the herirage of the Lordes ser-uautes, and theye ryghteousnes cometh of me, sayth the Lorde.

Behold, I gaue hym for a wytnes amōge the folke, for a Dynce and captayne vnto þe people. Lo thou shalt call an vnkowne prophet, and a people þe had no knowledge of the, shall come vnto the: because of the Lord thy God, and the holy one of Israel, which gloryfyeth the Lord, while he maye be found: and call vpon hym while he is nye.

Let the vngodlye man forsake his owne ways, & the vnyghteous his owne ymaginacions, and turne agayne vnto þe Lord: so shall he be mercifull vnto hym: & to our God he is very ready to forgive.

and grene, that it maye geue corne vnto the sower, and breed to him that eateth. So the word also that cometh out of my mouth: shall not turne agayne void vnto me, but shall accomplishe my wyl and prosper in þe thyng whereto I sende it.

Also shall ye go forth with ioye, & be led wth peace. The mountaynes & hyls shall syng wth you for ioye, and all the trees of the felde shall dance wth your handes. For thornes there shall growe fyre trees, and the thorne tree in the house of thornes. And this shall be done to the people of the Lord, and for an euerlastyng to you that shall not be taken awaye.

The lvi. Chapter.

righteousnes shall be opened.

Blessed is the man that doth this that he do no euil. Then shall not the straunger which cleaueth to the Lord, saye: * Alas the Lord hath quyte me cleane out from his people. Neither shall the gilded man saye: I am a wyne tree. For thus sayth the Lord the gilded that keepeth my Sabbath.

The Prophecy

E When thou haddest dyscouered thy selfe to another then me, when thou wentest vp & made thy bed wyder, and with those foolles hast thou made a couenaunt, & louedest they? couches, where thou sawest them. Thou wastest streygth to kynges with oyle & dyuerse oymmentes (that is) thou hast sent thy nief saungers farre of, & yet art thou fallen into ppytte therby. Thou art wry for the multitude of thyne owne wayes, yet saydest thou neuer: I wyl leane of. * Thou hast had the lyfe that thy handes wroughte, and therfore thou art carelesse. For when wylt thou be abashed or feare, seying thou hast broken thy promise, and remembrest not me, nether hast me in thy herte. Thyngest thou, that I also wyl hold my peace (as afore tyme) that thou fearest me not? Pee, verely I wyl declare thy goodnes and thy workes, but they shall not p:ofyte the: when thou cryest, let thy chosen heape deliuer the. But the wynde shal blow them furth, and vanyte shal take them all awaye. * Securthelesse, they that put theyr trust in me, shal inherite the lande: & haue my holy hyll in possession.

D And therfore thus he sayeth: * Make playne, make playne: & cleanse the strete, take vp the stumbleng blockes out of the waye & leadest to my people. For thus sayth the hye and excellent, even he that dwelleth in euertlastyngnesse, whose name is the holy one: * I dwell hye aboue: and in the Sanctuary, and with hym also, that is of a contryte and humble sprete do I dwell: & I maye heale a troubled mynde, & a contryte herte. * For I chpde not euer, and am not wroth without ende. But the blasfym goth from me: and is included in the bodye, and I made the breath. I am wroth with hym for his couetousnes. I Smyte hym I hyde me, and am angrey, when he turneth hym selfe, & foloweth the by way of his owne herte. I haue sene his wayes and I heale hym. * I leade hym and restore to him conforste, and to those that were soyr w hym I make the fruytes of thankesgeyng, that he maye saye. Peace peace: vnto them that are farre of, and to them that are nye, sayeth the Lorde, and I make hym whole. But the wycked are lyke the ragyng see, that cannot rest, whose water someth with the myze and grauell. * Euen so the wycked haue no peace, sayth god.

The lviij. Chapter.

E The Lorde by the mouth of the prophet Ieremye sheweth the people for theyr lackynges, whiche were full of hy: pocrisie.

E Xpe: now, as loude as I canst leaue not of, lyfte vp thy voyce lyke a trompet, & shewe my people theyr offences, & the house of Jacob their sines. For they seke me daylye, and wyl knowe my wayes, euen as it were a people that dyd ryghte, and had not forsaken the statutes of their God. They argue with me concerning ryght indgement and wyl be nye vnto God. * Wherfore faste we (saye they) and thou seyst it not: we put oure lyues to straitnes, and thou regardest it not.

* Beholde, when ye fast, your lust remayneth styll: for ye do no lesse violence to your betters: lo, ye fast to strife and debate, and to Smyte with the spyle of wyckednesse. Nowe ye shall not fast thus that your voyce myght be hearde aboue. * Thyngke ye this fast please me, that a man shulde chaften hym selfe for a daye, and to wryth his head about lyke an hop, and to lye vpon the earth in an heary cloth? Shulde that be called fastyng, or a daye that please the Lorde? Worth not this fastyng rather please me, that I looke hym out of bondage, that is in thy daungre: that thou breake the orde of wycked bargaynes: that thou let the oppressed go fre, & take from them all maner of burthens: * to deale thy bread to the hungry, & byngne & poore wandering, home into thy house: when thou seest the naked that I couer hym, & hyde not thy face from thy neygbbour. (And desyre not thyne owne flesch.)

* Then shall thy lyght breake forth as in the morninge, & thy health shal be ryght shortly: thy ryghteousnes shall go before the, and the glory of the Lorde shall embrace the.

* Then yt thou callest, the Lorde shal answer the: yf thou cryest, he shall saye, here I am. Pee, yf I layst a waye from the thy burthens, and holdest thy fingers, & ceasest from blasphemous talkyng, * yf thou hast charyty vpon the hungry, & refrehest the troubled soule. Then shall thy lyght spryng out in the darchnesse, & thy darchnesse shal be as in none daye. The Lord shal euer be thy guyde, and satysfy & desyre of thyne hert in the tyme of drougt & fyl thy bones with mary. * Thou shalt be lyke a fresh watred garden: & lyke a fountayn of water, & neuer leauest runnyng. Then the places I haue euer bene wast, shal be buylded of the: there shalt I lape a foundation for many kindes. Thou shalt be called the maker by of hedges, & the buylder agayn of the waye of the Sabbath.

Pee, yf thou turne thy fete in the Sabbath, so that thou do not the thyng which please thy selfe in my holy daye: & thou call the pleasaunte holy, and glorious Sabbath of the Lorde, and that thou geue him the honoure, so that thou do not after thyne owne ymaginacion, neyther seke thyne owne wyl nor speake thyne owne wordes. Then shalt thou haue thy pleasure in the Lorde, and I wyl carpe the hye aboue the carthe, and fede the with the herbage of Jacob thy father: for the Lordes owne mounte hath so promysed.

The 12. Chapter.

The Lord is my hope to save, and ready to hear my cryes.

Behold * the Lordes hand is not so shortened * that it can not helpe, neyther is his care so stopped that it may not heare. But your misdedes haue seperated you from God, & your synnes hyde his face from you, that he heareth you not. For your hands are defiled with bloude, and your synnes with vnyghteousnes. Your lyps speak vngodlynes, and your tonge letteth out wyckednes. So man regardeth vnyghteousnes, and no man iudgeth truly. Euery man hopeth in his chynge, and ymagineth disceit * conuinceth werynelle, and byngeth forth euell. They brede Cockatryce egges, and weaue the lymbers webbe: Who so eateth of the egg, dyeth. But of one treade vpon them: they cometh vpon a serpent. They webbe naked no clothe, and they maye not couer them with theyr labours. They dedes are full of wyckednes, and the worke of robbery is in theyr hādes. * They fete runne to euill, and they make haste to shedde innocent bloude, theyr counceils are wycked counceils, and destruccyon are in theyr wayes. For the waye of peace they knowe not. In the goinges is no equite: thei wayes are so crooked: that who soeuer goeth therein, knoweth of no peace.

And this is the cause that equite is so far from vs, and that ryghteousnes cometh not vnto vs. * We loke for lycht, lo: it is darke. For the moorninge syne: se, we walke in the darke. * We grope lyke the blynde vpon the walles, we grope euen as one that hath no eyes. We stumbe at the none daye, as though it were toward nyght: in the falling place, lyke men that are halfe deed. We rooie all lyke Beares, and mozne still lyke dones. We loke for egyptie, but there is none: for healt, but it is farre from vs. For oure synnes are many before the, and our synnes haue agaynst vs. Pee, we must confesse that we are vnde, & knowledg that we do amysse: namely, transgresse and dyscembles agaynst the Lord, and fall awaye from oure God by vngodly presumption and trayterous ymagynacions, and castinge false matters in oure iustes. And therfore is egyptie gone aspyde, and ryghteousnes standeth farre of, * truethe is fallen downe in the strete, and the chynge that is playne and open, maye not be shewed. For truethe is taken awaye, and he that refrayneth from lye from euill, must be spoiled. When the Lord sawe this, he displeased him, for there was no equite. He sawe also, that there was no man, ryghtwys, & he wondred, for there was no man to helpe hym. Wherefore he seide hym by hys owne powder, and he stayned hym by his owne righteousnes. * He put ryghteousnes vpon hym for a brest plate, he set the helmet of health vpon his head. He put on wrath in steade of clothyng, and toke gelousy about hym for a cloke: (lyke as whē a man goeth forth warshfully to recompence his enemyes, & to be auenged of his aduersaries.) Namely that he myght recompence and reward the Ilandes, where the name of the Lord might be feared, from the rising of the Sunne and his maistie, vnto the goinge downe of the same.

For he shal come as a violet waterstreame, whiche the wynde of the Lord hath moued. * But vnto Sion there shall come a redeemer, and vnto them in Jacob that turne from wyckednes sayeth the Lord. I will make this couenaunt with them, (sayth the Lord) I will speete that is vpon the, and the wordes whiche I haue put in thy mouth, shall neuer go out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy chylders chyldren, from this tyme forth: for euermoze worlde without ende, sayth the Lord.

I haue set watchemen vpon thy walles (O Ierusalem) which shall neither cease day nor nyght to preache the Lorde. And yet also that remembre the Lorde, yet shall not kepe him close, nor leane to speake of him vntill Ieru-salem be set by, and made þe prayse of þe worlde.
The Lorde hath sworne by his right hande and by his stronge arme, that fro hence forth he will not greeue thy come to be meate for thyne enemyes, nor thy vyne (wherein thou hast laboured) to be drinke for the straungers.
But they that haue gathered in the corne, shall eate it, and greeue thanks to the Lorde, and they that haue boorne in the vyne, shall drinke it in the court of my Sanctuarie.

So you, go you thorow þe gates, make cleare the waye for the people, make playne, make playne the foorpath, and take a way þe stones out of it, and set out a token for the people.

Beholde, the Lorde proclaymeth vnto the mes of the worlde: *tell the daughter Sep-har, thy Shannour commeth: beholde, he bringeth his treasure with him, and his workes before hym. For they whom the Lorde reuereneth, shall be called the holy people: & thy name, thou shalt be named the great Ipe scaped, and not the forsaken cytie.

The lxxiiij. Chapter.

Of the conception promysed to the people.

What is he this, that cometh fro Edom with red coloured clothes of Bosra?
(which is so costlye cloth) and cometh in so myghty with al his strength. I am he that treadeth rightousnesse, & am of power to helpe. Wherefore then is thy clothynge red, and thy rayment like his that treadeth in the wyne presse? I haue troden the presse my self alone, and of al people there is not one to me.
Thus will I treade downe myne enemyes in my wrath, and set my feete vpon them in my indignacion. And they, bloude shall be sponge vpon my clothes, and so will I stayne my rayment. * For the daye of vengeance is assigned in my hert, and the yere where my people shall be deliuered is come. I looked about me, and there was noman to shew me my helpe: I maruailed that noman held me by. Then I helde me by myne owne arme, and my feruentnesse sustayned me. And thus will I treade downe the people in my wrath and bathe them in my displeasure, and vpon the earth will I laye theyr strength.

I will declare the goodnesse of þe Lorde, and the prayse of the Lorde for al that he hath giuen vs, for the great good þe hath done for Israel: whiche he hath giuen them of his owne fauour, and accordyng to þe mallice of his louing kindnesse. For he sayd: There, no doubt are my people, and no strain-ge children, and so was theyr shannour.

In theyr troubles, he was also troubled w them, and the aungell þe went forth from his presence deliuered them: Of very loue & kind-nesse þe had vnto them, he redeemed the. He hath boorne them and carped the vp, euer sith the worlde began. But after they prouoked hym to wrath, and vered his holy mynde, he was theyr enemye, and fought agaynst the him self. Yet remembred Israel the olde tyme of Moses and his people, & sayinge: Where is he that brought them from the water of þe se: with them that fede his shepe? where is he that hath gyue his holpe sponne amonge them: he led them by the ryghe hand of Moses with his glorious arme: denyng þe water before them: whereby he gat him selfe an euerlastyng name: he led them in the depe, as an horse is led in the playne, þe they shuld not stumble, as a tame beast goeth in the felde: & the breath giuen of God, gyueth hym rest.

Thus (O God) hast thou led thy people, to make thy selfe a glorious name withall.
* Loke downe then from heauen, and behold the dwelling place of thy Sanctuarie, & thy glory. How is it þe thy gelously, thy strength, the multitude of thy mercyes, & thy louynge kindnesse, wyl not be entreated of vs: Yet art thou * our father. For Abraham knoweth vs not, neyther is Israel acquainted w vs.
But thou Lorde art our father and redeemer, and thy name is euerlastyng. O Lorde, when fore hast thou led vs out of thy way: * Where fore hast thou hardened oure hertes, that we feare the not: We at one with vs agayne, for thy seruantes sake, and for the generacyon of thyne heritage. Thy people haue had but a lye of thy sanctuarie in possession, for oure enemyes haue troden downe the holpe place.
And we were thyne from the begynnyng: when thou wast not theyr Lorde, for they haue not called vpon thy name.

The lxxv. Chapter.

The prophete (under the person of the Arwes) bewepeth theyr cyle and banishment, and prayeth for the a cloth bespiled with the flowers of a woman.

That thou woldest cleane the heauen in sondre, and come downe: that the mountaynes myght melte awaye at thy presence, lyke as at an hot fyre: and that the malicious might boile as the water doth vpon the fyre. Whereby thy name myght be knowne amonge thyne enemyes, and that the Gentyles myght tremble before the.

When thou wroughtest wondrous strange workes, we looked not for the. Thou camest downe, and the hylls melted at thy presence.
For sith þe begynnyng of the worlde it hath not ben harde or perceyued, * neyther hath any eye sene an other god belyde the: whiche doest so much for the, þe put theyr trust in the.

Thou helpest hym that doeth righte w wayes. But lo, thou hast bene angry, for we offended, and haue ben euer in synne, though the worlde hath cleaued to them: * yet shall we be saued. We are all as an vnclene thing and all our ryghtousnesse are as the clothes stayned with the floures of a womā: we fall euerychone as the leafe, for our synnes carpe vs awaye lyke the wynde. There is noman that calleth vpon thy name, that standeth vp to take holde by the. Therefore hydest thou thy face from vs, and consumest vs by cause of our synnes.

But nowe, O Lord, thou father of ours * we are thy claye, and thou art our potter, & we all are the worke of thy handes. * Be not to soze displeased (O Lord) and kepe not our offences to longe in thy remembraunce, but consyde that we all are thy people. The cyties of thy Sanctuary lye waste. * Syon is a wyldernesse, and Ierusalem a desert. Our holy house which is our beautye, where our fathers prayled the, is bent vp: yea, all our comodities and pleasures are wasted away. Wilt thou not be intreated (Lord) for al this? Wilt thou not holde thy peace, & scourge vs so soze?

The. lxx. Chapter.

The felicitye of Ierusalem: and the calyng of the wythen.

* Iep seke me, & hytherto haue not alked for me: they fynd me that hytherto haue not sought me. I haue sayd: I am here, & I am here. I am fowde of a people that neuer called vpon my name. For thus longe haue I euer holde out myne handes to an vnfaithful people & go not & right way, but after their owne ymaginacō. To a people & is euer despyng me to my face. * They make theyr oblations in gardens, and theyr smoke vpon aulteris of bypcke, they lurke a-mōge & graues, & lye in the dēnes all nyght. * They eate swynes flesch: & vnclene bysch is in theyr vessels. If thou comest nye the, they say: touch me not, for I am holper then thou.

All these men when I am angrye, shall be turned to smoke & * fyre that shall burne for euer. Beholde, it is writen befoze my face, & shall not be forgotten, but recompensed. * I shall rewarde it them in to theyr bosome: I meane pour mysededes, and the mysededes of poure fathers togyther (sayeth the Lord) which haue made their smokes vpon & most saynes, and blasphemed me vpon the hilles: therfore wil I measure their olde dedes into theyr bosom agayne. Moreover, thus sayth the Lord: * lyke as whentone wolde gather holpe grapes, men saye vnto hym: bzeake it not of, for it is holy: & euen so wyll I doo also for my seruantes sakes, that I wyll not destroye them all. But I wyll take a seed oute of Jacob & out of Iuda one, to take possessiō of my hyl. My chosen shall possesse these thyn ges, & my seruantes shall dwel there. Sharon shall be a shepfold, & * the valleye of Achor shall growe & shalling for the cattel of my people that feare me. * but as for youye at theyr that haue forsake & Lord, and forgotten my holy hyl. Ye haue set vp an aulter vnto Jupiter, & gyue ryche dyynkoffrynges vnto the planetes. Therefore wyll I nombze you with the swerde, that ye shall be destroyed altogether. For when I called, noman gaue me answer: whē I spake, ye herkened not vnto me but vpon wyckednesse befoze myne eyes, and chose the thyng that pleased me not.

Therefore, thus sayth the Lord God: Be holde, my seruantes shall eate, but ye shall haue hungre: Beholde, my seruantes shall dyynke, but ye shall suffre thyrst. Beholde, my seruantes shall be merry, but ye shall be founden. Beholde, my seruantes shall reioyse for very quyetnesse of hert: But ye shall crye for sozow of hert, and cōplayne for veraciō of mynde. Your name shall ye leaue accursed amonge my chosen, for God the Lord shall slaye you, and cal his seruantes by an other name. * Whoso reioysed vpon earth, shall reioyse in the true God. And whoso sweareth vpon erth, shall sweare in the true God. For the olde enmytie shall be forgotten, and taken away out of my sight. * For lo, I shall make a newe heauen and a newe earth. And as for the olde, they shall neuer be thought vpon, nor kept in mynde: but the Lord sayth: be glad and euermore reioyse: for the thyngs that I shall do.

For why? Beholde, I shall make a ioyful Ierusalem, and his people ioyfull: yea, I my selfe wyll reioyse with Ierusalem, and be glad with my people. * And the voyce of weeping and waylyng shall not be heard in her from thence forth. There shall neuer be chyldre nor olde man, that haue not theyr full dayes. But when the chyldre cometh to an hundred yere olde it shall dye. And yf he that is an hundred yere of age do wronge, he shall be cursed. * They shall buylde houses, and dwel in the: they shall plant vyneyardes, and eate & frute of them. They shall not buylde, and an other possesse: they shall not plāt, and an other eat: * But yfste of my people shall be lyke a tree, and so shall the worke of theyr handes.

My chosen shall lye longe, they shall not labour in wayne, nor beget with trouble: for they are the hye blessed seed of the Lord, and theyr frutes with them. And it shall be, that oz euer they call, I shall answer them.

Whyle they are yet but thynnyng how to speake, I shall heare them. * The wolfe & the lambe shall fede togyther, and the Lyon shall eate harte lyke the bullocke. * But earth shall be the serpentes meate. There shall no man hurte nor slaye an other, in all my holpe byll, sayth the Lord.

Thus shall the hande of the Lorde be knowne amonge his seruantes, and his indignacyon amonge his enemyes. For behold, the Lorde shall come with fyre, and his charret shall be lyke a whizzle wynde, that he may receiue his vengeance in his wrath, and his indignacyon with the flame of fyre. The Prophecye

The booke of the prophete Jeremie.

The fyrst Chapter.

The booke of Jeremie, and in what tyme he prophesied. He receiveth hym selfe, and weide refuse the office of a prophete, because he is yonge and vncircumcised. He is taught of the Lord, and becometh bold. And openeth vnto hym, that the destruction of the Kinges (by the Babylonians) is at hand. Jeremie is comynge vnto to speake the worde of God vnto the Jewes without feare.

* Jerom. xl. a

These are the sermons of Jeremie the sonne of helkiah the priest, one of them that dwelt at Ana tho in the land of Ben Jamin when the Lord had fyrst spoken with hym in the tyme of Josiah the sonne of Amon kynge of Juda, in the .xiii. yere of his raigne: and so durynge vnto the tyme of Jehoshaphat the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, and vntyl the .xi. yere of zedekiah the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda were ended: when Jerusalem was taken, even in the fyfth moneth. The worde of the Lord spake thus vnto me: * Before I fashioned y in thy mothers wombe, I byd knowe the. And o ever thou wast bozne, I sanctified the, and ordeyned the to be a prophete vnto the people. Then sayd I: * Oh Lord God, I cannot speake, for I am yet but yonge. And the Lord answered me thus. Saye not so, I am yonge: * For thou shalt go to all that I shall sende the vnto, & whatsoever I commaunde the, that shalt thou speake. Be not afrayed of theyr faces, for I am with the, to deliuer the sayeth the Lord.

* And with that, the Lord stretched oute his hand, and touched my mouth, & the same Lord sayde vnto me. Beholde, I put my wordes in thy mouth, and beholde, this day do I set the ouer the people and kyngdomes, that thou mayest roote oute, bryake of, destroy and make waste: and that thou mayest buyde vp and plant. After this, the Lord spake vnto me, saying: Jeremie, what seest thou? And I sayd: I se a rod of an almonde tree. Then sayd the Lord vnto me: thou hast sene ryght, for I wyll make haste speidelye vpon my worde, to perfourme it.

* i. r. d. ii. b

It happened afterwarde, that the Lord spake to me agayne, and sayde: What seest thou? And I sayde: I do se a letyngge pot. lokynge from out of the North.

Then sayde the Lord vnto me: Out of the North shall come a plage vpon al ydwellers of the lande. For lo, I wyll call all the kindredes of the kyngdomes of y north (sayeth the Lord:) And they shall come, & euery one shall set his seate in the gates of Jerusalem, and in all theyr walles rounde about, & in al y cities of Juda. And thozowe them shall I declare my iudgement, vpon all the wicked-neste of those men that haue forsaken me: that haue burnt incense vnto straunge goddes, & worshipped y workes of theyr owne handes.

* And therfore gyde vp thy loynes, arse and tell them all, that I gyue the in commaundement. Feare them not, lest I destroye the before them. * For beholde, this daye doo I make the a stronge defenced towne, an yonpyller, and a bialen wall agaynst the whole lande, agaynst the kynges and myghty men of Juda, agaynst the priestes and people of y lande. They shall fight agaynst the: but they shall not be able to ouercome the, for I am with the, to deliuer the, sayeth the Lord.

The ii. Chapter.

God reherced his benefites done vnto the Jewes. Agaynst priestes and prophetes, & ydwardes that contemne and despyse God. The Jewes are distressed, because they forsake God, and because they ran a wynde chunynge after phylis.

Where, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: So thy wape, crye in the eares of Jerusalem, and saye. Thus sayeth the Lord: I remembre the, for the kynnesse of thy pouth, and because of thy stedfast loue: at the tyme of thy desponsynge in that thou folowedest me thozowe the wilderness, in an untilld lande. Israel was an halowed thyng vnto the Lord, and so was his fyrst frutes. * All they that denoure Israel shall offende: misfortune shall fall vpon them, sayeth the Lord. Heare therfore the worde of the Lord: O thou house of Jacob, and all the generacions of the house of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord.

What vnfaithfulnesse founde your fathers in me, that they wente so farre awaye fro me, fallynge to lygdnesse, and bringe to dayne? They thought not in theyr hertes: We haue left the Lord that brought vs out of the lande of Egypt: * that led vs thozowe the wilderness, thozowe a desert and rough lande, thozowe a dyke and a deedly lande: yea a lande that no man had gone thozowe, and wherein nomā had dwelt. * And when I had brought you vnto a pleasaunt well buylded lande, that ye might enioye the frutes and al the commodities of the same: ye went forth and despyled my lande, and broughte myne herpitage to abhominacyon.

The priestes them selues sayd not: Where is the Lord? They that had the lawe in their handes, knewe me not: The shepherdes offended agaynst me. The prophetes byd seuyce vnto Baal, and folowede suche thynges as shal byynge them no profit.

Wherfore, I am constrained (sayeth the Lord) to make my cōplaynt vpon you, & vpon your chyldres chyldre: So into y fles of Cedron, and loke well: sende vnto Cedar, take diligent hede: and se, whether suche thynges be done there, whether y Gentyles the selues deale be to falsly and vntulye w they? goddes whiche per are no goddes in dede.) But my people haue gyuen ouer their hye honour for thyng that maye not helpe them.

Be asomished (O ye heauens) be asfraid asomished at suche a thyng, sayth the Lord.
For my people haue done two euyls. They haue forsaken me the well of the * water of lyfe, and dygged ty in pyttes: pea, vyle and broken pyttes, that can holde no water. As Israel a boude scrualit, or one of þ household why the is he so spoyled? Why do they roze and crye then vpon hym as a lyon? They haue made his lande waste, * his cyties are to byen vp, that there is no man dwellynge in them. Pea, the chyldren of Aoph & Taphnes haue despyled thy necke.

* Cometh not this vnto the, because thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God, curer syns is to the by the waye? And what hast thou now to do in the strete of Egypte: to dyke the water of Nilus? Epyther what makest thou in the waye of Assyria? To dyke water of the flood? * Thyne owne wyckednesse shall reprove the, and thy turnynge a waye shall condemne the: that thou mayest knowe and vnderstande, howe euill and hurtfull a syn it is, that thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God, and not feared him, sayth the Lord God of hostes. * I haue curer broke thy yoke of olde, & burst thy bondes: yet sayest thou: I wyl nomore offende, but (lyke an harlot) thou runnest about vpon all hye hylls, and amonge all grene trees, where as I planted thee as a noble vyne, and a good roote whose seed is all saythfull. * Howe art thou turned thynke into a bytter vntrefull and straunge gape? Pea, and that so soze, that though þ wast the with Aistrus, and make thy self to loue w that swete swelling herbe of Bony: yet in my syght thou art stayned w thy wyckednesse, sayth the Lord thy God.

Hope not now: I am not vncleane, and I haue not folowed Baal. * Loke vpon thyne owne wayes in þ woddess, valleyes and de-ces: so shalt thou knowe, what þ hast done?
Thou art lyke a wyf dyomedary, þ goeth only by his waye, and thy wantonnesse is lyke a wyf alle, that vseth the wyldernes, and that laugheth and bloweth at his wyl. Who can tame the? All they that seke the shal not fayle, but fynde the in thyne owne vnclean-nesse. Hepe thou thy foote from nakednesse, and the throte from thyrtle, and withoute knowe thou art werest. No, for I haue loued strangers, and them wyl I folowe.

Lyke as a thete that is take with the dede clay to shame, even so is þ house of Israel come to confusion: the comen people, thir prynces and rulers, their prestes & prophets:
* As they say to a lock, thou art my father: and to a stone, thou hast begotten me: * pea, they haue turned they? backe vpon me: & not they? face. * But in the tyme of they? trouble when they saye: stande vp, and helpe vs: I shall answer them: Where are nowe thy goddes, that thou hast made the? let the? stand vp & helpe the in the tyme of nede (yf they be hable) * For loke how many cities thou hast (O Iuda) so many goddes hast thou also.

Wherfore then wyl pe goo to lawe with me, seing ye al are synners against me, sayth the Lord? It is but lost labour, that I synye pout chyldren, for they receyue not my correction. * Pour owne sword destropeth pour prophets lyke a denouring lyon. Oye people, loke vpon the word of the Lord. Am I the become a wyldernes vnto the people of Israel: or a lande that hath no lyght? Wherfore sayth my people then: we are lordes, we wyl come nomore vnto the: Doth a mayde forget her rapmet, or a bryde her stomacher?
But as for my people, they haue forgottne me dayes innumerable. Why boostest thou thy wayes so hply (to obtayne fauour thereto-rowe) when thou hast yet stayned the? with blasphemies: & teachest thyne owne wayes?

* Vpon thy wynges is founde the bloude of pooze and innocet people, and þ not in corners & holes onely, but openly in al these places. Yet darrest thou say: I am * (without syn a) gytlesse. Culy, his wrath can not come vpon me. Beholde, I condempne the in iudge-ment, because thou darrest saye: I haue not offended. And why runnest thou so often to and fro to chaunge thy wayes? For thou shalt be confounded as well of Egypt, as of the Assyrians: pea, thou shalt go thy waye from them, and smite thyne handes together vpon thyne heed. Because the Lord doeth abhorre that confydence and hope of thyne, and thou shalt not piospere withall.

CChe. iiii. Chapter.

God bringe mercy full, called vnto repentance his people whiche he had forsaken for: they? who? some th pauls. He exhorted Israel vnto repentance, promys-syng them shepherdes that shoulde haue the true knowledge of God. The returne of Israel vnto God: confessinge they? offence.

Comenly, * when a man putteth a way his wife, and she goth fro him, and marpeth with another then the question is: shulde he re-loyte vnto her anye more after that? Is not this felde then despyled and vncleane? * But as for the, thou hast played the harlot w many louers: yet tourne agayne to me, sayth the Lord. Lpft vp thyne eyes vnto þ hyalters, and loke, yf thou be not despyled with whoredome. Thou hast wayted for them in the stretes: and as a murderer in the wyldernes. Thozowe thy whoredome and shamefull blasphemies, is the lande defiled.

* This is the cause that the rayne & euning dewe hath ceased. Thou hast gott the an whozes for sheed, & wilt not be ashamed.

* O ye diſobedient children, turne agayne ſayth the Lorde: and I wyl be married with you. For I wyl take one out of the cylie, and two out of one generacion, from among you and byynge you into Syon: and wyl gyue you herdwme after myne owne mynde, which ſhal fede you with leaſure and wyſdome. Moreover, when ye be increaſed and multiplied in the lande, then (ſayeth the Lorde) there ſhall nomoze boote be made of the Arke of the Lordes teſtament: No mā ſhal thinke vpon it: neyther ſhall any man make mencio of it: for from thence forth it ſhall neyther be viſited nor honoured with gyftes.

* Then ſhal Jeruſalem be called y Lordes ſeate: and al he that ſhal be gathered vnto it: for y name of the Lordes ſake, which ſhal be ſet vp at Jeruſalem. And from y tyme forth they ſhal folowe no moze the ymagynacion of theyr owne frowarde herte.

The thoſe that be of the houſe of Iuda ſhal go vnto the houſe of Iſrael: * and they ſhall come togyther out of y noyth, into the ſame land that I haue gyuen your fathers. I haue ſhewed alſo, how I toke the vp being but a childe, and gaue the a pleaſant lād for thyne heritage: yea, and a goodly doſt of y heithe, & how I commaunded the, y thou ſhouldeſt * call me father onely, and not to ſpyrke from me.

But lyke as a woman vnſaythfully ſayeth her huſbande, ſo are ye vnſaythfull vnto me (O ye houſe of Iſrael) ſayth the Lorde.

* And therfore the voyce of the children of Iſrael was hearde on hye, weeping and waylynge: for they haue deſpyled the y waye, and forgotten God theyr Lorde.

O ye diſobedient chylidren, turne agayne (ſayinge, lo: we are thyne, for thou arte the Lorde our God:) And ſo ſhall I heale your bakturnynge. Trulſ, vayneſly truſteſt he for healt that loketh for it in the hilles, and in vayne is it ſought in the multitude of the mountaynes, * but the healt of Iſrael ſtadeth onely vpon God our Lorde.

* Conſulſon hath deuoured our fathers labour from our yowthe vp: yea, theyr ſhepe, and bullockes, theyr ſonnes and daughters. So doo we alſo ſleepe in our conſulſon, and ſhame couereth vs: * for we and our fathers from our yowthe vp vnto this daye haue ſpined agaynſt the Lorde our God, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lorde our God.

The .iiii. Chapter.

The true repentance of turnynge to God. He ſheweth to the circumciſion of the herte. The deſtruction of a citye is prophced, for the malice of theyr hertes.

Iſrael, yf thou wylt turne the, then I turne vnto me, ſayth the Lorde. And if thou wilt put away thyne abhominacyons oute of my ſyght, thou ſhalt not be moued: * And ſhalt ſwear: The Lorde lyueth: in truthe, in equitie and ryghteouſneſſe: and all people ſhal be fortunate and loſtall in byr. For thus ſayth the Lorde to all Iuda and Jeruſalem: plowe your land and ſowe not amonge the thornes.

* Be circiſed in the Lorde, and cut away the foreskynne of your hertes, all ye of Iuda and all the indwellers of Jeruſale: * that my indignacion breake not oute lyke fyre, and kinde ſo that nomā may queneche it, bycauſe of the wyckedneſſe of your ymagynacions.

* Preache in Iuda and Jeruſalem, cry out and ſpeake: blowe the trompettes in the lande, crye y euery mā may be are, gather togyther and ſaye: Gather you togyther, and we wyl go into ſtrong cities. Set vp y token in ſid, ſpede you, and make no taryng: * for I wyl byynge a greete plage, and a greete deſtruction from the noyth. For the ſpyler of the Gentyles is broken vp from his place, as a lyon out of his denne, that he may make the lande lande waste, and destroy the cities, so that no man may dwell therein. Wherefore, gyd your faces aboute with sacke cloth, mourne, and wepe, for the fearfull wrath of the Lorde is not without a wen from vs.

In the same tyme (sayeth the Lorde) the kinge and of the princes shall be as the merles that be astonished, and the chappes shall be soze as frayed. The lord sayd I: O Lorde God, hast thou then disceyued this people and Jerusalem, saying: * ye shall haue peace, and now the swerde goeth thorow the bowels: Then shall it be sayd to the people and to Jerusalem: * a stronge wynde in the places of the wylder nesse commeth thow the waie of my people, but neyther to us, nor to cleanse.

After that, shall there come vnto me a stronge wynde from those places, and then shall I also gyue sentence vpon them. For lo, I shall come downe lyke as a cloude, and my shadowes shall be lyke a storme wynde: * his shadowes are lyke a storme wynde: * his shadowes are swifter then the eagle. Alas vnto us, for we are destroyed. O Jerusalem, why thus thyselfe from wyckednesse, that thou mayest be helpe. How longe shall thy thoughtes remayne with the?

For a voyce from Dan and from the hyll of Ephraim speaketh out, and telleth of a deuel. Remember the heythen, and gyue Jerusalem warning, and preache vnto her, that her watchmen ouer her are commynge from her countreyes. They haue cryed out against the cities of Iuda. And they haue been about in euery place like as the watchmen in the feldes: For they haue prouoked me, sayeth the Lorde.

The wayes and thy thoughtes, haue broughte the vnto this, such is thyne owne wyckednesse and disobedience: and because thou hast thytter thing, it hath strepken the to the lord. As my hely, as my hely (halt thou cry) as my hely so loze, my hely panteeth with me: I cannot be styll, for I haue herbe the spy of the trepettes, and peales of warre.

They crye: murder vpon murder, the lande shall perish. Immediately, my tentes were destroyed, and my hangynges in the wyndyng of an eye. How longe shall be the tokens of warre, and heare the noyse of the trumpettes?

Wherefore, this shall come vpon them, because my people is become foolish, and I haue knowne me. * They are the chyldren of folly, and without any discretion. As to myll, they haue wpt ynough: but to wele, they haue no mysdoome. I haue loken vpon the earth, and se: it was waste and void. I looked towarde heauen, and it had no light.

I behelde the mountaynes: and lo, they were smokynge, and all the hylls were in a feare.

I looked about me, and there was no body, and all the byrdes of the ayre were away. I marked wel, and the plowed feld was become waste: yea, all the cityes were broght downe at the presence of the Lorde, and indignacion of his wrath.

For thus hath the Lorde sayd: The hole lande shall be desolate, yet wil I not then haue done. And therfore shall the earth mourne, & the heauen be soze about: for the thyng that I haue spokt to the prophetes purposed and taken vpon me to do, shall not repent me, and I wil not go fro it. The hole lande shall lye, for the noyse of the horsemen and bowemen: they shall runne into denes, into wooddes, and clyme vpon the stony rockes: All cityes shall be voyde, and noman dwelling therein.

What wilt thou now do, thou being destroyed? * For though thou clodest thy selfe with scarlette, and deckest the with golde: * though thou payntest thy face w colours now, yet shalt thou tyme thy selfe in dayne.

For those that byrther to haue ben the great fauourers, shall abhorre the, and go aboute to slaye the. For I heare a noyse, lyke as it were of a woman trauaplyng, or one labouryng of her fyrst chyld: Euen the voyce of the doughter Syon, that casteth out her armes, and sowneth, sayinge: Ah, woe is me, howe soze vexed and faynte is my herte, for feare of the murderers?

The .v. Chapter.

In the tyme that there was no prophet: as of sayeth the man founde, cyther amongst the people or the rulers, for whose sake the Lorde should spare the cytie. Wherefore I saye: as destroyed of the Assyrians.

In the thowowe Jerusalem, beholde and se: Seke thowowe her stretes also wirthin, yf ye can fynde one man that doeth equall and ryght, or sekerh for the truthe, and I shall spare that cytie (sayeth the Lorde) * For though they can save: the Lorde lyueth, yet they sweare, to disceyue. Where as thou (O Lord) lokest onely vpon sayth and truthe.

Thou hast scourged them, but they toke no repentance: thou hast corrected them for amendement, but they refused thy correction. They made they faces harder then a stone, and wolde not amende.

Therefore I thought in my selfe: peraduenture they are so symple and foolys, that they vnderstand nothing of the Lordes way and iudgementes of our God. * Therefore will I go vnto theyr heedes & rulers, & talke with them, yf they knowe the way of the Lord and the iudgementes of our God. For these (in lyke maner) haue broken the pocke, and burst the bondes in sondre.

* Wherefore, a Lyon out of the woodde hath hurte them, and a wolfe in the euening shall destroye them. The Leopard doth lye lurking by they cityes, to state in peeces all them walles, beate them downe, but destroy them not vterly: take awaye theyr fozetrelles, bycause they are not the Lordes. For vnhaue denyed the Lorde, and sayd: it is not he

kes. They shal eat vpthy grapes, e fygges.
As for thy strong e wel defiled cyties, wher-in thou dydest trust, they shal bringe to po-

Fearre ye not me, sayth the Lorde: Are ye not ashamed to loke me in the face? which bynde the see with the lande, so that it canot passe his boundes. For though it rage, yet can it do nothyng, and though the waues therof do swell, yet maye they not go ouer.

But this people hath a false and obstinate hert, they are departed and gone awaye fro me. They thynke not in theyr hertes: O leus feare the Lorde our God, that gryneth vs rayne early and late, when nede is: which he peth euer styll the haruest for vs yeele.

Neuertheless, your misdoedes haue turned these fro you, and your synnes haue turned you hereof. For amonge my people are found wicked persones, that pryncly lay snarres e wayte for men, to take them e destroye them. And lyke as a net is full of byrdes, so are their houses full of that which they haue gotten with falschod and disceyte. Herof commeth their great substance and richesse, her-of are they fat and welthy, and are moze miserable then any other. They minister not the law: they make no ende of the fathers cause: yea, and they prosper: yet they indynot the poore accordyng to equitie.

Shoulde I not punish these thinges, sayth the Lorde? Shoulde not I be auenged of all such people as these be? Horrible and greuous thinges are done in the lande.

The prophetes teache falsly, and the priests receyue gyftes, e my people hath pleasure therein. What wil com therof at the last?

The vi. Chapter.

The synners for which Ierusalem is asyct. Whych synners were: Courtoousnesse. Disceyte. The Lygh-tening the sacrileges of the Jewes. The commyng of the Babylonians to prophesye agayne.

Come out of Ierusalem, ye strong chylidren of Ben Jamin: blowe the trompettes ye. Ecce, I vnto a token vnto Bethcaren, for a plage and a greate myserye appeareth out from the North.

I wyl lyken the daughter Sion to a laye and tendre woman, and to her shal come the sheperdes with their flockes. Theyr tentes shal they pytche round about her, and euery one shal fede them that are vnder his hande.
Wake battayl agaynst her (shall they saye) Arple, let vs go vp, whyle it is yet daye.

Alas, the day goeth away, and the nyght shadowes fal downe. Arple, let vs go vp by nyght, and destroye her stronge holdes, for thus hath the Lorde of hostes comaunded.

Hewe downe her trees, and let vp bulwo-kes agaynst Ierusalem, for the tyme is come that this cite must be punished: for in her is al maliciousnesse. Lyke as a codyte spouteth out waters, so she spouteth out her wickednesse. Robbery e vnrightheousnesse is herde in her, sorowe and woundes are euer there in my syght. Amende the (O Ierusalem) lest I wyl draw my hert fro the, e make the desolate, e thy lād also, that nomā dwell in it. For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes. The residue of Ierael shal be gathered, as y remnant of grapes into the basket, like the grapegatherer.

And therfore turne thyne hande agayne vnto the basket, like the grapegatherer.

unto whome shall I speake, whome shall I saye that he maye take hede? * They care not so vncircumcised, that they maye not heare.

Beholde, they take the worde of God but for a scoone, and haue no lust therto. And therefore, I am so full of thynne indignacion, (O Lozde) that I maye suffre no longer: but I will cast out vpon the chyldren that are about me vpon all ponge men. Yee, the man must be taken prisoner with the wyfe, and y aged with the crepell. They houses with they landes and viures shall be turned vnto straun-gers, when I stretch out myne hande vpon the inhabitants of this land, sayth the Lozde from the least vnto the most, they hang all vpon couetousnes, and from the Prophet vnto the Priest: they go all about with falshood and lyen.

And desyde that, they heale the hurt of my people with swete wordes: saying, peace now, when there is no peace at all. Were they ashamed when they had comitted abominacion? Truly nay they be past shame.
And therefore they shall fall among the flayne in the houre when I will visite the, they shall be brought downe sayth the Lozde.

Thus sayth the Lozde: go into the strea-tes, conspyde & make inquisition for the olde waye: and if it be the good and ryght waye, then go therein, that ye maye fynde reste for your soules. But they saye: we wyl not make therin, and I wyl set watchmen ouer you, & therefore take hede vnto the voyce of the Lorde. But they say: we wyl not take hede therefore ye Gentyles, & thou Congregacion that knowest what I haue deuyled for you. Heare the earth also: behold, I wil cause a plague to come vpon this people, euen the last of theyr owne ymaginacions.

For they haue not bene obedient vnto my wordes and to my lawe, but abhorred them.
Therefore byng me incense from Saba and sweete smelling Calamus from far countries: your burnt offringes displease me, & I will not in your sacrifices.

And therefore thus sayeth the Lozde: Beholde, I wyl make this people fall, & there shall fall from amonge them the fat her with the chyldren, one neyghboure shall perishe w another.

Thus sayth the Lozde, Beholde: there shall come a people from the North, & a great people shall aryse from the endes of the earth with bowes and with dardes shall they be arrayed. It is a rough & feareful people, and a mercerfull people, theyr voyce roareth like the sea, they ryde vpon horses wel apoin-ted to the battayle agaynst the. O doughty heir. The crye of them haue we heard.
Our armies are feeble, heynesse and sorowe come vpon vs, as vpon a woman trauellynge with chylde.

Let no man go forth into the felde, lette no man come vpon the hye strete: for the swerde and feare of the enemye is on euery syde.

Wherefore gyde a sacke cloth about the, (O thou daughter of my people) spynke thy self with ashes: mourne & wepe bytterly as vpon thynne only beloued son. For the destroyer shall suddenly fall vpon vs. Them haue I set for a stronge towre (O thou Prophet) and a well fenced wall amonge my people, to seke out and to crye theyr wayes. For they at al stubberne apostates and fallen awaye, walkyng disceitfully, they are cleane brylle, and prynces, for they hurte and destroye euery man.
The bellous are bent in the fyre, the leade is not molten: the melter melteth in vayne, for the fuel is not taken awaye from them. Therefore do they call them noughty spluer, because the Lozde hath cast them out.

The vii. Chapter.

Jeremy is commaunded to shewe vnto the people the wyse of God, which trusteth in the outward seruyce of the temple. Hee saith that shall happen to the Jewes for the despysing of theyr prophetes. Sacrifice is doth not the Lozde cheerefully requyre of the Jewes, but the shuld obey his wordes.

These are the wordes of God spake vnto Jeremy: saying: Stand vnder the gate of the lordes house and crye out these wordes there with a loude voyce, and saye.

Hear the worde of the Lozde all ye of Iuda, that go in at this doore, to worshippe the Lozde.

Thus sayth the Lozde of hostes: the God of Israel. Amende your wayes and your routels, and I wyl let you dwell in this place.

Truste not in false lyngge wordes, sayinge: here is the temple of the Lozde, here is the temple of the Lozde, here is the temple of the Lozde.

But rather in dede amende youre wayes and counceils, and Iudge ryght betwixte a man and his neyghbour: oppresse not the stranger, the fatherlesse, and the widow: thede not innocente bloude in this place, cleane not to straunge goddes to your owne destruccyon, then wyl I let you dwell in this place: yee, in the lande that I gaue afore tyme vnto your fathers for ever. But take hede: ye trust in lynge tales, that begyle you & do you no good.
For when ye haue stollen, murdered, comytted aduoutry, and perjury. When ye haue offered vnto Baal, folowynge straunge & vnknown goddes that ye be vnpunished? Yet then come ye: & stand before me in this house (which hath my name geuen vnto it) & say Tulpe, we are absolued quyte, though we haue done all these abhominacions.

What thynke you this house? heareth my name, is a denne of theues: And yet I se what you thynke, sayth the Lozde.

So to my place in Siloh, * whereunto I

I dyd to the same place for the wyckednesse of my people of Israel. And now, though ye haue done all these dedes (sayth the Lord) and I my self rose vp euer by times to warne you and to comen with you, yet wolde ye not

And therfore, & euen as I haue done vnto Si loh, so wyl I do to this house, that my name is geuen vnto (& that you put your trust in) per vnto p place that I haue geuen to you: & your fathers. And I shall thrust you out of my syght, * as I haue caste out all your bre thren the whole sede of Ephraim.

* Therfore, thou shalt not praye for this people, thou shalt neyther geue thanks, nor byd prayer for them: p shalt make no inter cession to me for them, for in no wyle wyl I heare the. Seilt p not what they do in the cy ties of Juda, & in the streates of Jerusalem?

* The chyldren gather stycks, the fathers kyndle the fyre, the women kneade p dough: to bake cakes for the quene of heuen.

They powre out dyncke off rynges vnto straunge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath howbeit they hurte not me (sayth the Lord) but rather confounde, & shame them selues.

And therfore thus sayth the Lord God: beholde, my wrath & my indignacyon shall be poured out vpon this place, vpon me & catell vpon the trees in p felde & frute of p land, & it shall burne so p no man maye quench it.

Thus sayth the Lord of hostes p God of Israel: heape vp your * burnt offerings to your sacrifices, and eate the fleshe. * For when I brought your fathers out of Egypt I spake no worde vnto them of burnt offer rynges and sacrifices: but this I commaun ded them, saying: * hearken & obey my voyce, that your fathers came out of Egypte, vnto this daye.

* Neuertheles, I sent vnto you, all my ser uautes the prophetes. I rose vp early, & sent you worde, yet wolde they not hearken, nor offer me they: eares, but were obstinate, and woyle the they: fathers. And thou shalt now speake all these wordes vnto them, but they shall not heare the: p shalt crye vpon them, but they shall not answere the. Therfore shalt thou saye vnto them: this is p people, that neyther heareth the voyce of p lord their

God, nor receaueth his correccion. * Sayth fulnesse and truth is cleane roted out of their mouth.

* Wherfore cut of thyne heare, O Jerusa lem, and cast it away, take vp a complaynt on hye, for the Lord hath cast a waye, & sca tered the people p he is displeased withal. For the chyldren of Juda haue done euell in my syght, sayth the Lord. * They haue set vp they: abhominacyons in the house that hath my name, & haue despyled it. They haue also buiyled an aulter at * Topheth, which is in the valleye of the chyldren of hemmon: that they myght burne they: sonnes and dought ers in fyre, which I neuer comaunded them neyther came it euer in my thought. And ther fore beholde, the dayes shall come (sayth the Lord) p it shall no moze be called Topheth, or the valleye of the chyldren of hemmon, but the valleye of slaughter, * for in Topheth, they shall be buryed, because they shall eies haue no rowme. * Pee, the dead bodyes of this peo ple shall be eaten vp of the foules of the ayre: and wylde beastes of the earth, and no man shall fraye them away. * And as for p voyce of myrth and gladnes of the cryes of Juda, and Jerusalem, p voyce of the bydegrome, & of the byde: I wyl make them cease, for the lande shall be desolate.

The viii. Chapter.

* The destruction of the Jewes. The Lord mooueth the people to amendment / recheysing by they: synnes.
He rep: chendeth the lyge doctrine of the prophetes and p: cautes.

At the same tyme saith the Lord, p bones of the kynges of Juda, p bones of p pri stes & prophetes: pee, & the bones of the cyterins of Jerusalem, shall be brought out of they: graues & layd agaynst the: * Some the moone & all the heuenly host: whom they loued, whome they serued: whom they rane after, whome they sought and worshypped.
They shall neyther be gathered together nor buried, but shall lye as donge vpon the earth to they: shame and despying.

* And all they p remaine of this wycked generacyon, shall despye rather to dye then to lyue: wherforeuer they remaine, and wher as I scatter them, sayth the Lord of hostes.
Thus shalt thou saye vnto them also. Thus sayth the Lord. Women fall so, that they arple not vp agayne: O p Israel repen, wyl not God turne agayne to them? Wher fore then is this people & Jerusalem gon so farre backe, p they turne not agayne? They are euer the longer p moze obstynate, & wyl not be conuerted.

* For I haue looked, & consyded: but there is no man that speaketh a good worde: there is no man that taketh repentance for p synne that wyl so muche as saye: wherfore, haue I

howe I done this? But every man (as soone as he is turned back) runneth forth styl, lyke a wynde hoyle in a battayle. The stroke he knoweth his appoynted time, the Cattle doue: the Swallowe, and the Crane confounde the tyme of their trauaile, *but my people wyl not knowe the tyme of the punishment of the Lozde. Howe dare ye sape then, we are wyle: we haue the law of y lord amonge vs.

Truly in dayne hath he prepared hes pen and wrytyn the wynters wyrtte it: therfore shall the wyle be confounded, they shal be strayed and taken: for lo, *they haue cast out the worde of the Lozde: what wyl dome can then be amonge them? Therefore, I wyl geue they wyues vnto Aleautes, & theye shall be destroyers.

*For from the lowest vnto the hiest, they haue all spyllyd lucre, & from the prophet vnto the priest, they deale all with lies. *The wylles, they deale y hurt of my people very kindly, saying: peace, peace where there is warre at all.

For shame, howe abhominable thynge do they: and yet they be not ashamed, yee knowe of no shame.

Therefore in the tyme of theyr dysptacyon, they shall fall amonge the deed bodyes, & be withyowen sayth the Lozde.

Wherefore, I wyl consume them in dede (sayth the Lozde) so y there shall not be one name vpon the wyne, neyther one spyg vpon the figge tree, and the leaues shal be pluckt of the thyng that I haue geuen them. Shall I be taken from them: why prolong we y time let vs gather our selues together, and go in to the stronge Cytie, there shall we be in rest. For y lord our God hath put vs to scyence and geuen vs water myrre to gall, to dyspnye because we haue synned agaynst hym.

*We lohed for peace, & we fare not the better, we wayted for the tyme of helth and wher is nothyng but trouble.

The noyse of dyspnoyses is hearde from the whole lande is a stryde at y neryng of dyspnoyses: for they are come in, & haue deuoured the lande, & all that is in it: y wylles, & those that dwell therein. *Wherefore I wyl send Cockatrice & serpentes amonge them: they wyl not be charmed, & they shal be slayn, sayth the Lozde.

I wolde haue had conforzte agaynst sorow, but wher is he come vpon me, and heynesse vnto my hart: for lo, the voyce of y cryinge of my people is heard for feare of them, that come from a farr countre. Is not the Lozde in them? Is not the kyng in her? Therefore they haue they greued me (shall the Lozde saye) & they: ymages and foolys & straunge thinges of a foyrneye god. The darrest is ymer, & ymer hath an ende, and we are not helped. I am soze vexed, because of the hurte of my people. I am heuy and abashed, is there no trespase at Gilead? Is there no phisycon there? Why then is not y helth of my people recouered?

The ix. Chapter.

The complaine and bewapnyng of the prophete the malice of the people. In the knowlege of God isight we only to respye. The bycircumscision of the herte.

Who *wyl geue my heade water ynough, and a well of teares for myne eyes that I may wepe nyght & daye for the slaughter of my people? Wolde God that I had a cottage some where farr from folke, that I myght leaue my peole, and go from the: for they be all aduoutters & a syn kynge lozte. They bende they tungen lyke bowes, to shote out lyes. They were strong vpon earth. As for the tructh, they maye nothyng a waye wythall in the worlde. For they go from one wickednes to another, and wyl not knowe me, sayth the Lozde.

*Yee, one must kepe hym selfe from another, no man maye safelye trust his owne brother: for one brother vnder myndeth another one neyghbour begyleth another. Yee one dissembleth w another, and they deale w no tructh. *They haue practised they tungen to lye, and taken great paynes to do mischefe. Thou syttest in y myds of a disceatfull people, whiche for very dyssemblyng fallshede, wyl not knowe me, sayth the Lozde.

Therefore, thus sayth the Lozde of hostes beholde, I wyl melt them, and tepe them: for what guide I els do to my people. *They tungen are like sharpe arrowes, to speake disceate. With they mouth they speake peace a bly to they: neyghbour, but priuely they lay wayte for hym. *Shuld I not punishe them for these thynges, sayth the Lozde? Shuld I not be auenged of any such people as this? vpon the mountaynes wyl I take vp a lamentacyon and a sorowful crye, and a mourning vpon the fayne playnes of the wyldernes. Namely howe they are so bent vp, y no man goyth there any moze. Yee, a man shall not heare one beasst crye there.

Wydes & catell are all gone from thence, *I wyl make Ierusalem also an hepe of stones, and a denne of venymous woymes. And I wyl make the cyties of Iuda so wast, that no man shall dwell therein. What man is so wyle, as to vnderstande this? Or to whome hath the Lozde spoken by mouth, that he may lye w this & sape: O thou land, why perishest thou so? Therefore art y so bent vp, & lyke a wyldernes, that no man goyth thowere. Yee, the Lozde hym selfe tolde y same vnto them, that forsoke his lawe, & kept not the thyng that he gaue them in comaundement, neyther lyued thereafter: *but folowed the wyckednes of they: owne hertes, & serued straunge goddes, as they: fathers taught them.

Thus Therefore

E Therefore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. Beholde, I will fede this people wth wormewood, & geue them gal to dryncke: * I will scatere them also amonge the heathen, whome neyther they no: they: fathers haue knowen: * I will send a sword amonge them to persecute theym, vntyll I bypnyng them to nought. Wo: couer, thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes. Beware of the vengeance that hangeth ouer you: and call for mourning wyues, and sende for wyse women that they come shortly, & syng a mourning songe of you: that the teares maye fall out of our eyes, and that our eye lyddes maye gush out of water.

F For there is a lamentable noyse hearde of Syon. O howe are we so sore destroyed: O howe are we so pitcoulsy confounded: We must forsake our owne natural countre, and we are shut out of our owne lodgynges. Yet heare the wo:de of the Lorde (O ye women) and let your cares regarde the wo:des of his mouth that ye maye learne poure daughters to mourne, & that euery one maye teache her neyghbours to make lamentacon. Namely thus: Death is climyng vp in at our wyndowes, he is come into our houses, to destroy the chyldre before the doze, and & ponge man in the strete.

G But tell thou playnely, thus sayeth the Lorde. * The deade bodies of men shall lye vpon the grounde, as the donge vpon & selde and as the hey after & mowen, & there shalbe no man to take them vp. Thus sayeth the Lorde. Let not the wyse man reioyce in his wyldom, no: the strong man in his strength neyther the ryche man in his ryches. * But who so will reioyce, let hym reioyce in this, & he vnderstandeth, and knoweth me: for I am the Lorde, whiche do mercy, equitie, & ryghteousnes vpon the earth. * Therefore haue I pleasure in suche thynges: sayth the Lorde. Beholde, the tyme cometh (sayth & Lorde) that I will viset all them, whose foreskynne is vncircumcysed. The Egypcyans, the Jewes, the Edomytes, the Ammonytes, the Moabytes, * and the Maues Gadianytes, that dwell in the wyldernesse. For all the Gentyls are all vncircumcysed in & flesch, but all the house of Israel are vncircumcysed in the herte.

The .x. Chapter.

The constellation of the heares are not to be feared. Of the weakness of Idols, & of the power of God, Of euill cushtes.

Care the wo:de of & Lorde that he speaketh vnto the, O & house of Israel. Thus sayth & Lorde. * Ye shall not learne after & manner of the heathen, and ye shall not be afrayde for the tokens of heauen: for the hea:hen are afrayde of suche: yea, all the customs: and lawes of the Gentyls are no: thyng but vanytie. * They hewe downe a tree in the wode: with the bandes of & wo:ch man, and fasthyon it with the axe, they couer it ouer with golde or syluer, they fasten it wth nayles and hammers, that it moue not. It standeth as styffe as the Palme tree, it can neyther speake no: go one fote, but muste be bozne. * Be not ye afrayde of suche for they can do neyther good no: euell. But there is none lyke vnto the, O Lorde, * an dgreat is the name of thy power. Who wold not feare the: O kyng of the Gentyls: for thyne is & dominyon.

For amonge all the wyse men of & Gentyls, & in all they: kyngdoms, there is none that maye be lykened vnto the. They are all together vnlearned and vnwyse in they: one thyng. All they: conyng is but vanytie: namely wood, syluer: whiche is brought out of Charlis, and beaten to plates: and golde from Ophir, * a wo:che that is made with & hand of the craftesman & the caster clothed wth pelowe lyke & scarlet: euen so is the wo:che of they: wyse men all together. But & Lord is a true God, a luyng God, and an euersyng kyng. * If he be wo:ch, the earth shaketh: all the Gentyls maye not abyde his indignacon.

As for they: goddes thus shall you saye to them: they are goddes, that made neyther heauen no: earth, therefore shall they perishe from the earth, and from all thynges vnder heauen. But (as for our God) * He made the earth with his power, and wth his wysdome doth he order the whole compasse of & world with his discrecyon hath he lized out the hea:uens. At his voyce the waters gather together in & ayre, * he draweth vp & cloudes to the vtermost partes of the earth: he turneth lyghtnyng to rayne, and bypnyngeth forth the wyndes out of they: treasures. His wysdome maketh all men fooles. And confounded be casters of ymages, for that they cast, is but a vayne thyng, and hath no lyfe. * The vayne craftesmen wth they: wo:ches, & they in they: vanytie haue made, shall perishe one with another in tyme of visytacyn. Nevertheless Jacobs porcion is none such: but it is he that hath made all thynges, & Israel is the rod of his inherytaunce. The Lorde of hostes is his name. Gather vp thy wares out of the lande thou & art in the stronge place. For thus sayeth & Lorde. Beholde, I will nowe throwe as with a stone sling & inhabitours of this land at this once, & I will bypnyng trouble vpon the that they shall proue true & wo:des & I haue spoken by the prophetes.

Alas, howe am I hurt: Alas howe painfull are my scourges vnto me: For I consyde this sorowe by my selfe, and I must suffer it. My tabernacle is destroyed, and all my my wordes are broken. My chylde are gone from me, & can no where be founde. Now I none to sprede out my tent, or to sette up my hangings. For the hearde men haue done foolishly, that they haue not soughte the Lozde. Therefore haue they dealt vnwisely with theyr catell: and all are scatered abrode. Behold, the people is harde at hande, & great scorpon out of the north: to make the cyties of Iuda a wyldernes, and a dwellynge place for dragons. * Howe I knowe (O Lozde) it is not in mans power to ordeyne hys owne wayes, or to rule his owne steps & goynges. Therefore chasten thou vs, O Lozde: but with mercie: & not in thy wrath, byynge vs not utterly to nought. * Poure out thyne indignacion rather vpon the Gentyles, & I knowe thou shalt, & vpon the people that cal not on thy name. * And because they haue consumed Iacob, and destroyed Iacob: & haue made his habitacion waste.

The xi. Chapter.

Curse of them that obey not the worde of Goddes wordes. The people of Iuda following the steppes of theyr fathers, worshipped strange gods. The Lozde sayeth that he will not heare the Jewes, & so; by dooth also Jeremij to praye for them.

This is another Sermon, whiche the Lozde comaunded Jeremij for to preache, saying: heare the wordes of the couenaunt, and speake vnto men of Iuda, & to al them that dwell at Ierusalem. And saye thou vnto the Lozde God of Israel: * Curse be every one that is not obedient vnto the wordes of this couenaunt: whiche I comaunded vnto your fathers, what tyme as I brought them out of Egypte, from the pizon fornaice, saying: * Be obedient vnto my voyce, and I will be your father, and I will be your people, and I will be your God, and I will kepe my promise, * that I will dworne vnto your fathers. Namely that I wolde geue them a lande whiche should be rich with milche and honny, as ye se: it is come to this daye. Then answered I, and sayde Amen. Let it be euen so Lozde as thou sayest.

Then the Lozde sayde vnto me agayne: heare this in the cyties of Iuda & rounde about Ierusalem, & saye. Heare the wordes of this couenaunt, that ye maye kepe them, for I haue diligently exhorted your fathers since the tyme that I brought them out of the lande of Egypte vnto this daye. I gaue them warninge by tymes, sayinge: hearken vnto my voyce. * Returne ye, for they wolde not obey me, nor encline theyr eares vnto me, but followed & wished pynagyns of their own dettes. And therefore, I haue accused them as transgressours of all the wordes of the couenaunt, that I gaue them to kepe, whyche they (not wythstandynge) haue not kepte.

And the Lozde sayde vnto me. It is founde oute, that whole Israel and all these Cytizens of Ierusalem are gone back. They haue turned them selues to blasphemies of theyr forefathers: whiche had no luste to heare my worde. Euen Iphewyse haue these also followed strange goddes, and worshipped them. The house of Israel and Iuda haue broken my couenaunt, whiche I made with theyr fathers.

Therefore, thus sayth the Lozde. Behold I will sende a plague vpon them, whiche they shall not be able to escape: and though they crye vnto me, I will not heare them. * Then shall the towne of Iuda and the cytezens of Ierusalem go, & call vpon theyr gods vnto whome they made theyr oblations: but they shall not be able to helpe the in tyme of theyr trouble. * For as many cyties as thou hast, O Iuda, so many goddes hast thou had also. And loke howe many stretes there be in the, (O Ierusalem) so many shamefull altars haue ye set vp, altars I say to offere vpon the vnto Baal. * Therefore praye not thou for this people, byd nether prayse nor prayer for them, for though they crye vnto me in theyr trouble, yet will I not heare them.

What part hath my beloued in my house saynge he hath wrought abhominacion seruyng many goddes? * The holy fleshe of serpynges in the temple are gone from the, O Iuda, and thou when thou hast done euill makest thy boost of it. * The Lozde called the a grene Olive tree, a fayre one, a frutefull one, a goodlye one: but wyth greate clamour hath the enemye set fyre vpon it and by branches of it are destroyed. * For the Lozde of hostes that planted the, hath deuyed a plague for the (O thou house of Israel and Iuda) for the euill that ye haue done to prouoke hym to wrath, in that ye byd seruyce vnto Baal.

This (O Lozde) haue I learned of the, & vnderstand it, for thou hast shewed me theyr pynagyns. * But I am as a meke lambe, an Oxe that is carryed awaye to be slayne, not knowynge, that they had denyed suche a counsell agaynst me, sayinge: * We will destroye his meate with wood, & bypue hym out of the land, of the liuing: & his name shall neuer be thought vpon. Therefore, * I will beseeche the nowe (O Lozde of hostes) thou thy thronous iudge, thou that tryest the reynes and the dettes: let me se the auenged of them: for vnto the haue I committed my cause. The Lozde therfore saye thus of the cytezens of Anathoth, that soughte to slaye me: sayinge, * Preache not vnto vs in the name of the Lozde or elles thou shalt dye of our handes. Thus (I saye) spake the Lozde of hostes. Behold, I will

I will vset you. Your ponge men shall perceyue with the swerd, your sonnes and your doughters shall vterly dye of hunger, so that none shall remayne. For vpon the cytezins of Anathoth will I bring a plague, euen the pore of theyr visytacyon.

The. xii. Chapter.

The prophet maruelled greatly at the prosperite of the wycked, although he confesse God to be righteous. The Arwes are forsaken of the Lord. He speaketh agaynst Cu-raters, and preachers that seduce the people. The Lord threateneth destruction vnto the nacyns that bordered vpon Ier, which troubled & dered it.

Lorde, thou arte more righteous, then that I shuld dispute wth the. Accuse theselte, lette me talke wth the in thynges reasonable. * How happeneth it, that the waye of the vngodly is so prosperous: & that it goth so well with them whiche (without any shame) offend and lyue in wyckednesse? Thou plantest them, they take rote, they growe, and bring forth frute They bolte muche of þ, yet art þ farre from theyr raynes. But þ Lorde (to whome I am well knowne) thou þ haste lene & proued my bert * take them away, lyke as a flocke is carryed to the slaughter house, & apoynt the for the dape of slaughter.

Howe longe shall the land mourne, * and all þ herbes of the felde perishe, for þ wycked nes of them þ dwell therein.

The catell and the byrdes are gone, yet saye they tushe, * God will not destroy vs vterly.

Seeynge thou art wepy in runnyng with the fote men, howe wylte thou then runne to housles? In a peaceable sure lande thou mayst be safe, but how wylt thou do in the furpous pyrde of Iordane? For thy byethzen and thy kyndred haue altogether despyed the, & cry-ed out vpon the in thyne absence. * Beloue them not, though they speake fayre wordes to the. As for me (I saye) I haue forsaken myne owne dwellinge place, and leste myne herptage. My lyfe also þ I loue so wel, haue I geuen into the handes of myne enemyes.

* Myne heritage is become vnto me, as a lyon in þ wood. It cryed out vpon me, therfore haue I forsaken it. Myne herptage is vnto me, as a speckled byrde, a byrd of dyuerse colours is vpon it. Come, & gather ye together all the beastes of the feld. Come that ye may eat it vp.

* Dyuers herdmen haue broken downe my: vineparde, and troden vpon my porcy-on. Of my pleasaunte porcyon, they haue made a wyldernes and deserte. They haue layde it waste: & now þ it is wast, it spgtheth vnto me. Yer, þ whole lande lyeth wast, and no man regardeth it. The destroyers come ouer the heathe euery waye, for the swerde of the Lord doth consume from the one ende of the lande to the other, & no flesh hath rest.

They haue sowne wheate, & reaped thornes.
They haue taken heritage in possession, but it doth them no good. And þ prophets were ashamed of your frutes, because of the great wyath of the Lord.

Thus sayeth the Lord vpon all myne euell neyghbours, that laye hande on myne herptage, whiche I haue possessed, euen my people of Israel. Beholde, I will pluche them (namely Israel) out of theyr land, and put out the house of Iuda from amonge the.
* And when I haue rote them out, I wylde at one with them agayne, & I wyl haue mercy vpon them: & bring them agayne, euery man to his owne herptage, & into his lande.
And if they (namely that trouble my people) wyl learne the wayes of them, to sweare by my name. The Lord lyueth (lyke as they learned my people to sweare by Baal) then shall they be rehedned amonge my people.
* But if they wyl not obey, then wyl I rote out the same folke, and destroye them: sayeth the Lord.

The. xiii. Chapter.

The destruction of the Arwes is persygured, and they parting abrode: why Israel was reuenged tobede the people of God: & why they were forsaken.

Thus sayth þ Lord vnto me: gothy waye, and get me a linnen bysch, & gyrde it aboute thy lopnes, & let it not be wet. Then I got me a bysch accordyng to the comaundement of the Lord and put it about my lopnes. After this the seconde tyme, þ Lord spake vnto me agayne Take the bysche that thou hast prepared and put aboute the, and get the vp, and go vnto Euphrates and hyde it in a hole of the roche.
So went I, & hid it at Euphrates, as þ Lord comaunded me. And it happened longe after this, þ the Lord spake vnto me. Up & get the to Euphrates, and set the bysch from thence: whiche I comaunded the to hyde there. Then went I to Euphrates, & dygged vp, & toke þ bysch from the place where I had hyd it: and beholde: the bysche was corrupte, so þ it was profyttable for nothyng.

Then sayde the Lord vnto me. Thus sayeth the Lord. Euen so wyl I corrupte the pyrde of Iuda, & the hpe mynd of Ierusalem. This people is a wycked people, * they wyl not heare my word, they folowe the wycked ymaginacions of theyr owne herte, and hange vpon straunge goddes, them they serue and worship: and therfore they shall be as this bysche: that serueth for nothyng.

For as strately as a bysch lyeth vpon a mannes lopnes, so strately dyd I bynde the whole house of Israel, and the whole house of Iuda vnto me, sayeth the Lord: * that they myght be my people: that they myght haue a glayous name: that they myght be in honour, but they wolde not obey me. Therfore lay this addle before them, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel: Every pottle shall be filled with wyne. And they shall saye: Thou we knowe not, that every pottle shall be filled with wyne: Then shalt thou saye unto them. Thus sayeth the Lord: Beholde I shall fill all the inhabytours of this lande with monnemes: the kynges that syt vpon thair thrones, the preastes & prophetes, w all that dwell at Jerusalem. And I will sette them one agaynste another: yee, the fathers agaynste the sounes, sayeth the Lord.

I will not pardon them, I wyl not spare them, nor haue ppytie vpon them: but I will destroye them. Be obedyent, geue care: take not discomfort at it, for it is the Lord hym selfe that speaketh. Honour the Lord your God hereafter, as he take his lyyght from you, and o: ever your fire shall burne in darcknes at the hyl leest when you loke for the lyyght, he turne it into the shadowe & darcknes of death. But yf ye shal not heare me, that geue you secret warninge, I will mourne from my whole herte for your subburnes. * Pyteously wyl I wepe, and the teares shall gush out of myne eyes. For the Lordes flocke shall be carped awaye captiue. Tel the kyng and the quene humble your selues, let you downe lowe, for your dignytye shall be throwen downe, and the crowne of your glorye shall fall from your head. The cryes toward the south shall be heard, and no man shall open them. All Iuda shall be carped awaye captiue, so that none shall remayne.

Lift vp your eyes, & beholde them y come from the north, where is y flocke (O y land) y haue gnen the. And where are thy fat & ryche shepe. * To whome wylt y make thy moue, when the enemye shall come vpon the: for y haue taught them thy selfe, & made them marke ouer the. Shal not sorowe come, vpon y as on a woman trauayllynge w chylde. And yf I woldest saye then in thyne herte. Wherfore come these thynges vpon me: * En: for the multitude of thy blasphemyes, shall thy lynder partes and thy fete be discovered.

Make a man of Iude chaunge his kynne, and the cat of the mountayne her sportes: so maye ye that be exerceysed in euell, doo good. Therefore wyl I scatere them, lyke as the flocke that is taken away with the south wynde. Thus shalbe poure porcyon, and the porcyon of your measure, wherewith ye shalbe rewarded of me, sayeth the Lord: because ye haue forgotten me, and put your truste in disceitfull thynges. * Therefore shall I turne thy dachies ouer thy heade, and discover thy thynges, that thy pryncities maye be sene, thy aduersary, thy deadly malice, thy beastlynelle, and thy shameful whoredom. For vpon y felde, and by lles I haue sene thy abhominacyons. Wo be vnto the (O Jerusalem) when Wylt thou euer be clesed any moze.

The. xliii. Chapter.

Of the dearth that shulde come in Ieruzp. The praye of the people ashyng mercy of the Lord. The vnfaythful people are not hearde. Of prayer, fasting, & of false prophetes that se ture the people.

The worde of the Lord shewed vnto Jeremye, concernynge the dearth of the frutes. Iuda hath mourned, his gates are desolate: they ar brought to heynelle euen vnto the grounde, and the crye of Jerusalem goth vp. The Lordes sent their seruantes to fetch water, & when they came to the welles, they dyd fynde no water, but carped they: vessels home cmtye. They be ashamed & confounded, & couer they: heades. * For the grounde is dryed vp, because there cometh no rayne vpon it. The plowmen also be ashamed, and couer they: heades. The hynde also forloke the ponge fawne, y he broughte forth in the felde, because there was no grasse. The wylde Asses dyd stande in the hye places, and diewe in they: wynde lyke the dragons, they: eyes dyd sayle for want of grasse.

Doutles oure owne wyckednes doth rewarde vs. But Lord do y according to thy name, though our transgressions and synnes be many & agaynst the haue we synned.

* For y art the cofort & helpe of Israel in the tyme of trouble: Whyp wylt y be as a straunger in the lande, & as one y goth ouer y feld, & cometh in only to remayn for a night: Whyp wylt thou make thy selfe a coward, and as it were a gyaunt y yet may not help: For thou (O Lord) art in the myddest of vs, and thy name is called vpon of vs: forlake vs not.

Thus hath the Lord saide vnto this people sayng they haue had such a lust to wander abroad, & haue not refrayned they: fete, & therefore dyspleased the Lord: but he wyl nowe byng agayne to remembraunce all theire misdedes, & pynish all they: synnes.

Yee, euen thus sayde the Lord vnto me: * Thou shalt not pray to do this people good: for though they fast, I wyl not heare their prayers, and though they offe burnt offerynges and sacrifices, yet wyl not I accept the. For I wyl destroye them w the sword, hunger, & pestilence. Then answered I: O Lord God, yf prophetes saye vnto them: Tuthe, ye shall: nede to feare no sword & no hunger shal come vpon you, but the Lord shal geue you continual rest in this place.

And the Lord sayde vnto me: The prophetes preache lyes in my name, where as I haue not: sente them, neyther gaue I them any charge, neyther dyd I speake vnto them yet they preach vnto you false dysposn, charnyng, vanyte, & deceatfulness of they: owne herte. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord: As for those prophetes y preach in my name (whom I neuerthelesse haue not sent) and that saye

Thus, there shall no swerde nor hunger be in this lande. * With swerde & with hunger shall those prophetes perishe, & the people to whom they preach shall be cast out of Ierusalem, dye of hunger, & be slayne wth the swerde. * (and there shall be no man to burye the) both they and theyr wyues, theyr sonnes and their daughters. For thus wyl I poure their wickednes vpon them. This shalt thou saye also vnto them. * Wyne eyes shall wepe without ceasinge daye and nyght. For my people shall be destroyed wth great harme, and shall perishe with a great plague. For yf I go into the felde: lo, it lyeth all full of slayne men. Yf I come into the ctyte: lo, they be all famished of hunger.

D Per, theyr prophetes also & prelates shall be led into an vnkowne lande.

Haste thou then vterly forsaken Iuda? Dost thou so abhorre Sion? Hast thou so plagued vs, that we can be healed no more? * We looked for peace, and there cometh no good: for the tyme of helth, and lo: here is nothing but trouble. We knowledg (O Lorde) all oure mysdedes, and the synnes of oure fathers y^e we haue offended the. We not displeased, (O Lorde) for thy names sake, * forget not thy louyng kyndnesse. Remember the thyng of thyne honoure, breake not the couenaunt, that y^e hast made with vs. * Are there any amonge the Gods of the Gentyles, that sende rayne or geue the showres of heauen? Or may the heuens drop rayne without thy commaundement? Dost not y^e is, O Lorde our God in whom we trust? Per Lorde: thou dost all these thynges.

Then spake the Lorde vnto me. * Though Moses and Samuell stode before me, yet haue I no hert to this people. Dyme them away that they may go out of my syght. And yf they saye vnto the. Whither shal we go? Then tell them: The Lorde geueth you this answer. * Some vnto death, some the swerde, some to hunger, some into captiuetie. For I wyl bypunge foure plagis vpon them sayth the Lorde. The swerde shal slaye them the dogges shall teare them in peaces, * the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the earth shall eate them vp, and destroye them. I wyl scatter them about also in all kyngdomes & landes to be plagued: because of * Manasses sonne of Hezekia kyng of Iuda, for the thynges that he dyd in Ierusalem.

Who shal then haue ppytie vpon y^e, O Ierusalem? Who shal be for thy? Or who shall make intercession, to obtayne peace for the: sleeping thou goest from me, and turnest backe warde, sayeth the Lorde: Therefore, I dyd stretch out mine hande agaynst y^e to destroye the, and I haue bene for y^e so long y^e I am wery. I haue scattered them abrode wth the fanne of euery syde of the land. * I haue wasted my people and destroyed them. Yet they haue had no luste to turne from theyr owne wayes. I haue made theyr wyndowes moynombze, then the sandes of y^e see. Vpon y^e mothers of their chyldre dyd I byng a destroyer in y^e none daye. * Sodenly and vnawares dyd I send a feare vpon theyr ctytes. The y^e hath bozned seuē chyldren, hath none, yet hert is full of sorrowe.

* The Sunne doth fayle her in the cleare daye, she is confounded & sayntie for verye upnes. As for those y^e remaine, I wyl deliuer them vnto the swerde before theyr enemies sayth the Lorde. * O mother, alas that euer thou dydest beare me, a brawler & rebuher of the whole lande: Though I neuer lent nor receaued vpon vsurp, yet all men speake euell vpon me. And the Lorde answered me: Merely thy remnant shal haue welth. Come not I to the, when thou art in trouble: & helpe the, when thyne enemy oppresseth the: Dost one y^e hurt another: or one metall y^e cometh from the North, another? * As for thy riches and treasure, I wyl geue them out in to a praye, not for any money, but because of all thy synnes, that y^e hast done in all thy costes. * And I wyl bypunge the with thyne enemies into a lande that thou knowest not: for the fyre y^e is kyndled in my indignacion, shal burne you vp.

O Lorde, thou knowest: therefore remember me, and viset me, deliuer me fro my persecuters. Take me not from this lyfe in the tyme of the longe pacyence, thou knowest, that for thy sake I suffer rebuke. * When I had founde thy wordes, I dyd eate them vp greedely: they haue made my hert ioyful and glad. For thy name was called vpon of me, O Lorde God of hostes. I dwell not amonge the scoyners, neyther is my dellyte therein: but I dwell onely in the feare of thy hande, for y^e haste fylled me with bytternesse. Shall my heuiness endure for euer? Are my plagis then so great, that they maye neuer be healed? Wylte thou be as one that is false: and as a water, that falleth: and cannot contynue? Vpon these wordes, thus sayde y^e Lorde vnto me. Yf thou wylt turne agayne, I shal set the in my seruyce: and yf thou wylt sake out the thynges y^e is pcepyous from y^e vyle, thou shalt be euen as myne owne mouth. * They shal conuerte vnto the, but turne not y^e vnto them: and so shall I make the a stronge wall agaynst this people. * They shal fyghe agaynst the, but they shal not preuaile. For I my selfe wyl be with the, to helpe the: and and deliver the, sayth the Lorde. And I wyl take the out of the bandes of the wycked, and deliver the out of the bandes of tyrantes.

The. xvi. Chapter.

The prophet the myserie of the Jewes. He sheweth that the worshyping of images and the contempe of Gods lawe, is cause of thes myserie. He p[ro]ph[et]yeth the captivite of Babilon, and thes despueraun & cometh agayne. The callinge of the Gentyles.

Thus sayde the Lorde unto me: Thou shalt take the no wyfe, nor beget children in this place. For of the chyldren that are borne in this place of their mothers that have borne them, and of thes fathers, that have begotten them in this lande: thus sayth the Lorde: They shall dye an horrible death, & nomam shall wepe for them nor bury them: but they shall lye as donge vpon the earth. They shall perishe thowowe the swerde and hunger, & their bodies shall be meate for the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the earth. For thus sayth the Lorde: So not thou in unto them, nor come to mourne and wepe for them: for I have take my peace fro this people: sayth the Lorde) p[er]ca, my fauour and my myserie. And in this lande shall they lye, olde and yonge, and shall not be buried: noman shall beweepe them, noman shall clyp in thame hym selfe for them.

There shall not one v[is]ite an other, to mourne with them for thes deede, or to com-forte them. One shall not offere an other the cup of consolacion, to forget thes hevynesse for father and mother. * Thou shalt not go into thes feast house, to syt downe, to eate or drynke with them. For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: * Beholde, I shall take awaye out of this place, the voyce of myrd and gladnesse: the voyce of the byrde grome and of the byde: p[er]ca, and that in your houses, that ye make ye it.

Howe when thou thewest this people all these wordes, & they saye unto the: * Wherefore hath the Lorde deuyed all this greate plage for vs? Or what is the offence and syn that we haue done agaynst the Lorde oure God? Then make thou them this answer.

* Because poure fathers haue forsaken me, (sayth the Lorde) and haue walked after strange goddes, whom they honoured and worshipped: but me haue they forsaken and haue not kept my lawe. * And ye with your hamful blasphemys, haue excreaded & wickednesse of your fathers. For euery one of you hath folowed the frowarde and euill p[ro]- uocation of his owne herte, and is not repent unto me.

Therefore wyl I cast you out of this lande, into a lande that ye and poure fathers knowe not: and there shall ye serue strange goddes daye and nyght, there wyl I shewe you no fauour. * Beholde therefore (sayth the Lorde) the dayes are com, that it shall nomore be sayde: The Lorde lyueth whiche brought the chyldren of Israel out of the lande of Egypt: but it shall be sayd: the Lorde lyueth, & brought the chyldren of Israel from the north, and from all landes where he had scattered the for: I wyl bringe them agayne in to the lande that I gaue vnto thes fathers.

Beholde (sayth the Lorde) * I wyl sende out many fshers to take them, and after I wyl sende out many hunters to hunt them out, from all mountaynes and hylles, and out of the canes of stone. For myne eyes beholde all thes wayes, and they can not be hyd fro my face: neyther can thes wycked dedes be kept close out of my syght. But first wyl I sufficiently rewarde thes hamful blasphemys and synnes, because they haue defyled my land: namely with thes synnyng ydols and with the carsons of thes abhominations, wherewith they haue fylled myne herptage. * O Lorde, my strength, my power & refuge in tyme of trouble. The Gentyles shall come vnto the, from the endes of the worlde, and saye: Verely, our fathers haue cleaued vnto lyes, thes ydols are but wayne and vnyprofitable. Howe can a man make those his goddes, whiche are not hable to be goddes? And therefore I wyl ones teache thes, sayth the Lorde: I wyl shewe them my hand and my power, that they maye knowe, that my name is the Lorde.

The. xvii. Chapter.

The frowardnesse of the Jewes. Cursed be those that put thes confidence in man, and those blessed that trust to God. sheweth that God is the fearer of the herte. The lyping waters are forsaken. The halow wyng of the shaboth is commanded.

Our syn (Ope of the trybe of Juda) is writen in the table of your hertes and grauen so vpon the edges of your alters with a penne of yron, and with an adamant clawe, that as the fathers thynke vpon thes chyldren, so thynke you also vpon your alters, woddes, thp. he trees, hye hylles, mountaynes & feldes. * Therefore, I wyl make my mount that standeth in the felde al your substance and treasure to be spoyled, for the great syn that ye haue done vpon your hye places thowowout all the coastes of your land. Ye shall be cast out also fro the herptage that I gaue you. And I wyl subdue you vnder the heuie bondage of your encynges, in a lande that ye knowe not. For ye haue myni-stred synne to myne indignacion: whiche shall burne euermoze. Thus sayth the Lorde: * Cursed be the man that putteth his trust in man, and that taketh helpe for his arme: and he whose hert departeth fro the Lorde: he shall be lyke the heath, that groweth in the wildernesse. As for the good thynge, that is for to come

to come, he shall not se it, but dwell in a dype place of the wylbernelle, in a salt and vnoccupied lande. * Blessed is the man, that putteth his trust in the Lorde, and whose hope is the Lorde him selfe. * For he shall be as a tree that is planted by the waters syde, whiche spreadeth out the roote vnto moystnesse, whō the heate can not harme, when it cometh: but his leafe shall be grene. And though there growe but lytle frute, bycause of drouth, yet is he not carefull, but he neuer leaueth of to bringe forth frute. Amonge all thinges man hathe the mooste dysceyffull and stubburne herte.

C Who shall then knowe it? * Euen I the Lorde searche oute the grounde of the herte, and trye the reynes, and rewarde euery mā accordyng to his wayes, and accordyng to the frute of his workes.

* The partryche maketh a nest of egges, which she layed not. He cometh by rype helle, but not ryghtroulye. In the myddest of his lyfe must he leaue them behynde hym, and at the last be founde a very foole. But thou (O Lorde) whose throne is moost gloriously, excellent, and of moost antiquitie, which dwellest in the place of our holy rest: Thou art the comfort of Israel. All they that forsake the, shall be confounded: all they that depart from the, shall be wyrtten in earth: * for they haue forsaken the Lorde the very conducte of the waters of lyfe.

D Heale me, O Lorde, and I shall be whole: saue thou me and I shall be saued: for thou art my prayse. Beholde, these men say vnto me: Where is the worde of the Lorde? (Let it come now.) Where as I neuerthelesse, obediently folowed the as a shepherd, and haue not vncalled taken this offyce vpon me, this knowest thou well. My wordes also were ryght before the. Be not nowe terrible vnto me, O Lorde, * for thou arte he in whome I hope, when I am in payll. Let my persecuters be confounded, but not me: let them be a frayed, and not me. Thou shalt bring vpon them the tyme of theyr plage, and shalt destroye them ryght soze.

Thus hath the Lorde sayd vnto me: * Go and stande vnder the gate wherthorowe the people and the kinges of Iuda go out and in, vnder all the gates of Ierusalem, and say vnto them: Heare the worde of the Lorde, ye kynges of Iuda, and althou people of Iuda and all the cytyzens of Ierusalem, that goo t' worde this gate. Thus the Lord commaundeth. * Take yeede for your lyues, that ye carrye no burthen vpon you in the Sabboth to bringe it thorowe the gates of Ierusalem: ye shall beare no burthe also out of your houses in the sabboth. Ye shall do no labour therein, but halowe the Sabboth, * as I commaunded your fathers. Howbeit, they obeyed me not, neyther hearkened they vnto me: but were obstinate and stubburne, and neyther obeyed me, nor receyued my correction. Neuerthelesse, yf ye wil heare me (sayth the Lorde) and beare no burthen in to the cytie thorowe this gate vpon the Sabboth: Yf ye wil halowe the Sabboth, so that ye doo no worke therein: then shall there go thorowe the gates of this cytie kynges and princes, that shall sit vpon the throne of Dauid: They shall be carryed vpon charettes, and ryde vpon horses both they and their princes. Pea whole Iuda and all the cytyzens of Ierusalem shall go herethorowe: and this cytie shall euer be the more and more inhabited. There shall come men also from the cyties of Iuda, from about Ierusalem, and from the lande of Ben Iamin, from the playne felde, from the moystaynes and from the wylbernelle, which shall bring burnt offrynges, sacrifices, oblations, and incence, and offre vp thankesgyuynge in the house of the Lorde. But yf ye wil not be obedient vnto me, to halowe the Sabboth, so yf ye will beare your burthens thorowe the gates of Ierusalem vpon the Sabboth. Then shall I let fyre vpon the gates of Ierusalem and it shall burne vpon the houses of Ierusalem and noman shall be able to quenche it.

God sheweth by the example of a potters, that it is in his power to destroye the despyers of his worde, and to helpe them agayne when they amende. The contrarye of the Jewes agaynst Jeremie: His prayer agaynst his aduersaries.

This is an other communicacion that God had with Jeremie, sayinge: Arise, and go downe into the potters house, and ther shall I tel y more of my mynde. Now when I came to the potters house, I founde him making his worke vpon a whele. The vessel that the potters made of claye, bye amonge his handes: So he began a newe, & made an other vessel accordyng to his mynde. Then sayd the Lorde thus vnto me: * Way not I do with you as this potters doth, O ye house of Israel, sayth the Lorde: Behold, ye house of Israel, ye are in my hande, euen as the claye in the potters hande.

* When I take in hande to rote out, to destroy, or to walke a waye any people or kingdom: yf that people (agaynst whom I haue thus deuyled) conuerthe from theyr wyckednesse: I repent of the plage, that I deuyled to bringe vpon them. * Agayne, when I take in hande to buyde or to plant a people or a kingdom, yf the same people do euyl before me, and beare not my voyce: I repent of the good that I deuyle for them.

Speake now thetherfore vnto whol Iuda: and to them that dwell at Ierusalem. Thus sayth saith the Lorde: Beholde, I am deuyfynge a plage for you, and am takynge a thyng in hande agaynst you.

* Therefore, let every man turne from his wyll waye, take upon you the thyng that is good, and do right. But they sayd: No more of this, * we wyll folowe our owne ymaginations, and do every man accordyng to the wyllfulnesse of his owne mynde.

Therefore thus sayth the Lorde: Like amonge the hepten, if any man haue herde suche doctryne thynges, as the daughters of Syon hath done. Shall not the snowe (that melteth vpon the stonye rockes of Libanus) mowen the feldest? Or maye the spynges of waters be so grauen awaye, that they run nomore, yue moystnesse, nor make frutful? But my people hath so forgotten me, that they haue made sacrifice vnto vayne goddes, and their prophetes make them fal in theyr wayes from the auncient pathes, and to go into afore waye not vled to be troden of iust men. Whereforow they haue brought theyr lande into an euellastynge wyldernes, and saye: * So that whosoever trauayleth ther by, shalbe abashed, and wag theyr heedes.

With an East wynde wyll I scat tre them before theyr enemye. And when theyr destruccion cometh, I wyll turne my backe vpon them, but not my face. The sayd they: come let vs ymagin somethynge agaynst this Iere- mye: for the prestes shall not be destitute of the lawe, neither shall the wyse men be destitute of counsaile, nor the prophetes destitute of the word of God. Come, and let vs smyte him with the tonge, and let vs marke all his wordes: Conspyde me, O Lorde, and heare the voyce of myne enemies * What they recom- pence euill for good: for they haue dygged a pyt for my soule. * Remember, how that I haue befoze the, to speake good for them and to turne awaye thy wrath from them.

* Therefore, let theyr chyldren dye of hun- gre, let them be oppressed with the swerde. Let theyr wyues be robbed of theyr chyldre and become wydowes: let theyr husbandes be slayne, let theyr yonge men be kyled with the swerde in the felde. Let the nyse be herde out of theyr houses, whē the murdherer com- meth sodaynly vpon them.

* For they haue dygged a pyt to take me, and layed snares for my fete. Yet Lorde thou knowest all theyr counsaile, that they haue deuysed to slaye me. For gyue not theyr wickednesse, and let not theyr synne be put out of thy syght: but let them be iudged befoze þe as the gylte: This shalt thou do vnto them in the tyme of thyne indignacion.

The. xix. Chapter.

Wherein is shewed the destruction of Ierusalem, for the contempt and despyte of the wordes of God.

hus sayd the Lorde: So thy waye, I and bye the an cartthen pytcher, and bypnyng forth the Senatours & chefe prestes vnto the valley of the chyldren of Hennom, which lyeth befoze the doze that is made of bypcke, and there the the wordes, that I shall tell the, and saye thus vnto them: heare the worde of the Lorde, ye kynge of Iuda and ye cytyzens of Ierusalem.

* Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I wyll bypnyge suche a plage vpon this place, that the eares of all þe heare it shall glowe. And that bycause they haue forsaken me, and vnhalowed this place and haue offred in it vnto straunge goddes: whome neyther they, theyr fathers, nor the kynge of Iuda hath knowne. They haue kyled this place also with the bloude of innocentes, * for they haue set vp an alter vnto Baal, to burne theyr chyldren for a burnt-offryng vnto Baal, whiche I neyther com- maunded, nor charged them, neyther thought ones ther vpon.

Beholde therefore: the tyme cometh (sayth the Lorde) that this place shal nomore be cal- led Topheth, nor the valle of the chyldren of Hennom, but the valle of slaughter. For in this place wyll I slaye the Senatours of Iuda and Ierusalem, and kyll them downe with the swerde in the syght of theyr enne- mies, and of them that seke their lyues. And theyr dede carkasses wyll I gyue to be meate for the foules of the ayre, and the beastes of the felde. And I wyll make this cytie so de- solate and despyled, * that whosoever goeth therby, shalbe abashed and iest vpon her, by cause of all her plagues.

* I wyll fede them also with the fleshe of theyr sonnes and theyr daughters. * Yea, every one shall eate vp an other, in the belie- gyng and straytnesse, wherewith theyr enne- mies (that seke theyr lyues) shal kepe the in. And the pytcher shalt thou breake in þe syght of the men that shalbe with the, and saye vn- to them: Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes.

* Euen so wyll I destrope this people and cytie, as a man breaketh an cartthen vessel, that cannot be made whole agayne.

* In Topheth shal they be buried, for they shal haue none other place. Thus wyll I do vnto this place also, sayth the Lorde: and to them that dwell therein: yea I wyll do to this cytie as vnto Topheth. For þe houses of Je- rusalem, and the houses of the kynge of Ju- da shalbe defyled, lyke as Topheth, bycause of all the houses, in whose parlours they dyd sacrifice vnto all the hoste of heauen, and powred bynke offerynges vnto straunge goddes. And so Jeremye came from To- pheth, where the Lorde had sent hym to pro- phesye, and stode in the courte of the house of the Lorde, and spake to all the people: Thus sayth sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I wyl byng vpon this cytie and vpon euery towne aboute it, all the plages that I haue deuised agaynst them: * for they haue ben obstinate, and wolde not obey my warnynges.

The .xx. Chapter.

Jeremy is smitten and cast into prison for preachyng of the worde of God. He prophete. yeth the captiuitie of Babylon. He complayneth that he is a mocking stocke for the worde of God. He is compelled by the spirit to preache the worde.

When Phasur the preest, the son of Emet, chiefe in the house of the Lorde, herde Jeremy preache so stedfastly: * he smote Jeremy, & put hym in the stocks, that are by the hye gate of Ben Jamin, in the house of the Lorde. The next daye folowynge Phasur brought Jeremy oute of the stocks agayne. Then sayd Jeremy vnto hym: The Lorde shall call the nomore Phasur (that is excellent and increasynge) but Wagoz (that is fearful and afrayed) euery where. For thus sayth the Lorde: beholde, I wyl make the afrayed euen thy self, and al that fauoure the, whi: h shall perpyche with the swerde of theyr enemyes, euen befoze thy face.

And I wyl gyue whole Iuda vnder the power of the kynge of Babylon, which shall carry some vnto Babylon prisoners, and slay some with the swerde. * Moreover, all the substance of this lande, al theyr prectous & gorgeous workes, all costynesse, and al the treasure of the kynge of Iuda, wyl I gyue into the handes of theyr enemyes which shal spoyle them, and carpe them vnto Babylon. But as for the (W) Phasur thou shalt be carryed vnto Babylō with all thyne household, and to Babylon shalt thou com, where thou shalt dye, and be buryed: thou and all thy fauourers to whom thou hast preached lyes. O Lorde: If I am disceyued, then hast thou disceyued me: thou hast dealt strongly, and hast preuayled, & makest me stronge agayne. * Al the day long am I despised & laughed to scorne of euery mā: because I haue now preached longe agaynst malicious tyrannye, and shewed them of destruction. * For the which cause they cast the worde of the Lorde in my teeth, and take me euer to the worst.

Wherfore, I thought fro hence forth, not to speake of hym, nor to preache any more in his name. But the worde of the Lorde was a very burnynge fyre in my herte, and in my bones: which when I wolde haue stopped, I myght not. For why? * I herde so many derisions and blasphemies on euery spde of me complayne vpo hym, saye they: and we wyl tel his tale: yea, euen of myne owne companions. and such as were conuersant with me, went about to murder me, saying: vpon hym, we shal one waye or other begyle hym:

and preuayle agaynst hym, and be auenged of hym.

But the Lorde stode by me lyke a myghty gyant: therfore my persecuters fell, and couide do nothyng. They shal be soze confounded, for they haue done vnwisely, they shal haue an euerlastyng shame. * And now, O Lorde of hostes, thou ryghteous searcher, (which knowest the reynes, and the very dettes) let me se them punished, for vnto the, I comyt my cause.

Synge vnto the Lorde, and praye hym, for he hath deliuered the soule of the oppressed from the hande of the violent. * Cursed be the daye wherein I was bozne: vnhappye be the daye, wherein my mother brought me forth. Cursed be the man, that brought me farther the tydynge to make hym glad, saying: thou hast gotten a sonne. Let it happen vnto y man, as to the cyties: which the Lorde turned vpsyde downe. Let hym beare cying in the moynynge, and at none day lamentable howlynge. Why shelt thou not me, a lone as I came out of my mothers wombe? O that my mother had bene my graue her selfe, that the byrth myght not haue come out, but remayned styll in her. * Wherfore came I forth of my mothers wombe? To haue experience of labour and sorowe, and to leade my lyfe with shame.

The prophecye that zedekiah hath taken, and the cytie burned.

Here are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy: what tyme as kynge zedekiah sent vnto hym Phasur the sonne of Melchias, & Sophonias the son of Maasias preest, saying: * Aske counsaile at the Lorde (we praye the) of our behalfe, for Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon besiegeth vs: if the Lorde (peradventure) wil deale with vs, according to his marueylous power, & take him fro vs. Then spake Jeremy: Gyue zedekias this answer. Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel: beholde, I wyl turne backe the weapons that ye haue in poure handes, wherewith ye fyght agaynst the kynge of Babylon and the Caldees which besiege you round about the walles: and I wyl byng them together in to the myddest of this cytie, and I myselfe wyl fyght agaynst you, with an outstretched hand and with a myghty arme, in great displeasure and terrible wrath, & wil synete them that dwell in this cytie: yea bothe men and catell shal dye of a great pestilence.

* And after this (sayeth the Lorde) I shall deliuer zedekias the kynge of Iuda, and his seruantes, his people (and such as are escaped in the cytie from the pestilence, swerde, and hungre) into the power of Nabuchodonozor of Babilon: p̄ca, into the handes of theyr enemyes, into the handes of those flowe vpon theyr lyues, whiche shal sympte them with the swerde, they shal not p̄tie the they shal not spare them, they shal haue no mercy vpon them.

¶ And vnto this people thou shalt say: Thus saith the Lorde: beholde, I laye befoze you the waye of lyfe & death. ¶ Whoso abyrdeth in this cytie, shall peryshe: eyther with the sword, with hungre, or pestilence. But who shalt go out to holde on the Chaldees parte, shall belieue it, he shal saue his lyfe, and shal wyne his soule for a praye. ¶ For I haue set my face agaynst this cytie (sayth the Lorde) to plage it, and to do it no good. It must be gyn into the hande of the kynge of Babilon, and be dynt with fyre.

¶ And vnto the house of the kynge of Iuda say thus: heare the worde of the Lorde (D house of Dauid) for thus sayth the Lorde: Wilt thou ryghteousnesse, and that soone: de-liuer the oppressed from vpolent power: or my terrible wyath breake out lyke a fyre and burne, so that no man maye queneche it, because of the wyckednesse of your ymaginations. ¶ Beholde (sayth the Lorde) I wyl come vpon you that dwell in the valleyes, in the charytes, and saye: Cusch, who wil make vs affrayed: or who wyl come into our houses: for I wyl vylite you (sayth the Lorde) because of the wyckednesse of your inuentions, and wyl kyndle suche a fyre in your bond, as shal consume all that is about you.

¶ The xxii. Chapter.

¶ The xxii. Chapter of Iuda to iudgement and righteousnesse: whye Ierusalem is brought into captiuitie. The death of helium the sonne of Josias is prophesied.

¶ Thus sayde the Lorde: So do thoue into the house of the kynge of Iuda, and saye there these wordes, and saye: heare the worde of the Lorde, thou kynge of Iuda, that sittest in the kyngly seate of Da-uid: thou and thy seruantes and thy people that go in and out at this gate. Thus the Lorde commaundeth: kepe equitie and rygh-teousnesse, deliuer the oppressed from the power of the violent: do not greue nor oppresse the stranger, the fatherlesse nor the wydow and shed no innocent bloude in this place.

¶ And if ye kepe these thynges saythfullpe, then shall there com in at y^e doze of this house lynges to lyt vpon Dauids seate: they shall be trayed in charettes, and ryde vpon horses bath they and theyr seruantes, and theyr people. But if ye wyl not be obedyent vnto these commaundementes: ¶ I sweare by myne selfe (sayth the Lorde) this house shall be waste. For thus hath the Lorde spoken vnto the kynge house of Iuda. Thou shalt be brought into me the heed of Libanus. Shall I not make the so waste (and thy cyties also) that no man shall dwel therein: I wyl prepare a destroyer with his weapōs for the, to be downe the espycally Cedze trees, and to cast them in the fyre.

¶ And all the people that go by this cytie shal speake one to an other: ¶ Wherfoze hath the Lorde done thus vnto this noble cytie?

¶ Then shall it be answered: ¶ bycause they haue broken the couenaunt of the Lorde their God, & haue worshipped and serued straunge goddesses. ¶ Mourn not ouer the deed, and be not wo for them, but be soze for hym that departeth awaye: for he commeth not agayne, and seeth his natyue countree nomoze. For thus sayth the Lorde: as touchyng Helium the sonne of Josias kynge of Iuda, whiche raygned after his father, and is carped oute of this place, he shall neuer come hyther a-gayne, for he shall dye in the place, wher unto he is led captiue, and shall se this lande no moze. ¶ Woe wozth him that buyldeth his house with vnryghteousnesse, & his parlours with the good that he hath gotten by violence: which neuer recompenceth his neygghours labour, nor payeth him his hyre. He thinketh in hym selfe, I wyl buylde me a wyde house and gorgeous parlours. He causeth wynd-owes to be hewen therein, and the spynges and ioystes maketh he of Cedze, and paynteth them with synaper. Thynkest thou to raygne now, that thou prouokeste me to wyath with the Cedze trees?

¶ Wd not thy father eate and dypnke, and prosperer wel, as long as he dealt with equi-tie, and ryghteousnesse? Yea, when he helped the oppressed and pooze to theyr ryght, then prospered he well.

¶ From whence came this, but onely bycause he had me befoze his eyes, sayth the Lorde: Heuerthelesse, as for thyne eyes and thyne berte, they loke vpon couptousnesse, to shed innocent bloude, to do wronge, and violence.
¶ And therfoze thus sayth the Lorde agaynst Iehoakim the sonne of Josias king of Iuda They shall not mourne for hym (as they vse to do) alas brother, alas syster. Acyther shal they saye vnto him: Alas sy, alas for that noble pynce. But as an asse shall he be buryed, corrupt, and be cast without the gates of Ierusalem.

¶ Clyme by the hyll of Libanus (O thou doughter Syon) lyft vp thy voyce vnto Balan, crye from all partes: for all thy louers are destroyed. I gaue the warnynge, whyle thou wast yet in prosperyte. But thou saydest: I wyl not heare. And this maner hast thou vsed from thy yowth that thou woldest neuer heare my voyce. All the herdmen shal be dryen with the wynde, and thy derlynges shal be carped awaye into captiuitie. Then shal thou be brought to shame and confusio because of all thy wyckednesse: thou shalt dwell cedre trees. * How lytle shalt thou be regarded whē thy sorowes and panges come vpon the as a woman trauallyng wchilde.

* As trulpy as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde:) Though Conanias the sonne of Jehoakim, kyng of Iuda weare the signet of my right hande, yet wyl I plucke hym of. And I wyl gyue the into the power of them that seke to slaye the, and into the power of them that thou fearest, into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, and into the power of the Chaldees. Moreover, I wyl send the and thy mother that bare the into a straunge land where ye were not borne, and there shall ye dye. But as for the lande that ye wyl desyre to retourne vnto, ye shall neuer come at it a-gayne. This man Conanias shall be lyke an ymage robbed and torne in peces, which plea-seth noman, for all his apparell. Wherefore, both he and his seed shall be sent awaye, and cast out into a lande that they knowe not.

O thou earth, earth, earth: heare thou worde of the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde: Wylte this man amonge the outlawes, for no pro-phete shall this man haue all his lyfe long.
Neither shall any of his seed be so happy, as to lyt vpon the seate of Dauid: and to beare rule in Iuda.

Chapter. xliii.

The speaketh agaynst cup. i. Curates that make haueche of the flocke of the Lorde. Of the conuersion of the renant of the Iewes to the lord. The conuersion of the true Shepherde. Chyke is prophesied. Agaynst false prophetes: when a prophet preacheth the word of God God conuerteth the hertes of the hearers. Agaynst prophetes that preach lyes vnder the name of God. The impacts of false prophetes.

Whe vnto the Shepherdes, that destroie and scatter my flocke, sayeth the Lorde: Wherefore, this is the commaundment of the Lorde God of Israel, vnto the Shepherdes that fede my people: Ye scatter and thrust out my flock and loke not vpon them. Therefore now wyl I vylite the wyckednesse of your ymaginations, sayeth the Lorde: And wyl gather to-gyther the remnant of my flocke fro al landes that I had dyscured them vnto, and wyl brynge them agayne to theyr pastures, that they maye growe and encrease. I wyl set Shepherdes also ouer them, which shall fede them. They shall nomore feare and dreade, for there shall none of them be lost, sayeth the Lorde. * Beholde, the tyme commeth, sayeth the Lorde: that I wyl raple vp the ryghtous branche of Dauid: which kyng shall beare rule, and he shall prosper with wysdom, and shall set vp equitie and rightousnesse agayne in the earth.

In his tyme shall Iuda be saued, and * Irael shall dwell without feare. And this is the name that they shall call hym: * euen the Lorde our ryghtousnesse. * And therefore he holde, the tyme commeth, sayeth the Lorde: that it shall be nomore sayde: the Lordelyueth, whiche broughte the chyldren of Israel out of the land of Egypt. But the Lordelyueth, whiche broughte forth, and led the seed of the house of Israel out of the Northlande and from all countreys where I had scattered them: and they shall dwell in theyr owne lande agayne.

My herte breaketh in my body, because of the false prophetes, all my bones shake. I am become lyke a drunken man (that by the reaso of wyne take no rest) for very feare of the Lorde and his holy wordes: Because the lande is full of aduoutrers, and thowme swearynge, it mourneth, * and the pleasant pastures of the desert are dyed vp: Yea, the waye that men take is wicked, and they go neraunce is nothyng lyke the holy word of the Lorde. For prophetes and the prestes them selues are polluted wchylde, and they wyckednesse haue I founde in my house, sayeth the Lorde. Wherefore, theyr waye shall be slupperpe in the darkenesse, wherein they maye sticke and fall. For I wyl brynge a plage vpon them, euen the yere of theyr wysitacion, sayeth the Lorde. I haue sene folpe amonge the prophetes of Samaria, that preached for Baal, and dyscured my people of Israel.

I haue sene also amonge the prophetes of Jerusalem soule aduoutry, and presumptuous lyes. They take the moost shamefull men by the hand, flatterynge them, so that they cannot retourne from theyr wyckednesse. All these w-theyr cytyzins are vnto me as Sodome, and as the inhabytours of Gomorre.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes concernynge the prophetes: * Beholde, I wyl fede them with wormewood, and make them drynke the water of gall. For from the prophetes of Jerusalem is hypocryse come into all the lande.

And therefore the Lorde of hostes gyueth you this warnynge: * Heare not the wordes of the prophetes that preache vnto you, and discerne you: truly they teache you vanytie, for they speake the meanyng of theyr owne herte, and not out of the mouth of the Lorde.
* They saye vnto the that despyse me: The Lorde hath spoken it: Truly, ye shall prosper ryght well. And vnto all them that walke after the lust of theyr owne herte, they saye: Truly, there shall no misfortune happen you.
For who hath sytten in the counsaile of the Lorde? he hath herd and vnderstand, what he is about to do: Who hath marked his deuple, and herde it? * Behold, the tyme commeth of the Lorde (that is, his indignacion) shall goe forth, and a violent wynde wynde shall fall downe vpon the heed of the vngodlye.

And

Thus shall euery man saye to the Prophet: what answer hath the Lorde giuen

* And lyke as thou knowest the nough-te fygges which may not be eaten, they are to euill: Euen so wyl I sayth the Lord let Iudekias the kynge of Iuda (yea, and all his prynces, and the resydue of Ierusalem, that remainye ouer into this lande, and them also that dwell in Egypte,) to be verred and placed in all kyngdomes and landes. And wyl I make them to be a *reprofe, a come by word laughyng stocke and shame, in all the places, where I shall scattre them. I wyl sende the swearde, hungre and pestilence, amonge them, vntyll I haue cleane consumed them

The Prophecye

out of the lande, that I gaue vnto them and they fathers.

The xxv. Chapter.

Jeremie propheseth that they shalbe in captiuitie. lxx. yeres, because they contemned and despised the word of God. He sheweth that after the lxx. yeres, the Babylonians shalbe destroyed: The destruction of all nations is prophesied.
He moueth the prestes of the nations to weeping.

A Sermon that was gyuen vnto Jeremie, vpon all the people of Juda. In the fourth yere of Je-hoakim the son of Josias kyng of Juda, that was in the fyfthe yere of Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babylō.
Which sermon Jeremie the prophete made vnto all the people of Juda, and to all the in-habytours of Jerusalem on this maner.

From the thirtiene yere of Josias the son of Amon kyng of Juda, vnto this present daye (that is euen. xliii. yere) the worde of the Lorde hath bene commytted vnto me.

* And so I haue spoken to you, I haue rylen by early, I haue gyuen you warnyng in season, but ye wold not haere me. * Though the Lorde hath sent his seruautes, all the prophetes vnto you in season: Yet wolde ye not obey, ye wold not encline your eares to here.

He sayd: * turne agayne every man from his euill waye, and from your wycked yma-ginacions, and so shall ye dwell for euer in the lande that the Lorde promysed you, and your forefathers. And go not after straunge goddess, serue them not, worshyp them not, & angre me not with the workes of your han-des: then wyl I not punyssh you. Neuerthelesse, ye wolde not heare me (sayth the Lorde) but haue defyed me with the workes of your hands, to your owne great harme.

Wherefore, thus sayeth the Lord of hostes:

* Because ye haue not hearkened vnto my worde, lo, I wyl sende out and call for al the people that dwell in the North, sayeth the Lorde, and wyl prepare Nabuchodonozor the kyng of * Babylon my seruaunte, and wyl byng them vpon this lande, and vpon all that dwell therein, and vpon all the people that are aboute them: and wyl utterly roote them out. I wil make of the a wyldernesse, amockage and a continual desert.

* Whereouer, I wyl take from them the voyce of gladnesse and solace, the voyce of happynesse and the bypde, the voyce of the annoynted with the crellettes: and this hole lande shall become a wylderneesse, and these nacions shall serue the kyng of Babylon, thre score yeres and ten. * After the lxx. yeres are expyred, I wyl visyt also the wyckednesse of the kyng of Babylon & his people, sayth the Lorde: yea, and the land of the Chaldees and wyl make it a perpetuall wylderneesse, and wyl fulfyll all my wordes vpon the lande, which I haue deuyled agaynst it: yea, all that is wrytten in this booke whiche Jereime hath prophesied of all people: so that they also shall be sabdued vnto dyuers nations and great kynges: * for I wyl recompence them accordyng to theyr dedes & workes of theyr owne handes.

For thus hath the Lorde God of Israel spoken vnto me: Take this wyne cuppe of indignacion fro my hande, that thou mayest cause all the people to whom I sende the, for to drynke of it: that when they haue broken therof, they maye be mad, and oute of theyr wyttes, when the swearde commeth that I wyl send, amonge them. Then toke I the cuppe from the Lordes hande, and made all people to drynke thereof, vnto whome the Lorde had sent me.

But first, the cytie of Jerusalem, and al the cyties of Juda, theyr kynges and princes, to make them desolate, waste, despyled, and bylled at, and cursed, accordyng as it is come to passe this daye. Yea, and Pharao the kyng of Egypt, his seruautes, his princes and his people all togyther, one with an other. And al kynges of the lande of Hus, all kynges of the Philistines land, Alalon, Azab, Accaron, and the remnaunte of Moab, the Edomytes, the Moabytes, and the Am-monytes, all the kynges of Tyus and Sy-don: the kynges of the Isles that are beyonde the see: Dedan, Thema, Buz, and all them that dwell in the uttermoost partes of the world: all the kynges of Araby, and (generally) all the kynges that dwell in the deserte: all the kynges of Jemet, all the kynges of Elam, al the kynges of the Medes, all the kynges to-warde the North, whether they be farr, or nye, every one agaynst his neyghbours: yea and all the kyngdomes that are vpon the hole earth. The kyng of Serach sayde he: wyl drynke with them also.

Wherefore, saye thou vnto them: This is the commaundement of the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Drynke, and be drunken: spewe and fall, that ye neuer aryse, and that thorowe the swerde, whiche I wyl sende amonge you. But yf they wyl not receyue the cuppe of thy hande, and drynke it: then tell them: Thus both the Lorde of hostes thra-ten you: drynke it ye shal, and that shortly.
For lo, * I begynne to plage the cytie, that my name is gyuen vnto: thynke ye then? I wyl leaue you vnpunished: Ye shall not go quyte: for why? I call for a swerde vpon all the inhabytours of the earth: sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

Wherefore, tell them all these wordes, and saye vnto them: * The Lorde shall crye from aboue, and let his voyce be hearde from his holpe habytacyn. With a great noyse shall he crye

Jeremye from his court regall. He shall geue a great voice (like the grape gatherers) and the sound thereof shall be heard vnto the endes of the worlde. For the Lord hath a iudgement to geue vpon all people, & wyl hold his court of iustice with all fleshe, & punish the vngod by sayth the Lord.

For thus sayth the Lord of Hostes: * Be holde, a miserable plage shall goe frome one people to another, and a great stozmy water shall arise from all the endes of the earth. And the same dape shall the Lord hym selfe slaye them, from one ende of the earth to another.
There shall no mone be made for any of the, now gathered vp, none buried: but shall lye as dunge vpon the ground.

Where (O ye shepherdes) & crye spyn-ners selues with allbes. O ye Rammes of the flocke: for the tyme of poure slaughter is fulfilled, that ye shall slaye one another, & ye shall be scattered, & ye shall fall like vessels unpungly made.

* The shepherdes shall haue no waye to steale, and the rammes of the flocke shall not escape. Then shall the shepherdes crye horribly and the Rammes of the flocke shall mourne: for the Lord hath consumed theyr pasture, & theyr best felde lye deade because of the horrible wrath of the Lord. They haue forsaken theyr foldes like as a Lyon: For theyr lande is waste, because of his furpous cruelty, and of his fearefull indignacyon.

Chapter. xxvi.

Jeremye moneth the people to amendement. He is in the house of the Prophetes and preastes: and brought to sub-mitt his prophete to the will of god.

In the begynnyng of the raigne of Jehoaikim sonne of Josiah kyng of Iuda, came this worde from the Lord sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lord: * Stande in the court of the Lordes house, and speake vnto all them whiche (out of the cittyes of Iuda) come to do worshyppe in the Lordes house, all the wordes that I commaunde the to saye. * Loke that thou kepe not one worde backe, for (paradventure) they will herken, and turne euery man from hys wyched waye: * that I maye also repente of the plage which I haue determyned to bring vpon them, because of theyr wyched inuentyng.

And after this maner shalte thou speake vnto them: Thus sayth the Lord, of ye wyl not obey me, to walke in my lawes, whiche I haue geuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruantes the prophetes, whome I sent vnto you, risynge vp to my selfe, & still sendynge ye wyl not folow them (I saye) then wyl I do to thys house, * as I byd vnto Syloah, and wyl make thys Cytie to be abhorred of all the people of the earth. And the preastes the prophetes, and all the people heard Jeremye preache these wordes, in the house of the Lord.

Nowe when he had spoken out all the wor-des, that the Lord comaunded him to preache vnto the people, then the preastes: & prophetes and all the people toke holde vpon him, & sayde, thou shalt dye. Howe darest thou be so bolde, as to saye in the name of the Lord: it shall happen to this house as it dyd vnto Siloah: and this cytie shall be so waste, & no man shall dwell therein.

And when all the people were gathered aboute Jeremye in the house of the Lord, & prynces of Iuda hearde of this rumoure, and they came soone out of the kyngeys palace in to the house of the Lord, & sat them downe before the newe doore of the Lord. Then spake the preastes and the prophetes vnto the Rulers: and to all the people, these wordes:
* This man is worthy to die, for he hath preached against this cite, as ye pour selues haue hearde with your eares.

Then sayde Jeremye vnto the rulers and to all the people: The Lord hath sent me to preache agaynst this house and agaynst this cylie all the wordes that ye haue herde. Therfore amende poure wayes, and your aduisementes, and be obedyente vnto the voyce of the Lord your God: so shall the Lord repent of the plage, that he hath deuyled agaynst you Howe as for me: I am in your handes, do wth me, as ye thynke expedient & good. But this shal ye knowe: if ye put me to death, * ye shal make pour selues, this cytie: & all the inhabytours thereof, gyltye of innocent bloude. For this is of a trouth: that the Lord hath sente me vnto you, to speake all these wordes in your eares.

Then sayde the rulers and the people vnto the preastes & prophetes: This man maye not be condemned to death, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the Lord oure God. The elders also of the lande stode vp, and sayde thus vnto all the people: Nicheas the Mozaithyte, * whiche was a prophet vnder Ezechiah kyng of Iuda: spake to all the people of Iuda: Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes, * Upon shalbe plowed like a felde, Jerusalem shalbe an heape of stones, and the hyll of the Lordes house shall be turned to an hye wood. Wd Ezechiah the kyng of Iuda and the peple of Iuda put hym to death for this.
So verely, * but rather feared the Lord, and made theyr prayer vnto hym. For the which cause also the Lord repented of the plage, & he had deuyled agaynst them. Shuld we the do such a shamefull dede agaynst our soules?
There was a prophet also, that preached stry-ly in the name of the Lord, called Elijah the sonne of Semepabe of Carathiarim: thys man preached also agaynst this Cytie and a gaynst this land, according to all as Jeremye his sayth

saueh. Nowe when * Jehoakim the kynge with all y^e estates and prynces had heard hys wordes, the kynge went about to slaye hym. * When Aziah perceaued y^e he was afrayde and fled, & departed into Egypt.

Then Jehoakim the kynge sent seruautes into the lande of Egypt: Namely Elnathan the sunne of Achboz, and certayne men with hym into Egypt, whiche fetched Aziah out of Egypt, & brought hym vnto kynge Jehoakim, that slewe hym with the swearde, & cast his dede bodie into the comen peoples graue. But Ahikam y^e sonne of Saphan helpe Jeremy, y^e he cam not into the handes of y^e people to be slayne.

The xxvii. Chapter.

¶ Jeremy at the commandemente of the Lorde sendeth bondes to the kynge of Iuda, and to the other kyn- ges that were nye, whereby they are monished to be the subiectes vnto Nabuchodonosor. He warneth the peo- ple and the kynges and rulers, y^e they beleue not false prophetes.

In the begynnyng of the reygne of Jehoakim y^e sunne of Josiah kynge of Iuda, came this worde vnto Je- remy from the Lorde, whiche spake thus vnto me: Make the bondes & chaynes, and put them about thy necke, and sende the to the kynge of Edom, to the kynge of Moab to the kynge of Ammon, to the kynge of Ti- rus, and to the kynge of Sidon: and that by the messaungers, whiche shall come to Jeru- salem vnto zedekiah the kynge of Iuda, and byd the saue vnto they^e masters: Thus say- eth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel, speake thus vnto your masters: * I am he that made the earth, the men, and the catel y^e are vpon the grounde, with my great power and outstretched arme, and haue geuen it vnto whom it pleased me. * And nowe wyl I be- lyuer all these landes into the power of Na- buchodonosor the kynge of Babylon: my ser- uant. The bestes also of y^e felde shal I geue hym to do hym seruyce. * And all people shal serue hym, and his sonne, & his chylders chyldren, vntill the tyme of y^e same lande be come also: yee, many people and great kynges shal serue hym.

Moreover, that people and kyngdome: whiche wyl not serue Nabuchodonosor, and that wyl not put they^e neckes vnder y^e yoke of the kynge of Babylon: the same people wyl I visit with the swearde, with hunger with pestilence, vntill I haue consumed the in his handes, sayth the Lorde. * And ther- fore folowe not your prophetes, Soothsay- ers, Erpounders of dreames, Charmes, and Wytches, whiche saue vnto you: ye shal not serue the kynge of Babylon. For they preache you lyes: to byynge you farre frome poure lande, and that I myght caste you out and destroye you. But the people that put they^e neckes vnder the yoke of the kynge of Babylon, and serue hym: those wyl I lette remayne still in they^e owne lande (sayth the Lorde) and they shal occupie it, and dwell therein.

All these thynges tolde I zedekiah the kynge of Iuda, and sayde: * Put your neckes vnder the yoke of the kynge of Babylon, and serue hym and his people, that ye maye lyue. Why wylt thou and thy people perishe with the swearde, with hunger, with pestilence: lyke as the Lorde hath deuyd for all people that wyl not serue the kynge of Babylon? * Therfore geue no care vnto those prophe- tes (that tell you: Ye shal not serue the kynge of Babylon) for they preach you lyes, neither haue I sent them, sayeth the Lorde: howbeit they ar bold, falsely to prophesy in my name that I myght the soner dryue you out, & that ye myght perishe with your preachers.

I spake to the Priestes also, and to all y^e peo- ple: Thus sayeth the Lorde: heare not the wordes of those prophetes that preache vnto you, and saie: Beholde, * the vessels of the Lordes house shal shortly be brought hi- ther agayne from Babylon: for they pro- phesye lyes vnto you: heare them not, but serue the kynge of Babylon: y^e ye maye lyue. Wherefore wyl ye make this Cytie to be de- stroyed? But yf they be true prophetes in very dede, and yf the worde of the Lorde be committed vnto them, then lette them praye the Lorde of hostes, that the remnaunte of the ornaments (whiche are in the house of the Lorde, and remayne yet in the house of y^e kynge of Iuda and at Jerusalem) be not car- ped to Babylon also. For thus hath y^e Lord of hostes spoken concernyng the pylers, the lauer, the seate: & the resydue of y^e ornamen- tes that yet remayne in this cytie, which Na- buchodonosor y^e kynge of Babylon toke not. * When he carped awaye Iechoniah y^e sonne of Jehoakim kynge of Iuda, with all the po- wer of Iuda and Jerusalem vnto Babylon, captiue.

Yee, thus hath the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spoken, as touchyng the re- sydue of the ornaments of the Lordes house of the kynge of Iudaes house, and of Jeru- salem: * They shal be carped vnto Babylon and there they shal remayne vntill I visit them, sayth the Lorde. * Then wyl I byynge them byther agayne. And this was done in the same yere, euen in the begynnyng of the reygne of zedekiah kynge of Iuda.

The xxviii. Chapter.

¶ The false prophecie of Hananiah the prophete. Jer- emy sheweth that the Prophecie of Hananiah is false by the example of the other prophetes. He bringeth in- spi- red of the Lorde reproueth Hananiah prophesying his death.

But

In the fourth yere of the rayne of Zedekiah kyng of Iuda, in the fyfte moneth, it happened that Hananiah the sonne of Asur the p[ro]phete of Sibeon spake to me in the house of the Lorde, in the presence of the p[re]sentes, and of all the people and sayde: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: I haue broken the p[ro]ke of the kyng of Babylon, * and after two yere, wyl I byngne agayne into this place all the ornamente of the Lordes house, that Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon carped away from this place vnto Babylon. Pee, I wyl byngne agayne Iechoniah the sunne of Iehoshim the kyng of Iuda hym selfe, with all the p[ri]soners of Iuda (that are carped vnto Babylon) eu[n] into this place, sayth the Lorde: For I wyl breake the p[ro]ke of the kyng of Babylon.

Then the p[ro]phete Jeremij gaue answere vnto the p[ro]phete Hananiah before the p[re]sentes, and before all the people that were p[re]sent in the house of the Lorde. * And the p[ro]phete Jeremij sayde: Amen, the Lorde do that and graunt the thyng whiche thou hast p[ro]phesied: that he maye byngne agayne all the ornamente of the Lordes house, and restore all the p[ri]soners frome Babylon into this place. Neuertheles, hearken thou also: what I wyl saye, that thou and all the people maye heare. The p[ro]phetes that were before vs in tyme past, which p[ro]phesied of war or trouble, or pestilence, ether of peace, vpon many nacions and great kingdomes, were proued by this (yf God hath sent them in verp dede) * when the thyng came to passe, which y p[ro]phete tolde before.

And Hananiah the p[ro]phete toke y chayne from the p[ro]phete Jeremies necke, and brake it, and with that sayde Hananiah, that all y people myght heare. Thus hath the Lorde spoken: Eu[n] so wyl I breake the p[ro]ke of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon, from y necke of all nacions: pee, * that within this two yere. And so the p[ro]phete Jeremij went his waye. Nowe after that Hananiah the p[ro]phete had taken the chayne from the p[ro]phete Jeremies necke, and broken it: The word of the Lorde came vnto the p[ro]phete Jeremij, saying: So, and tel Hananiah these wordes. Thus sayth the Lorde. Thou hast broken the chayne of woode: but in steade of wood thou shalt make cheynes of yron. For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: I wyl put a p[ro]ke of yron vpon y necke of all this people, that they maye serue Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon: pee, and so shall they do. And I wyl geue hym the beastes in the felde. Then sayde the p[ro]phete Jeremij vnto the p[ro]phete Hananiah: * heare me Hananiah: The Lorde hath not sent the but thou byngnest this people into a false be-lese. And therfore thus sayth the Lorde: beholde: I wyl sende the out of the lande, and within a yere thou shalt dye, because y hast falsely spoken agaynst the Lorde. So Hananiah the p[ro]phete dyed the same yere in the seuenth moneth.

The xxix. Chapter.

The p[ro]phete of Jeremij sent vnto them that were in captiuitie in Babylon. He p[ro]phesied thep: returns from the captiuitie after lxx. yeres. He p[ro]phesied the destruction of the kyng and of the people that remained in Ierusalem. He threathened two p[ro]phets that seduced the people. The death of Semeiah the Nehelamite is p[ro]phesied.

These are the wordes of the boke, that Jeremij the p[ro]phete sent from Ierusalem vnto the p[ri]soners, y senators, p[re]stes, p[ro]phetes, and all the people, whom Nabuchodonosor had led from Ierusalem vnto Babylon: after that tyme y kyng Iechoniah & his quene, his chāberlaynes, the p[ri]nces of Iuda & Ierusalem, the workemasters of Ierusalem were departed thither. Which boke Elasah the sunne of Saphan, and Samaria the sunne of Jehiah dyd beare, whome Zedekiah the kyng of Iuda sent vnto Babylon to Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon: these were y wordes of Jeremies boke.

Thus hath the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spoken vnto all the p[ri]soners, that were led from Ierusalem vnto Babylon: * buyde you houses to dwell therein: plant you gardens, that ye maye enioye the frutes thereof: * take you wyues, to beare you sonnes & daughters: proude wyues for youre sonnes and husbandes for your daughters that they maye get sonnes and daughters and that ye maye multiply there. Laboure not to be fey but seke after peace and prosperitie of y cyte wherein ye be prisoners, * & pray vnto y Lorde for it. For in y peace thereof, shall your peace be. For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. * Let not these p[ro]phetes & southsayers that be among you dulceue you and bileue not your owne dreames. For why * they p[re]ach you lyes in my name, & I haue not sent them, sayth the Lorde.

But thus sayth y Lorde: * When ye haue fullylled lxx. yeres at Babylon, I wyl byngne you home, and of mine owne goodnes I wyl carpe you hither agayn into this place.

For I knowe what I haue deuyled for you sayth the Lorde. My thoughtes are to geue you peace, and not trouble (whyche I geue you already) and that ye myghte haue hope agayne. * Ye shall cpe vnto me, ye shall go and call vpon me, and I wyl heare you. * Ye shall seke me and fynde me. Pee, yf so be that ye seke me with your whole hert, I wyl be founde of you, sayth the Lorde, and wyl delouer you oute of y p[ri]son, and gather you together agayne out of all places, wherein I haue scattered you, sayth the Lorde: and Wyll brynge you agayne to the same place, from whence I cauled you to be caried a way captiue. But where as ye saie, ꝑ God hath rapled you vp ꝑ ꝑrophetes at Babylon: Thus hath the Lorde spoken to the kynge that sitteth in the throne of Dauid, and to all ꝑ people that dwell in this Ctrie, youre brethren

* Jer. xxxviii. b

* that are not gone with you into captiuite. Thus (I saie) speaketh the Lorde of hostes Beholde, * I wyll sende a swearde, hunger, and pestilence vpon them: and wyll make them lyke vntymely spygges, that maye not be eaten for bytternes. And I wyll persecute them with swearde, with hunger, and pestilence.

E I wyll deliuer them vp to be vered of all kyngdomes, to be cursed, abhored, langhed to scoone, and put to confusyon of all the people, amonge whom I haue scatred them: and that because they haue not bene obedyent vnto my commaundementes, sayeth the Lorde whiche I sente vnto them by my seruantes the ꝑrophetes. * I stode vp early, and sent vnto them: but they wolde not heare, sayeth the Lorde. Heare therfore the worde of the Lorde, all ye ꝑysoners, whome I sent from Ierusalem vnto Babylon. Thus hath the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spoken of Ahab the sunne of Colaiab, and of Iedediah the sunne of Maasiah, which ꝑrophecy I yes vnto you in my name. Beholde, I wyll deliuer them into the hande of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, that he maye slay them before your eyes. And all the ꝑysoners of Iuda, that are in Babilon, shal take vpon this terme of cursyng, and saie: Howe God do vnto the, as he dyd vnto Iedekiah and Ahab, whome the kynge of Babilon rosted in the fyre, because they synned shamefully in Israel.

* Jer. xlii. a and. xlii. a

For they haue not onely defyled their neighbours wyues, but also preached lyngge wordes in my name, whiche I haue not comaunded them. Thys I testifie, and assure, sayth the Lorde. But as for Semeiah the Nehelamite, thou shalt speake vnto hym. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Because thou hast sealed letters vnder thy name vnto all the people that is at Ierusalem and to Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah ꝑ ꝑrest: yee, and sent them to all the ꝑrestes: wherein thou wyrttest thus vnto hym: The Lorde hath ordeyned the to be þreaste in the steade of * Jehoiada the ꝑrest that thou shouldest be the chefe in the house of ꝑ Lord aboue all ꝑrophetes and ꝑreachers, and that thou myghtest set them vpon the pyllery, or in the stockes. Howe happeneth it then, that ꝑ hast not reposed Ieremye of Anathoth, whyche neuer leaueth of his ꝑrophecyng. And besyde all thys, he hath sente vs worde * vnto Babylon, and tolde vs playnly: that oure captiuitie shall longe endure: that we shulde buylde vs houses to dwell therein: & to plante vs gardens, that we maye enioye the frutes thereof. Which letter Sophoniah the þreast rede, & let Ieremy the ꝑphet heare it.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Ieremye, sayunge: sende worde to all them that be in captiuitie, on this maner: Thus hath the Lorde spoken concerning Semeiah the Nehelamite: * Because that Semeiah hath ꝑꝑhecieed vnto you without my commission, & brought you into a false hope, therfore thus the Lorde doeth certifye you: Beholde, I wyll viset Semeiah the Nehelamite, and hys seide: so that none of hys shall remaine among this people, and none of them shall see the good that I wyll do for this people, sayth the Lorde. For he hath preached falsely of the Lorde.

The xxx. Chapter.

The returne of the people from Babylon. God by his chauncing sheweth that the people is spiritual. The destruction of the enemies of Israel.

These are the wordes, that the Lorde sheweth vnto Ieremye, sayunge.

Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: * Wryte vp diligently all the wordes, that I haue spoken vnto the, in a booke. For lo, the tyme cometh, sayeth the Lorde, that I wyll brynge agayne the ꝑysoners of my people of Israel and Iuda, sayth the Lorde. For I wyll restore them vnto the lande, & I gaue to theyr fathers, and they shal haue it in possession.

Agayne, these wordes spake the Lorde, concerning Israel and Iuda: Thus sayth ꝑ Lorde: We haue hearde a terrible crye, feare and disquietnes. For what elles doth this synnysse, that I see? Namely ꝑ all stronge men synne, every man his hande vpon his lynes: * as a woman in the payne of her traunple. Who euer saw a man traunple w childe? Enquyre thereafter, and se. See all theyr faces as maruelouse pale.

Alas for this dape, whiche is so dyrdell that none maye be lykened vnto it, and alas for the tyme of Jacobs trouble, from ꝑ which he shall yet be deliuered. For in ꝑ dape sayth the Lorde, of hostes I wyll take his poke fro of thy necke, & breake thy bondes: And strangers shall no moze serue hym: but they shall do seruite vnto God theyr Lord, and to * Dauid theyr kynge, whome I wyll raple vp vnto them. And as for the, O my seruante Jacob, feare not, sayth the Lorde, and be not afrayde, O Israel. For lo: I wyll helpe the also from farre, and thy seide from the lande of theyr captiuite.

And Jacob shall turne agayne, he shal be in rest, and haue a prosperous lyfe, & no man shall make hym afrayde. For I am with the to helpe the sayth the Lorde. * And though I shal without faute. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde. Thy bysnynges are perelous, and thy woundes redy to cast the into spycknes. Ther is no man to medle with thy cause, or to lape plaster upon the, or to bynd vp thy woundes that maye no man helpe the.

All thy louners haue forgotten the, & care nothing for the. For I haue geuen the a cruel stroke, and chastened the roughly: and for the multitude of thy iniquities: for thy synnes have had the ouer hande. Why makest thou ded and in leopordie: *but for thy multitude of thy iniquities & synnes, I haue done this vn

* And therfore, all they that deuoute the, shalbe deuoured: and all thyne enemyes shall be led into captiuite. All they that make the vyle, shalbe wasted them selues, & all those that reioyce in the, wyl I make also to be robbed. For I wyl gine the thy belch agayne and make thy woundes whole, sayth the Lorde: because they reioyce the, as one cast awaye and despyed.
Whon (sayde they) is the whome no man re gardeth.

For thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde, * I wyl bypnyge agayne the captiuite of Jacobs bones, and defende his dwellyng place. The Citye shalbe buylded in her olde estate, and houses shall haue they: & they shalbe founda cyon. And out of them shall go thankes geuyng, & the voyce of ioye.

I wyl multiplie them, and they shal not be shamed: I shall endue them with honoure, & no man shall subdue them. They: chyldren shalbe as afore tyme, and they: congregacyon shal continue in my syght. And all those that hate them, wyl I visite.

* I captayne also shal come of them: and a hyer shal sprynge out from the myddest of them: hym wyl I chalenge to my self, and he shal come vnto me. * For what is he, that groweth ouer his herte to come vnto me, sayth the Lorde. * Ye shalbe my people also, and I wyl be your god. * Beholde: on the other syde shall the wrath of the Lorde breake out as a stormy water as a mightie whirle wynd and shall fall vpon the heades of the vngod ly.

The terrible dyspleasure of the Lorde shall not leaue of, vntyll he haue done, & per formed the intent of his hert, * whiche in latter dayes ye shall vnderstande. At the same tyme, sayth the Lorde, shall I be the God of all the generacions of Israel, and they shal be my people.

The. xxxi. Chapter.

The prophesie that the people of Israel shall be restored agayne vnto they: prosperitie. To be turned from synne is the gyfte of God. The byrth of Chyche is prophesied. All the wycked shall dye in they: wyck ednes. The newe testament and couenaunt is propher cyed. The Chyche are taught and instructed of the Lorde. Pure synners shall so be reformed: that they not ones be thought on. God promyseth, that he wyl call of the Jewes. The buyldyng agayne of Ierusa lem.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: * the people of Israel, which escaped in the wyl dernesse from the swearde, founde grace to come into their rest. And so shal the Lorde now also aperse vnto me from farre and sape: * I loue the w an euerylastyng loue, therfore, by my mercye I haue drawen the to me. I wyl repayre the agayne, O thou doughter of Israel, that I mayst be fast and sure. Thou shalt take thy tabernacles agayne, & go forth w them that leade the daunce.

Thou shalt plant vynes agayne vpon the hills of Samaria, & the grape gatherers shal plant, & commonly eate of it.

For the dayes shal come when I watche men vpon the mount of Ephraim shall crye,
* a ryse, let vs go vp vnto Sion to our Lorde God, for thus sayeth the Lorde: Reioyce with gladnesse because of Jacob, crye vnto head of the Gentylis: Ipe ake out, syng & sape O Lorde saue thy people, the remenaunte of Israel, and make them whole. Beholde, I wyl bypnyng them agayne from out of the north lande, and gather them from the endes of the worlde, wth the blynde and lame that are amonge them, with the women that be great wytch chyldre, and such as be also deliuered: and the company of them I come agayn shal be great.

They shal come wepyng and with mer cyfull pteie wyl I bypnyng them hither agayne I wyl leade them to the ryuers of water in a straght waye, where they shal not stum is my first borne.

Heare the woide of the Lorde, O ye Gen tylis, preach in the ples, that Ipe farre of, and saye: he that hath scattered Israel, shal gather hym together agayne, & shal kepe hym as a shepherd doth his flocke. For the Lorde hath redemed Jacob, and ryd hym from the hande of the vpolent, and they shal come, & reioyce vpon the hyll of Sion, and shal haue plente ousnes of goodes, which the Lorde shal geue them. Namely: wheate, wyne: ople, ponge shepe and calves. And they: conscience shal be as a well watered garden, for they shal no more be hungry.

Then shall the mayde reioyce in the daunce pre, both ponge and olde folkes. For I wyl turne they: sorowe into gladnesse, and wyl confort them from they: sorowes: and make ple shall be satisfied with my goodness sayeth the Lord.

Thus sayeth the Lord: * The voice of beweping, weeping and lamentation was heard on the: euen of Rachel mourning for her children: & wolde not be comforted, because they were awaye.

But now sayeth the Lord, leaue of from weeping and crying, withhold thine eyes from teares, for thy labour shall be rewarded, saith the Lord. And they shall come againe out of the lande of their enemies: yee, euen thy posterite shall haue consolacion in this, sayeth the Lord, that thy children shall come againe into their owne lande.

Moreover, I heard Ephraim, that was led away captiue, complaine on this maner: * O Lord, thou hast corrected me and thy chastening haue I receaued, as an vntamed calf: * Conuerter thou me, and I shall be conuerted: for thou arte my Lord God: yee, as soon as I turnest me, I shall reforme my selfe, & when I vnderstande, I shall sinne vpon my thigh. For verely I haue compted shamefull thynges. For I haue bene the reproche & confusyon of my yowth.

Upon this complaine, I thought thus by my selfe. * Is not Ephraim my dere sonne? Is he not my childe, with whome I haue had all my myght and pastime? For sens I came that I first comend with hym, I haue hym euer in remembrance: therefore, my very herte driueth me vnto hym, gladiely and louingly. I will haue mercie vpon hym sayeth the Lord: Set the watchmen, proude teachers for the set thine herte vpon the right waye, that I shouldest walke, and turne againe. O daughter of Israel, turne againe to the cities of thine. How long wilt thou go astray, O thou whynnyng daughter? For the Lord will worke a newe thyng vpon earth. A woman shall compasse a man.

For thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel, It will come therto, & when I haue brought Iuda out of captiuite, these wordes shall be heard in the lande and in his cities. The Lord which is the saye: by the grome, or by the outnes, make the fente full, O thou holy hill. And there shall dwell Iuda, and all her cities, the shepherdes, & husbandmen. For I shall fede the hungry soule and refreche all faint hertes. When I heard this, I came againe to my selfe, I mused, lyke as I hadde bene waked out of a sweet slepe.

Beholde, sayeth the Lord, the dayes come that I will loue the house of Israel, and the house of Iuda, with men and with catel.

* Yee, it shall come therto, that lyke as I haue gone about in tymes past to rote them out, to scatere them, to breake the downe, to destroye them, and chasten them. Euen so will I also go diligently aboute, to buyde them by agayne, and to plante them sayeth the Lord. * Then shall it nomore be sayde the fathers haue eaten a sower grape, & the childrens teeth are set on edge: for euery one shall dye for his owne mysdede: so that who so eateth a sower grape, his teeth shall be sette on edge. * Beholde, the dayes come, sayeth the Lord, & I will make a newe couenaunt with the house of Israel, and with the house of Iuda: not after the couenaunt that I made with their fathers, when I toke them by the hande and led them out of the lande of Egypt: which couenaunt they brake: yee, euen when I as an husbunde had rule ouer them sayeth the Lord. * But this shall be the couenaunt that I will make with the house of Israel after those dayes sayeth the Lord. * I will plante my lawe in the inward partes of them, and write it in their hertes, & they shall be my people, & they shall be my people.

And from thens forth, shall no man teach his neighbour or his brother, & saye: knowe the Lord. But they shall all knowe me from the lowest vnto the highest, sayeth the Lord. For I will forgive their mysdedes, and will neuer remembre their synnes any more. Thus sayeth the Lord, which gaue the sunne to be a light for the daye, and the moone & starres to shine in the nyght: which moueth the see, so that the floudes thereof waxe fere: his name is the Lord of hostes. Lyke as this ordynance shall neuer be taken out of my sight, sayeth the Lord. So shall the seede of Israel neuer cease, but alwaye be a people before me.

Moreover, thus sayeth the Lord: lyke as the heuen aboue cannot be measured, and as the foundations of the earth beneth may not be sought out. * So will I also not call out the whole seede of Israel, for that they haue comytted sayeth the Lord. Beholde: the dayes come, sayeth the Lord: that the city of the Lord shall be enlarged from the tower of Hananeel, vnto the gate of the corner wall: from thence shall the right measure be take before her vnto the hill toppe of Gath, and shall come about Gath, and the whole valley of the dead carcases, and of the ashes, and all the feldes vnto the brooke of Cedron: and vnto the corner of the horsegate toward the east where as the sanctuary of the Lord also shall be set. And when it is nowe buylded, & set vp of this fast upon, it shall neuer be broke nor cast downe any more.

Chapter. xxxii.

Jeremie is cast into prison, because he prophesied that the city shoulde be taken of the King of Babylon. By the seide that Jeremie bought at the commoner: ment of the Lord, is signified, that the people shoulde come againe to their owne possession. The people of God are his seruantes, and he is their Lord. To feare God is Goddes gift, to the extent that spurs may be riches.

These wordes spake the Lorde vnto Jeremie, in the .x. yere of zedekiah kyng of Iuda: which was .xviii. yere of Nabuchodonosor, what tyme ass kyng of Babylons doost laied siege vnto Ierusalem: But Jeremie the prophete laye bonde in the court of the prison, which was in the kyng of Judas house: where zedekiah the kyng of Iuda caused hym to be layed, because he had prophesied of thys manner. Thus sayeth the Lorde: Behold, I wyll deliuer thys cytye into the handes of the kyng of Babylon, which shall take it. As for zedekiah the kyng of Iuda: he shall not be able to escape the Chaldees: but suerly he shall come into the handes of the kyng of Babylon, which shall speake w hym mouth to mouth, and none of them shall loke another in the face. And zedekiah shall be caried vnto Babylon, & there shall he be, vntyll the tyme that I wyll let hym sayeth the Lorde. But yf thou talkest in hande to fyght agaynst the Chaldees, thou shalt not prosper.

And Jeremie sayde: thus hath the Lorde spoken vnto me. Behold, Hananeel the sonne of Heliam thyn vnckles sonne, shall come vnto the, and requyre the to redeme the lande & lyeth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe: for by reason of kynred it is thy ryghte to redeme it, and bye it out.

And Hananeel, myne vnckles sonne came to me in the court of the prison, according to the worde of the Lorde, & sayd vnto me: Wye my lade, I praye the: & lyeth in Anathoth in the contry of Ben Iamin: for by heritage & just ryghte to lose it out for thy selfe, therfore redeme it. Then I perceaued & this was the commaundement of the Lorde, & so I bought the land fro Hananeel of Anathoth, myne vnckles sonne, and wayed hym there the money: euen seven sicles & ten syluer pence.

I caused hym also to make me a wyrtyping and to seale it: and called recorde therby, & ad wayed hym there the money vpon the waygtes. So I toke the euidence wth the coppe when it was orderly seale and red ouer, & ad I gaue the euidence vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah, the sonne of Naasiah in the sight of Hananeel, my cosyn, and in the presence of the wytnesses, that he named in the euidence: and before all the Jewes that were there: in the court of the prison.

I charged Baruch also before them saying: The Lorde of hostes the God of Israel commaundeth the, to take thys seale euidence wth the coppe: and to lay it in the earthen vessel, that it maye longe continue.

For the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel hath determynd that houses, feldes, & dynyardes shall be possessed agayne in thys lande.

Nowe when I had deliuered the euidence vnto Baruch sonne of Neriah, I besought the Lorde saying: O Lord God, it is thou that hast made heauen and earth wth thy great powre and hye arme, & there is nothing hyd from the. Thou sheweste mercy vpon thousands, thou recompencest the wickednes of the fathers, into the bosome of the chyl-dren that come after them.

Thou arte the great and myghtie God, whose name is the Lord of hostes: great in counsel, and excellent in worke. Thyn eyes loke vpon all the vapes of mens chyl-dren, & to reward euerie one after hys way: & accordyng to the frutes of hys inuencions.

Thou hast done greates tokens and wonders in the land of Egypt, as we se this day vpon the people of Israel and vpon those men to make thy name greates, as it is come to passe thys daye. Thou hast brought the people of Israel out of the lande, of Egypte wth tokens, wth wonders, with a myghty hande, wth a stretched out arme & with great terribleness: and hast geuen them thys lande, lyke as thou haddeste promysed vnto thy fathers. Pamelpe, that thou wolddest geue them a lande, that floweth wth mylke and honye.

Nowe when they came therin, and possessed it, they folowed not thy voyce, & walked not in thy lawe, but all that thou commaundest them to do, that haue they not done, and therfore come all these plagues vpon them.

Beholde there are bulwoikes made nowe agaynst the cytye to take yt: and yt shall be wonne of the Chaldees that be seage it, with swearde, wth hunger: and deathe, and loke what thou hast spoken, that same shall come vpon them.

For loo, all thynges are present vnto the. Yet (sayest thou vnto me O Lord God) and commaundest me that I shall loose a pece of lande vnto my selfe, and take wytnesses thereto: and yet in the meane season the cytye is deliuered into the powre of the Chaldees.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me saying: Beholde I am the Lorde God of all fleshe, is there any thyng then to hearde for me? Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I shall deliuer thys cytye into the power of the Chaldees, and into the power of Nabuchodonosor: the kyng of Babylon, they shall take it. For the Chaldees shall come and wyne thys cytye, and set fyre vpon it, and burne it, wth the gozgyous houses in whose parlours they haue made sacryfyce vnto Baal, and powred drynke offeringes vnto straung goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath.

For sayng the chyl-dren of Israel, and the chyl-dren of Iuda haue wrought wickednes in this befoze

The prophecy.

The .xxiii. Chapter.

before me enen fro their yowth, what haue they elles done, bute prouoked me wth the woordes of theyr owne hādes: sayeth y Lord.

¶ What hath this cite bene elles but a prouokynge of my wrath, euere sence the day that they buylded it, vnto this houre wherin I caste it out of my syght, because of y great blasphemies of the chyldren of Israel and Iuda, which they haue done to prouoke me: yee they, they kynges, they prynces: they prestres, they prophetes, the men of Iuda, and the cytyens of Ierusalem.

* Jerem. ii. b. ¶ When I rode vpon early, and taught them
I instructed the, they turned theyr backs to me: not theyr faces. They wolde not heare, to be reformed and correcte: but let theyr ydols in the house, that is halowed vnto my name, to desyle it. They haue buylded y places for Baal, in the valley of the chyldren of Hennom, to voue theyr sonnes & daughters vnto Moloch, which I neuer commaunde the: neither came yt euere in my thoughte to make Iuda synne w such abhominacion.

* Jer. viii. b. ¶ And nowe therfore, thus hath the Lord God of Israel spoken, concernynge this cite which (as ye poure selues confesse) shalbe deliuered into the hande of the kinge of Babilon when it is wonne wth y swerde, with hunger & wth pestilence. Beholde, I wyl gather them together from all landes, wherin I haue scattered them in my wrath in fearful and great dyspleasure, and wyl bynge the agayne vnto this place, where they shal dwel safely. And they shalbe my people, and I wylbe theyr God.

* Deu. xxxii. a. ¶ And I wyl geue them one hert and one waye, that they maye feare me all the dayes of their lyfe, that they and theyr chyldren after them maye prospere. And I wyl set vp an euerlastynge couenaunt with them. Namely, y I wyl neuer ceasse to do them good & that I wyl put my feare in theyr hartes so y they shal not runne away from me. ¶ Yee, I wyl haue a lust & pleasure to do the good & faithfully to plant them in this land with my whole herte and wth all my soule.

* Deu. xxxii. b. ¶ For thus sayeth the Lord: lyke as I haue brought all this great plage vpon this people, euere so wyl I also bynge vpon them all the good, y I haue promised them. And men shal haue theyr possessyons in this lande: wherof ye say nowe, y it shal nether be inhabited of the people nor of catell: but be deliuered into the handes of the Chaldees. ¶ Yee, lande, shalbe bought for money, & cypdences made thereupō, and sealed before wytnesses in y countree of Ben Iamin, & rounde about Ierusalem, in the cities of Iuda, in the cities that are vpon y mountaynes, and them that lye beneth: yee, and in the cyties that are in the south. ¶ For I wyl bynge theyr prynces herber agayne, sayeth the Lord.

The prophete is monyther of the Lord, to praye for the deliuerance of the people, whiche the Lord ppropheseth: God for geueth synnes, and doth graciously to the people, for his owne remouance. Of the bytten of a bytten. The kyngdome of Chaldees in the church shal neuer be ended.

¶ Discover, the word of the Lord came vnto Jeremy on this manner, when he was yet bonde in the court of the prynces. Thus sayeth the Lord, whych fulfilleth the thyng y he speaketh: the Lord whych perfourmeth the thyng y he taketh in hand euere he whose name is the Lord: cry vnto me & I wyl answer, & shewe the great & hye thynges, whych were unknowne vnto the.

¶ Thus (I saye) speake the Lord God of Israel, concernynge the houses of this cytie and the houses of the kynges of Iuda, y they are broken thowowe the ordynance and the swerd. Because the enbapters of this cytie haue come to syghte agaynst the Chaldees, & they are fylled wth the deade carcases of men whome I haue slayne in my wrath and displeasure: whē I turned my face from this cite, because of all her wyckednes. Beholde sayeth y Lord, I wyl repayre & hale the wounds, & make them whole: I wyl open them the large treasure of peace and truth.

¶ And wyl returne the captiuite of Iuda and Israel: and wyl let them vp agayne as they were afore. ¶ From all my dedes, wherin they haue offended agaynst me, I wyl cleanse them. And all theyr blasphemies whych they haue done agaynst me, when they regarded me not, I wyl forgeue them.

¶ And this shal get me a name, a prayse, ad honour amonge all the people of the earth, whych shal heare all the good, that I wyl shewe vnto them: yee, they shalbe afrayed: & astonysed at all the good dedes and benefites that I wyl do for them. ¶ Moreover, thus sayeth the Lord: ¶ In this place wherof ye say that it shalbe a wyldernes, wherin nether people nor catell shal dwell: in lyke maner in the cyties of Iuda and wthout Ierusalem (whych also shalbe so voyde, that nether people nor catell shal dwell there) shal the voyce of gladnesse be heard agayne, the voyce of the byrdgonne and of the byrde, the voyce of them that shal synge: ¶ Prayse the Lord of hostes, for he is louynge: and his mercye endureth for euere: and the voyce of them that shal offer vp gyftes in house of the Lord. ¶ For I wyl restore the captiuite of this lande, as it was afore: sayeth the Lord. ¶ Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes, I shal come yet thereto, that in this lande, whych is voyde from men and catell, and in all the cyties of the lande, there shalbe set vp shepherdes cotages: in the cyties vpon the mountaynes.

mountaynes: and in the cyties that lye vpon the playne, and in the cyties of the south.

In the lande of Ben Iamin, in the feldest of Ierusalem, and in the cyties of Iuda that the shepe be nombred agayne, vnder the hād of hym, that telleth them, sayeth the Lorde:

* Behold, the tyme cometh, sayeth the Lorde: that I will perfourme that good thyng, which I haue promysed vnto the house of Israel and to the house of Iuda. In those daies and at the same tyme, I will bringe forth vnto Dauid, a brāuche of ryghteousnesse, & he shall do equitie & ryghteousnesse in the lāde.

In those daies shall Iuda be helped: and Ierusalem shall dwell safe, and he that shall call her, is our God our righteousnesse. For thus the Lorde promyseth. * Dauid shall neuer wāt one to lye vpon the throne of the house of Israel: neyther shall the prestes and Leuites want one to offere alwaye befoze me burnt offrynges, to kindle the meat offrynges, and to prepare the sacrifices.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Ieremy after this maner. Thus sayth the Lorde: Daye the couenaunt, which I haue made w daye & night be broken, that there shulde not be daye and night in due season: Then maye my couenaunt also be broken, which I made w Dauid my seruaunt, & so he not to haue a sonne to raygne in hys throne, & so shall also the prestes & Leuites neuer faile, but serue me. * For lyke as the starres of heauen maye not be nombred: neyther the lande of the see measured: so will I multiplie the seed of Dauid my seruaunt, & the Leuites my ministers, Moreover, the worde of the Lorde came to Ieremy saying: Cōsyderest thou not what this people speaketh: Two kynredes (saye they) had the Lorde chosen, & those same two hath he cast awaye. For so they haue despyed my people, & they reputed the as though they were no people. Therfore thus saith the Lorde: If I haue made no couenaunt w daye & night, & gyuen no statute vnto heauen & earth: then will I also caste awaye the seed of Iacob and Dauid my seruaunt: so that I will take no prynces out of hys seed, to rule the posteritie of Abraham, Isaac and Iacob. But yet I will turne agayne they captiuitie, & be merciful vnto them.

The threteenth that the cytie, & the kynge zedekiah, also shulde geuen into the handes of the kynge of Babylō. Ieremye telleth them that broughte such of they: brethren in captiuitie, as were pardoned to go at their libertie.

¶ These are the wordes which the Lorde spake vnto Ieremy: what tyme as Nabuchodonozor king of Babylō and all his hostes (out of all the kyngdomes that were vnder hys power) ad all hys people fought agaynst Ierusalem, & all the cyties therof. Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel: Go, and speake to zedekiah the kynge of Iuda, and tell hym. The Lorde sendeth the this word: Beholde, * I will deliuer this cytie into the hande of the kynge of Babylō: he shall burne it, & thou shalt not escape hys handes, but shalt be led away prisoner, and deliuered into hys power. Thou shalt loke the kynge of Babylō in the face, and he shall speake wth thy mouth to mouth: and then shalt thou go to Babylō. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde, O zedekiah king of Iuda: Thus saith the Lorde vnto the. Thou shalt not be slaine with the swerde, but shalt dye in peace. * Lyke as thy forefathers the highes, thy progenitours, were bēte: so shalt thou be bzēt also, ad in thy mourning they shall saye: Oh Lord. For thus haue I determined, sayth the Lorde.

Then sayde Ieremy the prophete all these wordes vnto zedekiah kynge of Iuda in Ierusalem: what tyme as the kynge of Babylōs hoost belleged Ierusalem, and the remnant of the cyties. Namely, Lachis and Azekah, which yet remayned of the stronge defensed cyties of Iuda.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Ieremy the prophet, whē zedekiah was agreed with all the people at Ierusalem, that there shoulde be proclaymed: a libertie: so that euery man shulde let hys seruaunt and hande mayde go fre: hebreue, and hebreue, and no Iewe holde hys brother as a bondeman.

Nowe as they had consented, all the princes and all the people which had gathered vnto this agreement that euery mā shulde let at libertie his bondeseruaunt, and bondewoman and no longer to holde them bounde, euen so they were obedient, & let them go fre. Wat afterwarde they repented and toke agayne the seruautes and handmaydens, whome they had let go fre, & so made them bonde againe.

For the which cause the word of the Lorde came vnto Ieremy from the Lorde hymselfe, saying: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: * I made a couenaunt with your fathers, whē I brought them out of Egypte, (that they shulde nomoze be bondemen) saying: When seven yeares are out, euery man shall let hys bought seruaunt an hebreue go fre, yf he haue serued hym syxe yeares. But your fathers obeyed me not, & herkened not vnto me. As for you, ye were nowe turned, & did ryght befoze me in that ye proclaymed, euery man to let his neygbbour go fre, & in that ye made a couenaunt befoze me, in the tēple that beareth my name. But yet ye haue touned your selues agayne, and blasphemed my name. In this, y euery man hath requyzed his seruaunt & hadmaide agayne, whō ye had let go quite and fre, & cōpelled them to serue you agayne, and to be your bondmen, and bondewomen. And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: ye haue not obeyed me, euery man to proclayme fre dome

The propheth the obedience of the Rechabites, and thereby rethundered the pryde of the Jeremes. The comaundment of Jonadab, the father of the Rechabites, he threateth punisher vnto the rebellious Jeremes. He promyseth prosperite vnto the Rechabites, for they? obedience.

The wordes which the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy, in praygne of Iehoiakim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Iuda are these: Go vnto the house of, the Rechabites and cal them out, and bring them to y house of the Lorde into some commodious place, & gyue them wyne to drinke. Then toke I Jazaniab, the sonne of Jeremy the sonne of Iahazaniab, and his brethren, and al his sones and the whole household of the Rechabites: and brought the into the house of the Lorde into the closette of the children of Hanan the sonne of Jegedaiab the man of God, whych was by the closet of the prynces, that is a boue the closet of Baasab the sonne of Se-lum, whiche is the treasurer. And before the sonnes of the kynged of y Rechabites, I set pottes full of wyne, and cuppes, & sayde vnto them: Drinke wyne. But they sayd: we will drinke no wyne for Jonadab the sonne of Rechab our father comaunded vs, saying: ye and your sones shal neither drinke wyne  Jer. lxxv. 2* * buyde no houses, sowe no seed, plant no vynes: yea, ye shal haue no vineyardes: but for all your tyme, ye shal dwell in tentes, that ye maye lyue longe in the lade wherem ye be strangers.

Thus haue we obeyed the comaundment of Jonadab the sonne of Rechab our father, in al that he hath charged vs, & so we drinke no wyne all our lyfe loge: we, nor our wyues our sones and our doughters. Neither buyde we any house to dwell therein, we haue also among vs neyther vineyardes, nor corne lade to sowe: but we dwell in tentes, we obeye, & do accordyng vnto all that Jonadab our father commaunded vs.

But now, that Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon came vp into the lade, we sayd: come, let vs go to Ierusalem, that we maye escape the hoost of the Chaldees and the Assirians: & so we dwell nowe at Ierusalem.

Then came the word of the Lorde vnto Jeremy saying: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Go and tel y men of Iuda & the inhabitours of Ierusalem: Will ye not be reformed, to obey my wordes, sayth the Lorde: The wordes which Jonadab the sonne of Rechab comaunded his sones, & they shuld drinke no wyne, are fast and surely kept: for vnto this day they drinke no wyne, but obey they? fathers comaundment. But as for me * I haue stande vp early, I haue spokē vnto you, & gyuen you earnest warnyng: and yet haue ye not bene obedyent vnto me. Pca: I haue sent my seruantes, all y prophetes vnto you, I rofe vp early, and sent you worde, saying: Turne you, now euery man fro his wycked way: amide your lyues, and go not after straunge goddes to worshyp them: that ye maye continue in the lande, which I haue geue vnto you & your fathers, but ye wolde neither heare me nor folowe me.

The children of Jonadab Rechabs sonne haue stedfastly kept their fathers comaundment, & he gaue them, but this people is not obedyent vnto me. And therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will bring vpon Iuda, & vpon euery one that dwelleth in Ierusalem, al y trouble y I haue deuised against them. * For I haue spoken vnto them, but they wold not folow I haue called vnto them, neuertheles, they wolde geue me no answer. Jeremy also spake vnto the household of the Rechabites: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. For so much as ye haue obeyed the comaundment of Jonadab your father, and kept all hys preceptes, and done accordyng vnto all that he hath bidde you. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: * Jonadab the son of Rechab shal not fayle, but haue one out of hys stocke, to stande alwaye before me.

The. lxxvi. Chapter.

 Jer. lxxvi. 1*
The propheth the obedience of the Rechabites, and thereby rethundered the pryde of the Jeremes. The comaundment of Jonadab, the father of the Rechabites, he threateth punisher vnto the rebellious Jeremes. He promyseth prosperite vnto the Rechabites, for they? obedience.

In the fourth yere of Jehoakim sonne of Josiah the kynge of Juda, came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy, sayinge: * Take a booke, & wryte therein all the wordes that I haue spoken to the agaynst Israel, agaynst Juda, & agaynst all the people, from the tyme that I beganne for to speake vnto the (in the reigne of Josiah) vnto this day. That whē I haue deuiled for the: they maye peradventure turne, euery man from hys wycked waye: & I maye forgyue theyr offences and synnes.

Then dyd Jeremy call Baruch the sonne of Ateriah, & Baruch wrote in the booke at the mouth of Jeremy all the wordes of the Lorde, which he had spoken vnto hym. And Jeremy commaunded Baruch sayinge: I am in prison, so that I maye not come into the house of the Lorde: therfore go thou thyself and reade the booke that thou hast wrytten at my mouth: Namely, the wordes of the Lorde and reade them in the Lordes house vpon the fastinge daye, that the people, whole Juda, and all they that come out of the cyties maye heare. Peradventure, they wyll praye mekely before the face of the Lorde, & turne euery one from his wycked waye. For great is the wrath and displeasure, that the Lorde hath taken agaynst this people.

So Baruch the sonne of Ateriah dyd ac-cordinge vnto all that Jeremy the prophete commaunded hym, readyng the wordes of the Lorde out of the booke in the Lordes house.
And this was done in the fyft yere of Jeho-akim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, in the ix. moneth, * when it was commaunded, that all the people of Ierusalem shuld fast before the Lorde, and they also that were come from the cyties of Juda vnto Ierusalem.

Then red Baruch the wordes of Jeremy out of the booke within the house of the Lorde out of the tresury of Samariah the sonne of Saphan the scribe, which is besyde the hyer gate of the * newe doore of the Lordes house: that all the people myght heare. Now when Eiechiah the sonne of Samariah, the son of Saphan had herde all the wordes of the Lorde out of the booke, he wēt downe to the kynges palace into the scribes chambres, for there all the princes were set. Elisama the scribe, Dalaiah the sonne of Semei, Elnathan the sonne of Ichboz, Samariah the sonne of Saphan, Iedekiah the sonne of Ihananiah, with all the princes. And Eiechiah tolde them all the wordes that he herde Baruch reade out of the booke before the people.

Then all the princes sent Iehudi the son of Harhaniah, the sonne of Selamiah, the sonne of Chusi, vnto Baruch, sayinge: Take in thine hande the booke, whereout thou hast red before all the people, and come. So Ba-rucho the sonne of Ateriah, toke the booke in his had, and came vnto them. And they sayd vnto hym: Syt do done and reade the booke, that we may heare also. So Baruch red that they myght heare. Now when they had herd all the wordes, they were abashed one vpon another, and sayd vnto Baruch: We wyll certifye the kynge of all these wordes. And they examyned Baruch, sayinge: tel vs how dyddest thou wryte all these wordes out of his mouth? Then Baruch answered them: he spake all these wordes vnto me with his mouth, and I wrote them in the booke.

Then sayd the princes vnto Baruch: Go thy waye, hyde the with Jeremy, so that no man knowe where ye be: And they wēt into the kynge to the court. But they kepte the booke in the chambze of Elizama the scribe, and tolde the kynge all the wordes, that he might heare. So the kyng sent Iehudi to fet him the booke which he brought out of Elisa-ma the scribes chambze: And Iehudi red in it that the kynge and all the princes whiche were about hym myght heare. Nowe the kyng sat in the wynter house, for it was in the ix. moneth, and there was a fyre before him. And when Iehudi had red thze of foure leaves thereof, he cut the booke in peces with a penneknyfe: and cast it into the fyre vpon the hearth vntyll the booke was all bzent in the fyre vpon the hearth.

Yet noman was abashed thereof, or rent his clothes: neyther the kynge hym selfe, nor his seruantes, though they hearde all these wordes. Neuerthelesse, Elnathan, Dalaiah, and Samariah besought the kynge, that he wolde not burne the booke: notwithstanding the kynge wolde not heare them, but commaunded Jerazinel the sonne of Amelch: Saraiah the sonne of Eziel, and Selamiah the sonne of Abdiel, to lay handes vpon Ba-rucho the scribe, and vpon Jeremy the prophet: but the Lorde kept them out of syght.
After now that the kyng had bzent the booke and the sermons which Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremy. The worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremy, sayinge: Take an other booke and wryte in it all the foresayd sermons, that were wrytten in the fyft booke, which Jehoa kim the kynge of Juda hath bzent.

And tel Jehoakim the kynge of Juda: thus sayth the Lorde: thou hast bzent the booke, and thoughtest within thy selfe: Why hast thou wrytten therein, that the kynge of Babilon shal come, and make this land waste: so that he shal make both people and cattell to be out of it. Therfore thus the Lorde sayth of Jeho-a kim the kynge of Juda. * There shall none of his generacyon syt vpon the throne of Da-uid. His deed cooyle shalbe cast out, that the wyckednesse of hym, of his seed, & of his seruantes. Moreover, all the euyl that I haue promysed them (though they hearde me not) wyl I bringe vpon them, vpon the inhabytours of Ierusalem, and vpon all Iuda. Then toke Jerempe an other booke, and gaue it Baruch the scribe the sonne of Neriah, which wrote therein out of the mouth of Jerempe, all the sermons that were in the fyrst booke which Ieroboam the kyng of Iuda dyd burne. And there were added vnto them manye more sermons, then before.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

Zedekiah surrendreth Cononia. He sendeth vnto Jerempe to praye for hym. Jerempe going into the lande of Ben Iamin is taken. He is beaten and put in prison. He is deliuered by kynge zedekiah.

Zedekiah the sonne of Josiah which was made kyng thowowe Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babylon, raygned in the lande of Iuda, in the steade of Cononiah the sonne of Ieroboam.

But neyther he nor hys seruantes, nor the people in the lande, wolde obeye the wordes of the Lorde, which he spake by the prophete Jerempe. Nevertheless, zedekiah the kyng sent Iedual the son of Selemiah, and Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah the prest to the prophet Jerempe, saying: O pray thou vnto the Lorde our God for vs. Howe Jerempe walked free among the people at that tyme, and was not put in prison as yet. Pharaos boost also was come out of Egypte: whiche when the Chaldees that beseged Ierusalem perceyued, they departed from thence.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto the prophet Jerempe, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel, this answer shall ye geue to the kyng of Iuda that sent you vnto me for counsaile. Beholde, Pharaos boost which is com forth to helpe you, shall returne to Egypt into his owne lande: but the Chaldees shall come agayne and fyght agaynst this cite, wyne it, and set fyre vpon it.

For thus sayth the Lorde: disceyue not your owne myndes, thynkynge on this maner: Thus, the Chaldees go now their way from vs. So, they shall not go their waye. For though ye had slayne the whole booste of the Chaldees that besiege you, and euery one of the slayne laye in hys tente, yet shoulde they stande vp, and set fyre vpon this cite.

When the boost of the Chaldees was broken vp from Ierusalem, for feare of the Egyptians armye: Jerempe went out of Ierusalem, toward the lande of Ben Iamin, to get hym from amonge the people. And when he came vnder Ben Iamins porte, there was a porter called Ieriah, the sonne of Selemiah the sonne of Hananiah, whiche fell vpon hym, and toke hym, saying: thy mynde is to runne to the Chaldees. Then sayde Jerempe. It is not so, I goo not to the Chaldees. Neuertheles, Ieriah wold not beleue him, but brought Jerempe bounde before the princes. Wherfore the princes were angrie with Jerempe, and smot hym, and layde hym in prison in the house of Ionathas the scribe. For he was the ruler of the prison. Thus was Jerempe put into a dongeon and prison, and so laye there a longe tyme. Then zedekiah the kyng sent for hym, and called hym, and asked hym quyetly in his owne house, sayinge: thynkest thou this busynesse (that nowe is in hande) cometh of the Lorde? Jerempe answered: yea, that it doth: and thou (sayde he) shalt be deliuered in to the kyng of Babylons power.

Moreouer, Jerempe sayde vnto kynge zedekiah: What haue I offended agaynst the, agaynst thy seruantes, or agaynst this people, that ye haue put me in prison? All here are your prophetes whiche haue prophesied vnto you, and sayd: that the king of Babyls shoulde not come agaynst you and this land: And therefore heare now, O my lord kyng: let my prayer be accepted before the, & sende me no more in to the house of Ionathas the scribe, that I dye not there. Then zedekiah the kyng commaunded to put Jerempe in the fore entry of the prison, and dayly to be giuen him a cake of bzed out of the bakers strete vntill all the bzed in the cite was eat vp. Thus Jerempe remayned in the fore entry in the prison.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

By the mocyon of the rulers, Jerempe is put into a dongeon. At the request of Adelmetch the chamberlaine, the kyng commaunded Jerempe to be brought forth of the dongeon. Jerempe sheweth the kyng how he might escape death.

Saphathiah the sonne of Mathan, Sobothiah the sonne of Phalsur, Iusal the sonne of Semelliah, and Phalsur the sonne of Welchia perceyued the wordes, that Jerempe had spoken vnto all the people: nameley, on this maner: Thus sayth the Lorde: Wholo remayneth in this cite shall perishe either with the sword with hunger, or with the pestilence. But who so falleth vnto the Chaldees shall escape wyngynge his soule for a praye, and shall lyue.

For thus sayth the Lorde. This cite (no doubt) must be deliuered into the power of the kyng of Babylon, and he also shall wyne it. Then sayde the princes vnto the kyng: Why, we beseeche you, let this man be put to death. For thus he discourageth the handes of the souldyers that be in this cite, and the handes of all the people, whiche speake such like wordes vnto them. This man verely labourereth not for peace of the people, but mischefe: zedekiah the kyng answered, & sayd: lo, he is in your handes: for the kyng maye denye you nothynge. Then toke they Jerempe, and cast hym into the dongeon of Welchiah.

Jeremye the sonne of Amelch that dwelt in the fore entrie of the prison. And they let Jeremye with coozdes into a donged, where there was no water but myze. So Jeremye made fast in þe myze. Now whē Abedmelech the Moopan, beinge a chambrelayne in the kynges court, vnder stood that they had cast Jeremye into the dongeon: he went out of the kynges house & spake to the kyng, (whiche then sat vnder the porte of Ben Samin) these wordes: my lord the kyng, where as these men medle with Jeremye the Moopere, they do hym wronge: Namely, in that they haue put hym in prison, there to dye of hunger: for there is nomoze breed in the cite. Then the kyng commaunded Abedmelech the Moopan, and sayd. Take from hence. xxx men whom thou wilt, & draue vp Jeremye the prophet out of the dongeon before he dye. So Abedmelech toke the men with him, and went to the house of the kyng, and ther vnder the tresurpe he gat olde ragges & woyned clothes, and let them dolue by a coozde into the dongeon to Jeremye.

And Abedmelech the Moopan sayd vnto the prophete Jeremye: Out these ragges & clothes vnder thyn arme holes, betwixt them and the coozdes: & Jeremye dyd so. So they drew vp Jeremye with coozdes, and toke hym out of the dongeon, & he remayned in the fore entrie of the prison. Then zedekiah the kyng lent, and caused Jeremye the prophete to be called vnto hym, into the thyrde entrie that is in the house of the Lord. And þe kyng sayd vnto Jeremye: I wyl aske the somwhat but hyde nothyng from me. Then Jeremye answered zedekiah: If þe playne vnto the, thou wilt cause me to suffre death: If I giue the counsaile, thou wilt not folowe me. So the kyng swore an othe secretlye vnto Jeremye, sayinge: As truly as the Lord lyueth, that made vs these soules, I wyl not slaye the, nor gyue the into the handes of the that leue after thy lyfe.

Then sayd Jeremye vnto zedekiah. Thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. If case be, that thou wilt go forth vnto the kyng of Babylons princes, thou shalt saue thy lyfe, and this cite shal not be bzint: yea, both thou and thy household shal escape with your lyues. But if thou wilt not go forth to the kyng of Babylons princes, then shal this cite be deliuered into the handes of the Chaldees, which shal set fyre vpon it, & thou shalt not be able to escape the. And zedekiah sayd vnto Jeremye: I am afrayed for the Jewes, that are fled vnto the Chaldees, lest I come in theyr handes, and so they to haue me in derision.

But Jeremye answered: No, they shall not betraye the: Ouerken vnto the voyce of the Lord (I beseech the) which I speake vnto the so shalt thou be well, and saue thy lyfe. But if thou wilt not go forth, þe Lord hath tolde me this playnely: Behold, al the womē that are left in the kyng of Iudaes house, shal be led forth out to the kyng of Babylons princes. And they shal saye, þe thou art disceyued: and þe men in whō thou dydest put thy trust haue gotten the vnder, & let thy feet fast in þe myze, and gone theyr waye from the. Therefore all thy wyues with theyr chyldren shal they lede forth vnto þe Chaldees, & thou shalt not escape theyr hādes, but shalt be the kyng of Babylons prisoner, & this cite shalt thou cause to be bzint. Then sayde zedekiah vnto Jeremye: loke that no bodye knowe of these wordes, and thou shalt not dye. But if the princes perceyue that I haue talked with þe, and come vnto the, saying: O speake, what sayd the kyng to the: hide it not fro vs, & we wyl not put the to death. Tell vs (we praye the) what sayde the kyng to the? So thou gyue them this answer: I haue humbly besought the kyng, that he wyl let me lyue nomoze in Jehonathans house, that I dye not there. Then came all the princes vnto Jeremye, and asked hym. And he tolde them, after the maner as the kyng had hym. Then they helde the peace and let hym alone: for they perceyued nothing. So Jeremye abode still in the fore entrie of the prisō, vntill the dape that Ierusalem was wonne.

The xxxix. Chapter.

Abuchodonozor besieged Ierusalem: zedekiah fled: he is taken of the Chaldees. His sonnes are slayne: his eyes are shutt out. Jeremye is prouided for. Abedmelech is deliuered from captiuitie, because of the confidence that he had in God.

Now whē the cytie of Ierusalem was taken: for in the ix. yere of zedekiah kyng of Iuda, in the tenth Moneth, came Abuchodonozor the kyng of Babylō and all his host, and besieged Ierusalem, & fought agaynst it. And in the xi. yere of zedekiah in the iiii. moneth, the ix. dape of þe moneth, he brake into the cytie. Then al þe princes of the kyng of Babylō, came in and sat them downe vnder the porte: Nerregel, Sarezzer, Samgarnebo, Sarchachim, Rablaris, Nerregel, Sarezzer, Rabmag with al the other princes of the kyng of Babylō. And when zedekiah the kyng of Iuda with his souldiers sawe them that fled, and departed out of the cite by nyght, thezow the kynges garden, and thezow the port that is betwene the two walles, and so they went towarde the wyldernesse.

But the Chaldees host folowed fast after them, and toke zedekiah in the felde of Jericho, and brought hym prisoner to Abuchodonozor þe kyng of Babylō vnto Reblath, that lyeth in the land of Hemath, where he gaue iudgement vpon him. So þe kyng of Babylō caused the chyldren of zedekiah and all the all the nobles of Iuda be slayne before his face at Beblath. And made zedekias eyes to be put out, and bounde hym with two chaines, and sent hym to Babilon.

C * Moreover, the Chaldees burnt up the kynges palace, with the other houses of the people, and brake downe the walles of Ierusalem. As for the remnant of the people that were in the cite, and such as were come to helpe the (whatsoever was left of the comen sort) Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne caried them to Babilon. But Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne let the rascal people (and those that had nothyng) dwell still in the land of Iuda, and gaue them vineyardes & corne felde at the same tyme. Nabuchodonozor also the kyng of Babilon gaue Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne a charge concernyng Jeremie, saying: take and cherishe hym, and make moch of hym, for thou do hym no harme but intreate hym after his owne desyre.

D So Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne, Nabuzban Nabšares, Berial Sarezzer, Rabmag, and all the kynges of Babilons lordes sent for Jeremie, * and caused hym to be fet out of the fore entrie of the prison, & comfited him vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan: that he shoulde carie him home: * and so he dwelte amonge the people. Nowe whyle Jeremie laye yet bounde in the fore entrie of the prison, the worde of the Lord came vnto hym, sayinge: Go, and tell Abedmelech the Moorian: Thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Behold the cruell and warpe plage that I haue deuysed for this cite, wyl I bypunge vpon them, & thou shalt see it: but I wyl deliuer the (sayeth the Lord) and thou shalt not come in the handes of those men whom thou fearest. For doubtlesse, I wyl saue the, so that thou shalt not perishe with the swerde: but thy lyfe shall be sau'd: & that because thou hast put thy trust in me, sayth the Lord.

The .xl. Chapter.

C Jeremie hath licence to go whither he wyl. He dwelleth with the people that remaineth at Ierusalem, ouer whom Godoliah ruleth. Iohanan propheseth vnto Godoliah.

This is the word that the Lord spake vnto Jeremie, * when Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne had let him go free fro: Ramath, whither he had led him bound amonge all the prisoners that were caried from Ierusalem and Iuda vnto Babilon. The chiefe captayne called for Jeremie, and sayd vnto hym. The Lord thy God spake myghtely before, of the myserye vpon this place: Nowe the Lord hath sent it, and performed it as he hath promysed. For ye haue synned agaynst the Lord, and haue not ben obedyent vnto his voyce: therefore cometh this plage vpon you. Beholde, I loke the handes from thy handes this daye: for thou wylt nowe go with me vnto Babilon, by the way I wyl see to the, and proude for the. But if thou wylt not go with me to Babilon, then remaine here. * Beholde all the lande is at thy wil, loke where thou thyngest conuenient and good for the to abyde, there dwell. For as yet he was not gone backe agayne to Godoliah, therefore he sayde to him: go backe to Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam, the sonne of Saphan: * who the kyng of Babilon hath made gouernour ouer the cities of Iuda, and dwell with hym amonge the people, & remaine wheresoever it please the. So the chiefe captayne gaue hym his expenses with a rewarde, and let hym go. * Then went Jeremie vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam, to Mizpa, and dwelt there with hym amonge the people that were left in the lande.

E Nowe when the captaynes of the hostes of Iuda (which with theyr felowes were scattered abrode on euery syde in the land) vnderstode, that the kyng of Babilon had made Godoliah the son of Ahicam gouernour in the land: and that man, wyfe and chyldre, yea and the poore men in the lande (that were not led captiue to Babilon) shoulde be vnder his iurisdiction: They came to Godoliah vnto Mizpa: Namely Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah Iohanan, and Jonathan the sonnes of Eareah, Sareah the sonne of Chabometh: the sonnes of Ophai the Ettopharite, Iesaniah the sonne of Maachati, with theyr companiōs. And Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam, the son of Saphan ware vnto them and theyr felowes in this maner. * Be not afrayed to serue the Chaldees, dwell in the lande, and do the kyng of Babilon seruyce, so shall ye prosper. Beholde, I dwell at Mizpa to be an officer in the Chaldees behalfe, and to satisfie such as come to vs. Therefore gather you wyne, corne and oyle, and kepe them in your ware houses, and dwell in your ctyes that ye haue in kepynge.

E Nowe, al the Jewes also that dwelt in Moab vnder the Ammonites in Iourea and in all the countreies when they herde that the kyng of Babilon had made Godoliah the son of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan gouernour, vpon the that were left in Iuda. All the Jewes (I say) returned out of all places where they were fled vnto, and came into the land of Iuda to Godoliah vnto Mizpa, and gathered wyne and other frutes, and that very moch. Moreover, Iohanan the sonne of Eareah and all the captaynes of the hostes that were scattered on euery syde in the land, came to Godoliah in Mizpa, & sayd vnto him: knowest thou not that Baalis the kyng of the Ammonites hath sent Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah to slaye the? But Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam pleased them not. Then sayd Iohanan the sonne of Eareah vnto Godoliah in Mizpa in Wylpa these wordes secretly. Let me go, I praye the and I wil slay Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah, ſo that no bodye ſhal knowe it. Wherefore wyl he kyll the, that all the Jewes which reſorte vnto the, myght be ſcattered, and the remnaunt in Iuda perſhe. And Godoliah the ſonne of Ahikam ſayde to Iohanan the ſonne of Carcab. Thou ſhalte not do it, for they are but lyers, that thou ſayeſte of Iſmael.

C The. xli. Chapter.

Iſmael killeth Godoliah epicleſip, and many other with hym. Iohanan ſoſe wech after Iſmael.

In the ſeuenth moneth it happened, that Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah the ſonne of Eliſama (one of the kynges bloude) came w them that were greateſt about the kyng, and ten men that were ſwozne with hym: vnto Godoliah the ſonne of Ahikam to Wylpa, and they dyd eate togyther. And Iſmael the ſon of Nathaniah with thoſe ten men that were ſwozne to hym, ſtarte vp, and ſmote Godoliah the ſonne of Ahikam the ſonne of Saphan with the ſwerde, and ſlewe hym, whome the kyng of Babylon had made gouernoure of the lande. Iſmael alſo ſlewe all the Jewes that were with Godoliah at Wylpa, and all the Chaldees that he founde there waytyng vnto hym and thoſe that were hable to fyghe w hym.

Thenexte daye after that he had ſlayne Godoliah (the matter was yet vnknewen) and there came certayne men from Sichem, from Siloh and Samaria, to the nombze of lxx. whiche had ſhauen theyr beardes, reute theyr clothes, and were all heuy, byrnyngge meate offrynges and incenſe in theyr handes to offre it in the houſe of the Lorde. And Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah went forth of Wylpa wepyng, to mete them. Now when he met them, he ſayde: Go your waye to Godoliah the ſonne of Ahikam. And when they came in the myddelt of the ctye, Iſmael the ſon of Nathaniah w them that were ſwozne vnto hym ſlewe them, euen at the myddelt of the pte. Amonge theſe foure ſcore men, there were ten, that ſayde vnto Iſmael: Oh, ſlaye vs not, for we haue yet a great treaſure in the felde, of wheat, barley, ople and honye.

So he ſpared them, and ſue them not with theyr byrthen. Nowe the xpt wherein Iſmael dyd caſt ſ dede bodyes of the men (whō he ſue becauſe of Godoliah) had kynged Aſa cauſed to be made for feare of Baalſa ſ kyng of Iſrael, and the ſame pte dyd Iſmael ſpl w ſlaye men. As for the remnaunt of the people, the kynges daughters and all the people that were yet left at Wylpa vpon whom Nabuſaraban the cheſe captayne had made Godoliah the ſonne of Ahikam gouernour: Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah carped them awaye prisoners towarde the Ammonytes. But when Iohanan the ſonne of Carcab, and all they which had ben captaynes ouer the kynges hoost with hym, herde of all the wickedneſſe that Iſmael the ſon of Nathaniah had done: they toke theyr copanyons, and went out for to fyghe with Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah, and found hym by the great waters that are in Sibeon. Now when all the people whom Iſmael led captiue, ſawe Iohanan ſonne of Carcab, and all the other captaynes of the hoost, they were glad. So all the people that Iſmael had carped away from Wylpa, were brought agayne.

And when they returned, they came to Iohanan the ſonne of Carcab. But Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah, fled from Iohana with vii. of his ſwozne companyons, and went to the Ammonites. Then Iohanan the ſonne of Carcab and all the captaynes of the hoost, were with hym, toke all the remnaunt of the people, whom Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah had led away. (When he had ſlayne Godoliah the ſonne of Ahikam) whom they alſo had reſcued from hym: fyghtyng men, women and childre, and gelded men, whom they brought agayne fro Sibeon: & wet fro thence & ſat them downe at Seruth Canaan which lyeth beſyde Bethlechem, that they myght go into Egypte for feare of the Chaldees: of whom they were afrayed, becauſe Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah had ſlayne Godoliah Ahikams ſonne whom the kyng of Babylon had made gouernour in the lande.

C The. xlii. Chapter.

The captaynes aſke counſaile of Jeremyc what they ought to do. Jeremyc admoniſhed the remnaunt of the people not to go into Egypt.

So all the captaynes, & Iohanan ſonne of Carcab, Iſaias the ſon of Oſaias, came with all the people fro the leſt vnto the moost, and ſayde vnto Jeremyc the prophete. *O heare our peticion, that thou mayeſt praye for vs, vnto the Lorde thy God: namely, for all the remaunt wherof there be very fewe of vs left of many, as thou ſeeſt vs: that the Lorde thy God maye ſerue vs a waye to go in, & tel vs what we ſhulde do. Then Jeremyc ſ prophete ſayd vnto them: I haue herde you. Beholde, I wil praye vnto God your Lord as ye haue requyred me: and loke what anſwer ſ Lorde gyueth you, I ſhall certifie you thereof, and kepe nothing backe from you. And they ſayd vnto Jeremyc: *The Lord of truthe ſayth: fulneſſe be our record, that we wyl do al that the Lorde thy God commaundeth vs, whether it be good or euill. We wyl hearken vnto the voyce of the Lorde God, to whō we ſend the, that we may proſper, when we haue followed the voyce of the Lorde our God.

And after ten dayes came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremyc. The called he Iohana the the sonne of Careah, and all the captaynes of the people that were with hym: yea, and all the people fro the leest to the moost, and sayd vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel vnto whome ye sent me to laye forth your prayers before hym: * If ye will dwell in this lande, I shall buyde you vp, and not breake you downe: I shall plant you, and not roote you oute: for I repent, as concernynge the trouble that I haue done to you. He are not the kyng of Babylon, of whom ye stand in awe: O, be not afrayed of hym, sayth the Lorde: for I will be with you, to helpe you, and deliuer you from his hande. I will pardon you, I will haue mercye vpon you, and cause hym to ptepte you, and bypunge you agayne into your owne lande.

E Reuerthelesse, if ye purpose not to dwell in this lande, nor to folowe the voyce of the Lorde your God: but wyl saye thus: we wyl not dwell here, but goo into Egypte: where we shall neyther se warre, heare the noyse of the trompe, nor suffre hungre, ther wyl we dwell. Wherefore, heare now the word of the Lorde, O ye remnaunt of Iuda: * Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: If ye be wholly purposed to go into Egypt, & to dwell there as straungers: * the swearde that ye feared, shall ouertake you in Egypt: and the hungre whereof ye be here afrayed, shall hange vpon you, and folowe you in to Egypte: and there shall ye dye. And all they, that of set purpose vnder take to go into Egypt to sojourne there, shall perishe with the swearde, with hungre and pestilence: not one of them shall remayne, there shall none escape the plague, that I will bypunge vpon them.

D For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: lyke as my wrath and indignacion is moued agaynst the inhabitours of Ierusalem: so shall my displeasure be kyndled agaynst you also, if ye go into Egypt: & there ye shall be reuyled, abhorred, brought to shame and confusio: and as for this place ye shall neuer se it moze. The Lorde forbydeth you (O ye remnaunte of Iuda) that ye shall not go into Egypt.

And forget not that I haue warned you earnestly this daye, for ye haue dissembled w me. * For ye sent me vnto the Lorde your God, and sayde: O praye thou the Lorde our God for vs: and loke what answer the Lord our God giveth the, that bypunge vs agayne and we shall do thereafter. Nowe haue I answered and declared vnto you, but you haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lorde your God, for the which cause he hath sent me to you.

Nowe therfore: * If ye will not folowe it, be sure, that ye shall perishe with the swearde with hungre and pestilence: euen in the same place, where your lust is to go and dwell.

C The xliii. Chapter.

Johanan carped the remnaunt of the people into Egypt, contrary to the iudges of Jeremie. Jeremie prophesied the destruction of Egypt.

Nowe when Jeremie had ended all the wordes of the Lord his God, vnto the people, whiche to declare the Lorde they: God had sente hym to them: euen all these wordes, I saye: * Azariah the sonne of Oshai and Johanan the sonne of Careah, with all the stubburne personnes, sayde vnto Jeremie: * thou lyest: the Lorde our God hath not let the to speake vnto vs, that we shoulde not go into Egypte, and dwell there. But Baruch the sonne of Neriah, prouoketh the, agaynst vs, that he myght bypunge vs into the captiuitie of the Chaldees, that they might slaye vs, and carie vs away prisoners vnto Babylon.

So Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the captaynes of the host, and all the people folowed not the commaundement of the Lorde: Namely, to dwell in the lande of Iuda: But Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the captaynes of the host, caried awaye all the remnaunt in Iuda, * that were come togyther agayne from al the heyden among whom they had bene scattered, to dwell in the lande of Iuda: Men, women, chyldren, the kynges daughters: all those that Nabuzardan the chiefe captayne had left with Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam, the sonne of Shaphan. They caried awaye also the prophete Jeremie, Baruch the sonne of Neriah, and so came into Egypt: for they were not obedient vnto the commaundement of God. Thus came they to Taphnis.

E And in Taphnis the worde of the Lorde happened vnto Jeremie, saying: Take great stones in thine hande, and hyde them in the byrche wal, vnder the doore of Pharaos house in Taphnis, that all the men of Iuda may se and saye vnto them: Thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: * Beholde, I will sende and cal for Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon my seruauant, & wyl set his seate vpon these stones that I haue hyd, & he shall sprede his tent ouer them.

And when he cometh, he shall smyte the lande of Egypt, some with slaughter, some with prisoment, and some with the swearde, he shall set fyre vpon the temples of the Egyptians goddes, and burne them vp, and take them selues prisoners. Mozeouer, he shall arraye him selfe with the lande of Egypt, lyke as a shepheard putteth on his cote, and shall departe his waie from thence in peace. The pylers also of the temple of the Sunne that is in Egypte, shall be breake in peeces, and burne the temples of the Egyptians goddes.

whych they commytted, to prouoke me vnto anger. In that they went backe to do sacrifice and worshyp vnto straunge goddes: whom nether ye, ner poure fathers haue known. howbeit, I sent vnto them my seruau-ntes al the prophetes. * I rose vpearely, I set vnto them, and gaue them warnynge. I do no suche abhomyable thynges, as thynges that I hate. But they wolde not folowe ner hearken, to turne from theyr wyckednes, & to do more sacrifices vnto straunge goddes.

Wherfore myne indignation and wyathe was kindled, and it brent vp the cyties of Juda, the feldes with the stretes of Jerusalem, so that they were made waste and desolate, as it is come to passe thys daye. Howe therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel: Howe happeneth it, that ye do so grete euill vnto poure owne soules: thus to destroye the men and women: chyldren and babes of Juda: so that none of you is left, because ye prouoke me vnto wyathe with the workes of poure owne handes:

When ye offer vnto straunge Godes in the land of Egypt, where as ye be gone to dwel.
That ye myght utterly perishe, and that ye myght be reupled and shamefully intreated of all nations. I haue ye nowe forgotten the wickednesse of your forefathers, the wickednes of the kynges of Juda and their wy-ues, the wyckednes that ye poure felces and poure wyues haue done in the lande of Juda, in the stretes of Jerusalem.

Ye are ye not sorp vnto thys daye, ye fear not, nether walke ye in my lawe and in my commandementes, that I haue geuen vnto you and poure forefathers.

Wherfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hos-tes, the God of Israel: I am stedfastly advised and determined to punyssh you, and to reioyce all Juda. As for the remnaunte of Juda, that purposly went into Egypt, ther in dwel, I will take them, & they shall all be destroyed. In the lande of Egypt shall they perishe, beyng consumed wyth the swearde and with hunger. For from the lest vnto the moste, they shall perishe wyth the swearde and with hunger. Moreover, they shalbe reupled, abhorred shamed, and confounded. For I will vplet them that dwell in Egypte, * as I haue vplet Jerusalem, with the swearde, with hunger and with pe-silence, so that none of the remnaunt of Juda, which are gone to dwell in Egypt, shall be left to come agayne into the lande of Juda all though they thyncke to come thither agayne, & to dwell there. For none shall come agayne, but suche as are fled awaye.

Then all the men which knewe that their wyues had offered vnto straunge goddes, and a great sorte of wyues that stode there, yee, and all f. people that dwell there in Egypte in the cytie of Patures, answered Jeremye, and sayde: As for the wordes that thou hast spoken vnto vs: in the name of the Lorde, we will in no wyse heare them: but whatsoeuer goeth out of oure owne mouth, that we will do. We will do sacrifice and offer oblatyons vnto the quene of heauen, * lyke as we & oure forefathers, oure kynges and oure heades haue done in the cyties of Juda, and in the stretes and feldes of Jerusalem.
For then had we plenteousnes of vytales, then were we in prosperite and no mysfortune came vpon vs.

* But sene we left to burne incense, and to do sacrifice vnto f. quene of heauen, we haue had scarcenesse of all thynges, and peryshe wyth the swerde and hunger. Laste of all, when we women dyd sacrifice and offered vnto the quene of heauen, dyd we make her cakes and power vnto hyr: dryncke offerynges, euen to f. ymage dyd we sacrifice & seruice, wythout oure husbandes wylls.

Then sayde Jeremy vnto al the people to the men to the women, and to al the folke whyche had gyuen hym that answer: Dyd not the Lorde remembre the sacrificys that ye, poure forefathers, poure kynges and rulers, wyth all the people, haue offered in the cyties of Juda, in the stretes and lande of Jerusalem: and hath he not considered thys in hys mynde? In somoch that f. Lorde myght no longer suffre the wyckednes of poure inuencionys, and the abhomyable thynges, whyche ye dyd: * Is not poure lande desolate and voyde: yee, abhorred and accursed: so that no man dwelleth therein any more, as it is come to passe this daye?

* Dyd not all this happen vnto you, because ye made suche sacrificys to ydols, and synned agaynst the Lorde. * Ye haue not folowed his voyce, to walke in his lawe, in his ordinaunces and statutes.

Yea, this is the cause that al mysfortune happened vnto you: as it is come to passe this daye. Moreover Jeremy spake vnto al the people and to all the women. Heare the worde of the Lorde, all Juda: ye that be in

But possy wyl ye set vp your owne meanynges and perforce your vowes. And therefore, heare the worde of the Lorde, all Iuda, ye & dwell in the lande of Egypte.

* And al the men of Iuda & be in the lande of Egypte shall perye wth the swerde & wth hogget, vntill they be vterly destroyed. Neuertheles, those & fled awaye for the swerde, shal come agayne into the lande of Iuda: but there shalbe very fewe of them.

And all the remnaunte of Iuda, & are gone into Egypte, there to dwell, shal know whose wordes shalbe founde true: theyrs or myne. Take thys for a token that I wyl vset you in thys place, sayth the Lorde & that ye maye knowe & I (wthout doubte) wyl perfourme my purpose v^o you to punysh you.

These are & wordes that Jeremy the prophet spake vnto Baruch the sonne Neriah. * after & he had wrytten these sermons in a booke at the mouth of Jeremye: in & fourth yere of Jehoakim the sone of Josias kyng of Iuda, sayinge Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel vnto the, O Baruch. The. xlv. Chapter.

The prophete Jeremye the destruction of Egypte. Baruch the sonne Neriah is promysed to Irael.

Here folowe the wordes of & Lorde to the prophet Jeremy which he spake agaynst all the Setyles. These wordes folowynge preached he to * the Egypcyans concernyng the booke of Pharaos, Aethio kyng of Egypte: * when he was in Charra mis, belyde the water of Euphrates: what tyme as Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon slewe hym, in the fourth yere of Jehoakim the sone of Josias kyng of Iuda.

* Make ready buckler & spyde, and go furth to fyghte: harness your horses, and let your selues v^o them: set your salettes fast on, byynge furth speares scoure your swerdes, and put on your breste plates.

But alas how happeneth it, & I se you so astrayde/why shynke ye backe? Theyr wordes are flayne. Per, they ruine so fast awaye, that none of them looke the behynde hym: Fearfulnes is fallen vpon euerychone of them, sayth the Lorde. The lyghtest of foete shal not fle awaye, & the wordes shal not escape.

Towarde the north by the water of Euphrates, they dyd stumbe and fall. But what is he thys, & swelleth vp, as it were a floude, roarynge & ragynge lyke & streames of water: It is Egypt that rseth vp lyke & floude, and casteth oute the waters wth so great noyse.

And he sayde: I wyl go vp, & wyl conuer the erth. I wyl destroye the cytie & the that are therein. Set ye vp ye horses, rolle forth ye charettes come forth the wordes: ye Moyses, ye Libeans wth your buckles, ye Libeans & your bowes. Thys dape of & Lorde God of hostes, is a dape of vengeance, that he maye auenge hym of hys enemyes. The swerde shal deuouer, it shalbe satisfied and bathed in theyr bloude. For the Lorde God of hostes shal haue a flayne offeringe towarde the north, by the water of Euphrates. Go vp, O Eplead, & byynge trespacle vnto the daughter of Egypte. But in dayne shalte & go to surgery, for thy wounde shal not be stopped. The hepten haue hearde of thy name, and the lande is full of thy confusyon: for one stronge man dyd stumbe v^o another, & they are fallen both together.

* These are the wordes that the Lorde & spake to the prophet Jeremy concernyng & commynge of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, whych was sente to destroye & land of Egypt. Preache out thowwe & land of Egypte: & cause it to be proclaymed at Mig doll, hell, Roph and Tannis & Caye: Stand still make the redy, for the swerde shall consume the rounde aboute.

Howe happeneth it, & thy myghty woꝝ thys are fallen: Why stode they not fast?
Euen because the Lorde thrust them downe The slaughter was greates, for one fell euer styl vpon another. One cryed vpo another Up, let vs go agayne to oure owne people, and to oure owne naturall contrey from the cruell swerde.

They dyd crye euen there, O Pharao, kyng of Egypte & troublous kyng: the tyme wyll bypunge sedycio. As truly as I ly-ue, sayth the Lorde, whose name is the Lorde of hostes, it shall come as the mounte of Taboz, & as Libanus yf it stode in the see. O thou daughter of Egypt make ready thy ge-are to flye. For Roph shalbe voyde & desolate, so yf noman shall dwell therein. The lande of Egypte is lyke a goodlye fayre calfe: but destrucyō shall come out of the north I saye it cometh. Her waged souldiers yf be w her are lyke fat calves. They also shal be away together, & not abyde: for the daye of theyꝝ scatter, & the tyme of theyꝝ vyltacyon shal come vpon them.

The cry of them shall make a noyse, as the blaste of a trumpet. For they shall enter in wth theyꝝ hostes, & come wth axes, as it were hewys downe of wood. And they shall cut downe her wood, sayth the Lorde: They shalbe innumerable: for they shalbe mo in nombre then the grethoppers, so that noman shalbe able to tell them. The daughter of Egypte is confounded, and deliuered in to the handes of the people of the north.

Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell. Beholde, I wil vplet that restles people of Alexandria, Pharao and Egypte ye, vnder theyꝝ goddes and theyꝝ kynges: euen Pharao, and al them that put their trust in hym. Yee, I wyll delpyer them into the handes of those, that seke after theyꝝ lyues.
I shall bringe them into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, and into the power of hys seruantes. And after all these thynges it shalbe inhabyted as afore tyme, sayth the Lorde.

But be not thou afrayed (O my serua-nt Jacob) feare not thou O Israell. For lo, I wyll helpe the from farre, & thy seed from the lande of theyꝝ captiuite. Jacob also shal come agayne, and be in reste: he shall prospere & no man shall do hym harme. Fear thou not (O Jacob my seruante) sayth the Lorde for I am wth the: and wyll destroye all na-tyons, amonge whom I haue scattered the.
Wherthelesse, I wyll not consume the: but shall the and coꝛrecte the, yee, and that w thyng: for neyther wyll I spare the as one that were faultlesse.

The. lxxii. Chapter.

The wordes of the Lorde agaynst the Philistines.

These are the wordes, that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy the prophet, agaynst the Philistines, before y Pharao smote y cytie of Azah.
Thus sayth the Lorde: Be-holde, there shall waters aryse out of y north: & shall growe to a great floud, runnyng ouer & coue-ryng the land, the cyties, & them that dwell therin.

And the men shall crye, & all they that dwell in the lande, shall mourne at the noyse and stampyng of theyꝝ stronge barbed hoz-ses, at the shakynge of theyꝝ charettes and at the rumblunge of the wheles. The fathers shall not loke to theyꝝ chyldzen, so feble and weyke shall theyꝝ handes be: at the same tyme whē he shal be there, to destroye y whole lāde of y Philistines. He shal make wast both Etrus, Sidō, & al other y are sworne vnto the.

For the Lorde wyll destroye the Philistines, the remnaunte of the ple of Caphtoz, Baldnesse is come vpon Azah, A scald with her other vailleis shall kepe her pece.

Howe longe wyllte thou slaye, O thou swerde of the Lorde: When wyllte thou ce-asse? Turne agayne into thy swete rest, and leue of. But howe can it cease, whē the Lorde hym selfe hath geuen him a charge again-ste Acalon, and rapyd it vp agaynst the cy-ties of the see coaste?

The wordes of the Lorde agaynst the Moabites

Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell agaynst y Moab: wo be to y cytie of Bebo: for it is layed wast, brought to con-fusiō: & Karathiar taken. Wilgab is brought to shame & afrayd: Moab cā boast nomore of Helebō for they haue deuy-sed agaynst it. Come, shall they saye, let vs rote them out, y they maye be nomore amoge y nombre of the Gētilles, & that the Moa-men maye nomore be thought vpon: and the swerde shall persecute y. A voyce shall cry from Horonaim: w great wastynge & destruccyon is Moab made desolate.

Chyldzen coude tell of the crye therof.
For at the goynge vp vnto Luyth, he arose wth lamentacyon and mournynge, and do-wne towarde Horonaim, they heard a cruel and a deadly crye. Get you away, saue your lyues, and be lyke vnto the heeth in the wyl-dernesse. For because thou hast trusted in thyne owne woꝝkes & treasure, thou shalt be taken. Chamos w hys preastes and prytes shall go awaye into captiuite.

The destroyer shal come vpon all cyties none shal escape. The valles shalbe destroyed, and the feldes shalbe layed wast, lyke as the Lorde hath spoken.

Gyue wynges vnto Moab, that she get her awaye speedyly: for her cyties shalbe made so desolate, & nomā shal dwell therein.

Cursed be he that doth the worcke of þ Lorde negligently, and cursed be he that kepeth backe hys swerde from shedding of bloude.

Moab hath euer bene ryche & carelesse from her yowth vp, she hath sitten and taken her ease wryth her treasure. She was neuer yet put out of one vessell into a nother (that is) she neuer wente awaye into captiuitie, therfore her fast remaineth, and her sauour is not yet chaunged.

But lo, the tyme cometh sayth þ Lorde, & I shall sende her trussers to trusse her vp whyche shall remoue her from her dwellyng: & emptye her vesselles, and breake her wyne pottes. And Moab shalbe ashamed of Chamos, lyke as Israel was ashamed of Bethel, wherin she put her trust: Wherefore doo ye thyncke thus: we are myghty & stronge men of warre: Moab is destroyed: and her cyties bzente vp: her chosen yonge men be slaine, sayth the kynge, whose name is the Lorde of hostes. The destruccyon of Moab cometh on apace, and her fall is at hande.

All the neyghbours shal mourne for her and all they that knowe her name shal saye How happeneth it, that the stronge state and the goodly rodde is thus broken? And thou daughter Dibō, come downe from thy glozy, and syt in thyte. For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come vp to the also, and breake downe thy stronge holdes.

And thou that dwellest in Aroer, get þ to the strete, and loke aboute the, aske them þ are fled and escaped, & saye: what thyng is happened? Oh, Moab is confounded and ou-er come.

Mourne & crye, tell it onte at Arnon, þ Moab is destroyed. For iudgement shal come vpon the playne lande. Namely: vpon Holon, & Jabez, vpon Dibbaath & Dybon vpon Abo, & the house of Deblathaim vpon Cariathiarim and vpon the house Gamull, vpon the house Moan, and Carpothe vpon Bozrah, and all the cyties in the lande of Moab, whether they lye farre or neare.

The horne of Moab is smytten downe and her arme broken, sayth the Lorde. Wake her broken, for she magnified her selfe aboue the Lorde, & men maye clap theyr han-des at her vomite, and that she also maye be laughed to scoorne. O Israel, halt thou not laugh hym to scoorne, when he is taken amoge theues. * Pee, because of thy wordes that thou haste spoken against him thou shalt be dryuen awaye. Þe Moabytes shall leane the cytyes, and dwell in rockes of stone, and become lyke dours, that make theyr nestes in holes.

* As for Moabs pryde, we haue hear-de of it: she is very hye mynded. I knowe her stoutnesse, her hostyng, her arrogancye, and the pryde of her stomacke, sayth the Lorde. I knowe (sayth the Lorde) her indignacion, she dothe not ryghte, her wordes are lyes, & they haue not delt truly. Therfore shal the mournyng be made for Moab, and euery man shal crye for Moabs sake: a lamentacion shalbe made to the men þ stande vpon the wall. So wyll I mourne for the also, O Jazer, & for the, O thou vyneyard of Sabamah. Thy vyne bzaunches shall come ouuer the see, and the bzaunches of Jazer, but vnto the see: the destroyer shal bzeake into thy baruest & grapegatheryng: myrth & chere shalbe taken awaye from the tymbyr felde, & from the hole lande of Moab.

There shalbe no swete wyne in the presse, the treader shal haue no stomacke to crye, pee: there shalbe none to crye vnto him: why-che afore tyme were heard from Helebton to Eleale, & Jabez, whych lyfted vp theyr voyce from zoar vnto Hozonaim, & bulloche of of thre yere olde shal go mournyng. The waters also of Merim shalbe dried vp. For ouer I wyll make Moab cease, sayth þ Lorde: from the offerynges & censyng that she hathe made vnto her Goddesses in hye places.
Wherefore my herte mourneth for Moab, ly-ke a crowde playyng an heuie songe: & for the mennes sake of the bypcke wall my hert mourneth also: euen as a pype that ppyeth a dolefull songe: for they shalbe very fewe, & destroyed.

* All heades shalbe shauen, & all bea-des clippd of: all hādes bound, & loynes girded aboute wryth sacke clothe. Vpon all the house toppes & stretes of Moab, ther shalbe lamentable mournyng. For I wyll breake Moab lyke an vnprofitable vessell, sayth the Lorde: O howe is she destroyed: O howe mourneyth she! O howe doth Moab hange downe her heade, & is ashamed: Thus shal Moab be a laughinge stocke: & had in derisyon of all them that be rounde about her.
For thus sayth the Lorde. Beholde, the enemye shall come flyyng as an Eagle: & spred hys wynges vpo Moab. They shal clyme ouuer þ walles, & wyll þ stronge holdes. Then þ myghtie menes vertes in Moab shalbe ly-ke þ hert of a womā trauelyng with chyld.

And Moab shalbe made so desolate, þ she shal no moze be a people because she hath set vp her selfe agaynst the Lorde. * Feare, pyt & snare shall come vpon the, O Moab, sayth the Lorde. Whoso escapeth the feare shall fall in the pyt, and whoso getteth oute of the of the pte, shalbe taken in the snare. For I will bynne a peare of vpspeacp vpo Mo ab, sayth the Lorde. They that are able to ste, shall stande vnder the shadowe of hese ben. For there shall go a fyre out of hese b and a flame from syon, and shall burne v that proude people Moab, and the toppes of holledyrpous chyldren.

Mo be vnto the, O Moab, for thou pe ple of Chamos shalte perishe. Pee, thy son nes & daughters shalbe led awape captiue.
Pe at the laste wyl I bynne Moab oute of captiuitie agayne sayth the Lord. Thus saith the Lord of the plague of Moab.

The. xlii. Chapter,
The wordes of the Lorde agaynst the Ammonytes, & sayth the Lorde, Damascus, Cedar and Elam.

So concerning the Ammonytes, thus the Lorde sayth: hath Israel no chylidren, or is he with out an heyre? Why hath he poure lynge the taken Gad in: Why for doth hys people dwell in hys ctytes? Be holde therefore, the time cometh, sayth the Lorde, that I wyl bynne a nople of warre into Rabah of the Ammonytes: & yt shal be layed on a desolate heape: & her ctytes bierte shal be the Israelites shalbe lordes ouer those that had them in posselion afore, sayth the Lorde. Hesebon shal mourne: for it shalbe rooted out of the grounde, sayth the Lorde.

The ctytes of Rabah shal cry out, and crye them selues with sackcloth, they shal mourne & runne about the walles: for they lynge shalbe led away prysoner: pee, his pr ces and prynces wyl hym.

Why for trustest thou in the valley? thy valley hath flowed awape, O thou fearless daughter, & thynkest thou y thou art so safe, by reason of thy treasure, y no ma shal come to the? Behold, I wyl bynne a feare vpon the, sayth the Lorde God of hostes, fro all those that be about the: so that ye shalbe scattered euery man from another, and no man shal gather them together agayne that be led. But after that I wyl bynne y Am-monites also out of captiuitie agayne.

Upon the Edomites hath the Lorde of hostes spoken on thys maner: Is ther no more wyl dome in Theman? Is there noma re good counsell amonge hys people? Is ther wyl dome then turned cleue to naught?
Get you hce, turne your backes, crepe dow vnto the deppe, O ye citezys of Dedan.

For I wyl bynne destruction vpon Esau pe, and the daye of hys vpsitation. If the scape gatherers came vpon the, shulde they not leue some grapes? If the nyght robbers came vpon the, shulde they not take so moch as they thought were ynough?

But I wyl make Esau bare, and discouer his secretes, so that he shal not be able to hyde them. His seebe shalbe wasted awape: pea, his brettren and his neyghbours: and be hym selfe shal not be left behynde.

Thou shalt leaue thy fatherlesse chyldren behynde the, and I wyl kepe them: and thy wyddowes shal take theyr comfort in me.
For thus hath the Lorde spoken, Beholde they that me thought were vnmete to drinke of the cuppe, hath dronken with the fyre: & thynkest thou then to be free?

No, no, thou shalt nether be quyte nor fre: but thou must drinke also. For why? I haue sworne by my selfe, sayth the Lorde: y Bozrah shal become a wildernesse, an ope place a laughyng stocke and cursyng: and al her ctytes shalbe a continuall deserte.

For I am perfectly informed of the Lord that he hath sent a message alreedy vnto the hepthe. Gather you togyther, and go forth agaynst them: make you readye to the battyle: for lo, I wyl make the but small amonge the hepten, and lytle regarded amonge men.

The hys stomacke and the pryde of thy berte haue discaued the, because thou wylt dwell in the holes of stony rockes, and haue the hys mountaynes in possession. Reuerthe lesse, though thy nest were as hys as the Eagles: yet wyl I caste the downe, sayth the Lorde. Moreover, Idumea shalbe a wildernesse: who so goth by it, shalbe abashed, & wondre at all her myserable plagues. & lyke as Sodom, Gomorre, and the ctytes y laye ther about were turned vpsydowne, sayth the Lorde: so shal no body dwel in Idumea, and no man shal haue his habitation there.
Beholde, like as the lyon, so shal a destroyer come vp fro the pleasaunt meadowes of Jo-dan vnto the strong dwellinge place: & wh I haue made him quyet, I wyl make him to fye fro her: and all chosen men wyl I set in arape agaynst her: What is lyke vnto me?
What is he that wil stryue with me? What shepherde maye stande in my handes?

Therefore heare the counsayl of the Lord that he hath taken vpon Idumea: and his purpose that he hath deuyed vpo the citezys of Theman. The lest of the flock shal teare them in peces, & loke what saye thinge they haue, they shal make it waste: & them selues also. At the noyse of theyr fal: the earth shal quake: the crye of theyr voyce shalbe herd vn to the reed see. Beholde, the enemye shal come and sle vp hyther, lyke as it was an Eagle, & spred his winges vpon Bozrah. Tha shal the bertes of the worstypes in Edom be as the bert of a woman traueling of chyld.

Upon Damascus, Heman and Arpad shal come confusio: for they shal hear euyl tydynge, they shalbe tolled to and fro lyke the see that cannot stande styll. Damascus shalbe soze astrayed, and shal fye trembling

The prophceye,

shall come vpon her. Sorowe & payne shall ouertake her as a womā traueling of chyld. But howe shulde so wofull & glorious a cytie be forsaken: here therfore per ponge men shall fall in the stretes, and all her men of warre shalbe taken awaye in the tyme, sayth the Lorde of hostes, I wyl kyndel a fyre in the walles of Damascus, whych shall consume the place of Benhadad.

* Chap. xxi. c.

* As for Cedar and the kyngdome of Habor, whom Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon smote downe, The Lorde hath spoken thus vpon them: Arise, & get you vp vnto Cedar, & destruye the people toward the east. They: tentes & they: flockes, shall they take awaye: yee, they: hangynges and they: vessels. They: camelles also shall they carpe awaye wth them. They shall crye to them: Feare is on euery syde.

If

He, get you lone awaye, crape into caues, that ye maye dwell there, O ye inhabytors of Habor, sayth the Lorde: for Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon hath holden a counsell concernyng you: & concluded hys deuice agaynst you. Arise, and get you vp agaynst ponder ryche and careles people (sayth the Lorde) whiche hath nether gates nor doorebarres, but dwell alone. They: camels shalbe stollen, & the droues of they: cattell dyspuen awaye.

Moreouer, those wyl I scatter toward all the wyndes: and bryng them to destruction: yee, & that thowoe their owne famylers, sayth the Lorde. Habor also shalbe a dwellynge for dragons, & an euercastyng wyldernes: so that no body shall dwell there: & no man shall haue there hys habytacoon.

* Eze. xxi. d Dani. viii. a

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake to the prophet Jeremy, concernyng * Elam, in the begynnyng of the rayne of Zedekyah kyng of Iuda. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I wyl breake the bowe of Elam, & take away their strength: & vpon Elam I wyl bryng the foure wyndes from the foure quarters of heauen, and wyl scatter them agaynst the same foure wyndes. And there shalbe no people, but some of Elam shall fle vnto them.

For I shall cause Elam to be afrayed of they: enemyes, & of them that seke they: lyues: & wyl bryng vpon them the indignacion of my wrath, sayth the Lorde. And I wyl persecute them wth the swearde, so longe till I haue brought them to naughte. I wyl set my throne in Elam, I wyl destruy bothe the kyng and the prynces from thence, sayth the Lorde. But in processe of tyme I wyl bryng Elam oute of captiuite agayne, sayth the Lorde.

The .i. Chapter.

The prophced the destruction of Babylon, and the liberation of Israel, whych was in captiuite.

he wordes that the Lorde spake vnto the prophete Jeremy, concernyng Babylon, & the lande of the Chaldees: * Preach among the Gentiles, let your voice be hearde, make a token, crye oute, kepe no silence, but say: Babylon is wonne. * Bell is confounded, & Herodach is ouer come.

* Yee, their goddes be brought to shame & they: ymages burst in peces. For oute of the north there doth come a people agaynst her, whych make her lande so wast, that no body dwell therein, neyther man, nor beaste: for they sipe and departe from thence. * In those dayes & at that tyme, sayth the Lorde: the chyldren of Israel shall come, they and the chyldren of Iuda, wepyng & makynge haste, and shall seke the Lorde they: God. They shall aske the waye to Syon, thither shall they tourne they: faces, saying: Come and we will cleaue to the Lorde, in a covenante that neuer shall be broken.

My people hath bene a losse & flocke, my shepherdes haue dysceaued them, and haue made them go astraye vpon the hylls. They haue gone from the mountaine to the lytle hylle, & forgotten they: folde. All they that came vpon them, haue deuoured them: and they: enemyes sayde: We haue made no fault agaynst them: for they haue dyspleased the Lorde: yee, euen the Lorde, whych is the bewtie of they: ryghteousnesse and that defedded they: fathers. Yet shall ye sipe from Babylon, & departe oute of the lande of the Chaldees, & be ye as the rammes that go before the flocke. * For loo, I wyl wake vp an hooste of people from the northen lande, & bryng them vnto Babylon: these shall lay sege to yt, & wyne yt. They: arrowes shall not mysse, lyke as a connyng archer shott not wronge.

And the Chaldees shalbe spoyled, & all they that spyle them, shalbe satisfied, sayth the Lorde, * although ye were so chearfull & glad, to treade downe myne herptage, & fullfilled your pleasures, as the caueles in the grasse, & triumphed ouer them lyke the bulles, when ye had gotten the vycorpe. Your mothers shalbe sore confounded, and they that beare you, shall come to shame. She shalbe the leaste set by amonge the nacions, yourde wasted & dyed vp. No man shalbe able to dwell there, for the feare of the Lorde, but she shalbe whole desolate. * All they that go by Babylon, shall stande still and be abashed, and shall wonder at all her plagues.

So forth in your araye agaynst Babylon rounde aboute, all ye that can handle bowes shote at her, spare no arrowes: for she hath sinned agaynst the Lorde. Crye out: vpon her, vpon her, agaynst her rounde aboute: she shall shall peld her selfe, her foundacions shall fall & her wallies shall come downe: for it shall be the vengeance of the Lorde. * Yee, vengeance shall be taken of her, and as she hath done, so deale ye wth her. Kote out the sow er from Babylon, & hym that handleth the syle in berurle. For feare of the swearde of the enemye, euery man shall get hym to his owne people: and euery man shall flee to his owne lande. Israll is a scattered flocke the yrons haue dyspersed them. * As ye the lyng of the Assyrys denoured them, & last of all theys Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon hath brosed al theyr bones.

Therefore thus sayth the Lord of ho-lies the God of Israel: Beholde, I will by the kynge of Babylon & hys kyngdome I haue vsited the kynge of the Assyrians, & will bringe Israel agayne to hys pleasante pasture, that he maye fede vpon Charnell & Basan, & be satisfied vpon the mounte of Ephraim & Galaad. * In those dayes & at the same time, sayth the Lord: If the offence of Israel be sought for, there shal none be founde. If men enquire for the syn-ne of Juda, there shalbe none: for I will be mercifull vnto them, whom I suster to re-mayne ouer.

So downe, O thou auenger, into the empires lande, & visit them that dwell ther in: downe wpth them, & smyte them vpon þ backes, sayth the Lorde: do accordynge to al that I haue commaunded the. There ys going aboute the lande a crye of a slaughter ad great murdher, namely on this maner. How happeth it, that the hammer of the whole world is thus broken and bised in sonder?
How chaunceth it, that Babylon is become a wilderness amonge the heathen on thys maner: I my selfe haue layed wayte for the, & thou arte taken vnawares: art thou trapped & snared: for wylþ thou haste prouoked the Lorde vnto anger. The Lorde hath opened þys house of ordynauce, & brought forth the weapons of þys wrath. For the thyng that is done in the lande of the Chaldees, is the Lorde of Hoostes worcke.

Come agaynst her, for this is her ende: hinde by her chieftes: threthe her as ye threthe came: destroye her that nothyng shall be left. Slaye al their mighty souldyers, and put them to death. Alhoob vnto them, for they have sinned: theyr wyltacyon is at hā-de. We thynke I heare already a crye, of the that be fled and escaped oute of the lande of Babilon, whiche shewe in vpon the vengeance of the Lorde oure God, the venge-nance of hys temple: yee a voyce of them, y crye agaynst Babilō. Call vpon all the ar-myes agaynst Babilon, pytch your tentes rounde aboute her, that none escape. * Recō-pise her, as she hath deserved: and accor-byng as she hath done, so deale wth her a-gayne, for she hath set v^p her selfe againste the Lorde, agaynste the holy one of Israell. *ii. Thes. ii. a Therefore shall her ponge men fall downe in the stretes, and all her men of warre shalbe roted out in that daye, sayth the Lorde. We holde, I speake vnto the, O p^roude, sayth the Lorde God of hostes: for thy daye shall come, euen the tyme of thy v^pl^ytacon. And the p^roude shall st^rumble & fall, and no man shall helpe hym v^p. I will b^ourne v^p his cy-ties wth fyre, & it shall consume all that ys rounde aboute hym.

They? voyce roareth lyke the raging see, they ryde vpon horses, and come weap-ned to fyghte agaynste the, O Babilon. As soone as the kynge of Babilon heare tell of them, hys handes shall ware feble. Dozow & beauntes shall come vpon him, as a womā trauelynge wpth chyld. Beholde, lyke as the lyon commeth vp from y pleasaunte medowses of Iordan vnto the greane pastures of Ethan, so wyll I dygne them fourth, and make them runne agaynste her. But whom shall I chose out, & ordeyne to such a thyng?

The prophceye.

* Job. xlii. b

* For who is lyke me, or who wyl stryue w me? or what shepherd maye stande agaynst me? Therfore heare the counsell y the Loz de hath geuyn vpon Babylon, & the deuice that he hath taken vpo the lade of the Chal dees. The leaste amonge the people shall te are them in peaces, & loke what pleasaunte thyng they haue: they shal lape it wast. The noyle at the wympnye of Babylō shall mo ue the earth, & the crye shalbe hearde among the Gentiles.

hus hath the Lord sayde: * behol de, I wyl rayse vp a perious wpy de agaynst Babylon & her cytizes that beare euell wyl agaynst me.

I wyl sende also into Babylon fanners, to fanne her oute, & to destroye her lande, for in the daye of her trouble they shalbe about her on euery syde. Moreover, the Lord hath sayde vnto the bowmen, & to them that cly me ouer the walles in breste plates. Ye shall not spare her yonge men: kyll downe all her hooste. Thus the slayne shall fall downe in the lande of the Chaldees, & the wounded in the stretes. * As for Israll and Juda, they shall not be forsaken of theyr God, of y the Loz de of hostes for the holy one of Israels sake: no, though they haue fylled all theyr lande full of synne. * Flye awaye from Babylon, euery man saue his lyfe, that ye be not roted out with her wickednesse: for the time of the Lordes vengeaunce is come: yee, he shall re waide her agayne. Babylō hath bene in the Lordes hande, * a golde cuppe that maketh all lades dronken. Of her wyne haue all pe ople droncken: therfore, are they out of theyr wittes. * But sodenly is Babylon fallen, & destroyed. Mourne for her, byngne plasters for her woundes, yf she maye paraduenture be healed agayne. We wolde haue made Ba bylon whole, saye they: but she is not recou red. Therfore wyl we let her alone, and go euery man into hys owne countrey. For

* Jer. xlv. e
* Jer. xlv. f

Wake sharpe the arrowes, & multiplie poure spylles: * for the Lord shal rayse vp the sprete of the kyng of the Medes, which hath already a desyre to destroye Babylon. Thys shalbe the vengeaunce of the Lord, & the vengeaunce of hys temple.

Set vp tokens vpo the walles of Ba bylon: make poure watch stronge, set poure watchmen in araye: yee, holde prynces wat ches: and yet for all that shall the Lord go forth wth the deuice, whych he hath taken vpon them that dwell in Babylon.

O thou that dwellest by the greete wa ters, O thou that hast so great treasure and ryches, thine ende is come, & the reckenyng of thy wympnynges. * The Lord of hostes hath the swozne by hym selfe, that he wyl euerwhelme the wth men, lyke greshoppers in nombze, whych wth a corage shall crye, a larum, alarum agaynst the. * Yee, euen the Lord of hostes, that wth hys power ma de the earth, with his wysdome prepared the rounde worlde, & with his discrecion spredde out y heauens. Asone as he letteth his voy ce be hearde, the waters in the ayer ware fe arce. * He draweth vp the cloudes from the endes of the earth. He turneth the lyghtnynges to rayne, he byngeth the wyndes out of their secret places: If they be clymed by the ir wysdome: all men are become fooles. * To founded be all the castars of ymages, for the thyng y they make is but dysceate, & hath no breath. Clayne is it & an erronouse wo zcke: & in the time of vpsitacio it shall peryshe.

¶ Neuertheles, the porcyon of Jacob is none such: but he y made all thynges, whose name is the Lord of hostes, he is the rodde of his enherytaunce. Thou haste bene myne hammer & weapens for warre: for wth the haue I broken the people in peces: & wth the haue I destroyed kyngdomes. Thowowe the I haue beaten to poulder hoise & horsma pee, the charettes & such as sat vpo the. Thowowe the I haue broken man & womā, olde & yonge, bachelor & mayden. Thowowe the I haue destroyed the shepherde and his flocke the busbande man & hys catell, the prynces and the rulers, Therfore wyl I reward the ctyte of Babylon & all her cytizens, the Chal dees with all the euell whych they haue do ne vnto vpon yee: yee ye poure selues shall se pt, sayth the Lord: Beholde, I come vpon the, thou nopsome hyll, sayth the Lord: thou that destroyest all landes: I wyl stretch out my hande ouer the, & caste the downe from y stonye rockes: & wyl make the a bzente hyll: so that neyther corner stonyes, nor pynacles, ner foundacyons of stonyes shalbe taken eny moze out of the, but waste & desolate shalte thou lye for euer moze, sayth the Lord.

Set vp a token in the lande: blowe the trompettes amonge the heathen: prouoke the nacys agaynst her, cal the kyngdomes of Ararat, Henni, & Alcanes agaynst her: Set the prynces agaynst her, byng as gre at a sorte of terribile hoises agaynst her: as yf they were greshoppers. Prepare agaynst them the people of the Medes wth they kynges, prynces, & all the chefe rulers: yee, & the whole lande that is vnder hym.

The lande also shal make & be as trayde when the deuice of the Lord shal come forth agaynst agaynst Babylon: to make the lande of Babylon so waste, that no man shall dwell any more therein. The worthies of Babylon shall leave Babylon, and kepe the selues in ströge houses, their strength hath fayled them, they shall be lyke women. They dwellynge places shall be bzent vp, they barres shall be broken. One pursuaunt shall mete another: yee, one post shall come by another, to byrnyng the kynge of Babylon tydinges: that his cyty is taken in on euery syde, the footes occupied, the fennes bzet vp, and the sounders laystrayed.

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: the daughter of Babylon hath bene in her tyme lyke as a thyrsyng floure, but shortly shall her harvest come. Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon hath deuoured & destroyed me, he hath made me an empty vessel. He swallowed me vpon lyke a dragon, and fylled his belly wyth my delicacies: he hath cast me oute, he hath taken my substance awaye, and the thinge that was left he hath carryed vnto Babylon, sayeth the daughter that dwelleth in Syon: yee, & my honoure also vnto the Chaldees, sayth Jerusalem. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I wyll defende thy cause, and auenge thee: I wyll dryncke vpon her see, & drye vpon her water springes.

Babylon shall become an hepe of stones & dwellynge place for dragons, a fearfulnes and wondryng, because no man dwelleth there. They shall roare together lyke lions, and as the yonge lions when they be angrey, so shall they bende them selues. In theyr hate I shall gyue them a dynner and they shall be dyroncken for ioye. * Then shall they slepe an euerlastyng slepe, and neuer wake, sayth the Lorde. I shall carpe them downe to be slayne lyke shepe, lyke wetters and goates. O, howe was Selach wonne? O, howe was the glorie of the whole lande taken: howe happeneth it, that Babylon is so wozded at amöge the heathen? The see is risen ouer Babylon, and hath couered her wth his greete waues. Her cyties are layed wast the lande lyeth vnbuylde and voyde: it is a lande where no man dwelleth, and where no man trauallyeth thorowe. Moreover, * I wyll vset Bel at Babylon: and the thyng that he hath swallowed vp, that same shall I plucke out of his mouth. The Gentyles also shall runne nomore vnto hym: yee, and the walles of Babylon shall fall.

O my people, * come out of Babylon, & every man may saue his lyfe, from the fearful wrath of the Lorde. Be not faynt herin, and feare not at euery rumoure that shall be heard in the lande: for euery yeare bringeth newe tydinges, and in the yeare folowing newe tydinges, ad robbynge in the lade ad

Lorde vpon Lorde. And lo, the tyme cometh, that I wyll vset the ymages of Babylon, & the whole lade shall be confounded: yee, and her slayne shall lye in the myddest of her. Heauen & earth with all that is therein, shall reioyce ouer Babylon, when the destroyers shall come vpon her fro the North, sayeth the Lorde.

* Lyke as Babylon hath beaten downe & slayne many out of Israel, so shall there fall many, and be slayne in all her kyngdome. Ye that haue escaped & swear, haste you, städe not still, remembre the Lorde a farre of, and thyncke vpon Jerusalem, for we were ashamed to heare & blasphemys: our faces were couered with shame, because the straunge aleauntes came into the Sanctuarie of the Lorde. Wherefore, beholde (sayeth the Lorde) the tyme cometh, that I wyll vset & ymages of Babylon, and thorowe the whole lade they shall mourne and fall. * Though Babylon clymed vp into heauen, and kepte her power an hye: yet shall I send her destroyers sayeth the Lorde.

A pyteous crye shall be hearde from Babylon, and a great misery from the lande of the Chaldees, when the Lorde destroyeth them, and when he dryueth oute the hye stomach & proude boastyng, wherwith they haue bene as furious as & waues of great water floudes, and made great crakes with their wordes. For the destroyers shall come vpon her, (euene vpon Babylon) which shall take their worthies, and breake their bowes: for God is disposed to auenge hym selfe vpon them, and sufficiently to recompence them. Yee, (sayeth the Lorde.) I wyll make their princes, their wysemen, theyr chiefe rulers, and al their worthies, dyoncke: so that they shall slepe an euerlastyng slepe, and neuer wake. Thus sayeth the kynge, whose name is the Lorde of hostes.

Moreover, thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes. The thicke wall of Babylon shall be broken, and her hye gates shall be bzent vp. And the thyng that the Gentyles and the people haue wrought with greete traualle and labour, shall come to naught and be consumed in the fyre.

This is the charge & Ieremye gaue vnto Saraiab the sonne of Neriah, the sonne of Maasiah, when he went towarde Babylon with zedekiah the kyng of Iuda, in & fourth yeare of his raygne. Howe thys Saraiab was a peaceable prynce. Ieremy wrote in a booke all the mystry that shulde come vpon Babylon, yee, and all these sermons that be wyrtten agaynst Babylon, and gaue Saraiab thys charge. The prophete.

Iye waffe for euer: and when thou hast redde out the booke, bynde a stone to it, and cast it in the myddest of Euphrates, and saye: Eue thus shal Babyls syncke, & be thrust downe wyth the burthen of trouble, that I will bypunge vpon her: so that she shal neuer come vp agayne, Thus farre are the preachynges of Jeremey.

The .lii. Chapter.

The repeateth the takinge of zedekiah. Jerusale is taken of the Chaldees, zedekias sonnes are killede before his face, and his eyes put out. The cite is burned. The temple is spoiled and robbed. They that were left in Jerusale are carped to Babylon, kynge Jehoachin is brought forth of prison, & sed like a kynge.

* iiii. Regum xliii. b
ii. ps. cccv. b

Zedekiah was * one and .xv. yere olde, whē he was made kynge, and he reigned cleuen yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Hamutal, Jeremys daughter of Lybna. He lynd wyckedly before the Lorde euen as Jehoachin dyd. For the Lorde was angry at Jerusalem and Juda, so longe tyll he had caste them out of his presence. And zedekiah fell from the kynge of Babylon. * But in the nyynth yere of his reygne, in the tenth moneth, the tenth daye of the moneth it happened, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon wyth all his hoste came before Jerusalem, and beleged it, and made them bulworkes rounde aboute it. And thys besyginge of the cite endured vnto the eleuenth yere of kynge zedekiah.

* Jer. xxxix. a
ii. ps. cccv. b

And in the fourth moneth, the .ix. daye of the moneth, there was so great honger in the cite: that there were nomore vytayles for the people of the lande. So all the souldiers brake awaye, and fled out of the cite by nyght thorowe the wape of the porte betwene the two walles by the kynges garde. Nowe the Chaldees had compassed the cite rounde aboute, yet wst these men their way towarde the wyldernes.

* iiii. reg. xv. a Jer. xli. b
and. xxxv. a

And so the Chaldees folowed vpon them, and toke zedekiah the kynge in the felde of Jericho, when his hoste was runne fro him: So they carped the kyng away prysoner to Reblath, vnto the kynge of Babylon in the lade of Hemath, * where he gaue indgement vpon hym.

* Jer. xxxix. b

The kynge of Babylon also caused zedekias sonnes to be slaine before his face, yee and put all the prynces of Juda to death at Reblath. Moreover, he put out the eyes of zedekiah, & caused him to be boorde with two cheynes, to be carped vnto Babylon: and let hym lye in prison, tyll he dyed.

Nowe the tenth daye of the fyfth moneth in the nyynth yere of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon, Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne, and the kynge of Babylons scruauntes came vnto Jerusalem, and bzēt vp the house of the Lorde. He bzēt vp also the kynges palace, all the houses and all the gorgeous buydynge in Jerusalem. And the whole host of the Chaldees that were wyth the chefe captayne, brake downe all the walles of Jerusalem rounde aboute.

As for the poore people and such folke as yet was left in the cite: which also were fallen to the kynge of Babylon, yee, and what people as yet remayned: Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne caried the away prysoners. But the poore people of the countre, dyd Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne leaue in the lande, to occupie the vineyardes and feldes. The Chaldees also brake the brasen pylers that were in the house of the Lorde, yee, the seate and the brasen lauer that was in the house of the Lorde: and carped all the metal of them vnto Babylon. They toke awaye also the Cauldrons, Chouels, Aesholes, Spynklers, Sponges, and all the brasen vessel that was occupied in the seruice, with the bakets, colepannes, spynklers, pottes, candlestykkes, sponges, and cuppes: wherof some were of golde, and some of syluer.

The chefe captayne toke also the two pylers, the lauer, the twelue brasen bullockes that stode vnder the seate: which king Salomon made in the house of the Lorde: and all the vessel conteyned so moche metall, that it myght not be weyed. For euery piler was eyghtene cubytes hye: and the rope that wst aboute it, was twelue cubytes, & foure synners thicke and rounde. Nowe vpo the rope were brasen knoppes, & euery knoppe was fyue cubytes hye: and vpon the knoppes were whoopes, and pomgranates rounde aboute of cleane brasle.

After thys maner were both the pylers & fastyned with pomgranates, wherof there were an hundred and .xvi. whiche hanged vpon the whoopes rounde about. The chefe captayne also toke Sariah the hye priest, & Sophoniah that was chefe nexte hym, and the thre keepers of the treasury. He toke out of the cite a chāberlayne whych was a captayne of the souldyers, and seuen men that were the kynges scruauntes, whiche were founde in the cite: and Sepher a captayne that vled to muster the men of warre, wyth threscore men of the countre that were taken in the cite. These Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne toke, and caried them to the kynge of Babylon vnto Reblath and the kynge of Babylon caused them to be put to death at Reblath in the lande of Hemath. And thus Juda was ledde awaye captiue, out of his owne lande. This is the summe of the people, whō Nabuchodonosor ledde awaye captiue.

In the seuenth yere of his reygne, he caried awaye of the Jewes, thre thousande & thre and twenty. In the .xviii. yere Nabuchodonosor.

chodonosor carped awaye from Jerusalem righte hundredth thyrty and two personnes.
In the xxiii. yere of Nabuchodonosor Na-buchodonosor the chiefe captayne, toke awaye from hundredth fourthy and fyue Jewes pre-soners. The whole summe of all the prisoners is foure thousande and syxe hundredth.

In the xxxvii. yere after that Jehochin the kyng of Juda was carped awaye in the xv. daye of the xii. moneth, Euilmerodach kyng of Babylon (the same yere that he reigned) gaue Jehochin the kyng of Juda pardon, and let hym out of prison, and spoke longly to hym. And let his trone about the trones of the other kynges þe were with hym in Babylon. He chaunged also þe clothes of hys prison, yee, and he dyd eate with hym all hys lyfe longe. And he had a co-nyngal luyng geuen him of the kyng of Babylon, euery daye a cer-tayne thyng alowed hym all the dayes of his life, vntyll he dyed.

The Lamentacions of Jerempe.

The fyrst Chapter.

It happened after Israel was brought into capti-uety, and Jerusalem destroyed, that Jerempe the pro-phete wrote these lamentacions, and so was bewailed Jeruthat persecuted her, toke her, in strait places where she coude not escape. The streets of Sion mourne, because no man cometh no more to the sollepe feastes. All her gates are desolate, her prestes make lamentacion, her maydes are careful: & she her selfe is in great heuinesse. Her enemies haue bene rulers ouer her, and her enemies haue prospered: because the Lorde hath chastened her for her greate wyckednes: * her chyldren are ledde awaye captiue before their enemye. All the bew-tie of the daughter of Syon is awaye, her princes are become like hertes that fynde no pasture. They are dyspayred awaye before their enemye, so that they haue nomore power.

Nowe both Jerusalem remembre the tyme of her misery and disobedience, yee, the ioye and pleasure that she hath had in tymes past seyng her people is brought downe thorow the power of the enemye, and there is no man for to helpe her, her enemyes stande lo-kinge at her, and laugh her Sabbath dayes to scozne. Jerusalem hath synned euery more and more, therfore is she come in de-scape. All they that had her in honoure despyse her: for they haue sene her fylthynges. Yee, she hath synned, and is ashamed of her selfe.

Her synnes are defyled, she remembreth not what wolde folowe: therfore is her fall so wonderfull, and there is no man to com-forte her. O Lorde, consyde my trouble, for my enemye hath the vpperhande. The enemye hath put his hade to all the precious thynges that she had, yee, eue before her eyes came the heathen in and out of the Sanctuary: * whom thou (neuertheles) haste forbyd-den to come wythin thy congregacion.

* All her people like their breade wyth heupnes, and loke what precious thyng eu-ry man hath, that geueth he for meate, to saue hys lyfe. Consyde, O Lorde, and se howe vyle I am become. Haue ye no regarde all ye that go fore by, behold and se, þe he eny sorrow like vnto myne, wher wyth the Lorde hath troubled me, in the daye of hys fearfull wyath. From aboue hath he sente downe a fyre into my bones and it burneth them cruelly: he hath layed a net: for my fete and throwen me wyde open: he hath made me desolate, so that I must euery be morning.

The yocke of my transgessyon is come at the laste, with hys hande hath he taken it vp, and put it aboute my neck. My strength is gone: the Lorde hath deliuered me into those handes, wheroute I cannot quyte my selfe. The Lorde hath destroyed all the myghtie men, that were in me. He hath proclaymed a feast, to slaughter all my beste men. The Lorde hath troden downe the daughter of Juda, lyke as it were in a wyne presse. * Therfore do I wepe, and myne eyes gulle out of water: for the comforte that shulde quyen me, is farre from me.

My chyldren are dyspayred awaye, for wher the enemye hath gotten the ouerhande.

Syon casteth out her handes, and there is no man

no mā to cōforte her. The Lord hath layed the enemyes rounde aboute Jacob, and Jerusalem is become abhominacion in the middest of them. * The Lord is ryghteous, for I haue prouoked his countenaunce vnto anger. O take hede al ye people, and cōsidre my penynes. My maydens and my younge men are led awaye into captiuite.

I called for my louers but they beggled me for my prestes and counsellers, but they perished: euen whyle they sought for meate to saue theyr lyues. * Confidre (O Lord) howe I am troubled, my wombe is dysquyeted, my hert turneth about in me, (and I am full of heuynesse) because I rebelled stubbornly.

The sweard hurteth me wpythout, & within I am like vnto death. They heare my mourninge, but there is none that wyl cōfort me. All myne enemyes haue herde of my trouble & are glad therof, bycause thou hast done it: & thou hast brought forth þe time which thou calledest, whē they also shalbe lyke vnto me. For þe shall come al theyr aduersitie, thou shalt plucke the awaye euē as thou hast plucked me, because of al my wickednes. For my sorowe is very great, and my hert is heuyn.

The ii. Chapter.

ALas, * how hath the Lord darkened the daughter of Syon so sore in hys wrath: As for the honour of Israel he hath cast it downe from heauen vnto þe erth. Howe happened it, that he remembered not his owne fotebole when he was angrye.

The Lord hath cast downe all the battaycons of Jacob without any fauour: all þe stronge places of the daughter Juda hath he broken in his wrath, & throwen the downe to the grounde: her kyngdome and her princes hath he suspended. In the wrath of his indignacion he hath broken all the borne of Israel: he hath withdrawen his right hande from the enemy: yea, a flame of fyre is kindled in Jacob, and hath consumed vp al rounde about. He hath bent his bowe lyke an enemye: he hath fastened hys ryght hande as an aduersary: and euery thyng that was pleasant to se, he hath smytte it downe. He hath poured out his wrath lyke a fyre into the tabernacle of the daughter of Syon.

The Lord is become lyke as it were an enemye, he hath deuoured Israel and all his palaces: yea, all his strong holdes hath he destroyed, and fylled þe daughter of Juda with moche sorowe and heuynesse.

* Her tabernacle (whych was lyke a garden of pleasure) hath he destroyed: her hye sollepne feastes hath he put downe. The Lord hath brought it so to passe: þe hye sollepne feastes and Sabbathes in Syon, are cleane forgotten. In hys heuyn dyspleasure hath he made the kyng & prestes to be despyed.

The Lord hath forsaken hys owne altar, and hath a thozred hys owne Sanctuarie, and hath geuen the walles of theyr toweres into the handes of the enemye. Their enemyes made a noyse in the house of the Lord, as it had bene in a solemne feaste daye.

The Lord thought to breake downe the walles of the daughter of Syon, he spred out his lyne, and drew not in hys hande, tyll he had destroyed them: Therfore mourne the turrets and the broken walles together.

Her gates are soncke downe to þe grounde, her barres are broken and smytte in sonder, * her kyng and princes are carryed awaye to the Gentyls. They haue nethe lawe nor prophetes, nor yet eny visyon fro the Lord.

The senatours of the daughter Syon vpon the grounde in silēce: they haue strawed ashes vpon their heades, and gydded them selues wpyth sackcloth. The maydens of Jerusalem hange downe theyr heades to the grounde. Myne eyes begonne to faile me, & thozowe wepyng, * my body is dysquyeted, my lyuer is poured vpo the earth, for þe great hurte of my people, seynge the chyldren and babes dpyd swowne in the stretes of the cytie.

Euen when they spake to their mothers: where is meate and drynke: for whyle they so layde, they fell downe in the stretes of the cytie, lyke as they had bene wofulde, and some dyed in theyr mothers bosome.

What shall I saye of the, O thou daughter Jerusalem, to whom shall I lyken the? To whom shall I cōpare the. O thou daughter Syon, to comfort the withall: Thy hart is lyke a mayne see, who maye heale the?

* Thy prophetes haue looked out vayne & folyth thynges for the, they haue not shewed the of thy wickednes, to kepe the from captiuite: but haue ouerladen the, and thozow falschē scatred the abroade. All they that go by the, clappe their handes at the: hylling and waggynge their heades vpo the daughter Jerusalem, and saye: is this the cytie þe men call so fayre: wherin the whole land reioyseth? All thyne enemyes gape vpon the: whysperynge and bytyng their teth, sayng: let vs deuoure, for the tyme that we looked for, is come: we haue founde and sene it.

The Lord hath fulfyllid the thyng, that he was purposed to do: and perfourmed that he had deuised longe ago: he hath destroyed, and not spared. He hath caused thyne aduersarie to triumphe ouer the, & set vp the borne of thyne enemye. * Let thyne herte crye vnto the Lord, O thou cytie of the daughter Syon: let thy teares runne downe lyke a ryuer, daye and nyght, rest not, and let not the aple of thyne eye leaue of. Stande vp and make thy prater in the first watch of the nyght, poure out thyne herte lyke water before the Lord: lyft vp thyne handes, for the lyues of the yonge chyldren, that dye of honour in the stretes. Beholde, O Lorde, and why hast thou gathered me vp so lowe? What women then eate thir owne meate? What men chyldren of a spanne longe? Shall the prestes and prophetes be slayne thus in the Sanctuary of the Lorde? Ponge and olde men, and yonge men are slayne wyth the sword: whom thou in the dape of thy merciful indignacyon hast put to death: yee men thou hast put them to death, ad not spare them. My neyghbours that are rounde about me, hast thou called, as it were to a last dape: so that in the dape of the Lordes wrath none escaped, neither was eny left behind. Those that I haue brought and noticed, hath myne enemy destroyed.

The. lii. Chapter.

In the man, that (thowowe the rodde of hys wrath) haue experyence of miserie. He dzo-ue me forth, and led me: yee, in to darkenesse, but not into lyght. Agaynst me only he stretcht hys hande, & layeth it euer vpon me.

My flesch and my skynne hath he made as a lythe, and my bones hath he brysed. He hath bowed me rounde aboute me, and closed me in with gall and trauayle. He hath set me in bushes, as they that be deed for euer.

He hath so hedged me in, that I can not get out, and hath layed heuy lynkes vpon me. Though I crye and call piteously, yet heareth he not my prayer. He hath stopped my wayes wyth foure squared stones, and made my pathes crooked.

He layeth wayte for me lyke a beare, and watcheth in a hole. He hath marred my ways, and broken me in peces, he hath layed me wast altogether. He hath bete hys bowe, and made me as it were a marcke to shot at:
The arrowes of hys quier hath he shot euery one in myne eyes. * I am laughed to scozne of all my people, they make songes vpon me all the dape longe. He hath fylled me with bytternes, and geuen me wormwood to eate. He hath smytten my teth in pe-ces with stones, and rolled me in the dust.

He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget all good thynges. I thought in my selfe: I am vndone, there is no hope for me in the Lorde. O remembre yet my myserye and trouble, the wormwood and the gall.

For, thou shalt remembre them, for my soule melteth awaye in me. Whyle I consider these thynges in my herte, I get a hope agayne. Namely, it is of the Lordes mercy that we are not utterly consumed. For thyng his pyteful compassion hath not ceased. Fewe mercyes shall the Lorde shewe vpon the crye, in the dape spyngynge, (O Lorde) greate is thy faythfulnesse.

* The Lorde is my porcyon, sayeth my soule, therfore wyl I hope in hym. O how good is the Lorde vnto them, that put their trust in hym, and to þ soule that seeketh after hym. The good man wyth stylnes and pa-cience tarieth, for the health of the Lorde.

O howe good is it for a man, to take the pock vpon him from hys pouth vp. He speteth alone, he holdeth him styl, and dwelleth quyetly by hym selfe. He layeth hys face vpon the earth, yf (percase) there happen to be eny hope. He offereth hys cheke to the smyter, he wyl be content wyth reynoues.

For the Lorde wyl not forsake for euer,
* but though he punyssh him: yet accor-dyng to the multitude of his mercies, he receaueth to grace agayne: For he doth not plage, & cast out the chyldren of men from hys herte.

To treade all the pcesonners of the earth vnder hys fete. To moue the iudgemente of man befoze the most hyghest.

To condempne a man in hys cause. The Lorde hath not pleasure in such thynges.

What is he then that sayeth: there shulde somthyng be done without the Lordes com-maundemente. Out of the mouthe of the most hyghest goeth not euell and good?

Wherfore then murmureth the lpaynge man: let him murmur at hys owne synne.

* Let vs loke, well vpo our owne wayes and remembre oure selues, and turne agayne to the Lorde. Let vs lyfte vp oure hertes with oure handes vnto the Lorde that is in heauen. We haue bene dyssemblers, and haue offended, wylt thou therfore not be in-treated? Thou hast covered vs in thy wrath, and persecuted vs, thou hast slayne vs wythout any fauoure. * Thou hast byd thy selfe in a cloude, þ our prayer shulde not go thowowe. Thou hast made vs outcastes, and to be despyled amonge the people. All oure enemyes gape vpon vs.

Fearre, and pte, is come vpon vs, yee, decepte and destruccyon. * Whole ryuers of water gusheth oute of myne eyes, for the hurte of my people.

Myne eyes runne, and can not ceasse, for there is no rest. O Lord, when wylt thou loke downe from heauen, and conspyde?

Myne eyes breaketh my herte because of all the daughters of my ctye. Myne enemies hunted me oute sharpely, lyke a byrde, yee, and that wythout a cause. They haue put downe my lyfe into a pyt, and they haue cast stones vpon me. They poured water vpon my heade, then thought I: nowe am I vndone. I called vpon thy name, O Lord, out of the depe pyt. Thou hast herde my voyce: & hast not turned awaye thyne eares fro my syghyng & cryenge. Thou hast enclayned thy selfe vnto me, when I called upon the, and hast sayde: feare not. Thou (O Lorde) haste mayntened the cause of my soule, and hast redeemed my lyfe. O Lorde thou haste sene my blasphemers, take thou my cause upon the. Thou hast well consydred howe they go about to do me harme, & that all their coucels are agaynst me. Thou haste heard their despytfull wordes (O Lorde:) pee, and all their ymagynacions agaynst me.

The lypyes of myne enemyes, and their deutes that they take agaynst me, al I dave loge. Thou seyst also their setting downe, and they: rpyng vpon: they make they: son-ges of nothynge but of me. Rewarde them (O Lorde) accordynge to the worckes of they: handes. Geue the an obstynat bert: euen thy curse. Persecute them (O Lorde) with thyne indignacion, and rote them oute from vnder the heauen.

The prayer of Jeremy.

QAll to remembraunce (O Lorde,) I what we haue suffered, consydre, and se oure confusyon. Oure enhe-ritaunce is turned to the straügers and oure houses to the aleauntes. We are become carefull and fatherles, & oure mothers are as I wyddowes. We are sayne to drinke oure owne water for money, and oure owne wod must we bye with money. Our neckes are vnder persecucion, we are wery, & haue no reste.

Afore tyme we yelded oure selues to the Egyptians, & nowe to the Assyrians, only that we myght haue byed ynough. * Oure fathers (which now are gone) haue sinned, & we must will bear their wickednes. Seruaunt of the rule of vs, and no man deliuering vs out of their handes. We must get our living with þe parcell of oure lyues, because of the mouth of the wyldernes.

Our thynne is as it had bene bzent in an oven, for very soze hunger. The wyues are marched in dyon, and the maydens in the cynies of Iuda. The pynices are hanged by the hāde of the enemyes, they haue not heard the olde sage mē, they haue takē yōge menes lyues fro them, & the boyes are hanged by ypo tress. The elders spt nomoze vnder the gates, & they ponge men vñe nomoze ning. The garlande of oure heade is fallē:

get vs, and forsake vs so longe? * O Lorde turne thou vs vnto the, and so shall we be turned. Renew oure dayes as in olde

¶ The ende of the lamentacyons of Ieremy.

The booke of the pꝛo- phete Ezechiel.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

¶ The tyme wherein Ezechiel prophesied and in what place. It is a strange and offe. The dysp of the soure beast. The dysp of the wheles. The dysp of the thorne, and of the pynge aboute the thorne.

In chaiched in þ. xxx. yeaꝛe, the fyfthe day of the fourth moneth, that I was amōge the pꝛesoners by the ryuer of Cobar: where the beautes opened, and I sawe a dyspon of God. Nowe the fyfthe daye of the moneth made out the fyfth yeaꝛe of Ioyne Joachims captiuite. At the same tyme came the worde of the Lorde vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Buzi the pꝛeste, in the lande of the Chaldees by the water of Co-bar, * where the bande of the Lorde came vpon hym.

And I looked, and beholde a stormy wynd came out of the North wyth a greate cloude full of fyre, whych wyth bys gylstre lyghtened all rounde aboute. And in the midst of the fyre it was all cleare lyke the face of an aungell, and as it were the lyknes of foure beastes, and thys was there lykenesse.

They were fastyned lyke a man: sayng, that euery one had foure faces, and foure wynges.

They legges were streight, but they fete were lyke bullockes fete, and they gly-stered, as it had bene saye scoured metall.
Under they wynges, vpo all the foure coners they had mens handes. Their faces ad they wynges were towarde the foure coners: yet were the wynges so, that one euer touched another. When they went, they turned the not about: but eche one wete streight forwarde.

Furthermore thys was the symilitude of their faces. * Vpo the ryghte syde of these foure, their faces were lyke the face of a mā, and the face of a lyon. But vpon the lefte syde, they had the face of an oxe, and the face of an Aegle. Their faces also and their win-ges were spred out aboute: so that two wynges of one touched euer two wynges of another, and with the other they couered they bodys. Euery one when it wente, it wente streight forwarde. Where as the sprete led them, thither they wente, * and turned not about in they goynge.

The fastyn and countenaunce of the beastes was lyke hoate coales of fyre even as though burnig cressettes had bene amōg the beastes: (this was the dysp,) and the fyre gaue a gylstre, and out of the fyre there wete lyghtenynge. When the beastes wente forwarde & backward, one wold haue thought it had lyghtened. Nowe when I had wel cosidered the beastes, I sawe a worke of wheles vpon the earth wyth foure faces also nye vnto the beastes.

The fastyn and worke of the wheles was like the see. The foure wheles were top-ned and made (to loke vpon) as it had bene one whele in another. When one wente forwarde they wente al foure, & turned the not about in they goynges. They were large greate and horrible to loke vpon. Their backes were full of eyes rounde aboute them all foure. When the beastes wente, the wheles wente also w the. And whē the beastes lyfte themselues vp from the earth, the wheles were lyfte vp also. Whither soeuer the sprete wente, thither went they also, and the wheles were lyfte vp, and folowed them: for the sprete of lyfe was in the wheles. When the beastes wente south, stode styll, or lyfte them selues from the earth, then the wheles also wente, stode styll, and were lyfte vp for the byeth of lyfe was in the wheles.

The prophete.

Above, ouer þe heades of the beastes there was a firmamente, whyche was fastyned as it had bene of the most pure Christal, and that was spred oute above vpon theyr heades: vnder the same firmamente were theyr wynges layed abroade, one towarde another and two wynges couered þe body of euery beaste. And whē they wēte forth, I heard the nopsle of theyr wynges, lyke the nopsle of grete waters, as it had bene the voyce of the grete God, and a rushynge together as it were of an hoost of men. And when they stode still, they let downe theyr wynges.

Nowe when they stode still, and had letten downe their wynges, it thondred in the firmament that was above their heades. Above the firmament that was ouer theyr heades, there was the fastyn of a seate, as it had bene made of Sappyr. Upon the seate there sat one lyke a mā. * I behelde hym, and he was lyke an angell, as it had bene all of fyre with in from hys loynes vpwarde.

And beneth, when I looked vpon him vnder the loynes, me thought he was lyke a shynynge fyre, that geueth lyght on euery syde. Pee, the shyne and glistre þe lyghtened rounde aboute, was lyke a raynbowe, whyche in a rayny daye appeareth in the cloudes. Euen so was the simplitude, wherein the glozpe of the Lorde appeared. When I sawe it, I fell vpon my face, and herkened vnto the voyce of hym that spake.

The ii. Chapter.

The prophete is sente to call the people from theyr erreours.

I And then said he vnto me: Stād vp vpo thy fete (thou sonne of man, * I wyl talke wth the * And as he was comynge to me, the sperte came into me, and set me vp vpon my fete: so that I matched the thyng that he sayde vnto me. And he sayd: Beholde, thou sonne of mā: I wyl sēde the to the chyldren of Israel, to those runnagates and obstynate people: for they haue taken parte agaynst me, and are runne awaye from me, * both they and their forefathers vnto this daye.

B Pee, I wyl sende the vnto a people that haue rough besages and styffe stomakes: vnto whō thou shalt saye on this maner: This the Lorde God hym selfe hath spoken, that whether they be obedynt or no (for it is a frowarde household) they maye knowe yet that there hath bene a prophete amonge them.

C * Therefore (thou sonne of man) feare them not, neither be afrayed of theyr wordes: for prouokers and thornes are wth the. Pee, thou doest dwell amonge scorpions: but feare not theyr wordes, be not abashed at theyr looks, for it is a frowarde household.

Se that thou speake my wordes vnto them, whether they be obedynt or not, for they are obstinate. Therefore, thou sonne of man, obey thou all thynges that I saye vnto the, & be not thou styfnecked, lyke as they are a styfnecked household. Open thy mouth, and eate that I geue the.

So as I was lokynge vp, beholde, there was sent vnto me an hāde, wherein was closed a booke: and the hande opened it before me, and it was writen within and without full of carefull mournynge: alas, and woo.

The.iii. Chapter.

The prophete beynge fedde wth the wordes of God and wth the constant oldenes of the sperte is sent vnto the people that were in captiuite. The punishment of a curate that sheweth not the people theyr synnes.

After this, sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, eate that, whatsoeuer it be: pee: eate that booke, and go thy waye, and speake vnto the chyldren of Israel: So I opened my mouth, & he gaue me the booke for to eate, & sayde vnto me. Thou sonne of man, the belly shall eate, and thy bowels shall be fylled wth þe booke, that I geue the. Then dyd I eate þe booke, * it was in my mouth sweter the honey. And he sayde vnto me: thou sonne of man, get þe soone vnto the house of Israel, & shewe them the wordes, & I commaunde the for I sende the not to the people that hath a straunge vnknewne, or harde speach, but vnto the house of Israel. Not to many nacjons, whiche haue byuerse speeches and harde languages, whose wordes thou vnderstādest not. * Reuerthelesse, yf I sent the to those people, they wolde folowe the. But the house of Israel wyl not folowe þe, for they wyl not folowe me: pee, al the house of Israel haue styffe foreheades & harde hertes. * Beholde therefore I wyl make thy face preuayle agaynst their faces, and harde thy forehead agaynst their foreheades: so that thy foreheade shall be harder then an adamant or fyrnt stone: that thou mayest feare them the lesse, and be lesse afrayed of the, for thy are a frowarde household.

He sayde moreover vnto me: thou sonne of man, take diligent hede wth thyne eares, to the wordes that I speake vnto the fasten them in thyne herte: and go to the prisoners of thy people, speake vnto them, and save on this maner. Thus the Lorde God hath spoken: whether ye heare, or heare not. Wth that the sperte toke me vp. And I heard the nopsle of the grete rushynge and remouynge of the most blessed glozpe of the Lorde oute of hys place.

I hearde also the nopsle of the wynges of the beastes, that rushyd one agaynst another the ratynge of the wheles, that were by them, whiche rustynge and noyse was very great.

Howe when the sprete toke me vp, & carryed me away, I went wpth an deuy and a sleepful mynde, but the hande of the Lorde comforted me ryghte soone.

And so in the begynnyng of the moneth I came to the prisoners, that dwelt by the water of Cobar, & remayned in þe place where they were: And so continued among them seuen dayes beyng very soye.

And when the seuen dayes were expyred, the Lorde sayde vnto me: *Thou sonne of mā, I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel: therfore take good hede to the wordes of my mouth, and geue them warnynge at my commaundement.

If I saye vnto the concernynge the vngodly man, that (wthout doubte) he must dye, & thou geueste not hym warnynge, nor shewest vnto him, that he maye turne from his euell waye: and so to lyue. Then shall the same vngodly man dye in his owne vnyrghynnesse: but þys bloude wyl I requyre of thyne hand. Reuertheles, if thou geue warnynge vnto the wicked, & he yet forsake not his vngodlynesse: then shall he dye in his owne wyckednesse, but thou hast dyscharged thy soule.

Howe if a ryghteous man go from his ryghteousnesse, & do the thyng that is euill: I wyl lape a stromblyng blocke before hym, & he shal dye because thou hast not geuen hym warnynge: yee, dye shall he in his owne synne, so that the vertue which he dyd before shall not be thoughte vpon: but þys bloude wyl I requyre of thyne hande.

Reuertheles, if thou exhortest þe ryghteous, that he synne not, & so the ryghteous do not synne: the shal be lyue, because he hath hearkened thy warnynge, & thou hast discharged thy soule. And there came the hande of þe Lorde vpon me, and he sayde vnto me: stande vp, and go into the felde, that I maye there talke wth the.

So when I had rysen vp, and gone for the into þe felde: Beholde, þe glory of þe Lorde was there, lyke as I sawe yt afore, by the water of Cobar.

Then fell I downe vpon my face, & the sprete came into me, whych let me vp vpon my fete, & sayde thus vnto me: So thy waye is, & thou shalte lye in thyne house. Beholde (thou sonne of mā) there shall chaynes be thoughte forth to bynde the wpthall, so that thou shalt not escape out of them. And I wyl make thy tynge cleue so to the roke of the mounte, that thou shalt be dome, and shall be as a chylder wth them: for it is an obdurate household.

But when I speake vnto the, then open thy mouth & saye: Thus sayeth þe Lorde God whoso hereth, let hym heare: whoso wyl not let hym leaue, for it is an obstinat household.

The. liii. Chapter.

The besyge of the cytie of Iherusalem is signified. The longer continuance of the captiuitie of Israel. An hunger is prophesied to come in the captiuitie.

Thou sonne of mā: take a tyle skoe and lape it before the, & describe vpon it the cytie of Iherusalem, howe yt ys besyged, howe bulwarke & ströge dyches are grauen on euery syde of yt: describe also tentes and an hoste of men rounde aboute it, with engyns of warre.

Moreouer, take an yron panne, & set yt betwixte þe and þe cytie, in stede of an yron wall. Then set thy face toward it, to besyge yt, and lape ordynance agaynste it to wyne yt. Thysh shalbe a token vnto þe house of Israel. But thou shalt slepe vpon thy lefte syde, and lape þe synne of þe house of Israel vpon the. Certayne dayes appoynted, þe shalt slepe vpon that syde, and beare the synnes * Reuertheles, I wyl appoynte the a tyme (to put of the synnes) and þe nombre of the dayes: Thre hundred and .xx. dayes muste thou beare the wyckednesse of þe house of Israel. When thou hast fulfilled these dayes lye downe agayne, and slepe vpon the righte syde fortie dayes, and beare the synnes of þe house of Iuda.

* A daye for a yere, a daye (I saye) for a yere, wyl I euer lape vpon þe. Therefore set now thy face agaynste that besyged Iherusalem, & discouer thyne arme, that þe mayest prophesye agaynste it.

Beholde, I wyl lape chaynes vpon þe that thou shalt not turne the from one syde to another, tyll thou hast ended þe dayes of thy besyginge.

Wherefore take vnto the wheate, barley, beanes, growell seede, Wylum, & fytyches and put these together in a vessel, and make the loaves of bread therof, accordyng to the nombre of þe dayes, that thou must lye vpon thy syde: that thou mayest haue bread to eate for thre hundred and .xx. dayes.

And þe meate that thou eatest, shall haue a certayne weyghte appoynted: namelpe twentye spels euery daye. Thysh appoynted meate shalt þe eate daylye, from the begynnyng to the ende.

Thou shalt dysynck also a certayne measure of water: Namelpe, þe fyrte part of an hin shalt thou dysyncke dayly from þe begynnyng vnto the ende. Wylpe canst thou eate, yet shalt thou fynde tooke them at a fyrrer made wth mans doge, þe they maye se it. And wth that sayde the Lorde: Euen thus shall the chyldren of Israel eate the dyspyled breade in the myddeste of the Gentiles, amonge whom I wyl scatter them.

¶¶¶ Then

The prophete.

Then sayde J: Oh Lorde God. Beholde my soule was yet neuer stayned: for fro my youth vp vnto thys oure, I dyd neuer eate of a dead carcase, or of þe whiche was slayne of wyde beastes, nether came there euere enye vncleane fleshe in my mouth.

Wher vnto he answered me, ad sayde: well than, I wyll graunte the to take cowes donge, for the donge of a man, and to toothe þe bzeade wythall befor them.

And he sayde vnto me: Beholde, thou sonne of man, * I wyll mynyshe all þe proupy of bzead in Ierusalem, so that they shall wepe they? bzead, & eate it wyth scarcenelle. But as for water: they shall haue very lytle measure thereof, to dryncke. And when they haue nomore bzeade nor water, one shall be destroyed wyth a nother, & sampe awaye for they? wyckednesse.

¶ The vyble of the beares, by whiche is signified the destruction of the people. The causes of þe anger of God towarde the people.

Thou sonne of man, take the then a sharpe knyfe, namely, a rasoure. Take that, and shawe the heare of thy heade and bearde: Then take the scales and the weyghte, and deuyde the heare a sonder. And after thou haste accomplished þe dayes of the sygge: burne þe thy?de parte thereof in þe fyre in the myddest of þe cytye, and cut the other thy?de parte in peaces wyth a knyfe. * As for þe thy?d parte that remaineth cast it in the wynde: & I wyll draw out the swerde after them.

Yet afterwarde, take a lytle of þe same, and bynde yt in thy coote lappe. Then take a curtsey of yt, and cast in the myddest of the fyre: and burne it in þe fyre. Out of the same fyre shall there go a flame, vpon the whole house of Israel. Moreover, thus sayth the Lorde God: Thys same is Ierusalem. I set her in the myddest of the heathen and nacyns: & are rounde aboute her, but she hath despyed my iudgementes moze then the Gentyles them selues, & broken my commaundementes moze then the nacyns, & lye rounde aboute her: for they haue caste out myne ordynances, and not walked in my lawes.

Therefore thus sayth the Lorde God: * For so moche as ye haue bene moze augmented in nombze of people then the heathen, that dwell rounde aboute you: & ye haue not walked in my lawes, nether haue ye kepte myne ordynances, & ye haue not lyued so ryghteously as þe heathen & are round about you: Therefore thus sayth the Lorde God.

I wyll also come vpon þe, I my selfe, I saye: for in the myddest of the wyll I lye in iudgemente, in þe syghte of þe heathen, & wyll handle the of such a fashyon, as I neuer dyd before, and as I neuer wyll do from that tyme forth, and that because of al thyne abhomyncyns. For in þe fathers: shalbe sayne to eate their owne sonnes, & the sonnes their owne fathers. Suche a courte wyll I hepe in the, and þe whole remnaunte of the wyll I scatter into all the wyndes.

Wherfore as truly as I lye (sayth the Lorde God) seynge thou haste despyed my Sanctuary, wyth all maner of abhomyncyns & wyth all shameful offences: For this cause wyll I also destroye þe. Wyne eye shall not ouerthe, nether wyll I spare the.

* One thy?de parte wythin þe, shall be of the pestilence & of hunger: & nother thy?de parte shalbe slayne downe rounde aboute þe wyth þe swerde. The other thy?de parte that remaineth, wyll I scatter a bzeade towarde all þe wyndes, and drawe out the swerde after them. Thus I wyll perfoyme my indignacyon, and let my wyathe agaynst them, & ease my selfe. So that when I haue fulfilled myne anger agaynst them, they shall knowe þe I am þe Lorde, whiche wyth a feruent gelousy haue spoken it. Moreover, I wyll make þe waste and abhorred, before all the heathen that dwell aboute the, and in the syght of al them, that go by the: so that when I punyssh the in my wyathe, in myne anger, & wyth the plage of my whole displeasure: thou shalt be a verpe abhomyncyon, shame, & galing & wondrynge stocke, amonge the heathen & lye aboute the. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, & yt shall come to passe, when I wote amonge them the parlous darter of hunger. whiche shall be but death: Yee, therefore shall I smyte them, because I wyll destroye you: & I wyll encrease hunger, & mynyshe all þe proupyson of bzeade amonge you.

Plages & mysery wyll I sende you, yee, & wyde beastes also to destroye you. Pestilence & bloudsheddyng shall come vpon you & the swerde wyll I bynynge ouer you. Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it.

¶ The vi. Chapter.

¶ He sheweth that the people shalbe plagued for the synne of Idolatry. He prophesyeth the repentance of the remnaunt of the people, and thei?e despayraunce. The destruction of the same is prophesied.

Ad the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayynge: Thou sonne of man, shewe thy face to þe mountaynes of Israel: & saye: thus sayth the Lorde God: I haue spoken to the mountaynes, hilles, valleyes and dales.

Beholde I, I my selfe I saye: wyll bynynge a swerde ouer you, & destroye your places: I wyll caste downe your alters, & bzeake downe your ymagyns. Your shepemen wyll I slaye before your goddes, & the dead carcases of the chyldren of Israel wyll I caste before they?e ydoles: your bones wyll I destroye round about your alters, & dwellyng places.

The cities shall be desolate, the hyl chappels layde waste: your altiers destroyed, & your goddes castes downe, & taken a waie: your temples layde euen wth y^e ground: your owne woekes cleane rote out.

Your slayne men shall lye among you, that ye may learne to howe, howe y^e Lord. Those that be amonge you & haue escaped the swerde, wyll I leaue amonge the Gentiles, for I wyll scatter you amonge the nations. And they that escape of you, shall I sende vnto me amonge the heathen, wher they shall be in captiuitie.

As for that who: wh^o & vnfaithfull herte they is, wher wyth they runne awaye from me: I wyll breake it: y^eer and put oute those eyes of theys, that comyette fornyfacion wth they: pdoles.

Then shall they be ashamed and displeased wth they: selues, for the wyckednesses & abhominacions: whych they haue done: & shall learne to knowe, y^e Lord. howe that it is not in wayne, y^e Lord spake, touching such mysery vpon them.

The Lord sayde moreouer vnto me: Smyte thyne handes together, & stampe wth thy feet, & saye: Al howorthall the abhominacions & wyckednesses of the house of Israel, for because of them, they shall perishe wth y^e swerde, with hunger, & wth pestilence. Whoso is farre of, shall dye of the pestilence: he y^e is nye at hande, shall perishe wth the swerde: & the other y^e remayne and that are left, shall dye of hunger.

Thus wyll I satisfie my wrothful displeasure vpon them. And so shall ye learne to knowe that that I am y^e Lord, when your remayne men lye amonge poure pdoles, & aboute your altiers: vpon all hylles & toppes of mountaynes, amonge all grene trees, amonge all thycke okes: euen in y^e places, wher they dyd sacrifice to all they: I saye. I wyll stretche myne hande out vpon them & wyll make y^e land waste: So y^e it shall be desolate & voyde, from the wilderness of Edom south, thowowe all they: habytantes to learne them so: to knowe, that I am the Lord.

The vii. Chapter.

¶ The name of all the lande of Israel shall sodenly come. The name of the destruction shal be. The prophet is come to shew y^e summe of the euyles that are at hand.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me on this maner: The Ical, O y^e sonne of man. Thus sayth the Lord God vnto the lande of Israel: The ende cometh vnto the land of Israel: y^eer, verely the ende cometh vpon all the foure corners of y^e land. But nowe shall y^e ende come vpon the, for I wyll sende my wrath vpon the, & wyll punish, accordyng to thy wayes, & reward the after all thyne abhominacions. * Wyne eye shall not ouerse the, neyther wyll I spare y^e: but rewarde the, accordyng to thy wayes & declare thyne abhominacions. Then shall ye knowe, that I am the Lord.

Thus sayth the Lord God: Beholde, one mysery & plage shall come after another the ende is here. The ende (I saye) is come, it watched for the, be: olde it is come al redye, thy destruction is early come agaynst the, y^e dwell' est in the lande.

The time is at hande, the daye of sedycy on is at hande by, & the eye shall not be as the soundyng agayne of y^e mountaynes. Therfore I wyll shortly poure out my soze displeaure ouer the, & fullyll my wrath vpon y^e. I wyll iudge the after thy wayes, & recompence the all thy abhominacions.

* Wyne eye shall not ouerse the, neyther wyll I spare the: but rewarde the after thy wayes & thyne abhominacions shall be punished in the mysdides of the, to learne you to knowe, howe that I am y^e Lord y^e mysfetyr. Beholde, the daye is heare, the daye is come the houre is runne out, the rodde flozynth, y^e p^{er}de waxeth greene, malycious vyolence is growne vp, & the vngodly waken to a staff. None of the shall remayne ouer, none of thir ryches, not one of ther seed, & no lamentacion shall be made for them.

The tyme cometh, the daye draweth nye: * Whoso byeth, let him not reioyce: he y^e selleth, let hym not be soze: for why: Trouble shall come in the mysdest of them all: so y^e the seller shall not come agayne to the thinge y^e he solde, all though they: lye be yet wth the luyng. For when the prophete was preached vnto al y^e people, none turned from they: synne, and nomā toke strength to hym agaynst his wyckednesse, to saue his owne lyfe. The competes shall ye blowe, & make you al ready, but no man shall go to the battell, for I am wroth wth all the whole multitude.

The swerde shall be wythout, pestilence & hunger wythin: so that whoso ys in the felde shall be slayne wth the swerd: and he that is in the cite: shall perishe wth hunger and pestilence.

And such as escape & flee from amonge them, shall be vpon the hylles, lyke as the doones in the feild: euerye one shall be a frayed, because of his owne wyckednesse.

All handes shall be let downe, & al knees shall be weake as the water: they shall gyze them selues wth sackcloth, feare shall fall vpon them. They: faces shall be confounded * and they: heades balde: they: synner shall they cast forth in the streets, and they: golde shall be despised: * Per, they: synner & golde maye not deliuer them, in the daye of y^e feare full wrath of the Lord.

¶ They

*Dnt. viii. a

They shall not satisfye theyr hungrye soules, neither fill theyr emptye bellies therewith: For yt is become theyr owne decaye thow they wycke nelle. And theyr bewtyful costly ornament that God hath ordeyned to be theyr great glozpe, in it they haue set vp abhomynacions vnto theyr Idoles. For thys cause wyl I make them & yt to be abhozed. Moreover, I wyl geue it into the handes of the straungers to be spoyled: & to the wycked, for to be robbed, & they shall destroye it. My face wyl I turne from them, my treasury shalbe defiled: for theues shal go into it, & suspende it. Make a cheyne, for the lande is whole defyled wth vnyghteous iudgement of innocent bloude, & the cytie is full of violent opzession. Wherefore, I wyl bynge the most cruell tyrauntes from amonge the heathen, to take theyr houses in possession. I wyl make the pompe of the proude to cease, and theyr sanctuary shalbe defyled. When thys trouble commeth, they shall seke peace, but they shall haue none. One mythe and sorowe shall folowe another, and one rumoure shall come after another: Then shall they seke visions in dayne at theyr Prophetes. The lawe shalbe gone from the prestes, and wyl dome from the elders. The kynge shall mourne, the prynces shalbe clothed wth heynesse, and the handes of people in the lande shall trymble for feare. I wyl do vnto them after theyr owne wayes, accordyng to theyr owne iudgements wyl I iudge them, to learne them for to knowe, that I am the Lorde.

The viii. Chapter

An apperance of the symplitude of God. Ezechiel is brought to Jerusalem in the syete. The Lorde sheweth the Idolatrie of the house of Israel, & chertye of the prestes. It happened, that in the syete yere & fyfth daye of the syete moneth. I sat in my house, & the Lordes of the counsell of Juda wyth me: & the bande of the Lorde God fell euen there vpon me. And as I looked vp, I sawe as yt were a lykenesse of fyre from his loynes downwarde, and from his loynes upward: yt shyned merucious cleare & lyke an angell to loke vpon. Thys symplitude stretched out an hande and toke me by the heary lockes of my heade, and the syete lyfte me vp betwixte heauen & earth: and brought me in a vpspon to Jerusalem, into the entyre of the inner porte that lyeth toward the north: there stode an Image, w whom he that hath all thynges in his power, was very wyth.

And beholde, & glozpe of the God of Israel was in the same place: euen as I had sene it afore in the felde. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man. Dlyft vp thine eyes, and loke toward the north. Then lyft I vp myne eyes toward the north, & beholde:

besyde the porte northwarde, there was an aulter made vnto the ymage of prouocacyon in the very entyre in. And he sayd further moze vnto me. Thou sonne of ma, seest thou what these do? Seest thou the greates abhomynacions that the house of Israel committe in this place: to dyue me from my sanctuary? But tourne the aboute, & thou shalt se yet greater abhomynacions. And with that brought he me to the courte gate: & when I looked beholde: there was an hole in the wal. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of ma, dygge thow the wall. And when I dygged thow the wall, beholde there was a doze. And he sayde vnto me: go thw wape in, & loke what wycked abhomynacions they do here. So I went in, & sawe: and beholde, there were all maner Images of wormes & beastes, all Idoles & abhomynacions of the house of Israel paynted euery one rounde aboute the wall. There stode also before the ymages. lxx. Lordes of the counsell of the house of Israel and in the myddest of them stode Jaazanih, the sonne of Sapphan: And euery one of them had a censour in his hand and oute of the incense, there wente a smoke as it had bene a cloude. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of ma, hast thou sene what the Denatoures of the house of Israel do secretly, euery one in his chamber? For they saye: Tufte, the Lorde seeth vs not, & Lorde regardeth not the worlde. And he sayde vnto me: Turne the yet agayne, and thou shalt se yet greater abhomynacions that they do. And wth & he brought me to the doze of & porte of the Lordes house toward & north. And beholde, there sat women mourninge for Tamas. Then sayde he vnto me: halfe thou sene thys, thou sonne of man? Turne & aboute, & thou shalt se yet greater abhomynacions then these are. And so he brought me into the inward court of & Lordes house: And beholde at & porte of & Lordes house betwixte the fore entyre & the aulter, there were fyue & twenty men, that turned theyr bekes vpon the temple of the Lorde, & their faces toward the cast, & these worshipped the sonne.

And he sayde vnto me: halfe thou sene thys thou sonne of man? Thynketh & house of Juda, that it is but a tryfie, to do these abhomynacions here: Shulde they fill & lande ful of wyckednesse, and undertake to prouoke me to anger? Yee, and purposely to cast vp theyr noses vpon me? Therefore wyl I also do some thyng in my wrathful displeasure, so that myne eye shall not ouerse them, neither wyl I spare them. Yee, and though they crye in myne eares wth a loude voyce, yet wyl I not heare them.

The ix. Chapter,

Th

The destruction of Iherusalem, and the conversion of the people. They that haue caused are marked. They that are marked are Iherusalem. A complaine of the prophet for the destruction of the people.

HE cryed also with a lowde voyce in myne eares, saying Come, heare ye rulers of cypre, cypre man with bys wepened hand to the slaughter. Then came there fyr me out of the strete of the vpper porte toward the north & euery man a we-open in his hande to slay slaughter. There was one amongest them, that had on hym a lynnen raymente, and a wyrters pynchoyne by his syde.

These wente in and stode besyde þe synner: for the gloze of þe Lozde was going awaye from the. Cherub which was vp on hym, & he came downe to the thurthold of the house, & he called the man that had the lynen rayment vpon hym, & the wyrters pynchoyne by his syde, and the Lozde sayde vnto hym: go thy way thowowe þe ctyte of Jerusalem, and set a marcke vpon the foure hea-des of them, that mourne and are sorre for all the abhominacions: that be done therein And to the other, he sayde that I myght heare: & go ye after him thowowe the ctyte. I say merke none, spare none: kyll & destrope both men and yonge, maydens, children and wyt.

But as for these, that haue the marcke vpon them: se that ye touch them not, & be as my Sanctuary. Then they began at the elders, whiche were in the temple, he sayd sayde vnto them: When ye haue besyde the temple, & fylled the courte with synne, the go your waye forth. So they wente out, & stode downe thowowe the ctyte sawe when they had done the slaughter, & I escaped: I fell downe vpon my face, & cryed, sayinge: O Lozde God, wylt þe then destrope all the resyde of Israel, in thy foze displeasure, that thou haste poured vpon Jerusalem. Then sayde he vnto me: The wyrters of the house of Israel and Iuda is very great: so that the lande is full of bloud & the ctyte full of vnfaythfulnesse: for they saye: Euen, the Lozde regardeth not the synne, he seeth vs not. Therfore wyl I vpon myne eye shall not ouersee them: neyther wyl I spare them, but wyl recompence theyn wickednesse vpon theyr heades. And he sayd the man that had the linnen rayment vpon hym, & the wyrters pynchoyne by his syde: tolde all the matter howe it happened, and sayde: Lozde as thou hast commaunded me, so I haue done.

The .x. Chapter.

For the man that toke hys burning coler out of the my-ddle of the whelles and of the Cherubyns, in token of þe destruction of Iherusalem. A rebekall of the destruction of the wherles, and of the Cherubyns.

As I looked, beholde, in the fyрмаment that was aboue the Cherubyns ther appered the symple of a stole of Saphyr vpon them: Then sayd he that sat therein, to him that had the linnen rayment vpon hym: Crepe in betwene the wheles that are vnder the Cherubyns, & take thynne had ful of hoate coles out from betwene the Cherubyns, and cast them ouer the ctyte. And he crepte in, that I myght se.

Howe the Cherubyns stode vpon the ryght syde of the house, wher the man went in, and the cloude fylled the inner courte. Then the gloze of the Lozde remoued from þe Cherubyn, and came vpon the thurtholde of the house: so that the temple was full of cloudes, and the courte was full of the wyne of the Lozdes gloze: Per, and the sound of the Cherubyns wynges was hearde into the foze courte, lyke as it had bene the voyce of the al-myghty God, when he speaketh. Howe when he had bydden the man that was clothed in lynn, to go and take the hoate coles from the myddle of the wheles, whiche were vnder the Cherubyns: he wente and stode besyde the wheles. The one Cherub reached forth his hande from vnder the Cherubyn, vnto the fyr that was betwene the Cherubyns, and toke therof, and gaue it vnto hym that had on the linnen rayment in his hande: which toke it, & went out. And vnder the wynges of the Cherubyns, there appeared the lykenesse of a mans hande: I sawe also foure wheles beside the Cherubyns, so þe by euery Cherub there stode a whele. And þe wheles were to (loke vpon) after the fashyon of the pteous stone of Charlys: per, (vnto the syght) they were all: of one fashyon, as if one whele had bene in another.

When they went forth, they went all foure together, not turnyng about in theyr goinge. But where the fyrste went, the other went they after also, so that they turned not about in theyr goinge. Theyr whole bodies theyr backs, their handes, and wynges: per and the wheles also were full of eyes, rounde about them all foure. And I hearde hym call the wheles. Every one of them had four faces: so that the one face was the face of a be-rub, the seconde of a man, the thyrde of a lyon, the fourth of an aegle, and they were lyft-ed vp aboue. This is the beast that I sawe at the water of Cobar. Now when the Cherubyns went, the wheles went with them, and wher the Cherubyns stode theyr wynges to lyft them selues vpon, the wheles remained not behynd, but were with them all so. Whortly when they stode these stode also up from the threshold of the temple, and remapped upon the Cherubines: And the Cherubines flattered with theyr wynges, and lyfte them selues up from the earth: so that I sawe when they went, & the wheles with them. And they stode at the east syde of the porte that is in the house of the Lorde. So the glory of the Lorde was upon them. This is the beaste that I sawe under the God of Israel by the water of Cobar. And I perceaued, that it was the Cherubyns. Every one had foure faces, & every one foure wynges, & vnder their wynges, as it were mens handes. Now the fygure of theyr faces was, euen as I had sene them, by the water of Cobar, & so was the countenance of them. Every one in hys goynge wente strapte forwarde.

How they were that serued the people of Israel. How they were that serued the people of Israel. How they were that serued the people of Israel.

Moreouer, the spete of the Lorde lyfte me vp, and brought me vnto the east porte of the Lorde house. And beholde there .v. & .xx. men vnder the dooze amonge whom I sawe Jaazaniah the sonne of Azur, and Ishetiah the sonne of Bananiah, the rulers of the people. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these men ymagene myschete, and a wyched counceill take they in this cytpe, sayinge: Tylde, there is no destruccyon at hande, let vs buyld houses: this Ierusalem is the cauldron, and we be the fleche. Therefore shalte thou prophete vnto them: see, prophete shalte thou vnto them, O sonne of man. And with the spete of the Lorde vpon me, and sayde vnto me: Speake, thus sayth the Lorde.

On this maner haue ye spoken: O ye house of Israel, I knowe the ymagynacions of your hartes. Many one haue ye mortured in this cytpe, & filled the stretes full of the slayne. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde God: The slayne men that ye haue layde on the grounde in the cytpe, are the fleche, and this cytpe is the cauldron. But I will byynge ye out of it: ye haue feared the swerde, & I will bring a swerde ouer you sayth the Lorde God. I will byynge you out of this cytpe and deliuer you into youre enemies hande, & will condemne you. Ye shalbe slayne in all the coastes of Israel. I will be auenged of you: to learne you to knowe, that I am the Lorde. This cytpe shall not be youre cauldron, neither shall ye be the fleche therein: but in the coastes of Israel will I punishe you, that you maye knowe, that I am the Lorde: in whose commandementes ye haue not walked, nor kepte hys lawes: but haue done after the customes of the heathen, & ye round about you.

Ex. 11. 1. & 2. 1. & 3. 1.

Ex. 11. 1. & 2. 1. & 3. 1.

Now when I preached, I said that I sawe the sonne of Bananiah dyed. Then fel I downe vpon my face, & cryed with a loude voyce sayinge: O Lorde God, wylte thou then destroye all the remnaunte in Israel? And so the worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner: thou sonne of man: thy brethren, thy kynnsfolke, & the hole house of Iuda, whiche dwel at Ierusalem, saye: Wylde we be sared from the Lorde, for the lande is geuen vs in possessiō. Therefore tell them, thus sayth the Lorde God: I will sende you sarr of amonge the gentyles, and scatter you amonge the nacyons, and I will belowe you but a lytle, in the landes where ye shall come. Tell them also, thus sayth the Lorde God: I will gather you agayne out of the nacyons, and byynge you from the countres where ye be scattered, & I will geue you the lande of Israel agayne. And they shall come thither. And they shall take awaye all other Idoles & all theyr abhominacions from thence.

* And I will geue you one herte, and I will plante a newe spete within youre bowels. That stony herte will I take out of youre bodie, & geue you a fleschly harte: & ye maye walke in my commandementes & kepe myne odyunaunces, and do them: & ye maye be my people, & I your God. But loke whose hertes are dyspoled to folow their abhominacions and wyched lyuinges: these mens dedes will I byynge vpon theyr owne heades, sayth the Lorde God. After this dyd the Cherubyns lyfte up theyr wynges, and the wheles went with them, and the glory of the Lorde was vpon them. * So the glory of the Lorde whente vp from the middell of the cytpe and stode vpon the mount of the cytpe toward the East. * But the wynde toke me vp, and in a byspon, whiche came by the spete of God, yt brought me agayne into Caldea amonge the prissoners. Then the byspon that I had sene vanisshed awaye from me. So I spake vnto the prissoners, all the wordes of the Lorde, whiche he had shewed me.

The parable of the bellie of the captyuys. The parable of the bellie of the captyuys. The parable of the bellie of the captyuys.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man thou dwellest in the myddell of a frowarde houold: & which haue eyes to se ad yet se not: eares to heare, ad yet heare they not: for they are an obdurate hert. Therefore (O sonne of man) make the greare ready to lyte, and go forth by saye daye lyght, that they maye se. Per-

in thy place: yf thou shalt go from thy place to another place: yf peradventure they wyll saye, that they be a disobedient household of the Lord: thou hast made redy to sit with them: & thou hast made redy to sit with them: & thou shalt beare out by fayre daylyght, that they maye see: and thou thy self shalt go forth also at eue in their sight, as a ma doth when he styttereth. Wygge thou owe the wall, that they maye see & beare thou owe it & same thing, that thou tokest vp in theyr sight. In the night shalt thou beare upon thy shulders, and carry it forth in the darke. hyde thy face from the Lord: for I haue made the a new token vnto the house of Israel. Nowe the Lord commaunded me, so I dyd: the word that I had made ready brought I out by daye. At euen I brake downe an hole thro ough the wall with my hande: and when it was darke, I toke the gere vpon my shoul ders, and bare them out in theyr sight.

And in the moynynge came the worde of the Lord vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, yf Israel that frowarde household aske the, and saye: what doest thou there? Then tell the: Thus sayeth the Lord God: This synne toucheth the chiefe rulers at Je rusalem, and all the house of Israel, that dwelle amonge them. Tell them: I am youre heavenly father: lyke as I haue doone, so shall it be done vnto you: Flyt shal ye also, and go in captiuitie. * The chiefe that is amonge you, shall lade his shulders in the darke, & he shall beare downe the wall, to carpe stufte thorow: he shal couer his face that he se not the ground with his feet. * Wyllne wyll I speede out vpon him, and catche hym in the net, and carpe hym to Babylon in the lande of the Caldees: which shal not see, and yet shall be dpe there. As for al his helpers and al his hoolltes, that be about hym, I wyll scattre them towards al the wyndes, and drawe out a swerde after them. * So when I haue scattered them amonge the heathen, and srowed them in the landes they shall knowe, that I am the Lord. But I wyll leaue a lytle nobze of them fro steruete, hungre and pestilence: to tell al theyr abhominations amonge the heathen, when they come: & they maye knowe, howe I am the Lord.

Afterwarde, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, with a staffe full of thornes shalt thou beate the water. And vnto the people of Israel saye thou on this maner: Thus saye the Lord God: to them that dwell in Je rusalem, and to the lande of Israel: Ye shall not beare bread with sorowe, and drynke water with heynesse: Yea, the lande shall be fulle of shepheardes: & the faluellie therof shalbe layed waste, & the wychednesse of them that dwell therin. And the cytyes & now be wel occupped, shalbe voyde: and & lade desolate: & ye maye knowe, howe that I am the Lord.

Yet came the worde of the Lord vnto me agayne, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, what maner of byworde is that, wherby ye vse in the lande of Israel, sayinge: Tulse, * seynge that the dayes are so slacke in commynge, all the byspons are of none effecte: Tell them ther fore, thus sayth the Lord God: I wyll ma ke the byworde to cease, so that ye shall nomo re be comenly used in Israel.

But saye thys vnto them: & dayes are at hande, & euery thyng wherby hath bene prophecied, shalbe fulfilled. There shall no byson be in dayne, neyther any prophecye fayle amonge the chyldren of Israel: For it is I the Lord that speake yt: and whatsoeuer I the Lord speake, it shalbe performed, and not be slacke in commynge.

Yee, euen in youre dayes (O ye frow arde householdes) wyll I deuyse some thyng, & bynge ye to passe sayth the Lord God. And the worde of the Lord came vnto me sayng: Beholde, thou sonne of man: The house of Israel sayth on thys maner: Tulse, as for the byson that ye haue sene, ye wyll be many a daye or it come to passe: It is farre of yet, & thyng that he prophecied. Therfore saye vnto them: Thus sayth the Lord God. All my wordes shall nomoore be slacke, Loke what I speake, & same shall come to passe, sayth the Lord.

in Israel: and say vnto them prophecye out of theyr owne hertes: heare the worde of the Lord, thus sayth the Lord God: * Who be vnto those folysch prophetes that folow theyr owne sperte and speake wher they se nothyng. O Israel, thy prophettes are lyke the foxes vpon the drye felde: For they stode not in bygges, neyther make they an hedge for the house of Israel, that men myghte a bydethe the battell in the daye of the Lord. They saye they se, and tell lyes, to mayntayne theyr preachynges withal.
The Lord (saye they) hath spoken it, whā in very dede the Lord hath not sent them.

Theyr bysions haue ye sene, and spoke false prophecies, when ye saye: the Lord hath spoken yt, wher as I neuer sayde yt.

Therfore thus sayth the Lord God: Be cause youre wordes be dayne, and ye seke out lyes: Beholde, I wyll vpon you, sayth the Lord. Wyne handes shall come vpon you.

prophetes that loke out vayne thinges, and preach lyes: they shall not be in the councell of my people, nor written in the booke of the boule of Israel, neither shall they come in the land of Israel: for ye maye knowe howe I am the Lorde God. And that for because: they haue dysceaued my people, * and tolde them of peace, where no peace was. One set teth vpon a wall, and they dawbe yt wth loo se claye. Therfore tell them whyche dawbe it wth vntempered moztter, that yt shall fall.

For there shall come a great shower of rapne, great hable stones shall fall vpon yt, & a soze strome of wynde shall breake it, so shall the wall come downe. Shall yt not than be sayde vnto you: where is nowe poure moztter? for ye dawbed yt wth all: Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: I will breake oute in my wrothefull dyspleasure wth a stozmye wynde, so for in myne anger there shall come a myghty shower of rapne, and hable stones in my wiaht, to destrope wthall.

As for the wall that ye haue dawbed wth vntempered moztter, I will breake it downe, make it euen wth the grounde: so for the foundarpon therof shall remoue, & it shall fall, yee, and ye poure selues shall peryshe in the myddest therof: to learne you for to knowe, that I am the Lorde: Thus will I perfourme my wiaht vpon this wall, and vpon them that haue dawbed yt wth vntempered moztter, and then will I saye vnto you: The wall is gone, and the dawbers are awaye. These are the prophetes of Israel, whych prophesy vnto for cytie of Ierusalem, and loke oute visions of peace for them, where as no peace is: sayth the Lorde God. Wherfore? O thou sone of man, set thy face against the daughters of thy people, whych prophesye out of theyr owne hertes: and speake for, prophesye agaynst them, & saye thus. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Woe be vnto you, for sowe pylloues vnder arme holes, and bolsters vnder for heades both of ponge and olde to catch soules wthall. For whan ye haue gotten the soules of my people in poure captivitye, ye promise them lyfe & dysponoure me to my people, for an handfull of barley, & for a peece of breade: whan ye kylle the soules of them, that dye not, & promise lyfe to them that lyue not: Thus ye dyssemble wth my people, that beleueth poure lyes.

* Ezek. xli. b

Wherfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, I will also vpon the pylloues, wher wth ye catch for soules in slyng: them will I take from poure armes, and let for soules go that ye catch slyng. Poure bolsters also will I teare in peces, and deliuer my people, oute of poure handes so for they shall come nomore in poure handes to be sold: & ye shall knowe, that I am for Lorde. Being that wth poure lyes ye dyscomfozte the her-te of the ryghteous, whom I haue not dyscomfozte. Agayne: For so moch * as ye couage the bande of the wicked, so that he maye not turne from hys wpyked waye and lyue: therfore shall ye lyue oute no more vnto the prophete poure owne gessynges: for I will deliuer my people out of poure hande, that ye maye knowe, howe, that I am the Lorde.

The xliii. Chapter.

The Lorde denyth hys woide to the people for their sinnes sake. The despytful of the woide both the Lorde thence time decrease by false prophetes. A rebuke of them that shal be vnto Babylon.

There reioyced vnto me certayne of the elders of Israel, & sat downe by me. Then came the woide of for Lorde vnto me saying: thou sone of man, these men bare their vnclemmes in theyr hertes, and go purposyng vpon the stomblyng blocke of theyr owne wpykednesse: whilke I then answered at their requeste: Therfore speake vnto them, & saye thus sayeth the Lorde God: Every man of the boule of Israel that beareth hys vnclemme Idoles in hys herte, purposyng to stombe in hys owne wpykednesse, and cometh to a prophete, to enquyre enye thyng at me by hym: vnto for man will I for Lorde my selfe geue answer, accordyng to the multitude of hys Idoles: that the boule of Israel may be shamed in theyr owne hertes, because they be cleane gone from me, for theyr abhominacions sakes.

Wherfore, tell the boule of Israel: thus sayth the Lorde God: * Be converted, forsake poure Idoles, and tounne your wyues from poure sylthynesse, and turne your faces fro all poure abhominacions. For every man, (whether he be of for boule of Israel or a stranger, that logeorneth in Israel, whych be pattered fro me, and carryth Idols in hys herte, purposyng to go stomblyng in hys owne wpykednesse, and cometh to a prophet, for to aske counsel at me thow hym: vnto that man will I the Lorde geue answer, by myne owne selfe. I will let my face agaynst that man, and will make hym to be an example for other, yee, & a comen bywoide: and will roote hym oute of my people, for he maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde, * and yt that prophete be dysceaued, when he telleth hym a woide: then I the Lorde myselfe haue dysceaued that prophete, and will stretch oute myne hande vpon hym, to roote hym oute of my people of Israel: & they both shall be punished for theyr wpykednesse. Accordyng to the synne of hym that alleth, shall the synne of the prophete be: for the boule of Israel be led nomore from me thow error, and be nomore defiled in theyr wpykednesse: but that they maye be my people, and I theyr God, sayth the Lorde God.

And the woide of the Lorde came vnto me, any thyng be made of it, whē the fyre hath consumed & brent it. And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Lyke as I cast & byne into & fyre for to be bryt, as other trees of the wod: Euen so wyl I do wyth them that dwel in Ierusalem, & set my face agaynst them: they shall go out from the fyre, & yet the fyre shall consume them. * The shall ye knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I set my face agaynst the, & make & lande waste: because they haue so sore offended, sayeth the Lord God.

¶ The xvi. Chapter.

¶ The prophet entreats us to speak of the abominations of Jerusalem: both first to show the desecrations of God to waste it. Jerusalem is purposed of darkness: for her conjunction with Babylon. We multiply the imprecations of other people in comparison of the sinners of Jerusalem. The cause of the abominations into which the Godomites fall. Mercy is promised to the repentant.

Therefore, heare the worde of the Lorde, O thou harlot: thus sayeth the Lorde God: For so moche as thou hast sette forth thy youth to whozdomē & dycovered thy shame, thou rowe thy whozdomē with al thy louers, and w all the pdoles of thy abhominacyōs in the bloud of thy chyldre, * whom thou hast geuf them: Beholde therefore, I wyl gather together all thy louers, vnto whome thou hast made thy selfe comen: yee, and all them whom thou fauourest, & euery one that thou hatest I wil (I saye) gather them together rounde about the: & * wyl dycouer thy shame befoze the that thy may se all thy fylthynges.

* Moreover, I wyl indge the as a breake of wedlock and a murderer, and recompence the thine owne bloud in wyath & gelousy. I wyl gyue the ouer into theyr power, that breake downe thy stues, and destroy thy bzodel houses: they shal stryp the out of thy clothes, all thy fayre and beutiful Jewels shal they take from the, & so let the syt naked and bare: * yea, they shal bring the comen people vpon the which shal stone the, and slaye the downe w theyr swerdes. * They shal burne vpon thy houses, & punish the in the sight of many women. Thus wyl I make thy whozdomē to cease, so that thou shalte gyue out no moze rewardes. Shoulde I make my wyath to be styl, take my gelousye fro the, be content & nomoze to be displeased: seinge thou remēbrest not the dayes of thy youth, but hast ynoked me to wyath in all these thynges? Beholde therefore, I wyl bzyng thyne owne wapes vpon thyne head, sayeth the Lorde God: howbeit, I neuer dyd vnto the accordyng to thy wychednesse and all thy abhominacyōs. Beholde, all theyr that vse comen prouerbes, shall vse this prouerbe also agaynst the: suche a mother, suche a daughter.

Thou art euen thy mothers owne daughter, & hath cast of her husbāde and her chyldren: yea, thou arte the syster of thy syders, which forsake the: husbādes & their chyldren. * Your mother is a Cethye, and your father an Amoyte. Thyne eldest syder is Samaria, she and her daughters that dwell vpon

But thy pongeste syster that dwelleth on thy right hande, is Sodom and her daughters. Yet hast thou not walked after their maner, nor done after their abominacions: but thou dost a litle & very small tyme, and in all thy wayes thou hast bene more corrupt than they. As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lord God: Sodom thy syster is her daughters, but not done so euell, as thou and thy daughters. Beholde, the synnes of thy syster Sodom were these: Pryde, fulnesse of meate, abundance & Idelnesse: these thynges had she & her daughters. Besydes that they refused not their hāde to the pooze & nedye, but were proude, and dyd a bhomynable thinges before me: therefore I toke them awaye, as I pleased me. Neither hath Samaria done half of thy synnes, & yet thou hast exceeded them in wickednesse: In so much that in comparayson of all the abhominacions which thou hast done, I have made thy sisters good women. Therefore thou (which dydest condempne thy sister) hast thyne owne shame, for thyne owne offences, that thou hast comytted, more abhominable then they dyd, whiche in dead or more wythouten, then thou art, be thou (I saye) ashamed, and heare the shamefull rebuke, saynge that thou hast proued thy sisters in comparayson of the thynges.

As for their captiuite, namely the captiuite of Sodom, & her daughters: the captiuite of Samaria & her daughters: I wyl bring them agayne, so wyl I also bringe agayne thy captiuite amonge the: & thou mayest take thyne owne confusyon vpon thee, & be ashamed of all that thou hast done, & to confourte the. Thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, I haue brought agayne to poure Sodom & her daughters, & thy sisters, which I haue brought agayne to poure Sodom. When thou wast in the pryde, & when thy wickednesse came to light: thou wouldest not heare speake of thy syster Sodom, wyl the tyme & the dayes wyl they all be brought aboute the, brought the to shame & confusion: & thou mayest heare thyne owne shame & abhominacion, sayeth the Lord God. Thus sayeth the Lord God, I shulde haue deale with the, as thou hast done. Thou hast despised the oth, and broken the covenante. Nevertheless, I wyl remembre the covenante that I made with the in thy youth, so much that it shalbe an euell thyng to come to that I also remembre thy wayes, & be ashamed of them: then shalt thou receaue of me the elder & ponger sisters, who I wyl make thy daughters, and that besyde thy covenante. And so wyl I renue my covenante with the, that thou mayest knowe that I am the Lord, that thou mayest thinke vpon it: thou shalt be ashamed, and excuse thyne owne confusyon.

nomore: when I haue forgiven the, all that thou hast done, sayeth the Lord God.

The xxiiij. Chapter.

The parable of the two Agles.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me, I sayenge: Thou sonne of mā: put forth a parable, vnto the house of Israel, & saye: Thus sayeth the Lord God: There came a greete Agle, & a greete wynges, yee, wylth a myghty longe bodye, and full of fethers of diuerse coloures vpon the mount of Libanus, & toke the hyest brāch fro a Cedre tree, & brake of the toppe of hye twygge, & caried it into the lande of Canaan, & set it in a cite of marchantes. He toke also of the leade of the lande, & planted it in a fruteful grounde, he brought it vnto greete waters, and set it as a willowe tree therby. Then dyd it growe, and was a greete vyne stocke, but lowe by the grounde whole brāches turned into it selfe, & the rotes of it were fastened vnder it, thus there came of it a vyne, and it brought forth blossomes, and spred out brāches. But there was another Agle, & a greete one, which had great wynges & many fethers: & beholde, the rotes of this vyne had an hunger after hym, and spred out hye brāches towarde hym, & he myght water her with the ocherd that he had planted. Nevertheless, it was plāted vpon a good ground besyde great waters: so (by reald) it shulde haue brought forth brāches & frute, & haue bene a goodly vyne. Speake thou therefore, & thus sayeth the Lord God: Shall this vyne prosper? Shall not hye rotes be plucked oute, & hye frute be broken of, & hye grene brāches wither & fad away: yee without ether stroke arme or many people, shall it be plucked vp by the rotes. Beholde, it was planted: shall it prosper therefore? Shall it not be dyed by & withered, yee, en in the shuting out of his blossomes, as soone as I cast wide bloweth?

Moreover, the word of the Lord came vnto me sayng: Speake to the frowarde houshold: knowe ye not, what these thynges do signifye? Tel the: Beholde, the kyng of Babylon came to Ierusalem, & toke the kyng & hye prynces, and ledde them to Babylon.

He toke of the kynges seide, and made a covenante with hym, and toke an othe of hym: The prynces of the lande toke he wylth hym also, that the lande myght be holden in subieccion, and not to rebelle, but kepe the covenante, and fulfill it. But he fell from hym, and sent his ambassitours into Egypt, that he might haue horses and much people. Shulde, that prosper? Shulde he be kepte safe, that doth such thynges? Or shulde he escape, that breaketh hye covenante? As truly as I lyue sayeth the Lord God, he shall dye at Babylon, in the place where the kyng dwelleth, & made hym kyng: whose othe he hath despyed, and whose couenaunt he hath broken. Kether shall pharao with his greete host & multitude of people, maynteyne him in the warre: whē they cast vp dishes, & set vp bulwokes to destroye moche people: For seynge he hath despyed the othe, and broken the couenaunt (where as he yet gaue hys hande ther vpon) and done al these thynges, he shall not escape.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: As truly as I lyue, I will brynge myne othe & he hath despyed, and my couenaunt that he hath broken, vpon hys owne head. * I will cast my net about hym, and catch hym in my parne. To Babylon wyl I carpe hym, there wyl I punyssh hym, because of the greete offence that he made me. As for those that shew hym out of the host, they shalbe slayne with the swearde. The residue shalbe scattered towarde all the wyndes: and ye shall knowe, that I the Lorde haue spoken it.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyl also take a brynche from an hye Cedre tree, and wyl set it, & take & vppermost twigge, & yet is but tendre, and plante it vpon an hye hyl: Namely, vpon the hye hyl of Israell wyl I plante it: & it maye brynge forth twygges, & geue frute, and be a great Cedre tree: so that all maner of foules may buyde in it, & make their nestes vnder & shadow of his brynches.

And all the trees of the feilde shall knowe that I the Lord haue brought downe the hye tree, & set the lowe tre vp: & I haue dyed vp the grene tree, and make the drye tree to flourish. Euen I the Lorde that spake it, haue also brought it to passe.

Chapter.

The word that every man that heare his owne synne do hym that amendeth, is saluacion promysed. Which is prophesied to the ryghtwylle, which turneth backe from the ryght waye.

The word of & Lord came vnto me, on this maner: what meane ye by thys cōmen prouerbe, & ye vse in the lande of Israell, sayyng: * The fathers haue eaten soure grapes, & chyldres teeth are set on edge. As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lorde God, ye shall vse thys byworde no moze in Israell.

* Jer. xlii.

Beholde * all soules are myne. Lyke as & father is myne, so is & sonne myne also. The soule & synneth, shall dye. * If a man be godly, & do the thyng & is equall and ryghte, he eateth not vpon the hilles: he lyftech not hys eyes vp to the soule ydols of Israell: he despyeth not his neighbours wyfe: he medleth w no menstruous woman: he greueth no body: he greueth hys better his pledge agayne, he taketh none other mans good by vpolce: * he parteth his mete w the hongry: he clotheth the naked: * he lendeth nothing vpon vsury: he taketh nothyng ouer: he wythdraweth hys hande from dopngge wronge: he dealeth faithfully betwixte man and mā: & walketh in my commaundementes, and keepeth my lawes, and perfourmeth them faithfully: * This is a ryghtuous mā: he shal surely lyue sayeth the Lorde God.

If he nowe get a sonne, that is a murdret, a wheder of bloude: yf he do one of these thynges * (though he do not al) he eateth vpon the hilles: he despyeth his neighbours wyfe: he greueth & poore and nedye: he robbeth and spyleth: he greueth not the better his pledge agayne, he lyftech vp hys eyes vnto ydols: & medleth with abhominable thynges: he lendeth vpon vsury, & taketh moreouer. Shall this man lyue? he shal not lyue. Seynge he hath done all these abhomyracys, he shall dye, his bloude shalbe vpon hym.

Howe yf thys man get a sonne also, that seeth all hys fathers synnes, whyche he hath done: and feareth, nether doth such lyke: Namely, he eateth not vpon the mountaynes: he lyftech not hys eyes vp to the ydols of Israell: he despyeth not hys neighbours wyfe: he vtereth no mā: he keepeth no mā's pledge: he neether spyleth, nor robbeth any mā: he draketh his meate w the hongry: clotheth the naked: he appresseth not the poore: he receauneth no vsury, ne any thyng ouer: he keepeth my lawes, & walketh in my commaundementes. This mā shall not dye in hys fathers synne, but shall lyue without fayle. As for hys father, because he oppressed & spyled hys brother, and dyd wyckedly amonge hys people: lo, he is dead in his owne synne. And yet saye ye: Wherfore shal he lyue not this sonne beare his fathers synne? Therfore, because & sonne hath done equyte & ryght, hath kepte all my commaundementes, & done them: therfore shal he lyue in dede. The same soule that synneth shall dye. * The sonne shall not beare the fathers offence, nether shall the father beare the sonnes offence. The ryghteousnes of the ryghteous shalbe vpo him, & the wyckednes of the wicked shalbe vpo him selfe also. * But yf vngodly wyl turne awaye from all his synnes & he hath done, and kepe all my commaundementes, and do the thyng that is equal and ryght: doubtles he shall lyue, and not dye. As for all hys synnes & he dyd before, they shall not be thought vpo: but in his ryghteousnes that he hath done, he shal lyue. * For haue I eny pleasure in & deatch of a synner, sayth the Lorde God, but rather & he conuerte, and lyue agayne: yf & ryghteous turne awaye fro his rightuousnes, and do iniquite, accordyng to all the abhominacions, & the wycked mā doth: shall he lyue? All the ryghtuousnes & he hath done, shall not be thought vpon: but in & faute that he hath offended wythal, and in the synne that he hath done, he shall dye.

And yet ye saye: Tuff & waye of & Lord is not indifferent. Heare therfore ye house of Israell: is not my waye ryght? & are not your wayes rather wycked, * Whē a rightious man turneth awaye fro hys ryghtu-ousnesse, and medleth wyth vngodlynes: he must dye therein. Pee, for the vnrpyghtousnes that he hath done, must he dye. A gayne, when the wycked mā turneth awaye from his wickednesse, that he hath done, and doth the thinge which is equall and right: he shall live his soule alpye. For in so moch as he remembere hym selfe, & turneth hym from all the vngodlynes that he hath dyed, he shall live and not dye.

And yet sayeth the house of Israel. Cuth, the waye of the Lorde is not equall. Are my wayes vnrpyght? O ye house of Israel: Are not your wayes rather vnequall? As for me I wyll iudge euery man, accordyng to hys wayes. O ye house of Israel, sayeth the Lorde God. * Wherefore, be conuerted, and turne you cleane from al your wyckednesse, so shal there no synne do you harme. Cast away fro you al your vngodlynesse, that ye haue done: make you newe hertes and a newe sprete.
Wherefore wyll ye dye? O ye house of Israel! sayng I haue no pleasure in the death of hym that dyeth, sayth the Lorde God. Turne you then, and ye shall lyue.

¶ The xix. Chapter.

The captiuitie of Ierobabaz and of Ierobachin is signified by the Lyons whelpes, and by the Lyon. We set out the perspective of the crite of Ierusalem that was, & the miserie thereof that is present.

But thou sonne of mā mourne thou for the prynces of Israel, and saye: Wherefore lay thy mother that lyonnesse amonge the lyons, & noyeth her yonge ones amonge the lyons whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vp, & it became a lyon, it lerned to spoylle, & to deuoure folke.
The heathen herde of him, and toke hym in theyr nettes, and brought hym in chaynes into the lande of Egypte.

Nowe when the damme sawe, that all her hope and comforte was away, she toke another of her whelpes, and made a lyon of hym: which wote amonge the lyons, and became a lyon: learned to spoylle and to deuoure folke: he destroyed their palaces, and made the cittytes wast. In so moch that the whole land & euery thinge therein, were vterly destroyed, & very voyce of his roaring.

Then came the heathen together on eu-ery syde oute of all countrees agaynst hym, theyr nettes for hym, and toke him in theyr pytte. * So they boude hym with chay-nes, and brought him to the kynge of Babylon: which put him in prison, that hys voyce should no more be herde vpon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy mother, she is lyke a vine in the bloude, planted by the water of her frutes and braunches are growe out amonge waters, her stalkes were so stronge that me myght haue made stauces therof for officers: she grewe so hye in her stalkes.

So whan men sawe that she exceded the height & multitude of her braunches, she was roted out in displeasure, and cast downe to ground. The East wynde dyed vp her frute, her stronge stalkes were broke of, wythered and brest in the fyre. But nowe she is plated in the wilderness, in a drye & thursty ground.
And there is a fyre gone out of her stalkes, whiche hath brest vp her braunches and her frute: so that she hath no more stronge stalkes, to be stauces for officers. This is a piteous & myserable thyng.

¶ The xx. Chapter.

The Lorde denpeth that he wyll answere the when they praye, for the offence of vngodlynes whiche he here objecteth. He promyseth that hys people shall returne from captiuitie. By the wood that shal be brest to signifye the burninge of Ierusalem.

In the vii. yere the x. daye of the ii. moneth, * it happened, & certayne of the elders of Israel came vnto me, for to aske counsell at the Lorde and sat the downe be me. The came & worde of the Lorde vnto me on thys maner: Thou sonne of man: speake vnto the elders of Israel, & saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: are ye come hyther to aske any thyng at me? As truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde) I wyll geue you no answer. Alpit thou not reproue them (thou sonne of man) wilt thou not reproue them? Shewe them the abhominacyons of their forefathers and tell them.
Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * In the daye when I chose Israel, and lyft vp myne hande vpon the fede of the house of Jacob, and sewed my selfe vnto them in the lande of Egi-pte: Pee when I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them, and sayde: I am the Lorde your God, euē in the daye that I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them, to bryng them out of the land of Egypte, into a lade that I had promysed for the, which floweth wyth mylike & dony, and is a pleasaunt lande amonge all other. The sayde I vnto them. * Cast away euery man the abhominacions that he hath before him, and desyle not your selues wyth the ydoles of Egypte, for I am the Lorde your God.

But they rebelled agaynst me, and wolde not folowe me: to cast away euery man the abhominacions of hys eyes, and to forsake the ydoles of Egypte. Then I made me to poure myne indignacyon ouer them, & to sa-tisfye my wrath vpon them: pee euē in the myddest of the lande of Egypte. But I wolde not do it, for my names sake: that I shulde not be vnhalowed before the heathen, amonge whom they dwelt, & amonge whō I shewed my selfe vnto them. I wolde bryng them out of the lande of Egypte. Nowe whē I had caryed them out of the lande of Egypte, and brought them into the wilderness: I gaue them my commaundementes, & shewed them my lawes. * whych whoso kepeth shall lyue in them: I gaue them also my holy dayes, to be a token betwixt me & them, & thereby to knowe, that I am the Lord, whych halowe them. And yet the house of Israel rebelled agaynst me in the wyldernesse, they wold not walke in my commaundementes, they haue cast awaye my lawes (whych whoso kepeth shall lyue in them) and my Sabboth dayes haue they greatly vnhalowed.

But I swore vnto them in the wyldernesse, that I wolde not brynge them into the lande, whyche I gaue them: a lande that floweth with mycke and hony, & is a pleasure of all landes: and that because they refused my lawes, and walched not in my commaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabbothes, for their hert was gone after their ydoles. Neuerthelesse, myne eye spared them, so þ I wolde not vterly slaye the, and consume them in the wyldernes. Wherefore, I sayde vnto their sonnes in the wyldernesse: * walcke not in the statutes of poure forefathers, kepe not their ordinaunces, and defyle not poure selues wth their ydols, for I am the Lord poure God. But walcke in my statutes, kepe my lawes & do them, halowe my Sabbothes, * for they are a token betwixt me & you, þ ye maye knowe howe þ I am the Lord poure God. Notwithstandyng, their sonnes rebelled agaynst me also, they walked not in my statutes, they kept not my lawes to fulfill the (whyche he þ doth shall lyue in them) nethe halowed they my Sabboth days. The I made me againe to poure out my indignacion ouer them, and to satiffie my wrath vpo them in the wyldernesse. Neuerthelesse, I wythdrew my hande for my names sake, lest it shulde be vnhalowed amonge the heathen, before whō I had brought the forth. I lyft vp myne hande ouer the also in the wyldernesse, þ I wolde scatere them amonge the nacyns, because they had not kepte my lawes, but cast asyde my commaundementes, vnhalowed my Sabbothes, and lyft vp they eyes to their fathers ydoles.

blasphemed me more, and greatly offended agaynst me. For after I had broughte them into the lande, that I promysed to geue the, when they sawe euery hye hyl & al the thicke trees: they made there their offringes, & prouoked me wth their oblacyns, makynge swete sauoures there, and powored out they drinckoffrynges. Then I asked the what is þ hyl altare þ ye go to it: And therfore is it called þ hye place vnto this day. Wherefore, speake vnto the house of Israel: thus sayeth the Lord God: ye are euē as vncleane as poure forefathers, and commytte whordome also wth their abhominacions. In all poure ydoles, where vnto ye byngne poure oblacyns, & and to whose honoure ye burne poure chyldren, ye defyle poure selues, euen vnto this daye: howe darre ye then come, and aske any questyon at me: O ye household of Israel! As truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lord God) ye get no answer of me: & as for the thyng that ye go about, it shall not come to passe, where as ye saye: we wll be as the heathē, and do as other people in the lande, wood & stone wll we worshippe.

As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lord God, I my selfe wll rule you w a mighty hande, wth a stretched out arme, & wth indignacion powored out ouer you: and wll byngne you out of the nacyns and landes, wherein ye are scatred, and gather you together with a mighty hande, wth a stretched out arme & w indignacion pouored out vpon you: and wll byngne you into the wyldernesse of the people, & there I wll reason wth you face to face. Lyke as I punished poure forefathers in the wyldernesse of Egypt, so wll I punyche you also, sayeth þ Lord God. I wll byngne you vnder my iurisdiction, & vnder þ bonde of the couenaut. The forsakers also and the transgressours wll I take from amonge you, & byngne them out of the lade of poure habitacyn: as for the lande of Israel, they shall not come in it: þ you maye knowe howe that I am the Lord.

Go to nowe then (sayeth the Lord God) ye house of Israel. * Euery one of you folowe poure ydols, and serue them, seynge ye refuse to obeye me. And my holy name shall be nomore vnhalowe wth poure offringes and ydoles. For vpon my holy hyl euen vpo the hye hyl of Israel sayth þ Lord God, shall all the house of Israel and all that is in the lade, worshippe me: * and in the same place wll I fauoure the, and there wll I requyre poure beaueoffrynges and the fyrstlynges of poure oblacyns, wth all poure holy thynges.

I wll accepte poure swete sauoure, when I byngne you from the nacyns, and gather you together out of the landes, wherein ye be scatred: that I maye be halowed in you before the heathen, and that ye maye knowe, that that I am the Lord, whyche haue brought you into the late of Israel: yee, into the same land, that I sware to geue vnto poure forefathers. There shal ye call to remembrance your owne wayes: & all poure ymaginacions, wherein ye haue bene despyled: * and ye shall saye your selues woorthye to be destroyed, for all your wyckednes, & ye haue done. And ye shal knowe, & I am the Lord, when I extend you after my name, not after your wicked wayes, nor accordyng to your corrupte works: O ye house of Israel, sayeth & Lord

Moreover, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of mā, set thy face toward the south, & speake to the south wynde, & saie to the wynde toward the south: thus sayeth the Lord God. Behold, I will kyndle a fyre in the, that shal consume the grene trees with the drye. A man shal be able to quench the fyre, but all that loketh from the south to the north, shal be brennt therein: and all fleshe shal be, that I the Lord haue kyndled it, so that no man maye quench it. The n sayde I: O Lord, they will saie of me: * Cushe, they are but fables, that he telleth.

The xxi. Chapter.

Therewith the sword, that is to saie: destruction to the cite of Jerusalem. He therewith the fall of the kinge iehoiachin. He is commaunded to prophesy the destruction of the children of Ammon. After the slaughter of other, at the last the Lord threatneth death vnto Nabuchodonosor, hym selfe.

The worde of the Lord came to me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face toward Jerusalem, & speake agaynst the Sanctuary, & prophesye agaynst the lande of Israel, saie to the lande of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord: Beholde, I will vpon the, & I will drawe my swerde out of the sheath, and rote out of the both the righteous & the wycked. Seynge then that I will rote out of the both the righteous & the wycked, therfore shal my swerde goe out of the sheath agaynst all fleshe from the north to the south: & all fleshe maye knowe howe I the Lord haue drawen my swerde out of the sheath: & it shal not be put in agayne. Wourne therfore (O thou sonne of man) for thy loynes crach wythall, yee mourne byt thy selfe in their presence. Beholde, it cometh and shal be done, sayeth the Lord God.

Agayne the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, prophesy, and speake. Thus saith the Lord God: The swerde, the swerde is sharpened, & well scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, & scoured that it maye be bright. We the make murther agaynst & tribe of my sonne it is gone forth destroyinge all trees. He hath put his swerde to the dryghtyng, & good holde maye be take of it. The swerde is sharpened & dryght, that it maye be geuen vnto the hande of the manslayer.

Crye (O thou sonne of man & howle, for thy swerde shal smyte my people, & al the rulers in Israel,) my people shal be feared thowse thy swerde. Smitte therfore thou vpon thy dryght, for it is gone forth to make a trpal. And what a trpal shal thy be, when euē my scepter shal be reynoued? Ye shal not be sayeth the Lord God. Prophesye & sonne of man, & smyte thyne hādes together: make & swerde two edged, yee make it thre edged that manslayers swerde, that swerde of the greates slaughter, whych shal smyte the, euen in their preuchambres: to make them abashed & saynte at the heartes, & in al gates to make some of them fall. I haue geue that fearfull swerde. O howe bright and sharp is it, how wel dryght and mete for the slaughter. Get the some place alone, ether vpon the dryght hande or on the lefte, whither soeuer thy face turneth. I will smyte my handes to gether also & satysfy my wrathfull indignacyon: Euen I the Lord haue sayde it.

The worde of the Lord came yet vnto me agayne sayinge: Thou sonne of mā, make the two stretes, that the swerde of the kinge of Babylon maye come. Bothe these stretes shal goe out of one kynges lāde. And chose & a place, at the heade of the strete chose out a corner. Make & a strete, & the swerde maye come toward Babath of the Ammonytes, & to the stryge cytie of Jerusalem. For & kyng of Babylon shal stande in the turnyng of the waye, at the heade of the twoo stretes: * to aske counsell at the sothslayers, castinge the lottes w his arrowes, to aske counsell at the ydole, and to loke in the lyuer. But the sothesayinge shal poynte to & dryght syde vpon Jerusalem, that he maye set men of warre, to smite it w a greates nysse, to crye out Alarū: to set batell rammes agaynst the gates, to graue vpon ditches, and to make bulwarkes.

Neuertheles, as for the sothesayinge, they shal holde it but for vanite. And eskeame the as those to whom they haue often sware: Not wythstandyng he shal remembre their wyckednesse, so that by dryght they must be take and wonne. Therfore sayeth the Lord God. For so moche as ye poure selues w your offence, and haue opened poure wyckednesse, so that in all poure workes men maye se your synnes: therfore are ye come to remembrance, and ye shal be taken by violence.

O thou shamefull wycked guyde of Israel, whose daye is come: euen the tyme that wyckednesse shal haue an ende. Thus sayeth the Lord God: take awaye the garland, and put of the crowne, and so is it awaye: the humble is ble is exalted, and the proude brought lowe. Punyshe, punyshe, pee, punyshe the wyl I, & destroye them: and that shall not be fulfilled vntill he come, to whom the iudgement belongeth, & to who I haue geuen it. And thou (O sonne of man) prophesye, & speake: Thus sayeth the Lord God to the childre of * Ammon, & to their blasphemy, speake thou: The swearde, & swearde is drawen forth all redy to the slaughter, & scoured to consume, that it glisteth because thou hast looked the oute vanyties, and prophesied lyes: that it maye come vpon thy necke, lyke as vpon the other vngodly, which be slaine, whose dape came, when their wyckednesse was full.

Shulde I put it by agayne? Naye I wyl punyshe the, in the lande where thou waste noysed: & bozne, and poure my indygnacion vpon the and wyl blowe vpon the in f fyze of my wrath, and deliuer the vnto cruel people, which are lerned to destroye. Thou shalt fede the fyze, & thy blonde shall be shed in the lande, that thou mayest be put out of remembrance. Euen I the Lord haue spoken it.

The xxii. Chapter.

The worde of the Lord agaynst Jerusalem for m slaughter, and draynge her honoure vnto they: for shee and mothers, & other wyckednesse. Of the wise her doctrine of the false prophetes and prestes, and of theyr vsurpable countousnes. The Examples of rulers. The wyckednes of the people.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, & said: thou sonne of man, wylt thou not reprove thys bloudthirstye cytie? Shewe the their abhominacions, & tell the: Thus sayeth f Lord God: O thou cytie, f sheddest blonde in f middest of the, that thy time maye come also: & makest the Idoles to defyle f with al. Thou hast made thy selfe gyfte, in f blonde that thou hast shed: & defyled the in the ydoles, which thou hast made. Thou hast caused thy dapes to drawe nye, & made the tyme of thy peares to come. Therfore wyl I make f to be confounded amonge the heathen, & to be despyed in all the lades, whether they be nye or farre from the: they shall laugh the to scoone, thou that hast gotten the so foule a name, & art full of myschefe. Beholde, the rulers of Israel haue broughte euery man hys power, to shed blonde in the. * In the haue they despyed father & mother, in f haue they oppressed the straunger, in the haue they vered the wydowe and the fatherlesse. Thou hast despyed my Sanctuary, and vnhalowed my Sabboth. Murtherers are there in the, that shedde blood, & eate vpon the hylls, and in the they vse abhomyngacyon.

* In the haue they discovered their fathers shame: in the haue they vered womē in their sicknesse. Euery mā hath dealth shame fully with his neyghbours wyfe, & abhominably despyed hys daughter in lawe, In the hath euery mā forced hys owne syster, cut his fathers daughter: yee, * gyftes haue bene receaued in the, to shedde blonde: & Thou hast taken vsury and encrease, thou hast oppressed thy neyghbours by extorcyon, and forgotten me, sayeth the Lord God. Beholde, I haue smytten my handes vpon thy countenance, that thou hast used, & vpon the blonde whych hath bene shed in the. Is thy herte able to endure it, or maye thy handes defende them selues, in the tyme that I shall byngne vpon the? Euen I the Lord that speake it, wyl byngne it also to passe. * I wyl scatter the amonge the heathen, and strowe the aboute in the landes, and wyl cause thy synnynesse to cease out of f: yee, and thou shalt be thyne owne enberptaunce & not myne in the syghts of the heathen, that thou mayest knowe, that I am the Lord.

And the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, * the house of Israel is turned to dross. All they f shuld be drosse, tynne, yron and leade are in f fyze become dross. Therfore, thus sayeth the Lord God. For so much as ye all are turned into dross, beholde: I wyl byngne you together vnto Ierusalem, like as spluer, byaste, yron, tynne and leade are put together in the fornaice, and the fyze blowen there vnder to melt them. Euen so wyl I gather you, put you in together, and melt you in my wrath & indignacyon. I wyl byngne you together, & kyndle the fyze of my cruell dyspleasure vnder you, that ye maye be melted therein.

Lyke as the spluer is melted in the fyze, so shall ye also be melted therein, that ye maye knowe, howe that I the Lord haue powred my wrath vpon you.

And the worde of the Lord came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, tell her. Thou art an vnclene lād, which is not rayned vpon in the dape of the cruel wrath: * thy prophetes that are in the, are swozne together to de noure soules, lyke as a roarynge lyon, that lyueth by hys praye. They receaue ryches & good, & make many wyddowes in the. Thy prestes breake my lawe, and desyle my Sanctuary. * They put no difference betwene the holy & vnholy, nether discern they betwene the cleane & vnclane: they turne theyr eyes from my Sabbothes, and I am vnhalowed amonge the. Thy rulers in the are lyke raryng wolues, to shed blood, & to destroye soules, for theyr owne countous lucre. * As for thy prophetes, they dawbe with vntempered clape, they se vanyties, & prophesye lyes vnto them, sayinge: the Lord God sayeth so, where as the Lord hath not spoken. The people in the lande vsed wycked extorcyon & robbery. They vered the poze and nedye and *oppressed the straunger agaynst ryght. And I sought in the lande for a man, that wolde make vpon the hedg, and set hym selfe in the

before me in the landes behalfe, that he not be corrupted: but I could fynde none. Therefore wyll I poure oute my cruell wrath vpon them, & burne them in fyre for my wrath: theyr owne wayes wyl I recõ-pence vpon theyr heades sayd þ Lord God.

The xxiii. Chapter.

With the interpretation, that is to saye of the Idolatrye of Ammon and Jerusalem, vnder the name of Oholibab and Oholibab. In the city of Samaria he sheweth that the destruction of Jerusalem is the tytle. The destruction of Jerusalem is prophesied. The aduocacy of both þ who are to be destroyed. The destruction.

Rhe worde of the Lord came vnto me sayinge: Thou sone of mā there were ii. women, þ had one mother: these (when they were yonge) began to playe þ harlot-ry in Egypte. There were theyr breaſtes sold, and þ pappes of theyr maydenheade in the Egyptians destrope. The eldest of them was called Oholibab, & her yonger syster Oholibab. These two were my wyues, & daughters. Theyr names were in Samaria, & þ was Oholibab: & Jerusalem she was Oholibab. As for Oholibab she began to go a whoyringe, when I had taken her to me. & she was set on fyre vpon her lo-uers: & as her neygdbours whyche had to do wth her, euen þ prynces & lordes þ were deckt in costly araye, saye yonge men, & ryders of horses.

Thus thou owe her whozdom, she cleued vnto all the yonge men of Assyria. Yee, she was mad vpon them, & defyled her selfe wth theyr Idoles. Neither crast she from þ synnecapen, that she vled wyth þ Egyptians: for in her youth they laye wth her, they had þ breaſtes of her maydenhead, & powerd theyr whozdom vpon her. Therefore, & I deliuered her into þ handes of her louers, my þ Assirians, who she so loued. These distorted her shame, toke her sonnes & daughters, & slew her wth the sword: In euell name was she of all þ people, & they punished her.

Her syster Oholibab sawe this, and deſpyed her selfe wyth inordinate loue, moze than she, and exceded her syster in whozdom she loued the Assirians (whyche also laye wth her) namely the prynces, & great lordes, that were clothed wth almaner of gorgeous ap-parell all luffe hoysmen & saye yonge persons.

Then I sawe, that they both were defyled a lyke. But she entreated styll in whozdom: for when she sawe men paynted vpon þ wall, & ymages of þ Caldes set forth wth feth-ters, & saye girdels about them, & good helmettes vpon theyr heades, lokyng al ly-ke to the Caldes (after þ maner of the Babilonians) & lordes in theyr owne lande where they were borne immediately, as sone as she saw them, she went in loue vpon them, & sent messengers for them into þ lande of þ Chaldees.

Nowe when the Babylonians came to her, they laye wth her & defyled her wth theyr whozdom, and so was she polluted wth them. And whan her lust was abated from them, & her whozdom and shame was discouered & sene: then my herte forsoke her, lyke as my herte was gone from her syster al so. Nevertheless, she vled her whozdom euer the longer the moze, and remembred þ dayes of her youth, wherein she had played þ harlot in the lande of Egypte: & she brente in luste vpon them, whose fleshe was lyke the fleshe of Asses, and theyr sede lyke the sede of horses. Thus thou haste renewed the fyl-thyness of thy yowthe, when thy louers bro-sed thy pappes, and married thy breaſtes in Egypte.

Therefore (O Oholibab) thus saye the Lord God. I wyll raple vpon thy louers (w whome thou hast satisfied thy luste) against the, and gather them together rounde about the: namely the Babylonians, and all the Chaldees, rulers, myghtie men & tyrantes, wth all the Assirians: al yonge & saye louers prynces and lordes, knyghtes, and gentyle men, whyche be all good hoysmen. These shall come vpon þ wth horses, charettes, & a great multitude of people: whyche shall be harnessed about þ on euery syde, wth best plates, byldes & helmettes. I wyll punyſhe the before them, yee, theyr selues shall punyſhe the accordyng to theyr owne iudge-mente. I wyll put my gelously vpon the, so that they shall deale cruelly wth the. They shall cutte of thy nose and thyne eares, and þ remnaunte shall fall thou owe the swerde.
 They shall carpe awaye thy sonnes and danghters, and the resydue shall be brente in the fyre. They shall strypppe þ out of thy clothes & cary thy costly Jewels away wth them.

Thus wyll I make an ende of thy fyl-thynesse and whozdom, whyche thou haste broughte out of the lande of Egypte: so that thou shalt turne thine eyes nomoze after the and caste thy mynde nomoze vpon Egypte.
 For thus saye the Lord, beholde I wyll de-lyuer the into the handes of them, whome þ hateste, yee, euen into the handes of them w whome thou haste fulfilled thy luste whych shall deale cruelly wth the.

And thy labour shall they take wth them, and leaue the naked and bare, & thus þ shame of thy fylth whozdom shall come to lyghte. All these thynges shall happen vnto the because of thy whozdom whych þ haste vled amonge þ Gentyles wth whole Idoles thou haste defyled thy selfe. Thou haste walked in þ waye of thy syster therefore wyl I geue her cuppe in thy hande.

Thus saye the Lord God: Thou shalt drynche of thy systers cuppe, howe depe and farre so euer it be to the botome. Thou shalt be

be laughed to scozme, and had as greatly in derpyson, as is possible. Thou shalt be full of drunkenness & sorowe, for the cuppe of thy spiter Samarya is a cuppe of destruction & wastynge: the same shalt thou drinke, and suppe it oute euen to the dregges. yee, thou shalt eate vp the broken peces of it, & so teare thynne owne breastes, for euen I haue spoken it sayth the Lord God.

I Therefore thus sayth the Lord God: For somoch as thou hast gotten me and caste me asyde beynde the, so beate nowe thynne owne fylthyneesse and whozdom. The Lord sayde mozeouer vnto me: Thou sonne of man wylt thou not repproue Dholah & Dholphab? Shew the thei? abhomyneacions namelie p thei? haue broken thei? wedlocke, & slayned their handes wryth bloude: yee, euen w thei? Idoles haue they commyted aduontry & offered them by p fyer thei? owne chyldren (to be deuoured) whome they had bozne vnto me. Yee, & this haue they done vnto me also: they haue defyled my Sanctuarie in p same daye, & haue vnhalowed my Sabboth for when they had slayne thei? chyldren for thei? Idoles, they came p same day into my Sanctuarie to defyle yt.

Lo, thus haue they done in my house: Besyde all thys, thou hast sente thy messyn- gers for men out of farre countrees: & when they came thou hast bathed & paynted thynne eyes w coloures, trymmed & set forth thy selfe of p beste fashyon: p satest vpo a good ly bed & a table spred before p where vpon p hast set myne incense and myne oyle.

* Eze. xxx. d

G Then was there great cheare with her to optayne peace, and though with those mē many men came, yet were ther also brought men of Saba from the wyldernes: whyche gaue them braceletes vpon thei? handes: & set glouyous crownes vpon thei? heades: & I sayde vnto her: that seying she was styph in age in her whozdomes: nowe shall her for nyneacions come to anende w her. And they wente into her as vnto a comē harlot. Euen so wente they, (I say) to Dholah & Dholphab those fylthy women. O all ye that loue vertue & ryghteousnes, iudge them, punishe them: as aduouterers & murderers ought to be iudged & punished. For they are breakers of wedlocke, & the blood is in thei? handes. Wherefor thus sayth p Lord God I wyl bypunge a great multitude of people vpo the & make the be scattered & spoyled: these shall stone them, & goze them w thei? swordes. They shall slape thei? sonnes & daughters, & burne vp thei? houses wryth fyre.

Eze. xvi. d

Thus wyl I destroe all such fylthy- nes out of the lande: that all women maye le arne, not to do after your vncleennes.

And so they shall slape thei? fylthyne- s vpo your owne selues, & ye shall be punished for p synnes p ye haue committed with your Idoles: & ye shall knowe p I am p Lord God.

The. xliiii. Chapter

The prouph the bypunge of Ierusalem by a parable of a seething pot. The parable of Ezechiel with layng head, which he after expounder.

In the nynthe yere, in the tenth moneth, p tenth day of p moneth came the word of p Lord vnto me say- inge. O thou sonne of ma wryt vp the name on this daye, yee, euen the hour of thys present daye: when p kyng of Babilon set hym selfe agaynst Ierusalem shewe p obstynat household: a p- rable and speake vnto them: Thus sayth p Lord God: Set p a potte, let it on & powre water into it: put all the peaces together in yt all p good peaces: p lopne and the quilder, & fyll yt wryth the beste bones. Take one of p beste shepe, & an heape of bones wrythall: let it boyle well, & let the bones sethe well there in. Wryth that sayde the Lord God on thys maner. * Wo be vnto the bloudy ctyte, of p potte, wher vpon the rustynes hangerth, and is not yet scoured awaye. Take oute the pe- ces that are in it, one after another: ther nee- de no lottes be caste therfore, for the bloude is yet in it. Euen a playne dyne stone hath she poured it, and not vpon the ground that it myght be couered with dust. And therfore haue I letten her powre her bloude vpon a playne dyne stony rocke, because it shuld not be hydd, and p I myghte bypunge my wroth- full indygnacyon, and vengeance vpon her.

Wherefore thus sayth p Lord God: O wo be vnto p bloud thypsty ctyte, for whom euen I my selfe wyl make a grate fyre and set moche woode, and kyndle the fyre and se- athe the flethe, and spye the potte, so that p verye bones shall be bynt: Mozeouer, I wyl set the potte amptye vpon the coles, so that hys metall shall be bynte: & molten also for heate, & the fylthyne of yt shall be molten in it, and p dross of it shall be consumed, & thou tokeste great payne thys to defyle thy selfe. And it wil not be purged from p excreading dross in it: but thozowe fyre shall the dross of yt be purged. In thy fylthyne euen in thy myscheuous dedes, p dost contynue & be cause thy fylthyneesse is abhomyneable, for I haue clenched the, but thou arte not clenched. Thou shalt not be purged from thynne vncleennes, tyll I haue powred my wrythfull indygnacyon vpon p. Euen p I p Lord haue so denyed. Yee, it is come therto all ready, p I wyl do it. I wyl not go backe, I wyl not spare, I wyl not be intreated: but accordyn- ge to thy wayes and ymagynacyons, p shalt be punished: sayth p Lord God. And p word of the

the Lord came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man beholde, I will take awaye p^r the eyes of thine eyes to a plage: yet shalt thou not mourne, nor wepe, nor water thy cheeke therfor: thou maist mourne by thy selfe alone, but vse no deadly lamentacion. Holde on thy haire, and put on thy shoes vpon thy feet, and put on thy face, and eat no mourners bread. So I spake vnto the people by times of mourning, & at euery my wele dyed: the nexte morowe, I dyd as I was com- manded, and p^r people sayde vnto me, wylt thou tell vs what thy signifieth towarde vs? I sayd: I doe it for oure sake, I answerd them the worde of the Lord came vnto me sayinge: Tel p^r house of Israel, thus sayth the Lord God: beholde, I will suspende my shewburde, euen p^r gloze of your powre, & shadow of your eyes, & the thyng ye lone: your sonnes and daughters whome ye haue shall fall thowowe the swerde.

Lyke as I haue done, so shal ye do also: ye shall not hyde your faces, ye shal eate no mourners bread: your bonnettes shal ye haue vpon your heades, & shoes vpon your feet. Ye shal neither mourne nor wepe, but in your synnes ye shal be sorrowfull, & one re- member with another. Thus Ezechiel is your shewburde. For lyke as ye haue done, so shal this churche ye shal do also: p^r ye may knowe p^r I am the Lord God. But beholde, O thou sonne of man: In the daye when I take from them theyr powre, theyr lyfe, & honour, & lust of theyr eyes, & burthen of theyr luyes: namelye theyr sonnes & daughters, shal not this be knowne: Then shal theyr one escape, & come vnto the, for to shewe. In that daye shal thy mouth be opened to hym, which is escaped, that thou mayest knowe and be nomore domine. Yee, and thou shalt see theyr shewburde p^r they may knowe that I am the Lord.

¶ The. xxv. Chapter.

The wordes of the Lord vpon the sonnes of Ammon, which were at the fall of Iherusalem. Agaynst Moab, & agaynst Thuma. Agaynst the Philistines.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face against the Ammonites, prophete vnto them, and saye vnto the Ammonites: thus sayth the Lord God: For somoch as thou hast ouer my shewburde, I, da, I trowe thou shalt be nowe desolate, yee, & house of Juda, I trowe they be nowe as they were prisoners: Beholde I will deli- uer the to the people of the east, & they maye see the in possession: these shall see theyr ca- ues and houses in the. They shall eate thy fruit, and dyncch vpon thy mylke. As for Ra-bath, I will make of yt a stall for camels & of Ammon a shepfold: and ye shal knowe that I am the Lord.

For thus sayth the Lord God: In so- moche as thou hast clapped wyth thyne ha- des, and stamped wyth thy fete, yee, reioyced in thyne herte ouer the lande of Israel with despyte: beholde, I will stretche out myne hand ouer the also, and deliuer p^r, to be spoy- led of the heathen, and rote the oute from a- monge the peole, and cause the to be destroy- ed oute of all landes, yee, I will make the to be laped wylt, that thou mayest knowe that I am the Lord.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: For so- moche as Moab & Seir do saye: As for the house of Juda, it is but lyke as all other cō- tryles be: Therfore beholde, I will open the syde of Moab, & take awaye theyr strength theyr ctytes, & cheste coastes of theyr lande, whych are p^r pleasures of p^r countre. As na- melye Bethielmoth, Baalmon, & Cariatha- im, these will I open vnto them of p^r east, & they maye fall vpon p^r Ammonites, & will ge- ne the in possession, so p^r the Ammonites shal nomore be had in remembrance among the heathen. Euen thus wyl I punish Moab also p^r they maye knowe, howe that I am p^r Lord.

Moreover, thus sayeth p^r Lord God. Because p^r Edom hath auenged and eased hym selfe vpon the house of Juda, and hath done great offence & auenged hym selfe vpon them therfore thus sayth p^r Lord: I will re- che out myne hand vpo Edom: & take away man & beaste out of yt. From Theman vnto Dedā wyl I make it desolate: they shall be slayne to the swerde. & thowowe my people of Israel wyl I auenge me agayne vpo E- dom, they shal handle hym accordyng to my wyath & indignacion, so p^r they shall knowe my vengeance sayth the Lord God.

Thus sayth p^r Lord God: For so moche as the Philistines haue done thys: namely taken vengeance wyth despytefull stoma- ches, and of an olde euil wyl set them selues to destroye. Therfore thus sayth the Lord God: Beholde, I will stretch out myne han- de ouer p^r Philistines, & destroye the destroy- er, and cause all the remnaunte of the see coa- ste, to perishe. A greate vengeance wyl I take vpon them, and puny the them cruelly: that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lord, whych haue auenged me of them.

hath spokē vpon Ierusalem: I, ha, nowe I trowe the portes of the people be broken: & she turned vnto me, for nowe that she is destroyed I shalbe fylled. Pee therfore, sayth þe Lozde God: Beholde O Tyze I wyll vpon the, I wyll bynge a great multytude of people agaynst the lyke as when the see aryleth wyth hys waues: These shall breake þe walles of Tyze, & cast downe her towers: I wyll scrape þe ground from her and make her a bare stone: yee, as the bypyng place, where the fyres hange vpon theyr nettes by þe see syde. Euen I haue spoken it, sayeth þe Lozde God. The Gētyles shal spoyle her: her daughters vpon the felde. Shal peryshe with the sword that they maye knowe how þe I am þe Lozde.

B For thus sayeth þe Lozde God: Behold I wyll byng hither Nabuchodonosor, which is the kyng of Babilon, and a kyng of kinges from the north vpor: Tyze: with hoyses charettes, hoysmen, and wyth a great multytude of people. Thy daughters that are in the lande shall he slape with the sword: but agaynst the, he shall make bulwozhes, and graue vpon dyches aboute the, and lye vpon his shyld agaynst the. Hys shynges and batell-rammes shal he prepare for thy walles, and wyth hys weapes bycke downe thy towers. The duste of hys hoyses shal couer the, they shalbe so manye: thy walles shal shake at þe noyse of the hoysmen, charettes, and wheles when he cometh to the portes, as men do into an open ctye. Whith þe hoyses of his horse fete, shall he treade downe all thy stretes.

C He shal slape þe people with the sword and breake downe the pilers of thy strength. They shal wast awaye thy ryches, & spoyle thy marchandise. Thy walles shal they breake downe, and destroye thy houses of pleasure. Thy stones thy tymbre and foundacions shal they caste in the water.

I wyll make a bare stone of the, yee, a bypyng place for nettes, & thou shalt neuer be buyded agayne: For euen I the Lozde haue spoken it, sayeth þe Lozde God: thus hath þe Lozde God spoken concernyng Tyze. The Iles shal be moued at the noyse of thy fall, and at the crye of the slayne, that shalbe murdered in the. All kynges of the see shal come downe from theyr seates regall: they shal laye a waye theyr robes, & put of theyr costly clothynge. Yee, wyth tremblynge shal they be clothed they shal lye vpon the ground: they shal be affrayed at thy soden fall, and be abashed at the.

¶ The. xxvii. Chapter.

¶ The prophet is moued to bewaile the desolation of Tyze. He setteth out the pynne of Tyze by the synge of marchauntes thereto.

he worde of the Lozde came vnto me sayynge: O thou some of mā, make a lamentable complainte vpon Tyze, and saye vpon Tyze, thou which art a port of the see, that occupyth wyth moch people, & many Iles: thus speaketh the Lozde God: O Tyze, thou hast sayde: what, I am a noble ctye thy borders are in þe myddest of the see & thy builders haue made þe meruelous goodly. All thy tables haue they made of cyprus trees of þe mounte Sany: From Lybanus, haue they taken Cedre trees, to make þe mallets: & the Okes of Basā to make þe rowers.

Thy bozdes haue they made of puryr, & of costlye wood out of the Ile of Cethym. Thy sayle was of dyuers coloures, smal nedell worcke out of þe lande of Egypte, to hange vpon thy maste: & thy bagginges of yelow like purple, out of þe ples of Elisab. They of Sydo & Arnad, were thy mariners, and þe wysest in Tyze were thy shippmasters. The eldest and wysest at Gebali were they, that mended & stopped thy shippes. All shippes of the see wyth theyr shipmen occupied theyr marchaundyses in the. The Perles, Libanus & phutens were in thyne hooste & helped to fyghte, these hanged vpon theyr shyldes & helmettes wyth the, these set forth thy bruyte.

They of Arnad were wyth thyne hoost rounde aboute thy walles: & the Pygmians were thy watchmen vpon thy towars, these hanged vpon theyr quyners round aboute thy walles, and made meruelous goodly. Charlys occupied wyth the in all maner of wares, in spluer, yron, tyne, and leade, and made thy market greafe. Januan, Tuball, and

I haue set the in thys dygnyte vpon the holy mount of God: there haste þe bene, & walked amonge the fayre glysterynge stones.

D From the tyme of thy creacyon þe haste bene ryght excellent, tyll wyckednes was found in the. * Because of thy great marchaundyse, thy herte is full of wyckednes, and thou haste offended, Therefore wyl I caste þe from the mounte of God (O thou couerynge Cherub) & destrope the amonge the glysterynge stones. Thy herte was proude in thy fayre beutye, and thozowe thy bewtye thou haste destroyed thy wyl dome: I wyl caste the do wne of the grounde, and that in the syght of kynge. Thou haste defyled thy santuarie, wyth the greates wyckednes of thy vnyghteous occupynge. I wyl bringe a fyre from the myddest of the, to consume the: and wyl make the to ashes, in the syght of al them þe loke vpon the. Al they þe haue bene acquainted wyth the amonge the heathen shal be abashed at the, seyng thou arte so cleane brought to naughte, & comest nomore vp.

I speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, O Sydon, I wyl vpon the, and get me honour in the: that it maye be knowne, how that I am the Lorde: when I punyssh her, & get me honour in her. For I wyl send pestilence and bloudshedynge into her streetes, so that those whych be slayne with the sword shal lye rounde about in the myddest of her: and they shal knowe that I am the Lorde. She shal nomore be a prickyng thorne, and an hurtynge brier vnto the house of Israel no: vnto them þe lye rounde aboute her, and hate her, & they shal knowe þe I am þe Lorde.

G Thus sayeth the Lorde God, whan I gather the household of Israel to gether agayne from the nacjons amonge whome they be scattered then shal I be sanctified in them in the syghte of the gentyles, and they shal dwell in the lande, that I gaue to my serua- Jacob. They shal dwell safely therein, buylde houses, and plante vyneyardes: yee, safe lye. * Shal they dwell therein: when I haue punysshed all those, that despyte them rounde aboute: and then shal they knowe, that I am the Lorde their God.

The xxix. Chapter.

I The propherye agaynst Pharaon. The propherye of the desolacion of Egypt, and the parkynge abowd of the Egyptians. The Lorde promyseth that he wyl restore Egypt agayne after .x. yeres. Egypte in the tyde of kynge Nabuchodonosor, by the laboure whych he toke agaynst Egypte.

In the tenth yere, vpon the twentieth dape of the tenth moneth, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: * O thou sonne of man (set nowe thy face agaynst Pharaon the kynge of Egypte) Prophecye agaynst hym, & agaynst the whole lande of Egypt. Speake and tell him, thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde: O Pharaon þe kynge of Egypt, I wyl vpon the thou grete dragon, that lvest in the waters: thou þe sayest: the water is myne. I haue made ye my selfe. I wyl put an hoke in thy chawen and hange all the fysh in thy waters vpon thy scales: after that I wyl drawe the oute of thy waters, yee: and al the fysh of thy waters that hange vpon thy scales. I wyl caste þe oute of the dyse lande wyth the fysh of thy waters so þe thou walte lye vpon the felde. Thou walte note be gathered no: taken vp: but walte be meat for the beastes of the feld, and for the foules of the ayre: þe all they whych dwell in Egypte, maye knowe, that I am þe Lorde: because þe hast bene a * staffe of reede to þe house of Israel. When they toke holde of the wyth they: hade thou brokest & pyckest them on euery syde: and yf they lea ned vpon the, thou brakest and hurtedest the raynes of they: backes. Therefore thus saith þe Lorde God: beholde, I wyl bringe a swe arde vpon the, and rote oute of the both ma & beaste. Yee, the lande of Egypte shal be desolate & waste & they shal knowe, þe I am þe Lorde. Because he sayd: the water is myne I my selfe haue made ye. Beholde therefore, I wyl vpon þe, and vpon thy waters: I wyl make the lande of Egypte waste and desolate and in abashmente, fro the tower of Syene vnto the borders of the Mozyans land: so that in fourty yeres there shal no foote of man walke there, nether foot of catell go there, nether shal it be inhabited. I wyl make the lande of Egypt, to be desolate: amonge other waste countrees, and her cytyes to lye vopde forty yeres, amonge other vopde cytyes. And I wyl scatre the Egyptians amonge the heathen and nacjons, and strowe them in the landes aboute.

Agayne, thus sayeth the Lorde God: * when the .xl. yeres are crypted, I wyl gather the Egyptians together agayne, oute of þe nacjons, amonge whom they were scattered, and wyl bringe the prysoners of Egypt agayne into land of Pathures they: owne natyue countrey. that they maye be there a lowly small kyngdome, yee, they shal be the smallest amonge other kyngdomes, lest they eralte them selues aboue the heathen: for I wyl so mynyshe them that they shal nomore rule the heathen. They shal nomore be an hope vnto the house of Israel, nether proude be the any more to wyckednes, to cause the turne backe, and to folow them: & they shal knowe that I am the Lorde God. In

The destruction of Egypte, and of his cypres is bewaileth.

In the worde of the Lorde came moze ouer vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, prophesy & spake: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Mourne woodeth this day, for f day is here, the day of the Lorde is come the darke daye of the heaven, the houre is at hande, f swearde cometh vpon Egypt. When f wounded men shall come in Egypte, when the people are taken awaye and when her foundacions are destroyed, f Mozyans lande shall be a fraied land, f Mozyans lande, Libea, and Lydia, all they comen people, and Chub, and all f that considerat vnto them, shall fall wyth the swearde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: The mayntey-ment of the land of Egypte shall fall, the pry-ce of her powre shall come downe euen vnto the tower of Syens shall they be slayne wyth the swearde, sayeth the Lorde God: amonge other desolate countreys they shall be made desolate, amonge other waste countreys they shall be wasted. And they shall knowe that I am the Lord, when I kydle the lande in Egypte, & when all her helpers are destroyed. At that tyme shall they messaunder from me in hyppes, to make the lande Mozyans afrayed, and sozowe shall come vpon them accordyng to the day of the Lorde, for doubteles yt shall come.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyl make an ende of the people of Egypte though f land of Nabuchodonoz the kynge of Babylion, & hys people wyth hym: per, & the countreys of the heathen shall be brought to destroye the lande. They shall drawe out they swerades vpon Egypte, & fyll the lande full of slayne men. I wyl drye vp they floudes of water, and sell the land into the handes of wycked people. The lād & all that is therin, I wyl destroye thozow f enemies. Euen I the Lorde hath sayd yt.

And thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyl destroye the Idoles, & bring f Images of Aoph to an ende. There shall nomoze be a pyynce of Egypte, & a fearfulness wyl I sende into f Egypte as lade. As for Patbu-res, I wyl make yt desolate, & kyndle a fyre in zoan the ctyte. No, I wyl punyssh, & pour my wrathful indignacion vpon Shyn which is the strength of Egypt. All the substance of Alexandrya wyl I destroye, and kyndle a fyre in Egypte.

Shyn shall be in great beaupnesse, Alexandrya shall be roted out, & Aoph shall all haue dayly sorowe. The best men of helyopolys & Bubasto shall slayne wyth the swearde, and carped awaye captiue. At Caphtis f dape shall be darcke, when I bryke there the septre of the lande of Egypte, and when the pompe of her powre shall haue an ende. A cloude shall couer her, & her daughters shall be led awaye into captiue. Thus wyl I punyssh the Egypt, that they may knowe how that I am the Lorde.

It happened in f eleuenth yere, vpon the seuenth dape of the fyfthe moneth, that f Lordes worde came vnto me sayinge: Be-holde, thou sonne of man, I wyl bryke the arme of Pharaos kynge of Egypt: and lo, yt shall not be bounde vp to be healed, nother shall any playster be layde vpon it, for to ease it, or to make yt so stronge, as to holde a swearde. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde I wyl vpon Pharaos f kyng of Egypte, and bryse hys stronge arme (yet is it but a broken one) & wyl smyte f sweard out of hys hande.

As for the Egypteyans, I wyl scatter them among f heathen, & strowe them in f landes aboute. Agayne I wyl strengthe the arme of the kynge of Babylion, & geue hym a sweard in his hand, but I wyl bryke Pha-raos arme so that he shall holde it vp befoze hym petrouly, lyke a wounded man.

Yet, I wyl stablysh the kyng of Baby-lons arme, & the armes of Pharaos shall fall downe: that yt may be knowne, f I am the Lorde which geue the kyng of Babylion swearde in hys hande, that he maye drawe it out vpon the lande of Egypte & that wyl I scatter the Egypteyans amonge the Gentyles and strowe them in the landes aboute they maye knowe, that I am the Lorde.

The xxxi. Chapter.

A comparison of the prophete of Pharaos with f pyes therpe of the heathen. He prophesyeth a tyme when they shalt be brought to them backe.

As lill. Mozyans

Moreouer, it happened in fclcutth ycare, the fyrst dape of the thyrde moneth, that the word of the Loz came vnto me sayinge: thou sonne of man, speake vnto Pharao the kynge of Egypte, & to all hys people. Whome art thou lyke in thy greatnes? Behold, I Amr was lyke a Cedre tree vpon the mount of Libanus wth sayre bzaunches: so thycke, & he gaue shadowes & shote out verye hye: hys toppes reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made hym greate, and the depe set hym vp an hye. Rounde about the rotes of him ranne there floudes of water, he sent out hys litle ryuers vnto all the trees of the feld. Therfore was he hyer then all the trees of the felde, and the rowe the myltitude of waters that he sente from hym, he obtayned many longe bzaunches. Al foules of the ayre made theyr nestes in hys bzaunches: vnder his bowes gendred all the beastes of the felde, and vnder his shadow dwelt al people. Sayre and bewtifull was he in his greatnes & in the length of his bzaunches, for hys roote stode belyde greate waters, no Cedre tree myghte hyde him. In the pleasaunte garden of God, there was no fyre tree lyke hys bzaunches, the playne trees were not lyke the bowes of hym.

All fyres in the garde of God myght not be compared vnto hym in hys bewty, so sayre and goodly had I made hym wth the myltitud of hys bzaunches. In so moch that all the trees in the pleasaunt garden of God had enuy at hym. Therfore thus sayeth the Lozde God: for so moche as he hath lyfte vp hym selfe to hye, and stretched his toppes into the cloudes, and sernge hys derte is proude in hys hyghnes. I wyll deliuer him into the handes of the myghtyeste amonge the heathen, whych shall roote him out. Accorpyng to hys wyckednesse wyll I cast hym awaye the enemye that destroye hym, & the myghty men of the heathen shall so scatere hym that hys bzaunches shall lye vpon all mountaynes and in all valeys: his bowes shall be broken downe to the ground thorow oute the lande. Then all the people of the lande shall go from his shadow, and forsake hym. Whiche he is fallen, all the foules of the ayre shall lye vpon hym, and all the wyld beastes of the felde shall go aboute among hys bzaunches so that from henceforth, no tree in the water shall attayne to hys hyghnesse nor reach his toppes vnto the cloudes, nether shall any tree of the water stande so hye, as he hath done. For vnto death shall they al be deliuered vnder the earth, and go downe to the graue lyke other men.

Moreouer thus sayeth the Lozde God: In the dape whiche he goeth downe to the graue I wyll cause a lamentacion to be made I wyll couer the depe vpon hym, I wyll stanch hys floudes, and the great waters shall be strayned. I shall cause Libanus to be fowre full for hys sake, and al the trees of the felde shall be smytten. I wyll make the heathen make at the sounde of hys fall, when I caste hym downe to hel, with them that descend into the pytte. All the trees of Eden, wth all the chosen & beste trees of Libanus, per, and all they that are planted vpon fy waters shall mourne wth hym also in the lower habitacions: for they shall go downe to hell wth hym, vnto them that be slayne wth the swerde, whiche dwelte afore vnder the shadowe of hys arme amonge the heathen. To whom shalte thou be lykened, that arte so glorious and greate, amonge the trees of Eden? Yet arte thou caste downe vnder the earth (among the trees of Eden) where thou muste lye amonge vncircumcysed, wth they that be slayne wth the swerde. Even thus is yt wth Pharao and all hys people, sayeth the Lozde God.

The prophet is commaunded to bewaile Pharao the kynge of Egypte. He propheseth that destruction shall come vnto Egypte thorow the handes of Babylon.

In the eleuenth ycare, & first dape of the twelue moneth, the word of the Lozde came vnto me sayinge: thou sonne of man, take vp a lamentacion vpon Pharao the kynge of Egypte & saye vnto hym: thou art reputed as a lyon of heathen, & as a wolfe in the see: Thou callest thy waters aboute the, thou troublest the waters wth thy fete and stampst in their floudes. Thus sayeth the Lozde God: * I wyll sprede my net ouer hym, namely, a great myltitude of people these shall dyscuss hym into my ycarne, for I wyll caste the vpon the land: and let the lye vpon the felde, that all the foules of the ayre maye lye vpon the. I wyll geue all the beastes of the felde prouche of the. Thy fleshe wyll I eat vpon the hylls, and fylle the valayes wth thy hyghnesse. I wyll water the lande wth the aboundance of thy bloude euent to mountaynes, and the ryuers shall be full of thy bloud. When thou art put out, I wyll couer heauen, and make hys starres dymme. * I wyll sprede a cloude ouer the sunne, & the mone shall not geue her lyght. Al the hyghes of heauen wyll I put out ouer the, & byngne darchenes vpon thy lande, sayeth the Lozde God. I wyll trouble the hertes of many people, when I byngne thy destruction amonge the heathen & countrees, whom I knowe not. Per. I wyll make many people to their hyges so afrayd thorow the, & they shall heare that stande vp, when I make my swerde at their faces. Wodenly shall they be astoynd, euery man in hym selfe, at the dape of thy fall.

The prophete.

B Agayne, yf the watch mā se þ ſweard come, and ſhewe it not wpyth the trompet, ſo that the people is not warned: yf þ ſwearde come then, and take any man from amonge them: the ſame ſhalbe taken awaye in hys owne ſynne, but hys bloude wyll I requyre of the watchmans hande.

* Ezech. iii. c

* And nowe (O thou ſonne of mā) I haue made the a watchman vnto the houſe of Iſrael: that where as thou heareſt any thyng oute of my mouth, thou mayeſt warne them on my behalfe. Yf I ſaye vnto the wycked thou wycked, thou ſhalte ſurely dye, & thou geueſt hym not warnyng, that he maye beware of hys vngodlye waye: then ſhall the wycked dye in his owne ſynne, but his bloud wyll I requyre of thy hande. Neuertheles, yf thou warne the wycked of hys waye, to turne fro it, where as he yet wyll not be turned from it, then ſhall he dye becauſe of hys ſynne, but thou haſt deliuered thy ſoule.

C Therfore (O thou ſonne of man) ſpeake vnto þ houſe of Iſrael. Ye, ſay thus: Our of fences and ſynnes lye vpon vs, & we be corrupted in them, howe ſhuld we then be reſtored vnto lyfe? Tell them: * As truly as I lyue ſayeth the Lorde God, I haue no pleaſure in the death of the wycked, but moche rather that the wycked turne fro his way, and lyue. Turne you, turne you from youre vngodly wayes: O ye of the houſe of Iſrael. Oh wherefore wyll ye dye?

* Thou ſonne of man, tell the chyldren of thy people: * The ryghteouſnes of þ ryghteous ſhall not ſaue hym, whan ſoever he turneth awaye unfaythfully. Agayne, the wyckednes of the wycked ſhall not hurte hym, whan ſoever he conuerteth from his vngodlyneſſe.

* Ezech. xiii. a

And the ryghteouſneſſe of the ryghteous ſhall not ſaue hys lyfe, whan ſoever he ſynneth. If I ſaye vnto the ryghteous, that he ſhall ſurely lyue, and ſo he truſt to hys owne ryghteouſneſſe, and do ſynne, then ſhall hys ryghteouſneſſe be nomore thought vpon, but in the wyckedneſſe that he hath done he ſhall dye. * Agayne, yf I ſaye vnto the wycked: thou ſhalte ſurely dye: and ſo he turne from hys ſynnes, and do the thyng that is lawfull and ryght: In ſo much that the ſame wycked man gructh þ pledge agayne, reſtoreth that he had taken awaye by robbery, walketh in the commaundementes of lyfe, and doth no wronge. Then ſhal he ſurely lyue, & not dye. Yee, the ſynnes that he hath done, ſhal neuer be thought vpon. For in ſo moche as he doth nowe the thyng that is lawfull and ryght, he ſhal lyue. And yet the chyldren of thy people ſaye: Cuſh, the waye of the Lorde is not right, but they lye, wher as theiſe owne way is rather vngodly.

* Ezech. ix. a
* Hier. i. viii. a

Wher the righteous turneth fro hys ryghtetrouſnes and doth the thyng that is wycked he ſhall dye therfore. But yf þ wycked turne from hys wyckedneſſe, doyng the thyng that is lawfull & ryght, he ſhal lyue therfore. Yet ye ſaye: * the waye of the Lorde is not equal: O ye houſe of Iſrael: I wyll iudge every one of you after hys wayes.

In the xii. yere, the v. day of þ tenth moneth of oure captiuite, it happened, that one which was fled out of Jeruſale, came vnto me, and ſayd: the cytie is deſtroyed. Nowe þ hande of the Lorde had bene vpon me the enyngne afore thys man (whych was eſcaped) came vnto me, and had opened my mouth, vntyll the morninge that he came to me: yee, he opened my mouth, ſo that I was nomore domine. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, & ſayd: Thou ſonne of man, theſe ſhall dwell in the waſted lande of Iſrael, ſaye: Abraham was but one man, and he had þ lade in poſſeſſion: nowe are we many & the lande is geuen vs to poſſeſſe alſo. And therfore tel them: Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: * In the bloude haue ye eaten, your eyes haue ye lyft vp to Idoles, & and haue ſhed bloude: ſhal ye then haue the lande in poſſeſſion?

Ye leane vpon youre ſwearde, ye worke abhominacions, every one deſileth his neighbours wyfe: & ſhal ye then poſſeſſe the lande? Saye thou theſe wordes vnto them. Thus ſayeth the Lorde God. As truly as I lyue al ye that dwel in this wilderness, ſhalbe ſlayne wpyth the ſwearde: what ſoever is vpon the felde. I wyll geue vnto the beaſtes to be deuoured: thoſe that be in ſtronger holdes & denes, ſhall dye of the peſtilence. For I wyll make the lande ſo deſolate and waſte, and þ pompe of her ſtrength ſhall come to an ende. The mountaynes of Iſrael ſhalbe ſo waſte that no man ſhall trauple therby.

* Then ſhall they learne to knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I make the land waſte and deſolate becauſe of all they abhominacions, that they haue wrought. And thou ſonne of man, the chyldren of the people that talke of the, by the walles and in the doores of they houſes, ſayinge one to another: Come, let vs heare what word is gode forth from þ Lorde. Theſe come vnto the, after maner of a greates people: yee, as who ſayeth they were my people, they lye downe before the, and heare thy wordes, but they do not thereafter: for in they mouthes they make a liſte of them, & they berre goyth after they owne conuetous lucre. And as a balet that hath a ſweete tune, and is pleaſant to ſyng, ſo ſhalt thou be vnto them: thy wordes ſhall they heare, but they wyll not do thereafter. Whan this cometh to paſſe (for lo: it cometh in dede) then ſhal they knowe, & theye hath bene a prophete amonge them.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

¶ David Bishops and curates that despise the flock of Christ and like they; owne: The Lord sayeth that I will visite his dispersed flocke, and gather them to him. He rejoyceth the malice of certain of the flocke that promysed the true shepherde Christ, and with him will.

And the worde of the Lord came unto me sayenge: Thou sonne of man, prophecie agaynst the shepherdes of Israel, prophecie and speake vnto them. Thus sayeth the Lord God. * Woe be vnto the shepherdes of Israel, that fede them selues. Shulde not the shepherdes fede the flockes?

¶ Ye haue eaten vp the fat, ye haue clothed your selfe with the woll: ye best fed haue ye slayne, in the flocke haue ye not noyshed. The weake haue ye not holden vp: the sicke haue ye not healed: the broken haue ye not bounde together, the out castes haue ye not brought agayne: the losse haue ye not soughte, but ye haue sold them cruelly haue ye ruled the. Thus saith the Lord God. Behold, I will search here & there without a shep-herde, all the beastes of the felde deuoure them, and they go astraye.

¶ My shepe go wandryng vpon all mountynes and vpon euery hye hill: yee, they be scattered abroade in all felde, and there is no man that careth for the, or seeketh after the.
¶ Therefore, O ye shepherdes, heare the worde of the Lord. Thus sayeth the Lord God: As much as I lye, for so much as my shepe are scattered, and deuoured of all the wyld beastes of the felde, haung no shepherde: and know that my shepherdes take no regarde of my shepe, but fede them selues onely and not my shepe. Therefore, heare the worde of the Lord (O ye shepherdes) Thus sayth the Lord God: Beholde, I my selfe will vpon the shepherdes: and requyre my shepe frome their handes, and make them cease from fe-ding of my shepe: yee, the shepherdes shall be as my shepe nomore. For I will deliuer my shepe out of their mouthes, so that they shall not deuoure them after this: For thus saith the Lord God: * Beholde, I will take to my shepe my selfe, & seke them. Lyke as a shepherde amonge the flocke seeketh after the shepe that are scattered abroade, eue so will I seke after my shepe, & gather them together out of all places, where they haue ben scattered in the cloudy and darke daye. I will bring them out from al people, and gather them together out of all landes. I will bring them into theyr owne lande, and fede them vpon the mountaynes of Israel, by the criers and in all the places of the countrey. I will fede them in the good pastures and vpon the mountaynes of Israel shall they foldes be. There shall they lye in a good foide, and I will pasture them: euen vpon the mountaynes of Israel.

I will fede my shepe my selfe, and bringe them to their rest, sayeth the Lord God.

* Such as be losse, will I seke: suche as go astraye: will I bringe agayne, suche as be wounded: will I binde vp: such as be weake, will I make stronge, such as be fat & stronge, those will I roote out, and fede them with the thinge that is lawfull. And as for you (O my shepe) sayeth the Lord God. * I will put a difference amonge the shepe, amonge the wethers & the goates. Was it not ynough for you, to eat vp the good pasture, but ye muste treade downe the residue of your pasture w your fete also? Was it not ynough for you to drynke cleare water, but ye must trouble the residue also with your fete?

¶ Thus my shepe must be sayne to eat the thyng, that ye haue troden downe w your fete, and to drynke it, that ye with your fete haue defyled. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God vnto them: Behold, I will sener the fat shepe from the leane: for so moche as ye haue shot the weake shepe vpon the sydes & shoulders, and runne vpon them with your hor-nes, so longe tyll ye haue utterly scattered the abroade. I will helpe my shepe, so that they shall nomore be spoyled: yee, I will dyscerne one shepe from another. I will raple vp vnto them one onely shepherde, euen my seruaunte * David, he shall & fede them and be halbe their shepherde. I the Lord will be their God, and my seruaunte * David shall be theyr pyncer. Euen I the Lord haue spoken it.

¶ Moreover, I will make a coneuant of peace with them and dyue all euell beastes out of the lande: so that they may dwell safely in the wyldernes, and slepe in the woddes. Good fortune & prosperye will I geue them, and vnto all that be rounde about my hill. * A prosperous shouer & rayne will I sende them in due season, that the trees in the wodde maye bringe forth theyr frutes and the grounde her increafe. They shall be safe in their lande, and shall knowe, that I am the Lord, whyche haue broken their yoke and deliuered them out of the handes of those, & deliue them in subiection.

¶ They shall nomore be spoyled of the beastes, nor deuoured with the beastes of the lande: but safely shall they dwell, and no man shall fraye them. I will set vp an excellent plante for them, so that they shall suffre no more hunger in the lande, neyther beate the reproche of the heathen any more. Thus shall they understadde, & I the Lord the God am with them, and that they (eue the house of Israel) are my people sayeth the Lord God.
¶ Ye men are my flock: ye are the shepe of my pasture: and I am your God, sayeth the Lord God.

Mezouer, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face towardes þe mount * Sepi, prophete vpon it, and save vnto it. Thus sayeth þe Lord God: Beholde (O thou mount Sepi) I wyl vpon the. I wyl reach oute myne hande ouer the, þee, waste and desolate wyl I make the.

Thy cyties wyl I breake downe, and thou shalt lye voyde: that thou mayest knowe, howe that I am the Lord. * For so much as thou bearest an olde enemie agaynst þe children of Israel, & hast drawen the chyldren of Israel vpon the swerde, what tyme as they were troubled and punished for their synne: Therfore, as truly as I lye, sayeth þe Lord God: I wyl prepare the vnto bloude, þee, bloude shall folowe vpon the: * Sepyng thou lapest wayte for bloude, therfore shall bloude persecute the. Thus wyl I make the mount Sepi desolate and wast, and bringe to passe that there shall no man go thither, nor come from thence. Þys mountaynes wyl I fyl wth þys slayne men: thy hylls, valleyes, & ryuers, shall lye full of them, that are slayne wth the swerde. I wyl make the a perpetuall wyldernesse, so that thy cyties shal not re turne to their former estate, & þe may know, howe that I am the Lord.

And because thou hast sayde: what, bothe these nations and both these landes must be myne, & I wyl haue the in possession: where as the Lord was there. Therfore, thus sayeth the Lord God: as truly as I lye, I wyl handle the accordyng to thy wrath and gelousy lye as thou hast dealt cruelly with them that I maye be knowne amonge them, howe I haue punished the. Þee, & that thou also mayest be sure, þe the Lord haue herde all thy despytfull wordes, whych thou hast spoken agaynst the mountaynes of Israel, sayenge: Lo, they are made wast, and geuen vs to deuoure. Thus wth your mouthes þe haue made your boast agaynst me, þee, and multiplied your proude wordes agaynst me, whych I haue herd altogether. Ther vnto, thus sayeth the Lord God: to the lope of all the worlde wyl I make þe wast. * And lyke as thou (O mount Sepi) wast glad, because the heritage of the house of Israel was destroyed: euen so wyl I do vnto the also, that thou shold whole Edom shalbe destroyed, and knowe, that I am the Lord.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

The promise of the deliuerance of the Gentyls vnto Israel. The benediction done vnto þe Iherusalem: that they be ascribed to the mercie of God, not vnto theyr holynesse: for God clemencyt our forges that we maye walke in his commandmentes.

Thou sonne of man, prophete vnto the mountaynes of Israel, and speake: * Heare the worde of the Lord, O ye mostaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord God: Because your enemy hath sayde vnto you: I ha, the þye euerslastyng places are now become oures, prophete therfore, and speake: thus sayeth the Lord God. Weynge þe be wasted and trode downe on euery hyde and become a possession vnto the residue of the Gentyls: whych haue brought you into mens monthes and vnto an euell name amonge the people. Therfore, heare the word of the Lord God: O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord God vnto the mountaynes and hylls, valleyes and dales, to the voyde wyldernesse & desolate cyties, whych are spoyled, & had in derision on euery hyde, amonge the residue of the heathen. Þee, euen thus sayeth the Lord God. In the tyme of my gelousy haue I taken a deuyse, & gapnst the residue of the Gentyls, & agaynst al * Edom: which haue taken in my lade vnto them selues for a possession: which also re- topped frō their whole herte wth a despyt- full stomache, to wast it, and to spole it.

Prophete therfore vpon the lande of Israel, speake vnto the mountaynes & hylls to valleyes and dales, thus sayeth þe Lord God: Beholde, thys haue I deuyse in my gelousy and terrible wrath. For so moche as þe haue suffred reposte of the heathen, therfore thus sayeth the Lord God. I haue sworne that the Gentyls which lye aboute you, shal beare their confusyon them selues. And for you (O mountaynes of Israel) þe shal hote out your bzaunches, and bringe forth your frute to my people of Israel, for it is hard by that it wyl come. Behold, I come vnto you, and vnto you wyl I turne me, that þe maye be tyllid and sowne.

I wyl sende you moche people, whych shal be of all the house of Israel, the cyties shalbe inhabited, & the decayed places shal be repayed agayne, I wyl proude you vnto moche people and catell, which shal increas and bringe frute: I wyl restore you also to your olde estate & shewe you more kindnes the euer þe had before: wherby þe shal know that I am the Lord: Þee, people wyl I lide vnto you (O my folke of Israel) whych shal haue the in possession, and thou shalt be thys enheritaunce, so that thou shalt nomore be wythout them. Agayne thus sayeth þe Lord God: For so moche as they saye vnto you, thou arte an eater vp of men, and a waster of thy people: therfore thou shalt eate no mo men, neþer destroy thy people any more sayeth the Lord God. And I wyl not suffer the: for to heare thine owne confusyon, amonge the Gentyls frō hence forth. Thou shalt not beare the reposte of the nations, nor cast out cast out thine owne people any more, sayeth the Lord God.

Wherefore the worde of the Lord came unto me, sayinge: O thou sonne of mā, whē the house of Israel dwelt vpon theyr owne grounde, they despyled them selues with theyr wayes and ymaginations: so þ in my sight theyr waye was lyke the vncleanness of a filthy woman. Wherefore, I poured my wrathfull dyspleasure vpon them, because of the bloud that they had shed in the land, & because of theyr Idoles, wherewith they had despyled them selues. I scatred them also amonge the heathen, so that they were scattered about in the landes. Accordynge to theyr wayes & after theyr owne inuencions, so I punished them.

Nowe when they were gone vnto the heathen, & come in amonge them, they dishonoured my holy name: so that it was sayde of them. Are these the people of God, & must ye not of their owne lande? The spared I my holy name, which þ house of Israel had dishonoured amonge the Gentyls, to whom they came. Therefore tell the house of Israel:

Thus sayeth þ Lord God: I do not thys for your sakes (O house of Israel) but for my holy names sake, which ye dishonoured amonge the heathen, when ye came to them. Therefore, I will halowe my great name agayne amonge the Gentyls, is euell spoken of: & your selues haue dishonoured it amonge them. And the Gentyls shall knowe that I am the Lord, when I am honoured in you before theyr eyes, sayeth the Lord God.

As for you, I wyl take you from amonge the heathen, and gather you together out of all countreys, and bringe you agayne into your owne lande. * The wyl I poure cleane water vpon you, and ye shall be cleane: pee, from all your vncleanness and from al your Idols shall I cleanse you. A newe herte also I geue you, & a newe sprete wyl I put into you. As for that stony herte, I wyl take it out of your body, & geue you a fleshy hert.
I wyl geue my sprete amonge you: & cause you to walke in my commaundementes to kepe my lawes, and to fulfill them.

And so ye shall dwell in the lande, that I sware to your forefathers, and ye shall be my people, and I wyl be your God. I wyl helpe you out of all your vncleannes. I wyl call for the name, and wyl encrease it, & let you haue abundance. I wyl multiplie the frutes of the land, and the increase of the felde for you, so that ye shall heare nomore reproche of hunger amonge the heathen. Then shall ye remember your owne wicked wayes, & your yma-ginacions, which were not good: so that ye shall thinke that ye were worthy to be destroyed: for your synnes and abhominacions.

But I wyl not do thys for your sakes, & (sayeth the Lord God) be ye sure of it. Therefore, O ye house of Israel, be ashamed of your synnes. Wherefore, thus sayeth þ Lord God: What tyme as I shall cleanse you from all your offences, then wyl I make the cy-ties to be occupied agayne, and wyl repayre the places that be decayed. The desolate land shall be buylded agayne, whiche afore tyme laye waste in the sight of all them that went by. Then shall it be sayde: thys waste lande is become lyke a garden of pleasure, and the wopde, desolate and broken downe cities are nowe stronge, and defenced agayne. Then þ residue of the heathen that lye rounde about you, shall knowe that I am þ Lord, whiche repayre þ that was broke downe, and plāte agayne, that þ was made waste. Ene I the Lord haue spoken it, and wyl do it in dede.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: I wyl yet once be founde againe of the house of Israel, and do thys for them: * I shall increase them as a flocke of mē. Like as the holy flocke and the flocke of Ierusalem are in þ hye solempne feastes: so shall also the wylde wasted cyties be fylled with flockes of men: and they shall knowe that I am the Lord.

¶ The xxxvii. Chapter.

¶ The prophete sheweth the bringing agayne of the people deprave in captivite. He sheweth the vision of the ten tribes with the two.

The hande of the Lord came vnto I me & carped me oute in the sprete of the Lord, & let me downe in a playne feld that lay ful of bones, & he led me rounde about by them: and beholde the bones that laye vpon þ feld, were very many, and marvelous dyde also.
Then sayd he vnto me. Thou sonne of man: thynkest thou these bones may lyue againe?
I answered O Lord God, thou knowest.
And he sayde vnto me. Prophecie thou vpon these bones: and speake vnto them. Pee dyde bones, heare the worde of þ Lord. Thus sayeth the Lord God vnto these bones: Behold, I wyl put bryth vnto you, that ye may lyue: I wyl geue you synowes, and make fleshe growe vpon you, and couer you ouer with skynne: and so geue you * bryth, that ye may lyue, and knowe that I am the Lord.

So I prophecyed, as he had commaunded me. And as I was prophecyng, there came a noyse & a great mocyon, so that the bones raue euery one to another. Nowe whē I had looked, beholde, they had synowes, and fleshe growe vpon them: and aboue they were co-uered with skynne, but there was no bryth in them. Then sayde he vnto me. Thou sonne of man prophecie thou towarde the wynde: prophecie: and speake to the wynde. Thus sayeth

The prophecye.

sayeth the Lorde God. Come (O thou ayze) from the foure wyndes, & blowe vpon these flayne that they may be restored to lyfe. So I prophesied as he had commaunded me: then came the bryth into them, and they receyued lyfe, and stode vp vpon their fete, a marvellous great fozte.

Moreouer, he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of mā, these bones are the whole house of Israel. Beholde, they saye: Oure bones dyed vp, oure hope is gone, we are clene cut of.

¶ Therefore prophecye thou, and speake vnto them: thus sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, I wyll open poure graues (O my people) & take you out of poure sepulchres, and brynge you into the land of Israel agayne. So shal ye knowe that I am the Lorde, when I open your graues and brynge you out of them.

My sprete also wyll I put in you, & ye shall lyue: I wyll set you agayne in poure owne lande, and ye shall knowe, & I am the Lorde whych haue sayd it, and fulfilled it in dede.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayenge: thou sonne of man, take a stycke & wyte vpo it. Vnto Iuda and to the chyldre of Israel hys companions. Then take another stycke, and wyte vpo it: Vnto Ioseph the stocke of Ephraim, and to all the household of Israel his companions. And then take both these together in thyne hande, so shal there be one stycke therof. Nowe ys the chyldren of the people saye vnto the, wyte thou not shewe vs, what thou meaneest by these? Then grue them thys aunswere: thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde, * I wyl take the stocke of Ioseph, whych is in the hāde of Ephraim and of the tribes of Israel hys fellows, and wyl put them to the stocke of Iuda, and make them one stocke, and they shall be one in my hāde. And I two styckes were vpon thou wytest, shalt thou haue in thyne hande, that they maye se, and shalt saye vnto them.

¶ Thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde, I wyll take awaye the chyldren of Israel from amonge the heathen, vnto whome they be gone, and wyll gather them together on euery syde, and brynge them agayne into theyr owne lande: yee, I wyll make one people of them in the lande, vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and they al shal haue but one kyng. They shal nomore be two peoples fro hence forth, neyther be deuyd into two kyngdomes: they shall also despyle the selues nomore wth their abhominacions, Idoles, and all their wycked doynges. I wyll helpe the out of all theyr dwellynge places, wherein they haue synned: and wyll so cleense them, that they shalbe my people, and I their God.

¶ David my seruaunt shalbe their kyng, & they all shal haue one shepberde onely. They shall walke in my lawes, & my commaunde-

mentes that they both kepe and fulfyl. They shal dwel in the lande, that I gaue vnto Iacob my seruaunt, where as your fathers also haue dwelte: Yee, euē in the same lande shal they, theyr chyldren, and theyr chylders chyldren dwel for euermore, and my seruaunt David shalbe their euertastyng pynce.

Moreouer, I wyll make a bonde of peace wth them, whych shalbe vnto the an euertastyng coneuant. I wyll sette them also, and multiplye them, my Sactuary wyl I set amonge them for euermore. * My dwellynge shalbe wth them: yee, I wyllbe theyr God, and they shalbe my people. Thus the heathen also shal knowe, that I the Lorde am the holy maker of Israel, when my Sactuary shalbe amonge them for euermore.

The xxviii. Chapter.

The prophecye that Gog and Magog shal come to an appoynted heate into the lande of promys. Their rest, the rebreth that the comynge of Gog was betwixt prophecies of the prophetes. The destruction of syn.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of mā, turne thy face toward Gog the lande of Magog which is the chefe pynce at Meslech and Tubal: prophecye agaynst hym, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * O Gog thou chefe pynce of Meslech and Tubal: beholde, I wyll vpon the, and wyll turne the aboute and put a byt in thy chawes: I wyll brynge the forth and all thy host, both horle and horsemen, whych be al weapened of the best fallow: a grete people, that handle altogether speares, shildes, and sweardes: the Perses, Morians and wth them the Libians, whych all beare shildes and helmettes: Gomer and al hys hostes: the house of Thegoma out of the north quarters, and al hys hostes, yee, and much people wth the.

¶ Therefore prepare the, let thy selfe in aray wth al thy people, that are come vnto the by heapes, & be thou their defence. After many dayes thou shalt be visyted, and in the latter peares thou shalt come into the lande that hath bene destroyed wth the swearde, & nowe is replenyshed agayne wth dyuers people vpo the moiraynes of Israel, whych haue longe lyeen waste: Yee, they be broughe out of the nations, and dwell all safe. Thou shalt come vp like a stormy wyther, to couer the lāde, and as it were a darke cloude, thou wylt al thyne hostes, & a great multitude of people wth the.

Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde God: At the same tyme shal many thynges come into thy mynde, so that thou shalt ymagyn myschefe, and saye: I wyll vp to yonder playne lande, seynge theyr syt at ease, & dwell safely for they dwell all wythoute any walles they haue nether barres nor doores to spople them, to robbe the, to lay hand vpon their so well inhabited wildernesses: agaynst that people, that is gathered together fro amonge the heathen, whych haue godde catell & good and dwell in the myddest of the lande. Then shall Gaba, and Dedan, and the marchaun-tes of Charis wyth all they: wyth theys say unto the: Arte thou come to robbe? haue they gathered the people together, because they wyll spople: to take syluer and gold: to cure away catell and good, and to haue a great praye?

¶ Therefore, O thou sonne of mā, thou shalt prophete, and saye vnto Gog: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: In þ daye thou shalt knowe that my people of Israel dweller safe: and shalte come from thy place out of the North part: thou & much people wyth the, whych are vpon horses, where of there is a greate multitude & an innumerable sorte. Yee, thou shalte come vpon my people of Israel, as a cloud to couer the lande. This shall come to passe in the latter dayes: I wyll byynge the vnto my lande, & the heathen may knowe me, whā I get me honour vpo the (O Gog) vnto theys eyes.

¶ Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Thou arte of whom I haue spokē afore tyme by my prophetes of Israel, whych prophesied in those dayes and yeres, that I wyll byynge the vpo the. At the same time, when Gog cometh vpon into the lande of Israel (sayeth the Lorde God) shall my indignation go forth in my wrath. For in my gelouyng hate displeasure I haue deuised * that there shall be a great trouble in the lāde of Israel at that tyme. The very fyshes in the see shall be in the ayre, the beastes of the feild, and all the men that are vpon the earth, shall tremble for feare of me.

¶ The bylles also shall be turned vpon syde by syde, the stayres of stone shall fall, and all walles shall synke to the grounde. I wyll call by a swerde vpon them in all my mountayn sayeth the Lorde God: so that euery mā shall be vpon an other. Wyth pestilence and bloude wyll I punyssh hym: for my sweate and hayle stones, fyre and byrmstone wyll I cause to rayne vpon hym and all his people, yee, and vpon all that greates people that is wyth hym. Thus wyll I be magnified, honoured, & knowen amonge the heathen: that they may be sure, howe that I am the Lorde.

¶ The xxxix. Chapter.

The vision the hierarch of Gog and Magog. The house of Gog and of his host. He propheseth that they and his company shall be deuoured of hydes and bones, wherby the house of Israel is warned: That they shal be kept from captiuitie is promysed, ¶ Therefore, O thou sonne of mā, prophete: I speake agaynst Gog, and speake. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, * O Gog: thou chete pyunce at Mesech and Tu-ball, I wyll vpon the, and punyssh the wyth fyre places, and lead the from the north par-tes, and byynge the vpon to the mountaynes of Israel, As for thy bowe, I wyll smyte it out of thy left hande, and cast thyne arrowes out of thy right hande. Thou & all thyne heape, and all the people that is wyth the, must fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Then wyll I geue the vnto foules and wyld beasts of the felde, to be deuoured: there must thou lye vpon the felde: for euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, sayeth the Lorde God.

¶ Into Magog, and amonge those that syt so carelesse in the fles: wyll I sende a fyre, & they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. I wyll make also the name of my holynesse to be knowen amonge my people of Israel: and I wyll not let my holy name be euell spoken of any more: but the very heathen also shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, the holy one of Israel: Beholde, it cometh, and shall be fulfilled in dede, sayeth the Lorde God. Thus is the daye wherof I haue spokē. They that dwell in the cyties of Israel, shall go forth and set fyre vpon the weapes, and burne the: spy-des and speares, bowes and arrowes, bylles & clubbes: seuen yeres shall they be burnyng therof, so þ they shall els byynge no styckes fro þ felde, nether haue nede to hewe downe any oute of the wodde. For they shall haue weapens ynough to burne. They shall robbe those that robbed the, & spole those þ spoy-led them sayeth the Lorde God. At the same tyme wyll I geue vnto Gog, a place to be buryed in Israel, euen the valleye, where tho-rowe men go from the east to the see ward.
Those þ traunyle therby, shall stoppe their noles for stench. There shall Gog and all his people be buryed: and it shall be called the valley of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes longe shall the house of Israel be buryng of them that they maye cleanse the lande. Yee, all the people of the lande shall burye them, & it shall be a glorious daye, when I get me þ honoure, sayeth the Lorde God. They shall ordayne men also to be deed buryers, euer goyng thowowe the lande, and appoynte them certayne places to burye those in, whych re-mayne vpon the felde, that the lande may be cleansed. From ende to ende shall they seke, & that seuen monethes longe. Now those þ go thowowe the lāde, where they se a mā bone, they shall set vp a toke by it, tyl the deed buryers haue buried it also, in the valley of the people of Gog. And þ name of the cytie shall be called, Hamonah (that is a multitude.) Thus shall they make the lande cleane.

¶ And thou sonne of mā: thus sayeth the Lorde

The prophete.

Lorde God, Speake vnto all the foules and enery byrde, yee, and to all the wyld beastes of the feld, heape you together and come, gather you rounde aboute vpon my slaughter, for I haue slayne for you: eue a greete slaughter vpo the mountaynes of Israel, eate flesh and drynke bloude. Yee shall eate the flesh of the worthyes, and drynke the bloude of the princes of the lande: of the wetters, of the lābes, of the goates, and of the oren that be all slayne at Basan Eate the fat pour belly ful, and drynke bloude, till ye be dronken of the slaughter, whych I haue slayne vnto you.

Till you at my table wyth horses & stronge hoisemen, wyth captaynes and me of warre, sayeth the Lorde God.

I will bypunge my gloze also amonge the Gentyls, that al the heathen may se my iudgement, that I haue kept, & my hāde whych I haue layed vpo them: that the house of Israel maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde their God fro that daye forth. And the heathen shall knowe, that where as, the house of Israel were ledde into captiuitie: it was for theyr wyckednes sake, because they offended me.

For the whych cause I hpd my face from them and deliuered them into the handes of theyr enemyes, that they myght all be slaine wyth the swerde. Accordyng to their vnellesse & vnfaithfull dealinges, so haue I entreated them, and hpd my face from them:

G Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Nowe wyl I bypunge agayne the captaynes of Jacob, & haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israel, and be gelous for my holy names sake. Al their confusyon and offence that they haue done agaynst me shall be takē awaye: and so safely shall they dwell in their lande, that no man shall make them afrayed. And when I haue brought them agayne fro amonge the people, whē I haue gathered them together out of their enemyes lādes, and am prayled in them befoze many heathē: The shall they knowe, for I am the Lorde their God whiche suffred the to be led into captiuitie amonge the heathē, but nowe haue I brought them agayne into their owne lande, and not leste one of them yonder.

After that, wyl I hpd my face nomoze fro them: but wyl poure out my spete vpon the house of Israel, sayeth the Lorde God.

The .xl. Chapter.

The redyng of the cyties and of the temple that was to come is shewed vnto the prophete.

In the .xxv. yere of oure captiuitie, in the begynnyng of the yere, the tenth daye of the moneth: that is the .xiii. yere, after that the cytie was impytēd downe: the same daye came the hande of the Lorde vpon me, and carped me forth: euen into the lande of Israel brought he me in the visions of God: & set me downe vpon a merelous hye mountayne, where vpon there was a byldynge (as it had bene of a cytie) toward the north.

Whether he carped me, and beholde, there was a mā, whose similitude was lyke brasse which had a threde of flaxe in his hande, and a meterode also. He stode in the doze, & sayde vnto me: thou sonne of mā march wel wyth thyne eyes, berken to wyth thyne eares, & fasten it in thyne herte, what soener I shall shewe the, for to the intent that they myghte be shewed the, therefore arte thou brought by ther. And whatsoeuer thou seyst, thou shalt certifye the house of Israel therof.

Beholde, there was a wall on the outsyde rounde about the house: the meterode that he had in hys hande, was fyre cubites lōge & a spanne. So he measured the bredth of the byldynge, which was a meterode, and the derght also a meterode. The came he vnto the east doze, & wente by the steares, & measured the postes of the doze, wherof euery one was a meterode thicke. Euery chāber was a meterode lōge & brode: betwene the chambers were fyre cubytes. The post of the doze within the porche, was one meterode. He measured also the porche of the pinnermer doze whych conteyned a meterode. Then measured he the entrie of the doze, that conteyned eght cubytes, & hys pylers two cubytes: & thys entrie stode inwarde.

The chābers of the doze eastwarde, were there on euery syde: a lyke broade and longe. The pylers also that stode of both the sydes were of one measure. After thys, he measured the wydenesse of the doze, which was .x. cubytes, & the derght of the doze .xiii. cubytes. The edge befoze the chambers was one cubyte broade vpon both the sydes, and the chambers fyre cubites wyde of eithre syde. He measured the doze from the rydge of one chamber to another, whose wydenesse was .xxv. cubytes, and one doze stode agaynst another. He made pylers also .lx. cubytes hye, rounde aboute the courte doze. Befoze the inwarde parte vnto the foze entrie of the pinnermer doze, were .l. cubytes. The chambers & theyr pylers wythin, rounde about vnto the doze had syde wyndowes. So had the foze entrie also, whose wyndowes wente rounde about wythin. And vpon the pylers there stode date trees.

Then brought he me into the foze court where as were chambers & pauered woorkes, made in the foze courte rounde aboute .xxx. chambers vpo one pauered woрке. Nowe the pauered woрке was a long besyde the dozes & that was the lower pauered woрке. After this he measured the bredth from the lower doze, vnto the pinnermer courte of the outsyde, which had an .C. cubites vpon the east & the north

And the dooze in the uttermost toward the north, measured he after length and bredth: his thre chambers also on ether syde wth hys pylles & foze entres: which had euen the measure of the fyrst doze hys heygth was .l. cubytes, the bredth .xxv. hys windowes, & porches with his pillers, had euen lyke measure as y^e dooze toward the east: there were seven steppes to go vp vpon, and they^e porch before them.
The dooze of the innermer court fyrst ourt agaynst the dooze, y^e was tow ard the northeaste. From one dooze to another he measured .C. cubytes.

After that, he brought me to the south-side, where there stode a dooze toward the south: whose pylles & porches he measured, and had y^e fyrst measure, & wyth they^e porches they had wyndowes rounde aboute, ly-ke y^e fyrst wyndowes. The heygth was .l. cubytes, the bredth .xxv. wyth steppes to go vp vpon: hys porches stode before wyth hys pillers and date trees on ether side. And the line of the innermer court stode toward y^e south, and he measured from one doze to another an .C. cubytes. So he brought me into the innermer court, thowowe the dooze of the south syde which he measured: and it had the same measure as afore sayde. In lyke maner, his chambers, pylles and foze entres, had euen the same measure also. And he had with his porches rounde aboute wyndowes of .l. cubytes heygth, and .xxv. cubytes bzode. The porches rounde about were .xxv. cuby-tes long, and .v. cubytes bzode: and his porch went into the uttermost court vpo his pillers, ther were date trees, and eyght steppes to go vp vpon.

He brought me also into the innermost court toward the east syde, and measured the doze according to the measure as afore sayd, his chambers pylles and porches had euen the same measure, as the fyrst had: and with his porches they had wyndowes rounde aboute. The length was .l. cubytes, the bredth .xxv. cuby-tes, his porch reached vnto the uttermost court: his pylles also had date trees on ether side, and .viij. steppes to go vp vpo. And he brought me to the north doze, and measured it which also had the foze sayde measure. His chambers, pylles & porches had windowes rounde about: whose heygth was .l. cubytes and the bredth .xxv. His pylles stode toward the vntmost court, and vpon the both sides date trees, and .viij. steppes to goo vp vpon. There stode a chambze also, whose in-nermer was at the dooze pylles, and there the burnt offrynges were washed.

In the dooze porche, there stode on eyther side two tables for the slaughteryng: to slaye the burnt offrynges: synoffrynges and tres-passe offrynges ther vpon. And on the outsyde as me go forth to the north doze, there stode two tables. Foure tables stode on eyther syde of the doze that is .viij. tables: where-vpon they slaughted. Foure tables were of betwen stone for the burnt offrynges, of a cubyte and a halfe longe and bzode, and one cubyte hys, wher vpon were layed the vessels and ornamente which were vled to y^e burnt and slayne offrynges: wher they were slaughted. And within, there were bokes foure fingers bzode, fastened rounde about to hange fleshy vpon, and vpon the tables was layed the offrynge fleshy. On the outsyde of the in-nermer doze were the syngers chambers in the inward court besyde y^e north doze ouer agaynst the south. There stode one also besyde the east doze northwarde.

And he sayde vnto me: This chambze on the south syde belongeth to the prestes, that kepe the habytation: and this toward the north, * is the prestes that wayte vpon the anltre: which be the sonnes of: Sadoch that do seruyce before the Lorde in stede of the chylidzen of Leui. So he measured the foze court, whiche had in length an .C. cubytes, & asmoche in bredth by the foure corners. Now the anltre stode before the house. And he bzo-ught me to the foze entree of the house, and measured the walles by the entree doze which were .v. cubytes longe on eyther syde. The thynknesse also of the dooze on eyther syde, was thre cubytes. The length of the porche was .xx. cubytes: the bredth .xi. cubytes, & vpon steppes went men vp to it: by the wal-les also were pylles on eyther syde one.

The .xli. Chapter.

The disposicion and deuyse of building agayne the temple & of the other thinges thereto belonging.

After this, he brought me to the temple, and measured the postes whiche were of both sydes syre cubytes thynke, accordyng to the wydenesse of the tabernacle The bredth of the doze was ten cubytes, and the walles of the doze on eyther syde .v. cubytes. He measured the length therof, which conteyned .xi. cubytes, and the bredth xx. The went he in and measured the doze postes, whiche were two cubytes thynke: but y^e doze it self was .vi. cubytes, and the bredth of the dooze was .viij. cubytes. He measured y^e length and bredth therof, wherof were euery one .xx. cubytes, before the temple.

And he sayde vnto me this is the holpest of al. He measured also the walle of the house, wherof was .vi. cubytes. The chambers y^e stode rounde aboute y^e house, were euery one iiii. cubytes wyde: and one stode hard vpon another wherof there were .xxiii. there stod postes beneth by the walles rounde about y^e house, to beare them vp, but in y^e wall of the house they were not fastened. The syde chambers

The prophete

25 byes were, the hyer the wyder, and had steppes thozowe them rounde aboute the house.
Thus was yt wider aboute, & from the lowest, men might go to the hyest by & myd chā byes. I sawe also & the house was verpe hye rounde aboute. The foundarpon of the syde chambres was a meterobde, & is. vi. cubites broad. The thychenes of the syde wal with out, contained. v. cubites, and so byd the out wall of the chambres in the house.

Between the chambres was the wyd-nes. xx. cubytes rounde aboute & house. The chambre doozes stode ouer agaynst the out wall, & one dooze was towarde & north, the other towarde the south: & the thychenes of & out wall was. v. cubytes rounde aboute.
Nowe & buyldynge & was seperated tow-arde the west, was. lxx. cubites wyde, & wal of the buyldynge was. v. cubites thycher rounde about, & the length foure scoze cubytes & ten. So he measured the house, which was an. C. cubytes longe, and the seperated buyldynge w the wall were an. C. cubites longe also. The wydnes befoze the house, and of it that was seperated towarde the easte, was an. C. cubytes.

And he measured & length of the buyldynge befoze and behynde with the chābyes vpon both & sydes, and yt contayned an. C. cubytes. The innermer temple, the porch of the foze court, the syde postes, these thye had syde wyndowes, and pylers rounde about ouer agaynst the postes, from the grounde vp to the wyndowes. The wyndowes them selues were spled ouer w bozdes: and thus was it aboute the dooze vnto & inmost house and wout also. Pee, the whole walle on eue-ry syde bothe w in and wout was spled ouer w greute bozdes. There were Cherubyns & date trees made also, so & one date tree stode euer betwixte two Cherubyns. One Cherub had two faces, & face of a man lookinge a syde towarde the date tree, and a lyons face on & other syde. Thus was yt made rounde about in all the house. Pee, & Cherubyns and date trees were made from the grounde vp aboute the dooze, and so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

The byg postes of & temple were four squared, and the fashyon of the Sanctuary was: euen as it appered vnto me also in & vpsion. The tables was of wood. iiii. cuby-tes hye & ii. cubytes longe: bys corners & length & the wales were of wood. And he sayd vnto me: This is the table that shal stande befoze the Lord. The temple and the holiest of all had epyther of them two doozes, & eue-ry dooze had. ii. lytle wickettes which were folded in one vpo another, on euery side two.
And vpo the doozes of & temple, there were made Cherubyns & date trees, lyke as vpon the wales: & a great thicke balke of woode was befoze on the outsyde of & porch. Vpon bothe the sydes of the walles of the porche, there were made depe wyndowes and date trees, haupnge beames and balkes, lyke as the house had.

C The. xlii. Chapter.

Of the chambres of the temple for the wyddnes, and the holpe thynge.

Then carped he me out into the foze court toward the north, & brought me in to the chambre & stode ouer a gap in the back buyldynge north-warde, whych had & length of an. C. cubites wholse dooze turned towarde & north. The wydnes conteyned. i. cubytes: ouer agaynst & xx. cubytes of & innermer court: & agaynst the pauerd worke & was in the court, behyde all these thye, there stode pylers, one ouer a gaynst another. And befoze thys chambre there was a walkynge place of. x. cubytes wyde, & w in was a way of one cubite wyde and they doozes towarde the north. Thus & hiest chambres were alway narrower the the lowest & myddlemost of & buyldynge, for they bare chambre vpo chambre, & stode they together one vpon another, not haupng pyl-lers lyke the foze court: the foze were they smaller then those beneth and in the myddel to reken from the grounde vpwarde.

The wall wout that stode by the chambres towarde the vtermost court vpon the fozesyde of & chambres, was. i. cubytes long for & length of the vtermost chambres in the foze court was. i. cubytes also: but the length therof befoze the temple was an. C. cubytes.
These chambres had vnder the an intrader of the eastsyde, wherby a mā myght go into them out of the foze court thozow the thiche wall of the foze court toward & easte, ryght ouer agaynst the seperated buyldynge. Be-foze the same buyldynge vpon this syde, there were chambres also whych had a way vnto the, lyke as the chambre of the northsyde of the same length and wydenesse.

They intraunce, fashyon & dozes were also of the same maner. Pee, euen like as the other chambre dozes were: so were those also of & southsyde. And befoze & waye tow-arde the syngers stappes on & east syde there stode a doze to go in at. Then sayde he vnto me: The chambres towarde & north and the south which stand befoze & backe buyldynge: those be holy habytacions wherin, & prestes & do seruyce befoze & Lord, must eate & make holy offeringes: and they must they laye the most holy offeringes: meat offeringes, wine offeringes, and trespace offeringes: for it is an holy place. Wher & prestes come therein, they shal not go into & foze court: but leuing they be holpe they shal leaue the clothes of

The XIII. Chapter.

The second what doze of the temple is that. He is commanded to buy up the people with story & science.
The buy is cumpt in beris, and in the flesh. Who are to be admitted to the scrupce of the temple, and who is to be referred. He sheweth what gress he would have admitted into the holy place, and also they, &c.

After this he brought me a-gayne to poutwarde doore of ¶ Sanctuary on the east syde and ¶ was thut. The sayd ¶ Lord vnto me: this doore shal be still thut: & not opened for any mā to go thowowe it: but only for ¶ Lord God of Israel: yee, he shal go thowowe yt, els shall yt be shute styll. The pynce hym selfe shall come thowowe yt, that he maye eat bre-ade befoze the Lord. At the poynte shall he come in, & there shall he go out agayne. The broughte he me to the doore vpon the northsyde of the house. And as I looked aboute me, beholde, * the glozpe of the Lord spyled the house: and I fell downe vpon my face. So the Lord spake vnto me: O ¶ sonne of man, fasten this to thyne herte: beholde, & take dylygent hede to all ¶ I will sape vnto the, concernyng all ¶ ordinaunces of the Lord, & al his lawes: pondeze wel wth thyne hert ¶ comming in of the house & the goyng forth of the Sactuarpe: and tell that obdypnate houtholde of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord God: O house of Israel, ye haue nowre done ynoughe wpth all poure abhominacions, seing that ye haue broughte into my Sanctuary straungers, ha-nyng vncircumcyled hertes & fleche, where thowow my Sanctuarpe is despyled, when ye offre me bread, fat, and bloude.

Thus wyth all your abhominacions ye haue broken my couenaunte, and not kept þ holý ordynauces of my Sanctuarýe: but let keepers of my Sanctuarýe, euen after your owne mynde. Therfore thus sayeth þ Lorde God: of all the straungers þ dwell amonge þ chyldren of Israel, no straunger whose herte & flesh is not cýrcumcýsed, shall come within my Sanctuarý: No, ner the Leuites that be gone backe from me: and haue disceaued þ people of Israel with all errors, & gone after theyr ydoles: therfore shall they beare theyr owne wyckednes. Shuld they be set and ordey ned to minístre vnder the doozes of þ house of my Sanctuarý? And to do scrýpce in the house: to slaye burnt offerings and sacryfices for the people: to stand before them, and to serue them, & syng the seruice that they do them, as before theyr ydoles, & cause the house of Israel to stumbl theforowe theyr wyckednes? For the wyche cause I haue plucked out myne hande ouer them, sayeth the Lorde God, so þ now they must beare theyr owne iniquyte, and not to come nye me to serue me wyth theyr byrdhode, in my Sanctuarý, & moost holýett of all: þ they maye beare theyr owne shame & abhominacions, wyche they haue done. Shulde I vse them to be porters of the house, and to al the seruice that is done therin? But the prestes, the Leuytes, & some of *Sadock, that kept the holy ordinances of my Sanctuarie, when the chyliden of Irael were gone from me, shall come to me to do me seruyce, to stande before me, and to offer me that fat and the bloud, sayeth the Lord God.

They ſhal go into my Sanctuary, and treade befoze my table: to do me ſeruice, and to waite vpon myne ordynaunces. Nowe when they go in at the doores of the innermer courte: they ſhal put on linnen clothes, ſo that no wollayne come vpon them whyle they do ſeruice vnder the doozes of ſ innermer court and within. They ſhal haue ſayze linnen bonettes vpon theyr heades, and linnen breeches vpon theyr loynes, whiche in theyr labour they ſhall not put aboute them. And when they go forth to the people into the outward courte, they ſhall put of the clothes wherein they haue minyſtered, and laye them in the bytacyon of the Sanctuarye, and put on other apparell, leſt they vnhalow the people with theyr clothes.

* They shall not haue theyr heades, nor horne the bushe of theyr heare, but round theyr heades onely. * All the prestes that go into the innoſte court, ſhall dyncke no wy-ne. * They ſhall mary no widow, neither ſhe ſhall be put from her husbände: but a mayde ſhall be ſeek of the houſe of Iſrael, as a widow ſhall haue had a wiſſe before.

* They shall shewe my people the difference betwene the holy and unholy, betwixt cleane and uncleane. If any discorde arise they shall discern it: and geue sentence after my iudgements. My solempne feastes, my lawes and ordynances shall they kepe, and halowe my Sabbathes. * They shall come as no dead person to despye them selves, except it be father or mother, sone or daughter, brother or sister, that hath had yet no husbande, in such maye they be despyed.

And when he is cleansed, there shall be re-hened vnto hym. viij. dayes: & yf he go into Sanctuary agayne to do seruice, he shall bring a synneofferinge, sayeth the Lord God.
They shall haue an heritage: for, I my self will be the; heritage: is shall be gree the mopessy on in Israell, for I am the; possession. The meateofferinge, synneoffering and trespassofferinge shall they eate, & every dedycate thyng in Israell, shall be theirs.
The fyrynges of all the fyrr frutes, and all the willowfferinges shall be the prestes.

Pe shall geue vnto the prieste also all the fyrste frute of youre fyrst borne, all I saye, & all þe is separated vnto God, all youre heauy offerings (I saye) shall be the priestes, & also þe

The. xlv. Chapter.

Out of all the land of promises are there separate. first of which the first is given to the priests: and to the Levites, the thirde to the cytye, the fourth to the prince. An exhortation vnto the heares of the people of all measures. Of the first fruits, &c.

When ye deuyde the lande by the lot ye shall put a syde one * part for the Lorde, to be holy from other landes: namely. xxv. \mathcal{W} . meteroddes longe, & x. \mathcal{W} . broad. This shall be holy, as wyde as yt is rounde a meter. Of this parte there shall belonge vnto the Sanctuary. v. C. meteroddes in al the four corners, & l. cubytes wyde rounde about to the suburbs. And fro this measure namely xxv. \mathcal{W} . meteroddes longe, & x. \mathcal{W} . broad shall be the Sanctuary wherin the Sanctuary shall be holdest of all maye stande.

The residue of that holy grounde shall be divided wherby do seruyce in the Sanctuary. v. C. meteroddes, & go in before the Lorde to seruyce: they maye haue rowme to dwel in.

As for the Sanctuary, yt shall stande for it self to the Leuytes that serue in the house: this shall be given. xx. habitacions, of p. xxv. \mathcal{W} . length & x. \mathcal{W} . bredth: ye shall geue also vnto the cytye a posselsyde of v. \mathcal{W} . meteroddes broad, and. xxv. \mathcal{W} . longe, besyde the part of the Sanctuary: & shall be for the whole house of Israel. * Upon both the sydes of the Sanctuary, and by the cytye, there shall be gates vnto the pynce, whatsoeuer lyeth outward: as farre as reacheth westward & eastward: which shall be as long as the parte, from the west vnto the east.

This shall be his owne land in Israel & the pynces be nomore chargeable vnto my people. And such as remayneth yet ouer in the land shall be given to the house of Israel according to theyr trybes. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: O ye pynces, ye haue now opprest the people inough: now leaue of, handle the people according to the thyng that is equall & iust: and thruste out my people nomore from the land. * Ye shall haue a true Epha, a true Ephah, and a true bath. The Ephah and the bath shall be alke. One bath shall conteyne the tenth parte of an homer, & one Ephah do: theyr measure shall be the same. * One sicle maketh. xx. gerres, & twenty sicles, & xxv. and. xv. sicles make a ponde. This is the heauy offerpunge that ye shall geue to be heaued: namelye, the tenth parte of an Ephah, oute of an homer of wheat, and the xvi. parte of an Ephah, oute of an homer of barley. The oyle shall be measured with the bath: euen the tenth parte of the bath out of a Cor.

Then bathes make one homer: for one homer filleth x. bathes. And one labe fro. ii. C. shepe out of the pasture of Israel: for a meat offerpunge, burnt offerpunge, & health offerpunge to reconcyle them, sayeth the Lorde God: All the people of the lande shall geue this heauy offerpunge to a freewill for the people of Israel. Agayne, it shall be the pynces parte to offre burnt offerpunges, meat offerpunges, & drink offerpunges vnto the Lorde, in the holpe dayes newe moones, Sabothes, and in all the hye feastes of the house of Israel. The synnec offerpunge, meat offerpunge, burnt offerpunge, and health offerpunge shall be geue to reconcyle the house of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: The first daye of the first moneth shall take a ponge bullocke without blemyshe, & cleanse the Sanctuary. So the prester shall take of the bloude of the synnec offerpunge, and synckle it vnto the postes of the house, & vpon the four corners of the aulter, with the doore postes of the innermer court. And thus shall thou do also the seventh daye of the moneth: (for such as haue synned of ignorance, or bypunge dysscedaunce) to reconcyle the house withall. * Upon the xiiii. daye of the first moneth, ye shall kepe easter. Seven dayes shall the feast contynne, wherin there shall no sowe nor leuened bread be eaten.

Upon the same daye shall the pynce geue for hym selfe & all the people of the lande, a bullocke for a synnec offerpunge. And in the feast of the seven dayes he shall offre euery daye a bullocke and a ramme, & are without blemyshe for a burnt offerpunge vnto the Lorde: and an he goate dayly for a synnec offerpunge. For the meat offerpunges, he shall geue euer an Ephah to a bullock, an Ephah to a ram, & an hin of oyle to an Ephah. Upon the fyfteneth daye of the seventh moneth, he shall kepe the seven dayes holy, one after another, euen as the other seven dayes: with the synnec offerpunge burnt offerpunge, meat offerpunge, and with oyle.

The. xvi. Chapter.

The sacrifice of the Sabbath and of the new moones: & how the doores of the temple shall be opened & closed.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I doze of the innermer court toward the east shall be shut the. vi. working dayes: but in the Sabbath and in the daye of the new moone it shall be opened.

Then shall the pynce come vnder the doore porche, and stande still without by the doore cheeke. So the prester shall offre vpon the burnt and health offerpunges. And he shall worshyppe at the doore poste, & go his waye forth agayne: but the doze shall nomore be shut till the eueninge.

On the same maner shall the people of the land also do theyr worshyppe before the Lorde without this doze vpon the Sabbathes & newe moones. Thys is now the burnt offeryng. & the prynce shall bypnyge vnto þe Lord vpon the sabboth, syre lambes wythout blemish, & a ram wythout blemish, & an ephab for a meat offering, with the ram. As for þe lābes, he maye geue as many meate offerynges to them as he wyl: and an hynde of oyle to an ephab. In the daye of the new moneth, it shalbe a ponge bullocke wythout blemish: syre lābes and a ram also wythout blemish: Wpþ the bullocke he shal geue an ephab, & wpþ the ram an ephab also for a meat offeryng, but to the lambes, what he may come by. And euer an hynde of oyle to an ephab.

C When þe prynce commeth, he shal go vnto der the doze porch, & euen there depart forth agayne. But when the people of the lande come before the Lord in þe solempne feaste, as many as come in by the north doze to do worshyppe, shall go oute agayne at the south doze. And they that come at the south doze, shall go forth agayne at the north doze.
There shall none go oute at the doze, where he came in, but shal go ryght forth ouer on þe other syde & the prynce shall goo in and out amonge them. Upon the solempne & hye feast dayes this shalbe þe meat offering. An ephab to a bullocke & an ephab to a ram, and to the lambes, as many as he wyl: but euer an hynde of oyle to an ephab. Nowe when the prynce bypnygeth a burnt offering, or an healtbofferyng wþ a frewyl vnto the Lord, þe east doze shalbe opened vnto hym, that he maye do wþ his burnt and healtbofferinges, as he doth vps the sabboth: and when he goeth forth, the doze shalbe shutt after hym agayne.
He shall dayly bypnyge vnto the Lord a lābe of a yere olde wythout blemish for a burnt offering: thys shall he do euer moorninge.

E And for a meat offering, he shall geue þe syre part of an ephab, & the thyrde parte of an hynde of oyle, to myngle wþ the cakes, e-uery moorninge. Pee, this shalbe a dayly meat offering vnto the Lord: for an euer lastyng or dynaunce: & thus shal the lambe þe meat offering and oyle be geuen euer monyng, for a dayly burnt offering.

Moreover thus sayeth the Lord God:
If the prynce geue a gyfte vnto any of hys sonnes, then shall it be hys sonnes heretage perpetual, & he may possesse it. But if he wyl geue one of his seruantes, some of his heritage, it shalbe hys to the fre yere, & then to returne agayne vnto the prynce: for hys herytage shalbe hys sonnes onely. * The prynce also shal take none of þe peoples inheritaunce nor put them from the: possessio: but to his owne sonnes shal he geue his possession, & my people be nat scattered abroad, but that eue-ry man maye haue hys owne.

And he brought me thowowe þe entraunce at the syde of the doze to the baptyary of þe sanctuary, that belongeth to the prestes and stode toward the north, & beholde there was a place vpon the west syde, then sayde he vnto me. Thys is the place where the prestes shall byghte the trespass and synofferynges and bake þe meateofferynges, that they nebe not beare them into the outward court: and so to vndalowe the people. So he brought me into the vtmost court rounde aboute all the foure corners. Behold, in euery corner of the court, there was yet a lytle court. Pee, in all foure corners of the court, there was made a lytle court of .xl. cubites long, & .xxx. cubites broad: these four lytle courtres were of one lyke measure, and there went a rydge wall rounde aboute them all foure, vnder þe which there were hartes made rof about.

Then sayde he vnto me: Thys is the ketchen where the mynistres of the house shal byghte the slayneofferynges of the people.

*The byson of the waters that came out of the temple. The courses of the lande of promys, and the way:

After this he brought me agayne waters from vnder the postels of þe house eastward, for þe house stode toward the east, that ran downe vps the ryghte syde of the house, whiche lyeth to the aulster southward. Then carped he me out to the north doze, and brought me forth there round about by the vtmost doze that turneth eastward. * Beholde there came forth the water vpon the ryght syde. Nowe when the man that had the metrodd in hys hande went vnto the east doze, he measured a .viij. cubytes, and then he brought me throwowe the water, euen to þe angles: so he measured yet a thousande, and brought me throwowe the water agayne vnto the kners: yet measured he a thousande, and brought me thowowe the water vnto the lopnes. After thys he measured a thousande agayne, then was it such a ryuer, that I myght not wade thowowe it. The water was so depe, that yt was nedfull to haue swymmed, for it might not be waded ouer. And he sayde vnto me: dasse thou sene thys, & thou sonne of man: and wþ that he brought me to the ryuer banche agayne.

Nowe when I came there, there stode many tres vpon ether syde of the ryuer banche.
Then sayde he vnto me: Thys water that floweth oute toward the east, and runneth downe into the playne felde, commeth into

And where this water commeth, there shall be much fische. For all þat commeth into this water shall be lusty and whole. By this river shall the fischers stande from En Gedy vnto En Eglaym, & ther spread out theyr nettes: for there shall be greates heapes of fische lyke as in the mayne see. As for þys dyke and pyttes, they shall not be whole, for theyr water shall be occupied for salt.

By this ryuer vpon both the sydes of þe dyke, there shall growe all maner of frutfull trees, whose leaues shall not fall of, neyther shall they frute perperhe: but euery berre at the monethes: for theyr water runneth out of the sanctuary. His frut is good to eate, & his leaue profitable for medecyne. Thus saith the Lorde God. Let this be þe border betwixt me & you, & betwixt the land vnto the riuer of Israhell, with the lyne. The west parte: namely the great see fro the borders therof, tyl a man come vnto Hemah: this is the weste parte.

* This lande shall ye parte among you, according to the tribes of Israhell, & deuide it to be an heritage for you: & for the straungers that dwel amonge you, and beget chyldren: for ye shall take them amonge þe chyldren of Israhell, lyke as though they were of youre owne houtholde and contrary, & they shall haue heritage with you amonge þe chyldren of Israhell.

The booke of the prophet Danyel

The fyrst Chapter.

The prophete sheweth the captiuitie of Iehoachim kynge of Iuda. Of the sonnes that were in captiuitie, the kyng commaundeth to chuse which of them shoulde be taught the learning and language of the Chaldeans.
They are a lorde the kynges leygng. Daniel abstar-neth from the meate of the kynges of Babylon.

In the thyrde yere of the rapne of Ieoachim kyng of Iuda, cam Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon vnto Ierusalem, and beleged it: and the Lorde deli-uered Iehoaachim the kyng of Iuda into hys hand, with certaine ornamentes of the house of God, whych he carped away vnto þe lande of Egipt, to þe house of his god, & there he brought them into hys goddes treasury. And þe kyng spake vnto Alphonas þe chefe chamberlayne þe he shoulde bypynge hym certayne of þe chyldre of Israel, þe were come of the kynges seed of prynces, yonge spryngaldes without my blemish, but saye & wel fauored, instruct in all wysdome, conynge & vnderstandynge: whych were able to stand in þe kynges palace to reade & to learne for to speake Chalbythe.

Vnto these the kyng appoynted a certaine porcyon of hys owne meate and of the wyne, whych he dranke hym selfe, so to no-uryshe them thre yere: that afterwarde they myghte stande before þe kyng. Among these nowe were certayne of þe chyldren of Iuda: namely Daniel, Ananias, Misael, & Azarias.
Vnto these, þe chefe chamberlayne gaue other names, & called Daniel Balthasar, Ananias, Sidrach, Misael, & Azarias. But Daniel was at a poynte w hym selfe, & that he wolde not be defyled w the meate of the kynges, nor the wyne whiche he dronke. And thus he despyzed of the chefe chamberlayne, lest he shoulde defyle hym selfe.
So God gaue Daniel fauore and grace before the chefe chamberlayne that he sayd vnto hym: I am afrayed of my lorde the kyng, whych hath appoynted you your meate and drynke: lest he lye your faces to be wordely kynges then the other spryngaldes of your age, and so þe shal make me lose my head vnto the kyng.

Then Daniel answered Melchisar, whiche the chefe chamberlayne had set ouer Daniel Ananias, Misael, & Azarias, and sayde: O proue but ten dayes w thy seruauntes, and let vs haue potage to eate, & water to drinke: then loke vpon oure faces, and they shal see that we haue eate of the kynges meate. And as thou seest so deale w vs thy seruauntes. So he consented to laboure in thy cytie. They þe laboure for the wealth of þe cytie, that maynteyne this also, out of what trybe soeuer they be in Israel.

¶ All that is seperated of the xxv. v. luge and. xxv. v. broad on the foure partes, that shall þe put a syde for the seperated porcyon of the sanctuary, and for the possession of the cytie. The resydue vpon both the sydes of þe sanctuarie and possession of the cytie, shall belonge to the prynces, before the place of the xxv. v. vnto the eastende, & before the place of the xxv. v. westwarde vnto the borders of the cytie, this shalbe the prynces porcyon.
This shalbe the holy place, and the house of the sanctuary shall stande in the myddest.
Moreover, from the Leuytes and þe cyties possession, that lye in the myddest of the princes parte: loke what remayneth betwixt the border of Iuda and þe border of Ben Jamin, it shalbe the prynces.

Now of the other trybes.

From the east parte vnto the west, shall Ben Jamin haue his porcyon. Vnto the borders of Ben Jamin from the east syde vnto þe west, shall Symeon haue hys porcyon. Vnto the borders of Symeon from the east parte vnto the west, shal Isakar haue hys porcyon.
Vpon the borders of Isakar from þe east syde vnto the west, shal Zabulon haue his porcyon.
Vpon the borders of Zabulon from the east parte vnto the west, shall Gad haue his porcyon. Vpon the borders of Gad southward the coastes shall reache from Chamath forð vnto the waters of Syfpe to Cades, & to the floude, euen vnto the mayne see.

The.ii.Chapter.

The dream of Nabuchodonosor. He calleth into him his interpreters and requirerth of them both the dreame and the interpretation thereof. They answer that they can not know it. The king commaundeth all the wise men of Babylon to be slayne. Daniel requirerth tyme to forwritte the question. The Lord openeth the wisdom of Daniel. Daniel is brought unto the king, and sheweth him his dreame and the interpretation thereof. Of the overthrowing of the kingdom of Chalde.

In the seconde yeare of the reygne of Nabuchodonosor, had Abuchodonosor a dreame, * whertho-row his spirite was vexed, & hys sleepe drake fro hym. The kyng commaunded to cal together al sotoylayers, chamers, wyches & Chaldees, for to shewe the kyng his dreame. So they came, & stode before the kyng. And the kyng layde vnto hem: I haue dreamed a dreame, & my sprete was so troubled therewith, that I haue clene forgotten, what I dreamed. Upon this the Chaldees answered the kyng in the Syrian speche: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe in mer. Shewe thy seruantes thy dreame, and we shall shewe the, what it meaneth.
The kyng gaue the Chaldees their answer and layde: It is gone from me. If ye wyll we make me vnderstande the dreame with the interpretation therof, ye shall lye, and your houses shalbe pyyled. But if ye tell me the dreame and the meanyng therof ye shall haue of me gyftes, rewardes and great honoure: onely shewe me the dreame and the significacyon of it. They answered a-nyng, and layde: the kyng muste shewe his seruantes the dream, & so shal we declare what it meaneth. Then the kyng answered sayng: I perceaue of a trueth, that ye do but prolonge the tyme, for so moche as ye se that þe thinge is gone fro me. Therfore pf ye wyl not tell me the dreame, ye shall all haue one iudgement. But ye sayne & dyssemble w vayne wordes, which ye spake before me, to put of the tyme. Therfore tell me the dreame & so shall I knowe pf ye can shewe me what it meaneth. Upo this, þe Chaldees gaue aunswere before the kyng, & said: there is no mā upo earth, that can tell the thinge, which the kyng speaketh of: yee, there is nether kyng prynce ne lord, that euer asketh suche thynges at a soothsaier, charmer or Chalder: for it is a very harde mater, that the kyng requireth. Neither is there any, that can certifie the kyng therof, excepte the goddess: whose dwellynge is not amonge the creatures.

For the which cause the kynge was wroth with great indignation, and commaunded to destrope all the wyle men at Babylon: & the proclamation went forth, and the wyle men were slayne. They sought also to slaye Daniel with his companions. Then Daniel enguyzed of Arioch the kynges stewarde, of þ iudgement & sentence, that was gone forth alredy to kyl such as were wyle at Babylō.
He answered and sayde vnto Arioch beynge then the kynges deputie. Why hath þ kyng proclaymed so cruell a sentence? So Arioch tolde Daniel the mater. Upon thys, wente Daniel vp, and despyed the kynge, that he myght haue leysure, to shewe the kynge the interpretacion, & then came he home agayne ad shewed the thyng to Ananias, Misael, & Asarias þys companions: þ they shuld be-seche þ God of heuē for grace in this secrete, that Daniel & his felowes wyth other suche as were wyle in Babylō, persshed not. The was the mistery shewed vnto Daniel in a vision by nyght. And Daniel prayled the God of heauē. Daniel also cryed loude, & sayde: That the name of God myght be prayled for euer and euer, for wysedome & strength are his owne: * he chaungeth the tymes & ages:
* he putteth downe kynges, he setteth vp kynges: * he geueth wysdome vnto the wyle, & vnderstandynge to those that vnderstande, he openeth the depe secrettes: he knoweth the thynges that lyeth in darkenes: for the light dwelleth with him. I thāke the, & prayse the (O thou God of my fathers) þ thou hast lent me wysdome & strength, & hast shewed me þ thyng, that we despyed of the: for thou hast opened the kynges inater vnto me.

Upon this went Daniel into vnto Arioch, whom the kynge had orderyned to destroye & wyle at Babylon, he wete vnto him, & said: destroye not suche as be wyle in Babylon, but byynge me in vnto the kynge, and I wil shewe the kynge the interpretacyon. Then Arioch broughte Daniel into the kynge in all the hast, and sayde vnto hym: I haue founde dome, whych shalbe lesse then thyne. The thyrde kyngdome shalbe lyke copper & haue domination in all landes. The fourth kyngdome, shalbe as stronge as yron. For like as yron bylyeth and breaketh all thynges: Pee, euen as yron beatech euery thyng downe, so shall it beate downe and destroye.

Where as thou lawest the fete and toes, parte of earth and parte of yron: that is a de-uided kyngdome, whych neuertheles shall haue some of the yron grounde mixt with it for so much as thou hast sene the yron myxt wyth the claye.

The toes of the fete that were part of yron and parte of claye, signyfeth: that it shalbe a kyngdome partly stronge & partly weake. And where as thou lawest yron myxt with claye, they shall myngle them selues wyth the sede of synple people, and yet not contynue one wyth an other lyke as yron wyl not be souldered wyth a potherbe.

In the dayes of these kynges, shall þe God of beauf set vp an euerlastyng kyngdome whych shall not perishe, & his kyngdome shal not be geuen ouer to another people: pee, the same shall brake and destroye all these kyngdomes, but it shall endure for euer.

And where as thou lawest, that wythout eny handes there was cut out of þe mount: & a stone, whych brake the yron, the copper, the earth, the syluer and golde in peces: by that hath the great God shewed the kyng, what wyl come after this. This is a true dreame and the interpretacion of it is sure.

Then the kyng Nabuchodonosor fell downe vpon hys face, & bowed him selfe vnto Daniel, and commaunded that they shulde offre meat offerynges and swete odoures vnto hym. The kyng answered Daniell, and sayde: pee, of a trueth your God is a God aboue all goddes, a Lorde aboue all kynges and an opener of secretes: seynge thou canst discouer this mysterie. So the kyng made Daniel a greate man, and gaue hym many & greate gyftes.

* He made hym ruler of all the countrees of Babylon, and Lord of all the nobles, that were at Babylon. Howe Daniel intreated the kyng of Sadrach, Misach and Abednego, so that he made them rulers ouer all the officers in the lande of Babylon: But Daniel him selfe remayned still in the courte by the kyng.

The .iii. Chapter.

The kyng setted vp a golden Image, whych he commaunded to be worshipped. Sadrach, Misach, and Abednego are accused because they dysobeyed the kyngs commaundment. They are brought vnto the kyng & commaunded to worshyp the Image: they refuse to do it, and are put into a burning ouen. By helpe of God they are deliuered from the fyre. Nabuchodonosor testifieth the power of God after the sight of the myracle.

Nabuchodonosor the kyng caused a golden Image to be made, whych was. lx. cubytes hie, and lxxii. cubytes thicke. This he made to be set vp in the feld of Bura in the lande of Babylon, & sente out to gather together the knyghtes, Lordes and nobles, the iudges and officers, the debytes and shryues with al the rulers of the lande: that they myght come to þe dedicatio of the Image, whych Nabuchodonosor when the kynge had set vp: So the dukes, lordes and nobles, the iudges and officers, knyghtes and squyres wyth all the rulers of the land gathered them together, and came vnto the dedycatinge of the Image, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

Nowe when they stode before the Image, Nabuchodonosor set vp, & bedel cried out wyth all his myght: O ye people, kynredes and tonges, to you be it sayde: that when ye here the noyse of the trumpettes, whiche shal be blown, wyth the harpes, psawmes, psalteries, Symphonies and all maner of musick: ye fall downe and worshyppe & golde Image, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge hath set vp. Whoso then falleth not downe & boweth hym self, shall euen the same houre be cast into an hote burnynge ouen. Therfore when all the folke herde these noyse of the trumpettes that were blown, wyth the harpes, psawmes, psalteries, Symphonies, & all kinde of melodye: then all the people kynredes and nations fell downe, and bowed themselves vnto the golde Image, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

Some were there certayne men of the Caldees, that wente euen then and accused the Jewes, and sayd vnto the kynge Nabuchodonosor: O king, God saue thy lyfe for ever. Thou byng kynge hast gyuen a commaundement, that all men when they here the noyse of the trumpettes, harpes, psawmes, psalteries, Symphonies and all the other melodies shal fall downe and bowe them selues, to worshippe the golden Image: whoso then fell not downe & worshipped not that he shulde be cast into an hote burnynge ouen. Nowe are there certayne Jewes whom thou hast set out the officers of the land of Babilon: namely, Shadrach: Misach: and Abednago. These men (O kynge) regarded not thy commaundment, yet they wyl not serue thy goddes, nor bowe the selues to the golde Image, that thou hast set vp.

Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruel wyth and displeasure, commaunded, that Shadrach, Misach and Abednago shulde be broughte vnto hym. So these men were broughte before the kynge. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them, & sayde: what? O Shadrach, Misach and Abednago, wyl not you serue my goddes: nor bowe poure selues to the golde Image, that I haue set vp? Well, be redy hereto. When ye here the noyse of the trumpettes, shal come with the herpes, psawmes, psalteries, Symphonies and all the other melodies: that ye fall downe, and worshyppe the Image wherof I haue made. But yf ye worshyppe it not, ye shal be caste immediatly into an hote burnynge ouen. Let se, what god wyl, that maye deliuer you oute of my handes. Shadrach, Misach, and Abednago answered the king, and sayde: O Nabuchodonosor, we ought not to consente vnto the in this matter, for why? oure God whom we serue, is able to kepe vs from the hote burnynge ouen (O kynge) & can ryge wel deliuer vs out of thy handes. And though he wyl not, yet shalt thou knowe (O kynge) & we wyl not serue thy goddes, ner do reuerence to thy Image, wherof thou hast set vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor full of indignacion, so that the countenance of his face chaunged vpon Shadrach, Misach, & Abednago. Therefore he charged and commaunded, that the ouen shuld be made. vii. tymes hotter then it was wonte to be: & spake vnto the strongest workmen that were in his host, for to bynd Shadrach and Shadrach and Abednago, and to cast them into the hote burnynge ouen.

So these men were bounde in their cotes, hosen, gyses, with their other garmentes, & cast into an hote burnynge ouen: for the kynge's commaundement was so strypte, and the ouen was exceedynge hote. As for the men put in Shadrach, Misach, and Abednago the flame of the fyre destroyed them. And these thre men Shadrach, Misach & Abednago fell downe in the hote burning ouen, beinge fast bounde. Then Nabuchodonosor the kynge marueyled, & stode vp in all haste: he spake vnto his counsell and sayd, dyd not you cast these thre men bounde into the fyre? They answered, and sayde vnto the kynge: Yee, O king: he answered, and sayd: lo, for al that, yet do I se foure men goyng loue in the myddest of the fyre, & nothynge corrupte, and the fourth is lyke the sonne of God to loke vpon.

Upon this wente Nabuchodonosor vnto the mouth of the hote burnynge ouen, he spake also, and sayde: O Shadrach, Misach and Abednago, ye seruantes of the hye God, go forth, & come hither. And so Shadrach, Misach & Abednago went out of the fyre. The dukes, lordes, & nobles, & the kinges counsell came together to se these men, & vpo whom the fyre had no maner of power in theyr bodies. In so moche that the very here of theyr hede was not burnt, & their clothes vntouchyd, yet there was no smel of fyre felte vpon the. Then spake Nabuchodonosor, & sayde: Blessed be the God of Shadrach, Misach and Abednago: which hath sente his angell, & defended his seruantes, & put their trust in him, that hath altered the kinges commaundement: and leoperde their bodies their vpon rather then they wolde serue othre goddes, excepte theyr owne God onely. Therefore I wyl and commaunde, that all people, kynreds and tonges, whiche speake any blasphemie agaynst the God of Shadrach, Misach, and Abednago, shall dye, and theyr houses shal be pyyled: because, there is no god that maye saue, as this. So the kynge promoted promoted Sidrach, Misach, & Abdenago, in the lande of Babylon.

The. iiii. Chapter.

¶ Nabuchodonosor dreameth agayne: Daniel interpreteth it. Nabuchodonosor is put out of his realme, & eateth with beasts. He receiveth the power of God, and is restored unto his kyngdome.

 Daniel. vi. c*

N* Nabuchodonosor kyng vnto all people, kynnedes and tuges that dwell vpon þe whole earth: peace be multiplied amonge you. I thought it good to shewe the tokens and maruelous workes, that the hye God hath wrought vpon me. O howe great are his tokens, and howe myghtye are his wonders: * His kyngdome is an euerylastyng kyngdome, & his power lasteth for ever and ever.

 Psal. xlv. b
Daniel. vii. c
Luce. i. c*

I Nabuchodonosor beyng at rest in myne house, and flozpyng in my palace, sawe a dreame, whych made me afrayed: & þe thoughtes that I had vpon my bed, wth the visyons of myne head, troubled me. * Then sent I out a commissyon, that all they which were of wysdom at Babylō shulde be brought before me, to tell me the interpretacyon of þe dreame. So there came the soothsayers, charmers, Caldees, and coniturers of deuils: to whom I tolde the dreame, but what it betokened, they coude not shewe me: tyll at the last, there came one Daniel (other wyle called Balthazar, according to the name of my God) whych hath the sperte of the holpe god des in hym, to whome I tolde the dreame, sayinge: O Balthazar, thou prince of sooth sayers: for so moche as I knowe, that thou hast the sperte of the holy Goddes and no secrete is hyd from the: tell me therfore, what the visyon of my dreame (that I haue sene) maye signifye. I sawe a visyon in my heade vpon my bed: and beholde, there stode a tree vpon the grounde, whych was very hye, greate and myghtie: þe heygth reached vnto the heauen, and the bredth extēded to all the endes of the earth: his leaues were saye, he had very moch frute, so that every man had ynough to eate therin.

The beastes of the felde had shadowes vnder it, and the foules of the ayre dwelte in the bowes therof. Shortly, al creatures fed of it. I sawe in my head a visyon vpon my bed: & beholde, a watcher & a holpe one came downe fro heauen, and cryed mightely, sayinge. Hewe downe þe tree, breake of his braunches, shake of his leaues, & scatre his frute abroad: that all the beastes maye get them awaye from vnder hym, and the foules from his braunches. Nevertheless, leaue the grounde of his rottefyl in þe earth, & bynde hym vpon the playne felde, wth cheynes of yron and scle. Wth the dewe of heauen shall he be wet, & he shall haue his parte in þe herbes of the grounde with other welde beastes.

¶ That manye berke of his shalbe taken from

hym, and the beastes harte shalbe given him: tyl seuē peares be come and gone vpon hym.

Thys crande of the watcher, is a commaundement grounded and fought out in þe counsell of hym, that is most holy: to learne men for to vnderstande, that the hyest hath power ouer the kyngdomes of mē, & geueth them, to whom it lyketh hym, and bringeth the very outcastes of men ouer them. Thys is the dreame, that I kyng Nabuchodonosor haue sene. Therfore O Balthazar, tel me what it signifyeth: for so moche as all the wyle men of my kyngdome are not able to shewe me, what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for the sperte of the holy goddes is in þe.

Then Daniel (whose name was Balthazar) helde his peace by the space of one houre and his thoughtes troubled hym. So the king spoke, and sayde: O Balthazar, let me hear the dreame nor the interpretacyon thereof: for I Balthazar answered sayinge: O my Lorde, this dreame happē to thyne enemies, and the interpretacyon to thyne aduersaries. As for the tree that thou sawest whych was so greate & myghtye, whose heygth reached vnto the heauen, and his bredth into all the world: whose leaues were saye, and þe frute moche, vnder the whych þe beastes of the felde had theyr habytacyon, and vpon whose braunches the foules of the ayre byd spyt.

Euen thou (O kyng) arte the tree, greate and stronge. Thy greatnes increaseth, & reacheth vnto the heauen, so doth thy power to þe endes of þe earth. But where as the kyng sawe a watcher euen an holy angell, þe came downe from heauen, and sayde: hewe downe the tre, and destroye it: yet leaue the grounde of the rote in the earth: and bynde hym vpon the playne felde wth cheynes of yron & scle. He shall be wet wth the dewe of heauen, & his parte shalbe wth þe beastes of the felde, tyl. vii. peares become and gone vpon hym: Thys (O kyng) is the interpretacyon, yee: it is the very deupce of hym, that is hyest of all and it toucheth my Lorde the kyng.

Thou shalt be cast out from mē, and thy dwellinge shalbe wth þe beastes of þe felde, with grasse shalt thou be fed lyke an oxe. Thou must be wet with the dewe of the heauen: yee, seuē peares shall come, & go vpon the, tyl thou knowe, * þe hyest hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, & geueth the to whom he lyt. Moreover, where as it was sayde, that the rote of the tre shulde be leftē spyl in the ground: it betokeneth, þe thy kyngdome shal remayne whole vnto the, after thou hast lerned to knowe, þe power cometh from heauen. Therfore, O kyng be content with my counsell, that thou mayst redeme thy synnes with almesse: * and thyne offences wth mercy to poore people: for thys shalbe an helynge of thyne erreure.

At these

These thynges touche the kyng Nabuchodonosor.

After xii. monethes, the kyng walked up and downe in the palace of the kyngdom of Babylon, and sayde: This is the great cite of Babylon, wherche I my selfe with my power and strength haue made a great court, for the honoure of my maiestie. While these wordes were yet in his mynde, there fell a voyce from heauen, saying: O kyng Nabuchodonosor, to the which I say: Thy kyngdome shall departe from thee, thou shalt be cast out of mens company, thy dwellinge shall be with the brastles of the wilde, so that thou shalt eate grasse like an oxe, tyll seven yeres be come & gone, and thou shalt knowe, that the which hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, that he maye geue them, vnto whom he wille hym. The very same houre was this matter fulfilled vpon Nabuchodonosor, that he was cast out of mens company, and he eate grasse lyke an oxe. His bodye was covered with the dewe of heauen, tyll his haire was as great as Eagles feathers, and his nayles lyke vnto claws.

When this tyme was past, I Nabuchodonosor lyfte up myne eyes vnto heauen, and my understandinge was restored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thanks vnto the which I magnified and prayesed hym that he had shewed his power endureth for ever, and his kyngdome from one generation to another: in comparyson of whom all that dwell vpon the earth, are to be counted as nothinge.

He handleth accordyng to his wyl, as he wille the powers of heauen, and amonge the which he ruleth the earth: and there is none that can resist his hande, or saye what doeth he. At the same tyme was myne understandinge geuen me agayne, and I was restored to the honoure of my kyngdome, to my power, and to myne owne shap agayne. My great estates and prynces sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdome agayne. I had yet greater wylshyppe.

Then I Nabuchodonosor, loue, magnified and prayesed the kyng of heauen: for his wordes are true, & his wayes are right. He that go on proudly, he is able to be brought downe.

The v. Chapter.

The kyng of Babylon, aduersarye the befall of the temple, with an harte wyllyng in the way. The which was called of the kyng, cannot expounde the which Daniel is called, which readeth it, and in the which it is said, Balchazar begyns thus: Daniel was in his coloure.

King Balchazar made a greates banquet to his thousand Lordes: with all these thousande he made a great chere, & when he was dronke with wyne, he commaunded to bring hym the golden and syluer vessels: wherby his father Nabuchodonosor had taken oute of the temple at Jerusalem: that the kyng & his Lordes with his quene and concubines myghte dyncke thereout.

So they brought the golden vessel, that was taken oute of the temple of the Lordes house at Jerusalem. Then the kyng and his Lordes with his quene and concubines dronke out of them. They dronke wyne, and prayesed they: Idoles of golde, siluer, copper, yron, wodde and stone.

In the very same houre there appeared xij. syngers, as it had bene of a mans hande wyrtynge, ryght ouer agaynst the candlesticke vpon the playne wall in the kynges palace. & the kyng sawe the palme of the harte that wrote. Then chaunged the kyng his countenance, and his thoughtes troubled him, so that the fountes of his bodye shoke, and his knees smote one agaynst the other. Wherefore the kyng cryed myghtely, & they shuld bringe him the charmers, Calders and counters of deuils. The kyng spake also to his wyle men of Babylon, and sayde: Who so can rede this wyrtynge, & shewe me the playne meanynge thereof: shalbe clothed with purple haue a cheyne of golde aboute his necke, and rule the thyrde part of my kyngdome.

Upon this, came all the kynges wyle men: but they coude nether reade the wyrtynge, nor shewe the kyng what it signified. The very same tyme the kyng soze a fraye, in so moche, & his colour chaunged, and his Lordes were soze vexed. So by reaso of this matter, that had happened to the kyng & his Lordes, his quene went vpon her selfe into the backet house, and spake vnto the kyng, saying: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for ever. Let not the thoughtes trouble thee, and let not thy countenance be chaunged. For why? there is a man in thy kyngdome, that hath the sperte of the holie goddes wythin hym, & as it was sene in thy fathers dayes. He hath understandinge and wylsome lyke the goddes. For the kyng Nabuchodonosor thy father made this man chiefe of the soothsayers, charmers, Calders, and readers of destinyng: because that such an aduantage sperte, knowledg & wylsome (to expounde dreames, to open secretes, and to declare harde dowtes) was founde in hym: yee, even in Daniel, who the kyng named Balchazar. Let this same Daniel be sent for, and he shall tell what it meaneth.

The was Daniel brought before the kyng. So the kyng spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: Art thou that Daniel: one of the prisoners of Iuda, whom my father the kyng brought out of Ierusalem? I haue heard speake of thee, that thou hauest the sperte of the holie goddes experience and understandinge, and that there hath bene greates wylsome founde in thee.

In the. Howe haue there bene brought me, wyle & conning charmers, to reade thys wrytynge and to shewe me the meanynge therof. But they coulde not tell me, what this matter signified. Then hearde I saie, that thou canst expounde darke thynges, and declare harde doutes. Well, than ys thou canst reade thys wrytynge, and shewe me the meanynge therof, thou shalt be clothed wth purple, haue a cheyne of golde aboute thy necke, and rule the thyngs of my kyngdome.

E Daniel answered, & sayd before the kyng: ¶ As for thy rewardes, kepe the to thy selfe, or geue thy ryche gyftes to another: yet not the lesse, I wyl reade the wrytynge vnto the kyng, & shewe him & interprete cyon therof.

¶ O kyng heare. God the best gaue vnto Nabuchodonosor thy father, the dignite of a kyng wth wrythynge & honoure, so that all people kyndredes & tynge stode in awe and feare of hym, by reason of the hys estate, that he had lent him. For why, he shewe who he wolde, he smote, whom it pleased hym.

Agayne: who he wolde, he set vp: and whom he lyst he put downe. ¶ But because hys hert was so proude, and hys stomache set so faste vnto wylfulnesse: he was depose from hys kyngly throne, & hys mayesty was taken fro him. He was shute out fro amonge men, hys herte was lyke a beastes herte, & hys dwellinge was w the wylde asses: he was sayne to eatte grashe lyke an oxe, & thys bodye was wet w the drwe of the beaust. tyl he knewe, & the best had power vpo the kyngdomes of men and seteth ouer them, whom he lyst.

¶ And thou hys sonne (O Balthazar) for al this, hast not submytted thyne herte, though thou knewest all these thynges: but hast magnified thy selfe aboue the Lorde of heauen, so & the vessels of hys house were broughte before the, that thou, & thy Lorde, wth thy quene and concubynes, myght dynche wyne therout. And hast prynced & Idoles of siluer & gold, copper and yron, of wode and stone, which nether see, heare nor vnderstande. As for the God, in whose hande conspyeth thy bryeth & all thy wapes: & hast not loued hym.

¶ Therefore is the palme of thys hande sente hyther fro him, to token by thys wrytynge. And this is the scripture that is wrytten vpon: Wane, Tethel, Phares. Howe the interpretation of the thing is this: Wane, God hath nombred the kyngdome, and brought it to an ende: Tethel, thou art weyed in the balance, and art founde to lyght: Phares, thy kyngdome is delt in partes, and geue to the Medes and Perses.

Then commaunded Balthazar, to cloth Daniel wth purple, to hange a cheyne of golde aboute hys necke, and to make a proclamation concernynge hym: that he shulde be the ruler of the thyngs of my kyngdome. ¶ The very same nyght was Balthazar the kyng of the Caldees slayne, & Darius out of Medea toke in the kyngdome, he ynge. lxxi. yere of age.

The. vi. Chapter.

¶ Daniel is made ruler ouer the Lorde. The proclamation of an acte agaynst Daniel. The proclamation of the acte, where Daniel is accused vnto the kyng as a transgressor: he is put into a denne of Lyons by the commaundement of the kyng: he is deliuered by the God: Daniels accusers are put vnto the lyons to be tene in foudre: Darius by the proclamation of a decree magnified the God of Daniel.

It pleased Darius to set ouer hys kyngdome an C. and. xx. Lorde, whiche shulde be in all hys kyngdome aboute. Aboue these he set the princes (of whom Daniel was one) that the Lorde might geue accorde vnto them, and the kyng to be vndealeed.

But Daniel exceeded all these princes and Lorde, for the sperte of God was plentiful in hym: so that the kyng was minded to set him ouer the whole realme. Wherefore the princes and Lorde sought, to pryke out in Daniel some quarrell agaynst the kyngdome: yet coulde they fynde none occasion nor faute vpon hym. For why? he was so saythfull, & there was no blame nor dysponelty founde in hym.

Then sayd these men: we can get no quarrell agaynst this Daniel, excepte it be in the lawe of hys God, vpon thys, went the princes and Lorde together vnto the kyng, & sayde thus vnto hym: kyng Darius, God saue thy lyfe for euer. All & greates estates of the realme: as the princes, Dukes, Senators and Judges, are determed to put out a commaundement of the kyng, & to make a sure statute: namely, & whose desyreth any petition, ether of any God or man (wrythin this. xxx. dayes) excepte it be onely of the, O kyng: the same person maye be cast into the Lyons denne. Wherefore, O kyng, confirme to thys statute, and make a wrytynge: that & thynge whiche the Medes and Perses haue ordeyned, be not altered nor broken.

So Darius made the wrytynge: and confirmed it. Howe when Daniel vnderstode the wrytynge was made, he wente into hys house: & the wyndowes of hys wall toward Jerusalem stode open. There kneeled he down vpon hys knees, thre tymes a daye: there he made hys petition: and prayd hys God, lyke as hys maner was to do afoze tyme.

Then these men made searche, and founde Daniel makynge hys petition, and praying vnto hys God. So they came to the kyng, & spake before hym concernynge hys commaundement, sayng: O kyng, hast thou not subscribed the statute: & wrythin. xxx. dayes thou so requyrest hys petition of any God or man but onely of the selfe, O kyng: he shalbe cast into the denne of the Lyons? The kyng answered land, and sayde: yee, it is true. It muste be as a lawe of the Medes & Perses, that maye not be broken.

Then answered they, and sayde vnto the kinge, Daniell one of the prisoners of Iuda & of the kinge, regardeth neither the, nor thy statute, & thou hast made: but maketh bys petition the tymes a day. When the kyng heard these wordes, he was sore greued, and wold haue executed Daniel, to deliuer hym, & put of the matter, vntill the Sunne went downe to the intent that he myghte saue hym.

These men perceauynge the kynges minde, sayde vnto hym: knowe this O kyng (that lawe of the Medes and Perses is that the commandement & statute whiche the kyng maketh, may not be altered. * Then the kyng had them bynged Daniel, and they cast hym into the Lyons denne.

The kyng also spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: the God, whom thou alway serueth, may he shall defende the. And there was lought a stone, and layed vpon the wole of the denne, this the kyng sealed with bys owne seal, and wyth the spgnet of bys prynces: that the kynges commandement concerning Daniel shoulde not be broken.

So the kyng wente into his palays, and slept: and meate & nyght nether was there any brought in before hym, neyther could he take any slepe. But by tymes in the mornyng at the breake of the daye, the kyng came, and wente in all haste vnto the denne of the Lyons.

As he came nye vnto the denne, he heard a piteous voyce vnto Daniel, yee the kyng spake and sayde vnto Daniel: O Daniel, thou seruaunt of the lyuynge God, why the God (whom thou alway serueth) shoulde deliuer the from the Lyons? Daniell sayde vnto the kyng: O kyng God saue thy people. * O God hath sent his angell, and hath shut the Lyons mouthes, so that they myghte not hurte me. For why? myne iniquitie is founde out before hym. And as for the, O kyng, I neuer offended the.

Then was the kyng excedyng glad, and commanded to take Daniell out of the denne.
When Daniell was brought oute of the denne, he was founde hurted with foule bys hym. For he put his trust in his God. And as for those men which had accused Daniel, the kyng commanded to byng them, and to caste them into the Lyons denne: the which they did doe. * So the Lyons had the manyng of them, and brake all their bones asonder. When they came at the grounde.

After this, Darius kyng of Persia vnto the people, bynged, and tages, that dwelte in the landes: peace be multiplyed wyth you.
The commandement is, in all my domy-nion and kyngdome, that men feare and stande in awe of Danyels God.

* For he is the lyuynge God, which aby-deth euer: his kyngdome shal not faile, and his power is euerlastyng. * It is he that de-liuereth and saureth: he doth wonders and maruailous workes in heauen and in erth: he hath preserued Danyel fro the power of the Lyons. This Danyel prospered in the reigne of Darius and Cyrus of Persia.

The vii. Chapter.

A vision of four beasts is shewed vnto Daniel, the vision is interpreted of four kyngdomes of the world of the power and increase of Antichrist. Of the euilla kynges kyngdomes of Chyng.

In the fyrste yere of Belshazzar kyng of Babylon, saue Danyel a dreame, and a vision was in his heade vpon bys bedde. Which dreame he wrote, and the summe of the matter is this: Daniell spake and sayde: I saue in my vision by nyght, and beholde: the foure wyndes of the heauē stoune vpon the see, and foure great beastes came vp from the see, one lyke an other.

The fyrst was as a lion, and yet had he eagles wynges. I saue, that his wynges were plucked from hym, and he taken awaye from the earth: that he stode vpon his feet as a man, and that there was gyuen him a mans hearte.

Beholde, the seconde beast was lyke a beare, & stode vpon the one syde. Amonge his teeth in his mouth he had iii. great long teeth, & it was sayde vnto hym: Arise: eate vp moche flesch. Then I looked, and beholde, there was another lyke vnto a leopard, this had wynges as a foule, & enfour vpon the backe. This beast had foure heades, & there was power gyuen him. After this I saue in a vision by nyght, and beholde, the fourth beast was grymme and horrible, and mar-uelous stronge. It had great yron teeth it de-uoured and destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder his feet. It was farre vnylike the other beastes that were before it: for it had ten hornes, wherof I toke good hede.

And beholde, there came vp amonge them another lytle horne, before whō there were thre of the fyrst hornes plucked awaye. Be-holde, this horne had eyes lyke a man: and a mouth speakyng presumptuous thinges.
* I looked tyll the leates were prepared, and tyl the olde aged sat him downe. His clothing was as white as snowe, and the beares of his heed lyke the pure woll. His throne was lyke the fyre flame, and his wheles as the burnyng fyre. There dyde the fourth fyre stream: & went out from him. * A thousand tymes a thous and serued hym. & a thousand ten thousande stode before hym. The iudge-ment was set, and the booke opened. Then toke I hede therunto, because of the voyce of the proude wordes: which the horne spake.

I beholde,

The prophecye.

D I behelde, tyl the beaste was slayne, and his body destroyed, * geuen ouer to be bzente in the fyre.

As for the power of the other beastes also it was taken awaye, but theyr lyues were prolonged for a tyme and season. I sawe in a visyon by night, and beholde, * there came one in the cloudes of heauen lyke the sonne of a man, whych wente vnto the olde aged, before whom they brought hym. Then gaue he him * power & dignite regall, that all people, trybes and tuges shulde serue him. * his power is an euerlastynge power, which shal neuer be put downe: * his kyngdome endureth vncorrupte. Wy herre was vered, * I Daniel had a troubled sprete wythin me, the vylsion of my head made me afrayed: tyl I gat me vnto * one of them that stode by, to knowe the trueth, concernynge all these thynge. So he tolde me, and made me vnderstande the interpretaciō of these thynge.

E These foure great beastes, are foure kynges which shal aryse out of the earth. These shal take in the kyngdome of the sapntes of the most hyst, and possesse it tyll moze & moze for a longe season. After thys I requyred diligently to knowe the trueth, concernynge the fourth beast, whych was so farre vnylike the other beastes, and so horrible: whose teeth were of yron, and his nayles of brasse: whych deuoured and destroyed, and staped the resydue vnder his fete. I despyed, also to knowe the trueth, as touchynge the * ten hoznes that he had vpon his heade, and this other whych came vp after warde, before whose face there fell downe thre, whych hozne had eyes and a mouth that spake presumptuous thynge. I looked wyth a grymmer visage then his felowes. I behelde, and the same hozne made battayll agaynst the sapntes, yee, and gat the victorie of the vntyl the tyme that the olde aged came, that * iudgement was geuen to * cheffest sapntes: and tyl the tyme that the sapntes had the kyngdome in possession. He gaue me thys answer. That fourth beaste shalbe * fourth kyngdome vpon earth: it shal be moze then all other kyngdomes, it shal deuoure, treade downe, and destroye all other landes.

S * The ten hoznes, are ten kynges, * shal aryse out of the kyngdom, after whom ther shal stāde vp another, which shalbe greater then the first. He shal subdue thre kynges, & shal speake wordes agaynst * hyst of all: he shal destroye the sapntes of the most hyst, * and thynche, * he maye charge tymes and lawes. They shalbe grād vnder his power, * vntyl a tyme, two tymes and halfe a time.

But the iudgement shalbe keper, so that his power shalbe taken fro hym, for he shal be destroyed, and peryshe at the laste. As for the kyngdom, power, and all myght that is vnder the heauen: it shalbe geuen to the holy people of the most hyst, * whose kyngdome is euerlastynge: yee, all powers shal serue & obeie hym. Thus farre extende the wordes. Neuertheles, I Daniel was so vered in my thoughtes, that my countenance chāged * but the wordes I kepte styll in my herte.

The viii. Chapter.

A visyon of a knyght betwene a ramme & an he goate. The vnderstandynge of the visyon is of the battell betwene the kyng of Media and the kyng of the Persians. Of the same kyng Antichrist.

In the thyrtyd yere of the raygne of kyng Baltazar, there appeared a visyon vnto me Daniel, after that I had sene the * fyre. I sawe in a visyon (and when I sawe it, I was at Susis in the cheke cytie, which lyeth in the lande of * Elam) and in the visyon, me thought I was by the ryuer of Tylai.

Then I looked vp, & sawe: & beholde there stode before the ryuer, a ramme, whych had two hoznes: and these two hoznes were grete but one was hyer then another: & the hyer came vp behinde. I sawe * this rāme pulsed w his hoznes, agaynst the west agaynst the north, & agaynst the south: so that no beastes myght stāde before hym, nor defende the fro his power: but he dyd as hym lysted, & waxed greaulye. I toke hede vnto thys, and then came there an he goate fro the west ouer the whole earth, and touched not the grounde.

This goate had a maruelous wysden hozne betwixte his eyes, and came vnto the ramme, that had the two hoznes (whome I had sene afore by the ryuer syde) and came scarcely vpon hym with his myght. I sawe hym draw nye, vnto the ramme, being very fearece vpon hym: yea, he gaue hym luche a stroke, that he brake his two hoznes. After that he had the ramme so moche strength as to stāde before hym: but he caste hym downe, trode hym vnder his fete: and no man was able to deliuer the ramme out of his power.

The goate waxed excreasyng grete, and when he was at the strydest, his grete hozne was broken also. * Then grewe there other foure luche lyke in the strade, towards the wyndes of the heauen. Yea, out of one of the leest of these hoznes, there came yet vp another hozne, which waxed maruylous grete towards the south, towards the east, and towards the fayre pleasaunt lande. It grewe vp to the hooft of heauen, whereof it dyd cast some downe to the grounde, and of the skyes also, and trode them vnder fete.

Yea, it grewe vp vnto the pynce of the hooft, from whome the dayly offryng was taken, and the place of the * Actuary cast downe. And a certayne season was grow vnto it, agaynst the dayly offryng (because of wychednesse) that it myght cast downe * veritie to the grounde, and so to prosper in all thynge.

that it went aboate.

Then the third day one of the sayntes spake vnto the saynte sayde vnto one that as he was quethon. How longe shall thys be of the daylye sacrifice and of the wagynabdomynacyon endure: that p Dan-my and p powre shal so be troden vnder ho. And he answered him: Vnto p euening of the mourninge, euen two thousande and the hundred dayes: then shal the Sancturye be closed agayne.

Nowe when I Daniel had sene thys by sight, I sought for the vnderstandynge of it: and there stode before me a thynge lyke vnto a man. And I heard a manes voyce in the mydd of the way, whych cryed, and sayde vnto me. Daniel, make thys man vnderstande p thys. And he came & stode by me. But I was dreaded at thys commynge, and fell downe vnto my face.

Then sayde he vnto me: O thou sonne of man, marcke well, for in the laste tyme shall thys vpon be fulfilled. Nowe as he was speakinge vnto me, I waxed saynt, so p I came to p ground. But he toke hold vpon me, and set me vp agayne, sayinge: Because I wyll shewe the, what shall happen in the laste wathe: for in the tyme appoynted it shalbe fulfilled.

The raimme which thou sawest with p the harnes in the kynge of the Medes and the goate is the kynge of Greke the greates horne that stode betwixte the two, that is the pryncypal kynge. But there as yett shal, and foure other rose vp in the same: it signyfeth, that out of this people shal stande vp foure kyngedomes, but in myghte as it.

After these kyngdomes (whyle vngod-domme is a growing) there shal arysse a kynge of an vnchamefult face, whych shalbe called in darke speakynges.

He shalbe myghty and stronge, but not in his owne strength. He shal destroye aboue him, & all that be goeth aboate shall pro-fite he shal slaye the stronge & holy people.
And he shal by craftynesse, falslye shal pro-fite in his hande, his hert shalbe proude, & he shal be put to death in his welth.
He shal rade vp agaynst the pryncer of the world, & but he shalbe destroyed withoute doubt. And thys vpon that is shewed vnto me, as he was as the eueninge & p morning.
And he wyll thou vp thys spghte, for it shall come to passe.

Nowe thys was I Daniel very saynt, so that I wote the certayne dayes: but when I was vp, I wente aboate the kynges bu-sines, & marueled at the vssyon, neuer the man knewe of it.

The .ix. Chapter.

¶ Daniel desyres to haue that performed of God, which he hath promysed concerninge the returne of p people from thys banishment in Babylon. A true revelation. Daniels prayer is heard. Gabriel the angell respondesth vnto hym the vision of the .ix. weekes.

all thy ryghteousnesse: yet let thy wrothfull displeasure be turned away (I beseeche the) from thy cytye of Jerusalem thy holy hill.
And why: for our synnes sake, & for the wyckednesse ers, knowleginge myne owne synnes, & the synnes of my people, makynge so myne intercession befoze the Lorde my God, for the holy hill sake of my God: yee, whyle I was Gabriel, (* whom I had sene alsoe in the vy-sion) came flyenge to me, and touched me about the offeringe tyme in the enenynge. He informed me, and spake vnto me: O Daniel sayde he: I am nowe come to make the vnderstande it. For as sone as thou beganest fore am I come to shewe þe. And why: * For thou art a man greatly beloued.

be an abhominable desolacyon, tyll it haue destroyed all. And it is concluded, that thys waspunge shall contynue vnto the ende.

The .x. Chapter.

¶ There appereth vnto Daniel a man clothed in hye arm whych he wroth hym wherfore he is sent.

¶ In the thyrtye yere of kyng Cyrus of Iberia, there was shewed vnto Daniel (otherwyle called Balthazar) a matter, yee, a true matter, but it is yet a lgy tyme vnto it. He vnderstode the matter wel and perceaued what the visyon was. At the same tyme: I Daniel mourned for the space of the weekes, so that I had no luste to cate breaue: as for slepe and wyne there came none wythin my mouth: No, I dyd not once anoynte my selfe, tyll the whole the weekes were out.

¶ Vpon the .xxiii. daye of the first moneth, I was by the great floude, called Tigris: & I lyft vp myne eyes, and loke: and beholde a man clothed in linnen, whose lornes were gyrded by wyth fyne gold of Arabys: his body was lyke the Chrysolyte stone, hys face (to loke vpon) was lyke lpyghtenynge, hys eyes as the flame of fyre, his armes and lre were lyke sayre glysterynge metall, but the voyce of hys wordes was lyke the voyce of a multitude.

* I Daniel alone sawe thys visyon, & the men that were wyth me, sawe yt not: but a greate fearfulness fell vpon them, so þe they fled awaye and dyd them selues. I was left there my selfe alone, and sawe this great vy-sion, so longe tyll there remayned nomore strength wythin me. yee, I lost my couloure cleane I wasted awaye, & my strength was gone. Yet hearde I the voyce of his wordes: and as soone as I hearde it, sapntnesse came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the ground vpon my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, whiche let me vp vpon my knes & vpon the palmes of my handes, sayynge vnto me: * O Daniel, thou wel beloued man: take good hede of the wordes, that I shall saye vnto the, and stande ryghte vp, for vnto the am I nowe sent.

¶ And when he had sayde these wordes, I stode vp trembling, Then sayd he vnto me: fear not Daniel: for why: sence þe first day that thou

that thou let thine herte to vnderstand, and knowest that thy selfe before thy God: thy wordes haue bene herde. And I had come vnto the, when thou beganst to speake, had not the prince ouer the kyngdome of Persia be with me. xxi. dayes. But lo, * With one of the chiefe pynces, came to helpe me, and I was left to contynue there with the kyng of Persia, and am come to shewe the, what shall happen vnto thy people in the latter dayes. For it wilbe long yet, of the vnto be fulfilled.

Howe when he had spoken these words vnto me, I caste downe my heade to the grounde and helde my tounge. Beholde, there touched my lippes, one very lyke vnto a man.
Then opened I my mouth, & sayde vnto him I haue before me, O my Lorde, my lordes wordes in the vnto, & there is nomoate strength within me. Howe maye my Lo-rdes seruant then talke w my Lorde: sayng there is no strength in me, so I can not take my breath: vpon thys heere touched me, agayne, one moche lyke a man * & comforted me sayng: O man so well beloued, feare not be content take a good herte vnto the, & be stronge. So when he had spoken vnto me I moued, and sayde: Speake on my Lord, for I haue refreshed me. The sayd he: know est thou wherefore I am come vnto the: now will I go agayne to fyghte with the pynce of the Perses. As soone as I go forth, lo, the prince of Grekland shall come. Neuertheles I will shewe the that thinge, & is fast noted in the scripture of truth. And as for all ponder matters, there is none that helpeth me in them, but Michael poure pynce.

*A prophesie of the kynges of Persia. Of the kyngdome of Media. Of the kyngdome of Egypte, & of the house there, and of the battell with the kyngdome of Syria.
Of the Armes that shal be vnto the kyng of Egypte, whom Antiochus the kyng of Syria persecuteth, wherby he cometh vnto be Antiochus. The pyde of Antiochus.*

IN the fyrste yere of Daryus of Media, I rode by him to comfort hym, & to strength hym and nowe wyl I shewe the the truth. Beholde, there shall stand vnto yet the kynges in Persia, but the fourth shall sette ryche then they all. And when he is in the chiefe pour of his ryches, he shall proue every man agaynst the realme of Greke-land. * Then shall there aryle yet a myghty kyng, that shall rule with great domynion vnto what him lyke. * And as soone as his kyngdome cometh vnto, it shall be destroyed, & be brought toward the foure wyndes of the heauen. They that come after hym, shall not haue the power & domynion as he, but hys kyngdome shall be scattered, yee, euen among other then those. And the kyng of the south shall be myghtier, then hys other pyces. And one shall be stronger then he, and shall rule his domynion with great powre.

And in the ende of yeres, they shall be ioyned together, and the kynges daughter of the south shall come to the kyng of the North to make frendshyppe, but he shall not optaine the powre of that arme, nether shall he be able to endure thow his myght: but she and such as brought her (yee, & he that begat her, and comforted her for his tyme) shall be deliuered vnto. Out of the brasches of her roote, there shall one stande vnto in hys stead whych with poure and armes shall go throwe the kynges lande of the north, and ha-dle hym accordynge to hys strength. As for the Idoles and pynces, with the costly Jewels of golde and syluer, he shall carie the awaye captiues into Egypte, and he shall reigne moze yeres then the kyng of the north.
And when he is come into the kynges realme of the south, he shall be sayne to turne a-gayne into hys owne lande. Wherefore hys sonnes shall be displeased, & shall gather together a myghtie greete hoste of people: and one of them shall come, and go thow like a water floude: then shall he turne, and go forth with edefyinge and boastyng vnto hys owne lande.

Then the kyng of the south shall be angry and shall come forth to fyght agaynst the kyng of the north: yee, he shall byngne a greete multitude of people together, and a greete heape shall be geuen into hys hande: these shall he carie away w greete pryde, for so much as he hath cast downe so many thousand, neuerthelesse, he shall not preuaile.
For the kyng of the north shall gather (of the new) a greete heape of people the afore and come forth (after a certayne tyme and yeres) with a myghtie hoste, and exen-dyng greete good.

At the same tyme there shall many stand vnto agaynst the kyng of the south, so that they shall chylzen of the people also shall exalte them selues (to fulfyll the vnto) & then fall. So the kyng of the north shall come to laye sege, & to take the stronge fenced cyties: And the powre of them of the south shall not be able to abyde hym, and the best men of the people shall not be so stronge, as to resiste him. Shortly when he cometh, he shall ha-dle him as he lyst, & no man shall be so hardy as to stande agaynst hym. He shall stand in the pleasaunt countree, whiche thow hym shall be destroyed: he shall set hys face with all his powre to optayne his kyngdome, and to be lyke it. Yee, that shall he do, and geue him vnto the daughters among women, to de-stroye hym. But he shall sayle, nether shall he optayne hys purpose. After thys shall be let hys face vnto the fles and take many of them. A pynce shall stoppe him, to do him a shame, besyde the confusyon þe els shall come vnto him. Thus shall he turne agayne to his owne lande, stromble and fal, and be nomore founde: so he that came vpon hym & dyd him violence, shall stande in hys place, & haue a pleasaunt kyngdome: & after a fewe dayes he shall be destroyed, and þe nether in wyath, nor in battel. In hys stead there shall arys a vyle person, not holden worthy of a kynges dignyte: this shall come in peaceably, & obtayne þe kyngdome wth sayre wordes: he shall fyght agaynst þe armes of the myghtye (and destroye them) yee, and agaynst the pynce of the couenaunte.

So after that he hath taken truce with him, he shall handle disceitfully: that he may get vp, & ouercome him wth a smal flocke: and so wth craftynesse to get hym to þe fat test place of the lande, & to deale otherwys, then ether hys fathers or graudfathers did. For he shall destroye the thynge, that they had robbed & spoyled, yee, and all they: substaunce, ymagynynge thoughtes agaynst þe stronge holdes, and that for a tyme. His power and hert shall be stered vp wth a greute armye agaynst þe kyng of the south, where thorow the kyng of the south shall be moued the vnto battel, with a great and a myghty hoost also. Neuerthelesse, he shall not be able to stande, for they shall conspire agaynst hym. Yee, they that eate of hys meate shall hurte him: so that hys hooste shall fall, and many be slayne downe.

These two kynges shall be mynded to do myschefe, & talke of disceyte at one table: but they shall not prosper, for why? the ende shall not come yet, vnto the tyme appoynted.

* ii. mach. b.

* Then shall he go home agayne into his owne land with great good and let his hert agaynst the holy couenaunte, he shall be vnspe agaynst it, & then returne home. At the tyme appoynted he shall come agayne, and go towarde the southe. So shall it happen otherwys then at the fyrst, yet once agayne. And why? the shypes with Italias shall come vpon hym, that he maye be smytt and turne agayne: þe maye take indignacis agaynst þe couenaunt of holynesse, so medle agaynst it. Yee, he shall turne hym, and drawe suche vnto hym, as leaue the holy couenaunt.

He shall let myghtye men to vnhalow þe Sanctuary of strength, to put downe the dayly offerynge, and to let vp the abhominable desolacyon. And such as breake the couenaunt shall be flatter with sayre wordes. But the people that wyl knowe they? God shall haue the ouer hande & prospere. Those also that haue vnderstandynge amonge the people shall enforme the multitude: and for a longe season, they shall be persecuted wth swearde, wth fyre, wth captynyte & wth the takynge awaye of they? goodes. Some when they fall, they shall be let vp wth a lytle helpe: but many shall cleue vnto the fainedly.

Yee, some of those that haue vnderstandynge shall be persecuted also, that they may be tryed, purfied, and clenfed, tyll the tyme be out: for there is yet another tyme appoynted. The kyng shall do what hym lyst, & he shall exalte and magnify hym selfe agaynst all that is God. Yee, he shall speake malicious thynge agaynst the God of all Godes wherin he shall prospere, so longe tyll the wyath be fulfilled, for the conclusyon is deuyfed already. He shall not regarde the God of hys fathers, but hys lust shall be vpon me. Yee, he shall not care for God, for he shall magnifye hym selfe aboue all. In hys place shall he worshippinge the myghtie stoute God: & the God whom his fathers knew not, shall be honoure wth golde and syluer, wth precious stones and pleasaunt Jeweles.

Thus shall he do, thorow hys stronge fenced places, setting vp hys straunge God whom he confesseth, and increasyng his glory. Suche as wyl receaue hym, & take hym for God, he shall geue them great worshippe and powre: yee, and make them Lordes of multitude, and geue them the lande with rewarde. In the latter tyme shall the kyng of the south stryue wth hym: and the kyng of the north in lyke maner shall come agaynst hym with charettes, horsmen and wth a great nauy of shippes. He shall come into the landes, destroye and go thorow: he shall entre also into the sayre pleasaunt lande: Many cyties & countres shall decaye * excepte Edom, Moab, and the beste of the chyldren of Ammon, whych shall escape from hys hande. He shall stretch forth hys handes vpon the countrees, & the lande of Egypte shall not escape hym. For thorow his going in, he shall haue domynion ouer þe treasures of syluer & gold and ouer all the precious Jewels of Egypt, Libia, & Ethioyya. * Neuerthelesse, the dynges out of the east & the north shall trouble him, for the whych cause he shall go forth to destroye and roote out a great multitude. The tentes of hys palace shall be pyched be twyrt the two sees, vps the hyl of the noble Sanctuarie, for he shall come to his death, * and then shall noman helpe hym.

The booke of the prophete Oseas

The. xxi. Chapter.

¶ The tyme wherein Oseas prophesied. Oseas by his lyngs an harlot to his wyfe, signified the holocry of the people. The destruction of the offspring of Ju da, and of the Israelites, is prophesied.

This is the word of the Lord that came vnto Oseas, son of Beery in the dayes of Oseas, Joathas, Ahaz & Je zekias kinges of Iuda & in the tyme of Jeroboam the so ne of Joas kyng of Israel.

¶ First, when the Lord spake vnto Oseas he sayde vnto hym: So thy wyfe, take an harlot to thy wyfe, and get chyldren by her:
for the lande hath committed great whoredom agaynst the Lord. So he went, & take Go mer the daughter of Deblaim: which concea ned, and brought forth a sonne. And the Lord sayd vnto hym: call his name Israel: for I will shortly auenge the blood of Israel vpon the house of Iehu, and will bring the kingdome of the house of Israel to an ende.
Then will I breake the bowe of Israel, in the valley of Israel.

¶ So he conceived yet agayne, and beare a daughter. And he sayde vnto hym: Call her name: Loruhamah (that is, not optayning mercy): for I will haue no ppyte vnto the house of Israel, but forget the and put them cleane out of remembrance. ¶ Nevertheless I will haue mercy vpon the house of Iuda, and will saue them, euen thowowe the Lord they? God. But I will not deliuer them thowowe my bowe, swearde, battel, horses, or horsemen.

¶ Nowe whil she had weyned Loruhamah, she conceived agayne, and bare a sone. The Lord sayde he cal his name, Loamy. For why? ye are not my people, therfor wyl I not be your God. And though the nombre of the chyldre of Israel be as the sande of the see, whyched neither be measured nor told: yet in the place where it is sayde vnto them: ye be not my people: euen there shal it be thus reported of them. ¶ They be the chyldren of the whoring God: ¶ Then shall the chyldren of Iuda and the chyldren of Israel be gathered together agayne, and chose themselves one head, and then departe out of the lande: for great shal be the daye of Israel.

The. ii. Chapter.

The prophete

* Jer. lli. a her * for she is not my wyfe, nether am I her husband, onlesse she put awaye her whoord out of my syght, and her aduouty from her brestes. If no, I shal strippe her naked, & set her * euen as she came into the worlde: yee, * Eccl. xli. a I shal laye her wast, & make her lyke a wyll dernes and slape her for thyghte. I shal haue no ppyte also vpon her chyldzen, * for they be the chyldzen of fornicacyon.

Ther mother hath broken her wedlocke, and she y bare them * is come to confusyon.
* Eccl. xli. a 25 For she sayde: I wyll go after my louers, y geue me my water and my breade, my woll & flaxe, my oyle & my dysyncke. But I wyll hedge her waye with thornes, and stoppe it that she shal not fynde her foteystepes: and thoughe she runne after her louers, yet shal she not get them: she shal seke them, but not fynde them. * Then shal she saye: wel, I wil go turne agayne to my fyrste husbnde, for at y tyme was I better at ease, then now.
But thys wolde she not knowe, where as I yet gaue her corne, wyne, oyle, siluer & gold * wherof she hath hanged vpon Baal.

Wherfore, now wyll I go take my corne and wyne agayne in the y season, and fet a gayne my woll & my flax, which I gaue her, to couer her shame. * And now wyll I disco uer her folynesse, euen in the sight of her lo uers, and no man shal deluyer her out of my hades. * Moreover, I wyll take awaye al her myght * her holy dayes, her new mones, her Sabbathes and all her solempne feastes: I wyll destroy her bynyardes and sytters y ghe she saythe: lo, her are my rewardes, that my louers haue geuen me. I wyll make it a woodde, and wyld beestes shal eate it vp: I wyll punyche her also for the dayes of Baal,

* wherin he censured him, deckynge him with her earpynges & cheynes when she followed her louers, and forgat me sayeth the Lorde.
Wherfore beholde, I wyll cal her agayne byrynge her into a wyldernes, speake friend ly vnto her: there wyll I geue her her bynyar des agayne, yee, & the valley of Achor also to shewe her hope and comforte. Then shal she synge there * as in the tyme of her yowth and lyke as in y daye when she cam out of y lande of Egypte. * Then sayeth the Lorde, she shal saye vnto me) O my husband, and shal cal me nomoze Baal: for I wyll take a waye those names of Baal from her mouth yee, she shal neuer remembre their names any more. * The wyll I make a couenaunt with them, with the wyld beastes, with the fou les of the ayre, and with euery thyng that crepeth vpon the earth.

* As for howe, sword and batel, I wyll destroye suche oute of the lande, & wyll make them to slepe safely. * Thus wyll I mary the vnto myne owne self for euer more: yee, eue n my selfe wyll I mary y in ryghteounesse, in equyte, in lounge kyndnesse and merite.

In sayth also wyll I mary the vnto my selfe and thou shalt knowe the Lorde. At y same tyme wyll I shewe my selfe friendly and gra cious vnto the heauens, sayeth the Lorde: y the heauens shal helpe the earth, and y earth shal helpe the corne, wine and oyle, and they shal helpe Israel. * I wyll sow them vpon earth, for a sede to myne owne selfe, & wyll haue mercye vpon her, that was wythoute mercy. And to them which were not my peo ple, I wyll saye thou arte my people, and he shal saye thou arte my God.

The liii. Chapter.

Of the loue of God towards the people

Then sayde the Lorde to me: * So yet I thy way and wowe an aduouterous woman, who thy neyghboure loneth as the Lorde doth y chyldre of Israel: howe best they haue respecte to straunge goddes, * and loue y wyne cannes. So I gat her for
xv. splenetynges, & for an homer & an halfe of Barly, & sayd vnto her: Thou shalt byde with me a lōge ceason, but se y thou playste not the harlot, & loke thou medle wyth none other man, & then wyll I kepe my selfe for y.

* Thus the chyldzen of Israel shal yet a great while without kyng and prince, with out offeryng and aulter, wythout prest & re uelacyon. But afterwarde shal the chyldre of Israel conuert, and seke the Lorde the y God, and * Dauid the y kyng: & in the lat ter dayes they shal worshyp the Lorde, and his lounge kyndnesse.

A complaine agaynst the people and the prestes of Israel.

Care the worde of the Lorde, O y re chyldzen of Israel. For the Lorde must punyche them, that dwell in y lande. And wherther is no truth, there is no merite, ther is no knoweleg of God in the lade: but swearynge, lyng, manslaughter: theste & aduouty haue gotten the ouer bande & one bloudgytlesse foloweth another. Therfore shal the lande be in myserable case, & all they that dwell therein, shal be roted out. The bea stes in the felde, the foules in the ayre, and y fythes in the see shal byge. Yet is there none y wil challen nor reproue another. * For the people rebuketh the prestes, wherof shal be fourme other men.

Therfore stamblest thou in the day tyme & the prophet & the in y nyght. I wyll brynge thy mother to silence, and wher * my people perish, because they haue no knoweleg. We inge then y thou haste refused vnderstāding therfore wyll I refuse the also: so that thou shalt nomoze be my prest. And for so much as thou haste for gotten y law of thy God, I wyll will also forget the chylde. The more they increased in the multitude, & more they synned agaynst me, therefore wyl I chaunce they?

I will bringe into shame. * They ate vp the synner into shame. * They ate vp the synner into shame. * Thus the priest is become like the people. Wherefore I wyl punyssh them for theyr wicked wayes, and rewarde them accordinge to theyr owne ymagynacions.
They shall eate & not haue ynough. They shall be wylde whoredome, therefore shall they not knowe: & why? they haue forsaken y Lord and not regarde hym.

Whoredome, wyne & dyckenesse taketh the heart away. * My people aske counsell at the fowles, they shall be deceived. For in whoredome they haue deceyued them so that they consume fornicaciō agaynst their soules. * They make sacrifices vpon the hye mountaynes, & burne theyr incense vpon the trees, yee, among the oaks, groues & bushes for they are good shadowes. Therefore, poure your wrath vpon them, for they are become harlottes, and your wrath shall be broken theyr wedlocke, I wyl take away your daughters for being de-ceyued, & your bydes & became whores: * seing that they haue selues haue medled with har-lots, & offered vnto theyr fystes: but the people they wyl not understande must be punysshed.

Though thou Israel art disposed to play the harlot, yet shouldest not thou haue offeded, & thou shouldest not haue runne vnto Egypt: nor haue gone vp to Bethan: nor haue wome, the Lord lyueth. For Israel is nowe like a wanton cowe. The Lord therefore shall make her fede, as y lambe that goeth astray. And where as Ephraim is become partaker of Idoles: well, let hym go, theyr dyckenesse hath put them backe, and brought them to whoredome. Theyr rulers are rewardes, byngge (saye they) to theyr owne shame. A wynd shall take hold of their lawes, and theyr lawes shall be confounded in their countrys.

The v. Chapter.

Against the priests and rulers of Israel.

Priest: heare this, take hede, O y household of Israel: geue eare. Thou synngst donse, for it were youre part to be iudged done, but you are become a house into Whoredome, and a spred net vnto the mount of Chabor. They kyll sacrifices by lawes. And turne farre from the Lord, & be come a rebuker of them all. * I know Ephraim wel ynough, ad Israel is not hyd from me: for Ephraim is now become an harlot, Israel is defiled. They are not minded to turne vnto theyr God, for they haue an inward heart, so y they cannot knowe y Lord.
The pyde of Israel wyl be rewarded in his face, yee bothe Israel & Ephraim shall be synnged, & Juda with them also. * They shall come to theyr shepe and bullockes: to seke the Lord, but they shall not fynde hym, for he is gone from the.

As for the Lord, they haue refused hym, and brought vp bastarde chylde: a moneth they foze shall deuour them with theyr paysons.
Blow with the shawmes at Sibeā, & with y trompet in Ramah, crye out at Bethanem vpon the ponyde of Ben Jamin. In y tyme of the plage shall Ephraim be layed waste, therefore byd I saythfully warne the trybes of Israel. Yet are the prices of Juda become lyke them: that remoue the lande marches, therefore wyl I powre out my wrath vpon the lyke water. Ephraim is oppressed, & can haue no ryght of y lawe: for why? they folo-we y doctrynes of vngodly men. Therefore wyl I be vnto Ephraim as a moth, and to y house of Juda a caterpyller.

When Ephraim sawe hys synnesse, and Juda hys dysease, * Ephraim wente vnto Assur, and sent vnto kyng Jareb: yet could not he helpe you, nor ease you of your payne, I am vnto Ephraim as a lyon, & as a Lyons whelp to the house of Juda. Euen, I wyl spole them, & go my way. I wyl take them with me, & no man shall rescue them. I wyl go, and retourne to my place, tyl they knowe ledge that they haue synned and seke me.

The vi. Chapter.

Against the priests and rulers of Israel.

If they aduersyte, they shall earlie I seke me, & saye: come, let vs turne a-gayne to the Lord: * for he hath synned vs, and he shall heale vs by agayne, after two dayes shall he quyen vs, in the thyrde daye he shall rayle vs vp, so y we shall lyue in his syght. Then shall we haue understandyng, and endeneur oure selues to knowe the Lord. He shall go forth as the springe of the daye, and come vnto vs: as the cunynge & mornyng rayne vpon the earth.

Ephraim, what shall I do vnto the? O Juda, howe shall I intreate the: seing your loue is lyke a morning cloude, & lyke a dewe y goeth early awaye. Therefore haue I cut downe the prophetes, and let the be slayne for my wordes sake: so that theyr synnges shall come to lyght. * For I haue pleasure in louynge kyndnesse: and not in offeryng, yee, in the knowledge of God, more the in burnt sacrifice. But eue lyke as * Adā byd, so haue they broken my conuynant, and let me as naught. Silead is a crite of wicked doers of malycious people, and bloudshedders. And as they are armed, wayte for hym y passeth by the waye: sicke is the counsell of the presentes which with one agreed couel, must be cruelly such as kepe the waye: yee, they dare do all vnto preacheable myghte. * Wherfore thynges haue I sene in the house of Israel, there playeth Ephraim þ barlot and Israel is defiled: pee, and thou Iuda kepest an har- uest for thy selfe. when I returne the capti- uytie of my people.

The vii. Chapter.

Of the byces and wantonnes of the people.

When I vnder take to make Israel whole then the vngaciousnesse of Ephraim and the wyckednes of Samaria com- meth to lpghte: then go they aboute with ly- es: ther for the thefe robbeth win: & without the spoyler destropeth. They confidre not in thep: hartes, that I remembre all thep: wy- kednes. Howe they: owne inuencions haue be set them, which I se wel ynough. * They make the kynges & the pynces, to haue plea- sure i thep: wyckednes & lies. Al these burne in aduoutre, as yt were an ouen þ the baker heateth, when he hath left kneadynge, tpi þ dowe be leuened. Euen so goeth it this day wyth oure kinges and pynces, for they be- gynn to be wodde bronckē thorow wyne: they vse familiarite w such as deceaue them. They wyth the ymagynacion of their bert are lyke an oue, their slepe is al þ nyght lyke the slepe of a baker. in the moynynge is he as hote as the flame of fier: they are al together as hote as an ouen.

C They haue deuoured thep: owne iudges, all thep: kynges are fallen: yet is there none of them that called vpon me. Therfore must Ephraim be myrte amonge the heathen: Ephraim is become lyke a cake, þ nomā tur- neth, straigers haue deuoured hys strength. Pee, he regardeth it not: he wareth the full of grape beares, yet wpll he not knowe it, * & þ pynde of Israel is cast downe befoze thep: face, yet wpll they not turne to þ Lord thep: God, nor seke hym for all thys.

Ephraim is lyke a doue, that is beggled, and hath no bert: * Howe call they vpon the Egyprians, now go they to the Assyrians: but whyle they be goynge here and there, I shall speede my net ouer them, & draw them downe as the foules of the ayre: & accordyng as they haue bene warned, so wpl I punishe the.

D Wo be vnto them, for they haue forsa- ken me. They must be destroyed for they haue set me at naughte, * I am he that hath rede- med them, and yet they dessemble wyth me. * They call not vpon me wyth thep: bertes, but lye howlyng vpon thep: beddes. Albet as they come together, it is but for meate & dypncke, and yet they wpll not obey. I haue taughte them, and defended thep: arme, yet do they ymagyn mischefe against me. They turne them selues, but not to þ most best, & are become as a broken bow. Their pynces shalbe slayne wyth the sword, for þ malice of thep: tungen, such scoynes shal they haue in the lande of Egypte.

The viii. Chapter.

Of the destruction of Iuda and Israel, because of thep: Idolatry.

S Et the hozne to thy mouth, & blow thy wyrtip (as an Aegle) shal the en- mye come agaynst the house of the Lord: for they haue broke my: co- nenaunt, & trasgressed my law Israel shal haue sayd vnto me: þ art my God, we know þ: but he hath refused the thyng þ is good, therfore shal þ enemy folowe vpon him. * They haue ordeyned higes, but not thorow me: they haue made pynces, and I must not knowe of it. * of thep: syluer and golde haue they made them Images, to bypge the sel- ues to destruccō. * Thy cause O Samaria shalbe taken awaye, for my wrothful indig- nacyon is gone forth agaynst þ. Howe longe wpll it be, or they can be clesed. For þ calle cā from Israel, þ wozechmā made it, therfor cā it be no God, but euē in peces shal þ calle of Samaria be broken. They haue towne wynd, therfore shal they reape a scoyme.

They: sede shal bear no corne, there shal no meale be made of thep: encrease: though they reape, yet shal straigers deuoure it. Israel shal perishe. þ Sentples shal inreat hym as a foule vessell. Hence they went vp to þ Assyrians, they are become lyke a wyld alle in the deserte.

* Ephraim geneth rewardes to get louers and though they byze them among the hea- then, yet now wpll I gather the vp. They shal begynne to be werped wyth the burth of kinges and pynces. Ephraim hath made many aulters to do wyckednesse, his aulters (I say) he had to his sinne. Though I shew them my lawe neuer so much, they counte it but straig doctrine. Albet as they do sacry- fyce, offerynge the fleshe and eatynge it: the Lord wpl haue no pleasure therein: but wpl remembre thep: wyckednes, & punishe thep: synnes. * Israel turneth agayne into Egypt they haue forgotten hym that made them, they buyd fayre palaces, and Iuda maketh many stronge cyties: * therfore wpl I sende a fyze into thep: cyties, and it shal consume thep: palaces.

The ix. Chapter.

Of the hunger and captiuitie of Israel.

D not thou trypumpe, O Israel, make no boastyng ouer iopoule thynges as do the heathen, for þ haste comypted aduoutre agaynst the God: whozsh rewardes hast thou loued, more then all the come floures.

* Therfore shal they nomoze enioye the cornedozes and wynepysses, and thep: swete wyne shal fayle them. They wpl not dwell in the Lordes lande * but Ephraim turneth agayne into Egypte, and eateth vncleane thynges amonge the Assyrians: They poure out no wine for a drinck offering vnto the Lord.

Lozde. What will ye do then in y^e solempne Egypte shall receaue them, Assyrie shall busaluacyon is come, the dayes of recompen-se are at hande. And then shall Israel knowe that they were deceiued by a prophet that was mad, and in a frensey: for the multitude of thyne iniquitie God shall multiplye punyshe agaynste the. Ephraim hath made himselfe a watchman of my God, a prophet that is become a snare to do hurte in euerye stepe, and abhominacyon in the house of his God. They be gone to farre, & haue destruyed them selues, lyke as they dyd afore tyme in Sabaon: therfore their wychednes shall be remembred, and they: synnes punyshed.

I founde Israel lyke grapes in the wyldernes, and sawe they: fathers as the fyfthe figges in the toppes of the figgetree. * But they are gone to Baal Peor, & runne awaye uncomparable as their louers. Ephraim sy-so muche, that they shall neyther begette, come nor beare chyldren. And though they lynge vpon my, yet wyl I make them chyldren amoge men. Pee, wo shall come to the, when I depart from them. * Ephraim (as the sycke) is planted in wylthines, lyke as the cypress, but now must he byynge her owne synne forth to the manslayer.

O Lozde thou shalt geue the: what shalt thou geue them? geue them an vnfrutefull wombe & drye brestes. All they: wychednes shall be as y^e Gilgall, there do I abhorre the.
In the vngacyousnes of they: owne inuenytie: I wyl dryue them out of my house. I wyl loue them nomoze, for all they: prynces are vnfaithful. Ephraim is breuen downe, they rote is dryed vp, so that they shall lynge nomoze frute, pee, and though they lynge my, yet wyl I slaye even the best beloved frute of they: body. My God shall caste them awaye, for they haue not bene obedient vnto hym, therfore shall they go astraye amonge the heathen.

The .x. Chapter.

Against Israel and bypocrisies.

Israel was a goodly & bynne, but he hath brought forth vnprofyta-ble frute: pee, & moze frute he had, the mo aulters he made: the moze good I dyd to their labe, the moze frendshyppe shewed they to they: ymages.
Their herte is deuyded, therfore wyl they be destroyed. The Lozde shall breake downe their ymages, he shall destroye their aulters.
Then shall they saye: we haue no kynge, for why we haue not feared y^e Lozde. And what shall then the kynge do to vs? They comen together, and sweare dayne othes: they be confederat together, therfore groweth their punishment, as the wedes in the sowowes of the lande.

They that dwel in Samaria haue woishipped the calfe of Bethau: therfore shall the people mourne ouer them. Pee, & the prestes also, that in they: wylthynesse reioysed wth them: and why? it shall passe awaye fro them. It shall be brought to the Assirian, for a present vnto kynge Iareb. Ephraim shall receaue full punishment. Israel shall be confounded for hys owne ymagynacions.
Samaria wyl hys kynge shall vanishe awaye as the scomme in the water. The hye palaces of Auen where Israel do synne, shall be cast downe: thistles & thornes shall growe vpon they: aulters. * Then shall they saye to the mountaynes: couer vs, and to the hylls: fall vpon vs.

O Israel, thou hast synned as * Sabaon dyd afore tyme, where they remayned: wuld not the battayll then come vpon the wyched chyldren, as well as vpon the Sabaonettes?
I wyl chasten them, euen after myne owne desyre, the people shall be gathered together ouer them, when I punyche them for they:
great wychednesse. Ephraim was vnto me, as a howe y^e is vled to go to plowe, therfore I loved hym, and fell vpon hys sayre necke.
I dydne Ephraim, Iuda plowed, and Jacob played y^e husbande mā. Sowe vnto righ-teousnes, and reape the frutes of wyldeynge: plowe vpon youre frethe land, for it is tyme to seke the Lozde tyll he come and rapne rygh-tuousnesse vpon you. But you haue plowed vngodlynes: ye haue reped iniquitie, you haue eaten the frute of lyes. Seynge thou puttest thy confidene in thyne owne wayes, ad leane to the multitude of thy wylthines: there shall growe a sedicion amoge thy people. Al thy stronge cyties shall be layed wast, euen as Samana was destroyed wth hys familyers, thowowe hym that was auenged of Abell, in the daye of battayll, where the mother perished wth her chyldren. Euen so shall it go wth you (O Bethel) because of your malpicious wychednesse. Lyke as the

When Israel was younge, I loued hym: * I called my sonne out of the lade of Egypt. But the more they were called, the more they wente backe: offeringe vnto Idols of Baal, & setting Images. I lerned Ephraim to go, and bare them in myne armes, but they regarded not me, that wolde haue helped them. I led them wpyth coardes of frendshyppe, and with bandes of loue. I was euen he, I layed I poche vpo their neckes. I gaue them fodder my self that they shulde not go agayne into Egypt. And now is Assur they: kynge. For they wolde not turne vnto me. Therefore shal the swerde begynne in their ctyes, the scoare I they haue layed vpon. shalbe destroyed and eaten: and I because of they: owne ymagynacions. And my people shal stande in a doubte whytther to turne them, for when the prophetes called them to the most hyst, not one yet wolde geue hym hys glozpe.

What greates thynges haue I geuen the, O Ephraim: how fapthfully haue I defended the, O Israel: haue I deale with the as wyth Adamas: or haue I intreated the lyke Seboim: No, my hert is otherwyle minded. Pee, my mercy is to feruente: therefore haue I not turned me to destroye Ephraim in my wyrothful displeasure. For I am God and no man, I am euen that holy one in the myddest of the, though I came not wythin the ctye.

The Lorde roareth lyke a lyon, that they maye folowe hym: pee, * as a lycn roareth he, I they maye be afrayed lyke the chyldren of the see, I they may be scatred awaye from Egypt. as me scatred bydes: I fraped awaye (as doves vnto be) fro the Assyrians lande: and that because I wolde haue them tary at home, sayeth I Lorde. But Ephraim goeth aboute me wyth lyes, ad the house of Israel dissembleth. Onely Iuda holdeth hym with God, and wyth the true holy thynges.

The. xii. Chapter.

Of the daye of trest of the people.

Ephraim is fed wyth apye, and foloweth after I east wynde: he is euer increasynge lyes and destruccyon. They be confederate wyth the Assyrians, * they: oyle is carped into Egypte. The Lorde hath a courte to holde Iuda, I wyl punysh Jacob. After their owne wayes and accordynge to they: owne inuencions, shall be recompense them. He toke his bytther by the heile, when he was yet in his mothers wombe: and in hys strenght he wrestled wyth God. He: stroue wyth the angell, and gate the victorie: so that he prayed and bespced hym. He founde hym at Bethel, & there he talketh wyth vs.

Pee, the Lorde God of hostes, euen the Lorde hym selfe remembred hym. Then turne to thy God, kepe mercy and equite, and hope thy selfe in thy God. But I art lyke I marchante I bath a false weyght in hys hand, he bath a pleasure to occupie extorcio. Ephraim thin keth thus: * Tush, I am ryche, I haue good ynough: in al my workes shal not one fante be founde that I haue offered. Yet am I the Lorde thy God, euen as when I brought the out of the lande of Egypte, and set the in thy tentes, and as in the hys feste dayes.

I haue spoken thorowe the prophetes, & shewed byuerse visions, and declared my self by the ministraciō, of the prophetes. But at Galaad is the abhominaciō, they are fall to vanite. At Gilgal they haue sayne oren: as many heapes of stones as they had in they: lade forowes, so many alters haue they made. * Jacob fled into I lād of Siria, & Israel serued for a wyfe, & for a wyfe he kept the.

By a prophete I Lorde brought them oute of Egypt, and by a prophet he pserued the. But Ephraim hath prouoked him to displeasure thorowe his abhominacions, therefore shal hys bloude be poured vpo him selfe, ad the Lorde hys God shal rewarde hym hys blasphemies.

The. xiii. Chapter.

Of the abhominacion of Israel.

When Ephraim spake, I heathen tē bled: and he was exalted amonge I Israelites, but he is gone backe to Baal: Therefore muste he dye. And now they synne more & more: * of their synner they make the molten ymagies, after the ymagynacions of they: owne braines that is very Idols, and yet all is nothyng but the worke of the craftesman. Not wythstāding they preach of I same to such as there sacrificeth: whoso wyllye I calues, offereth perfectiye. Therefore, they shalbe as I moynynge cloude, and as the dewe that early passeth awaye, and lyke as dust that I whoyle wynde taketh awaye, fro the floze, and as smoke I goeth out of the chymney.

* I am the Lorde God, whych brought the out of the land of Egypt: that thou shuldest knowe no God but me onely, and that thou shuldest haue * no sauoure but onely me. I toke diligent hede of the in the wyldernes I dyre lande. But when they were well fedde and had ynough, they wared proude, & forgat me: therefore wyllye I be vnto the as a lycn and as a leopard in I wayes to I Assyrians. I wyl come vpo the as a she beare, I I robbed of her whelpes, & I wyl becke I subburne hert of thes. There wyl I deuoure the as a lycn: pee, the wyld beasts shal tear the.

* O Israel, thynne iniquyte hath destroyed I, but in me onely is thy helpe. Alther are thy kynnes now, that shulde helpe the in all thy ctyes: Pee, and thy iudges, of whom thou saydest gentle me a kynge and princes (wel) I am the a kynge in my wrath, and in my displeasure wyl I take him from pagayne. The wickednesse of Ephraim is bounde together, and hys synne I perth byd. Therefore shall sorowes come vpon hym, as vpon a wound that trauapleth. And vndiscrete sone wyl he for he considereth not, that he shulde not have be able to haue endured in the tyme of trybtyd, had not I defended hym from the enemy, and deliuered hym from death.

Death, I wyl be thy death: O hel, I wyl be thy synge; yet can I se no comfort, when he is now the godlyeste amonge the brethren, the east wynde (euen the wynde of the Lorde) shall come downe fro the wyl-dernesse and drepe vpon hys conduyter, & synke vpon hys welles: he shall spoyle the treasure of all pleasant vessels.

As for Samaria, they shalbe made waste, and why they are disobediēt vnto their God they shall perth wth the swearde, they shalbe slayne, and their wemē great wth chyldre shalbe cryte vp.

The. xliii. Chapter.

The destruction of Samaria.

Israil, * turne the nowe, vnto the Lorde thy God: for thou hast take a great fall thowowe thy wickednes. Take these wordes wth you, when ye turne to the Lorde, and saye vnto hym: O, forgyue vs all oure iniquities, receaue vs graciously, * and then wyl we offre the bullockes of oure lippes vnto the. The. fyrste. Chapter.

This prophete against the Syrians. He rebuketh the Syrians to piety and sayngs for the myrte that was cuttynge at hande.

This is the worde of the Lorde, that came vnto Joel the sone of Phatuell. Heare, O pe elders: ponde thys wel, all ye that dwell in the lande: yf euer there happened such a thyng in your dayes, or in the dayes of your fathers. Tell your chyldren of it, & let them shewe it vnto they: chyldren, and so they to certyspe they: posterite therof. Loke what the caterpyller hath left, & hath the gresshoper eat, vpon what & gresshoper left, & hath the locust eat vpon: ad what the locust hath left, that hath the blastynge consumed. Make ye dyonhardes, and wepe: mourne all ye wynecuppers, because of your swete wyne, for it shal be taken awaye from your mouth. Yee, a mightie ad an innumerable people shal come vpon into my lande: these haue teeth lyke the teeth of yrons, and chafbones lyke the lyonelles. * They shal make my vyneyarde waste, they shal pyl of the barches of my sygetrees, cryp the bare, cast them away, and make the bryanches whyte.

Make thy mone as a vyrgyn doth that crydeth her selfe wth lacke, because of her bydegroue. For the meate and dryncke of fringe shalbe taken awaye from the house of the Lorde, and of the priestes the Lordes misters shal mourne. The felde shalbe wasted, the lande shalbe in a myserable case: for the corne shalbe destroyed, the swete wyne shal come to confusyon, and the oyle vterly desolate. The husbandmen and the wyne gardeners shal loke pyteously and make lamentacyon, for the wheate, wyne and barly, and because the harvest vpon the felde is so cleue destroyed. The grapegatherers shal make greete mone, when the vyneyarde and sygetrees be so vterly wasted. Yee, all the pgranates, palmetrees, apietrees, & the other trees trees of the felde shall wyther awaye. Thus the mery cheare of the chyldren of men, shall come to confusyon.

Gryde you, and make your mone, O ye prestes, mourne ye mynisters of the aulter: goo your waye in, and slepe in sackcloth, O ye officers of my God: for the meate & drinck offerynge shall be taken awaye fro the house of your God. Proclayme a fastynge, cal the congregacyon, gather the elders: and al the inhabytours of the lande together into the house of the Lorde your God, and crye vnto y^e Lorde: alas, alas for thys daye. And why? the daye of the Lord is at hande, and cometh as a destroyer from the almyghtye. Shall not the meates be taken awaye before oure eyes, the myght also and ioye from the house of oure God? The fede shall perishe in the grounde, the garners shall lye waste, the floures shall be broken downe, for the corne shall be destroyed. What a syghynge make the kynne? bullockes are in very euell lykynge, because they haue no pasture: and the shepe are famished awaye.

O Lorde, to the wyll I crye: for the fyre hath consumed the goodly pastures of the wilderness, and the flame hath byrente vp all the trees of the felde. Yee, the wyld beasts crye also vnto the, for the water cypers are dyed vp, and the fyre hath consumed the pastures of the wilderness.

The ii. Chapter.

The propheseth the commynge and crueltye of the p^rynces, An exhortacyon to moue them to conuert.

Lowe out the trôpette in Syon, and crye vpon my holy hyll, that all such as dwell in the lande, maye tremble at it: for the daye of the Lorde commeth, and is harde at hande: a darcke daye, a gloomyng daye, a cloudy daye, yee, and a sorrowful daye, lyke as the moorynge spredeth out vpon the hilles. Namelye, a great and myghty people: such as haue not bene sence the begynnyng, neyther shall be after the for euermore. Before hym shall be a consumynge fyre, and behynde hym a burnynge flame. The lande shall be as a garden of pleasure before hym, but behynde hym shall it be a very waste wilderness, and there is no man that shall escape hym: They are to loke vpon lyke barbed horses, and runne lyke horses. They shalpe vp vpon the hylls as it were the sounde of charrettes: as the flame of fyre that consumeth the strawe, and as a myghty people redy to the battayll.

The folke shall be afrayed of hym, all faces shall be as blacke as a pot: They shall rûne lyke gyantes, and leape ouer y^e walles lyke me of warre. Every man in his goynge shall kepe his arape, and not go oute of hys path. There shall not one dyue another but eche shall kepe hys owne waye. They shall breake in at the wyndowes, and not be hurt. They shall come into the cytie, & runne vpon the walles. They shall clyme vp vpon the houses, and stypp in at the wyndowes lyke a thefe. The erth shall quake before hym, yee, & heauens shall be moued. The sunne & the moone shall be darchened, and the starrs shall wythdrawe theyr shyne. The Lorde shall shewe hys voyce before hys hooste, for hys hoost is greute, stronge, and myghty to fulfyll hys commaundemente. This is that greute & maruelous fearfull daye of y^e Lord, And who is able to abyde it.

Nowe therfore sayeth the Lorde: Turne you vnto me with all your hartes, with fastynge, wepyng and mournynge, rite your hartes, and not your clothes: Turne you vnto the Lorde your God, for he is gracious and merciful, longe sufferynge and of great compassyon: and redy to pardone wychednes. Then (no doute) he also shall turne, and forgive, and after hys chastenynge, he shall let your increase remayne, for meat and drynke offerynge vnto y^e Lord your God. Blow out with the trôpette in Syon, proclayme a fastynge, call the congregacyon, and gather the people together: warne the congregacyon, gather the elders, bynng the chyldren and sucklynge together. Let the bydegrome go forth of hys chabre, and the byde oute of her closet. Let the prestes serue the Lord betwixt the porche and the aulter, wepyng and sayynge, be fauourable, O Lorde, be fauourable vnto thy people, let not thynne herytage be brought to such confusyon, lest y^e heathen be lordes therof. Wherfore shuld they saye amonge the heathen: where is nowe theyr God.

Then shall the Lorde be gelous ouer hys lande, and spare hys people: yee, the Lorde shall answere, and saye vnto hys people: Beholde, I wyll sende you come, wyne & oyle, so that ye shall haue plenty of them: and I wyll nomore gene you ouer to be a reproofe amonge the heathen. Agayne, as for hym of the north, I shall dyue hym farre from you: and shute him out into a drye & waste lande, his face towards the east see, and his bynde partes towards the vtmost see. The synners of him shall go vp, and hys synners shall fall vpon him selfe, because he hath dealt so prouidly. Feare not (O lande) but be glad and reioyse, for the Lord wyll do great thynges. Be not ye afrayed, neyther (O ye beastes of the felde) for the pastures shall be grene, and the trees shall beare their frute: the bygetrees and bynepardes shall gene theyr increase.

Be glad then (O ye chyldren of Syon) and reioyse in the Lorde your God, for he hath had given you a teacher of ryghteousnesse: that shall sende you downe howe of tyme, early and late in the fyrste monyeth: so that the garners shalbe ful of cozne-and the presses plenteous in wyne and oyle.

 And as for the yeres that the gresshoper, locate, wastynge, and caterpyller (my greatest) which I sent amonge you haue eaten up, I shall restore them to you agayne, so þat ye shall haue ynough to eat, & be satysfied: and praise the name of the Lorde your God, that so marvellously hath dealte wth you.

And my people shal neuer be confounded any more. Ye shal well knowe, þat I am in the midst of Israel, and þat I am the Lord your God, & that there is none other, and my people shal nomore be broughte to confusion.

After this, wpll I poure oute my spete vpon all fleshe: and poure sonnes and poure daughters shal prophesy: your olde me shal dreame, and poure yonge men shal halowen, yee, in those dayes I wpll poure out my spete vpon seruantes and maydes.
 I wpll shewe wonders in heauen above and tokens in the earth beneth bloude and fyre, and the vapoure of smoke. The sunne shalbe turned into darkenes, and the moone into bloude before the great and notable daye of the Lorde come. And the tyme shall come, þat whosoever calleth on þe name of the Lorde, shalbe saved: for vpon the mounte Syon and in Jerusalem, there shalbe a saluacion, lyke as the Lorde hath promysed: yee, and amonge in other remnaunte, whome the Lorde shal save.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

Of the iudgement of God agaynst the enemies of his people.

TO take hede: in those dayes and at the same tyme, when I turne a-gayne the captiuite of Iuda & Jerusalem: I shall gather all people together, and byynge them in the valley of Josaphat: and there wpll I reason with the, because of my people and heritage of Israel: whome they haue scattered about in the nations: and parted my lande: yee they haue solden for my people, the yonge men haue solden in the bordell house, & solde the damsel for wyne, & they myght haue to drinke, when Tyris and Sydon and all ye hoz-bers of the Philistines: what haue ye to do with me? wpll ye despyse me? well, yf ye wpll neglect me, I shall recompence you, euen as your deade, and þat ryght woorthely: for ye haue taken awaye my splauer & golde, my robe and goodly Jewels, and broughte the into your goddes houses. The chyldren also of Tyris and Jerusalem haue ye solde vnto þe heathen, & ye myght byynge them farre from the borders of theyr owne countrees.

Beholde therfore, I wpll rapse them out of the place, where ye haue solde them, * and wpll rewarde you euery vpon your head. Pour sonnes and poure daughters wpll I sell tho-rowe the handes of the chyldren of Iuda, and so they shall geue them forth to sell, vnto the of Saba, a people of a farre countree: for the Lorde him selfe hath sayde it. Crye out these thynges amonge the Gentyles, & proclayme warre, wake vp the gyauntes, let the drawe nye, let them come vp al þat lustye warriours of the. * Wake you swerdes of poure plow shares, and speares of poure speles & sythes. *
 Let the weake man saye: I am stronge. *
 Stre you, & come all ye heathen roude about: gather you together, there shall þe Lorde laye all the gyauntes to the grounde. Let the people arple, & get the to the valley of Josaphat for there wpll I syle, & iudge al heathen roude about. * Lay to poure sythes, for þe haruest is ripe: come get you downe: the wynepresse is ful, yee, the wynepresses runne out, for their wyckednes is waken great.

In the valley appoynted, there shalbe many people: for the daye of the Lorde is nye in the valley appoynted. * The sunne ad moone shalbe darkened, and the starres shal wythe drawe theyr lyghte. * The Lorde shall roare out of Syon, & crye out of Ierusalem, that the heauens and the earth shall quake wythall.
 But the Lorde shalbe a defence vnto his owne people and a refuge for the chyldren of Israel.
 Thus shall ye knowe, that I the Lorde your God dwell vpon my holy mounte of Syon: Then shall Jerusalem be holy, and ther shal no straungers go thowen her any more.

* Then shal the moūtaynes droppe swete

 Al þe riuers of Iuda shal haue water ynough and out of the Lordes house there shal flowe a springe, to water the broke of * * but Egypt shalbe layed waste, & Edom shalbe desolate: because they haue deale so cruelly wyth the chyldren of Iuda, and shed innocent bloud in theyr land. Agayne, Iuda shalbe inhabited for evermore, and Ierusalem from generacion to generacion: for I wpll

And he sayde: *The Lord shall roare out of Syon, and shewe his voyce from Ierusalem: so that the pastures of the shepherdes shalbe in a miserable case, and the toppes of Carmell dryed vp.

But I wyl sende a fyre in the house of Hazael, the same shall consume the palaces of Benadab. Thus wyl I breake the barres of Damascus, and rote out the inhabyter from the felde of Auen: And hym that holdeth the scepter, out of the pleasaunt house: so that the people shalbe dryuen out of sayre Siria, sayeth the Lord: Thus sayeth the Lord: For thre and foure wyckedneses of * Gaza, I wyl not spare her: because they make the prisonners yet more captiue, and haue dryuen them into the lande of Edom. Therefore wyl I sende a fyre into the walles of Gaza, which shal denoure her houses. Yet destroyed I the * Amozite before them, that was as hye as the Cedretrees, and as stronge as the oaks: notwithstanding I destroyed his frute from aboute & he rote from vnder.

I raised vp prophetes amonge youre chyldren, and absteyners amonge youre yonge men. Is it not so. O ye chyldren of Israel, sayeth the Lord: But ye gaue the absteyners wyne to drinke, & ye commaunded the prophetes saying: Prophecy not. mely, vnto al the trybes, whom I brought out of Egypt, and ſayde: ye ſhall haue I accepted from all the ge-neracions of the earth: therfore wyl I viſet you in all poure wyckednes. Wape twayne together, excepte they be agreed amonge themſelues: * Woth a Lyon rooze in ſnare vpon the earth where no ſouler is: Taketh a man bys ſnare vp from the grounde, and he catch ſomwhat: Crye they out Ala-ma with the troyet in the ctye, and the people are afrayed: Commeth there any plage vpon ctye without it be the Lozdes doynges?

Woth ſayd the Lozde God no maner of thynge ¶ Therfore, thus ſayeth the Lozde God. This ſhall be troubled and beleged rounde about, the ſtrength ſhall be plucte from the, and the places robbed. Thus ſayeth the Lozde, as an herdman taketh two legges of a ewe out of an eare out of the lpons mouth: Euen

¶ The. v. Chapter.

¶ The ſouth the gouernours of Samaria.

Hear theſe wordes ye ſat hyme, that ſaye vpon the hyll of Samaria: ye that do pooze men wꝛonge, and oppreſſe the nedye ye that ſay to your lozdes: byng hyther, let vs dꝛynke. Therfore, the Lozde hath ſwozne by bys holynes: The dayes ſhall come vpon you, that the enemies ſhall carꝝ you awaye in ſhyppes, and your poſteritie ſhall be caried away vpon ſyppers bookes. Ye ſhall get you out at the gappes one after another, out the kynges palace ſhall you ouerthrow, to make away to eſcape, ſayeth the Lozde.

¶ Ye came to Bethel for to worke vngra-tyoulnes, and haue increaſed your ſynnes at Bilgal: ye brought your ſacrifyces in the mornynge, and your tꝛythes vnto the tꝛyde daie. Ye made a thankeofferyng of leuen, ye promiſed freewyl offerpynges, and proclaimed them. Such luſt had ye. O ye chyldren of Iſ-rael, ſayeth the Lozde God. Therfore haue I geuen you poble teeth in all your ctyes, and ſcarnes of breade in al your palaces: yet wyl ye not turne vnto me, ſayeth the Lozde. Althē there were but thre monethes vnto the har-ueſt, * I wyl held the rayne from you: yea I rayned vpon one ctye: and not vpon another, one peece of grounde was moyſtured wth rayne, and the grounde that I rayned not vpon, was drye. Altherfore two, yet, thre cy-ties came vnto one, to dꝛynke water: but they were not ſatiffied, yet wyl ye not turne vnto me, ſayeth the Lozde.

¶ I haue ſmytten you with dꝛout and bla-ſtynge: and loke howe many orchardes, vy-neyardes, figgetrees and olyuetres ye had: the caterpillar hath eaten them vp. But yet wyl ye not turne vnto me, ſayeth the Lozde: Beſtye haue I ſente amonge you, * as I dꝛyd in Egypt: your yonge me haue I ſlayne wth the ſweard, and cauſed your hoſtes to be taken captiue: I made the ſpyckynge ſa-uour of poure tentes, ſo come vp into poure noſtreils. Yet wyl ye not turne vnto me ſayeth the Lozde. Some of you haue I ouerthro-wen, * as I ouerthrewe Sodome and Go-more: ſo that ye were as a bzande pluct out of the tꝛy. Yet wyl ye not turne vnto me, ſayeth the Lozde. Therfore, thus wyl I handle the agayne, O Iſrael, ye euen thus wyl I handle the. Make the tꝛady then to mete thy God, O Iſrael. For ſo he maketh the mountaynes, he ordeyneth the wynde, he ſee the mornynge and the darkenes, he treadeth vpon the hye places of the earth: the Lozde

For thus sayeth the Lord God: Where as there dwelt a. W. in one cytie, there shalbe left scarce an hundred therein: and where there dwelt an. C. there shalbe scarce ten be left in house of Israel. Nevertheless thus sayeth the Lord vnto the house of Israel: Seeke after me, and ye shall lyue, but seeke not after Bethel. Come not at Gilgal, and go not to Ber-saba: for Gilgal, shalbe carped awaye captyue, and Bethel shal come to naught. Seeke the Lord, that ye maye lyue: lest the house of Ioseph be brynt with fyre and consumed, and left there be none to quenche Bethel.

E Ye turne the lawe to wormewood, & caste downe righteousness vnto the grounde. * Ye forsake the Lord & maketh the. vii. starres & the Oryons, & turneth the night into daye, & of daye he maketh darkenesse. * He calleth the waters of the see, and poureth them out vpon the playne grounde: the Lord is his name. He rayseth destruction vpon & myghtye people, & bringeth downe the stronge hold.
But they owe hym euell wyl, that reponeth them openly: and whoso telleth the & playne trueth, they abhorre hym. For so moche the as ye oppresse the poore, and robbe hym of his beste sustenance: * therefore, where as ye haue buylded houses of square stone, ye shal not dwell in them. Maruelous pleasant vynyardes shal ye plante, but the wyne of the shal ye not dryncke: and why? as for the multitude of poure wychednesse and poure foute synnes, I knowe them right well.
Enemys are ye of the righteous, * ye take rewardes, ye oppresse the poore in iudgment.
Therefore the wyse muste now be sayne to holde his tunge, so wyched a tyme is it.

Seeke after the thinge that is good, & not euell, so shal ye lyue: yee, the Lord God of hoostes shalbe with you, accordinge to your owne desyre. * Hate the euell, and loue the good: & ye wyl be agayne in the porte: and (no doute) the Lord God of hoostes shalbe merciful vnto the remnant of Ioseph. If no (sayeth the Lord God, the God of hoostes) there shalbe mourninge in all stretes, yee, they shal say in every strete: alas, alas. They shal call the husbandman to lamentacyon, and such as can mourne to mourninge. In all vynyardes there shalbe heynesse, for I wyl come amonge you, sayeth the Lord.
Woe be vnto them that desyre the daye of the Lord. Wherefore wolde ye haue it? As for daye of the Lord, it shalbe darcke and not cleare. Yee, lyke as when a man runneth fro a lyon, and a Beere meteth with him: or whē he cometh into the house, & leaneth his hande vpon the wall, a serpent byteth hym. Shall not the daye of the Lord be darcke? & not cleare: shall it not be cloudy, & no shyne in it?

I hate and abhorre your holy dayes, and where as ye ense me whē ye come together, I wyl not accept it. And though ye offere me brent offerings and meat offerings, yet haue I no pleasure therein. As for your fat chichofferings, I wyl not loke vpon the: I way wyth that noyle of thy songes. I wyl not heare thy playes of musyck: but se that equi-tie flowe as the water, and righteounesse as a myghtie streame. O ye house of Israel, * gaue ye me offerings and sacrifices those fourtye yeares longe in the wilderness? yet haue ye set vp tabernacles to pour: * Images and ymages of your Idols, yee, and yf starr of your God Rempha, figures whiche ye made to worshippe them. Therefore wyl I cause you to be carped awaye beyonde Bamascus, sayeth the Lord, whose name is the God of hoostes.

The. vi. Chapter.

¶ Against the pyrces of Israel lyuing in pleasures.

No be to & proud welthy in dayes, to such as thynke them so sure vpon the moūt of Samaria, whiche hold them selues for the best of & world, and rule the house of Israel, euen as they lyft. So vnto Calne, and se: and from thence get you to Hemath the great cytie, and so go downe to Gath of the Philistynes: be they better at ease then these kyngdomes, or the border of the lande wyder then yours? Ye are taken out for the euell daye, euen ye that lyt in the stole of wilfulnesse. Ye that lye vpon beddes of puerp, and vse youre wantonnesse vpon youre couches: ye that eate the best li-bes of the flocke, and the fattest calves of the drooue: ye that synge to the lute, and in playenge of instrumentes compare youre selues vnto * Dauid: ye that dryncke wyne out of goblettes, and anoynte youre selues with the best oyle, but no man is sorow for Iosephs hurte. Therefore, now shal ye be the synners of them, that shalbe led awaye captiue, and the lustye chere of the wylfull shal come to an ende.

The Lord God hath sworne euen by hym selfe (sayeth the Lord God of hoostes) I hate the pryde of Jacob, and I abhorre his palaces: and I wyl geue ouer the cytie, with all that is therein: so that though there re-mayne ten men in one house, they shal dye.
So they: nexte kynsfolkes and the deere borers shal take them, and carry awaye their bones, and saue vnto hym, that is in the innermost house: is ther yet any mo by the? And he shal answer: they are all gone, holde thy

The vii. Chapter.

Of the captiuitie of Israel and Iuda.

The Lorde God shewed me such a vision, beholde there stode one made grethoppers, eue when the come was thotynge forth: after the kynge had clypte hys shepe.

When they undertoke to eate vp all the grene thynges in the lande, I sayde: O Lorde God, be merciful, I beseeche the, who hast helpe vp Jacob that is brought so low: For the Lorde was gracious therin, the Lorde sayde: wel it shal not be. Agayne the Lorde shewed me this vision: beholde, the Lorde God called I hye to punyssh the with the sword: he deuoured the great depe: yee it come to passe alreedy. Then sayde I: O Lorde God, holde thyne hand: for who shuld els be vnto Jacob that is brought so low: So the Lorde was merciful therin, and the Lorde God sayde: well, it will not be.

Whereouer he shewed me this vision: he shewed me the Lorde stode vpon a plastered wal with a masons trowel in hys hande. And the Lorde sayde vnto me: Amos, what seest thou Amos answered a masons trowell. Then sayde the Lorde: beholde, I wyl laye the trowell vnto my people of Israel, & wyl nomoze more them, but the hye schapels of Isaac shall be layed waste, and the churches of Israel shall be desolate, & as for the house of Israel, I wyl stande vpon agaynst it with the sword. vpon this sente Amasiah the priest vnto Jeroboam the kynge of Israel, saying: Amos maketh the house of Israel to rebel agaynst the: the lande can not stande with his wordes. For Amos sayeth: Jeroboam shal dye with the swerde, Israel shalbe led awaye captiue out of theirowne lande. And Amasiah sayde vnto Amos, Get the hence: (thou that canst not stande) and be into the lande of Iuda, get the thynge thynge, and prophecie there: for the prophecie nomoze at Bethel, for it is the chappel, and the kinges court:

Amos answered, and sayde to Amasiah I am neither prophete: nor prophetes sonne, but a keeper of catel. Nowe as I was breakinge downe molberies, & goyn-g to the catel, the Lorde toke me, & sayde vnto me: Go thy waye, and prophecie vnto my people of Israel. And therefore heare thou nowe the worde of the Lorde: Thou sayest: prophecie not agaynst Israel, and speake no thyng agaynst the house of Isaac: wherefore thus sayeth the Lorde. Thy wyfe shalbe de-spoyled in the cite, thy sonnes and daughters shalbe slayne with the swerde, & thy lande shalbe measured out with the lyne. Thou thy selfe shalte dye in an vncleane lande. * * * * *

Israel shalbe driuen out of hys owne cotre.

The viii. Chapter.

Agaynst the rulers of Israel. The Lorde shewed that he wyl fulfill the thynges which he hath decreed vnto agaynst Israel.

The Lorde God shewed me this by-vision: and beholde, there was a mass of somer fruite. And he sayde: Amos what seest thou: I answered: a maunde with somer frute. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: the ende cometh vpon my people of Israel, I wyl no more ouersee the. In foure dayes shal the songes of the temple be turned into sorowe, sayeth the Lorde God: many dead bodys shal lye in euery place, & be caste forth secretly. * Heare this, O ye that opprelle the poore, and destrope the neddy in the lande, saying: When wyl the newe mo-neth be gone, that we maye sel vitaple, and the Sabbath, that we maye haue scarcenes of coyne to make the busshel lesse, and the sy-cle greater: We shal set vp false wayes, that we maye get the poore vnder vs with theyr money, and the neddy also for wo-res: yee, let vs sell the chaffe for coyne.

* The Lorde hath sworn agaynst the pride of Jacob, these wordes of theyr wyl I neuer forget. Shal not the lande tremble, and al they that dwell therin, mourne for this: shal not theyr destruccyon come vpon the lyke a water streame, and flowe ouer them as the flood of Egypte: * At the same tyme (sayeth the Lorde God) I shal cause the fun-ne to go downe at none, and the lande to be barke in the cleare daye. * Pour hye feastes wyl I turne to sorowe, and your songes to mourninge: I wyl bypnyng lackeloth vpon all backes, and baldnes vpon euery brade, ye, suche a mourninge wyl I send them, * as is made vpon an only begotten sonne, & they shal haue a myserable cude.

Beholde the tyme cometh (sayeth the Lorde God) that I shal sende an hunger into the earth, not the hunger of bread, nor the thyrste of water: but an hunger to heare the word of the Lorde: so that they shal goe from one see to the other, yee, from the north vnto the south, runninge aboute to seeke the worde of the Lorde, and shal not fynde it. In that tyme shal the saye virgin & the ponge me-perce the for thyrst, yee, euen they that swore in the execrable calfe of Samaria: and saye as truly as thy God lyueth at Dan: and as nesse shal fal vpon al theyr bedes and theyr posterite shalbe slayne with the swearde. * They shal not fle awaye, there shal not one of them escape, nor be deliuered * Though they were buryed in the hyll, my hande shal fetch them from thence: though they clyme vp to heauen, yet shal I cast the downe: though they hyde them selues vpon the toppe of Carmel, yet shal I seke the out and bringe them from thence: though they crepe downe fro my syghte into the depe of the see, I shal commaunde the serpent, euen there to bite them, & they go away before maunde the swearde, there to slaye them.

they wickednes is come before me. And Jo nas made hym ready to flye vnto Tharsis fro the ptesence of the Lorde, & gat hym do wne to Joppa: where he founde a shyppe re ady for to go vnto Tharsis. So he payed his fare and went abroad, that he myghte go wpth them vnto Tharsis, from the pre sence of the Lorde. But the Lorde hurled a great wynde into the see, so that the shyppe was in leoparde of goinge in peces. Then the mariners were afrayed, ad cryed euery man vnto hys God: & the goodes that were in the shyppe they cast into the see, to lycht it of them. But Jonas gate hym vnder y hat ches, where he layed hym downe & slobied.

So the master of the shyppe came to hym and sayde vnto hym: why sleepest thou?
Arise, call vpon thy God: If God (happely) wyl thyncke vpon vs, that we perishe not.
And they sayde one to another: come let vs cast lottes: that we maye know, for whose cause we are thus troubled. * And so they cast lottes, and the lotte fell vpon Jonas.
Then sayde they vnto him: tel vs for whose cause are we thus troubled: what is thyne occupation: whence comest thou? (whether goest thou): what contry man art thou: and of what nacyon? He answered them: I am an Ebreue and I feare the Lord God of heauen whych made both the see and the drye lade.
Then were the men excreadyng afrayde, & sayde vnto hym: why dydest thou so? (for they knewe, that he was fled from the pre sence of the Lord, because he had told them) and sayd moreouer vnto him: what shal we do vnto the, y the see maye sealle from trou blyng vs? (for the see wroughte and was troublous) he answered them: take me, and caste me in the see, so shal it let you be in rest for I wote it is for my sake, that this great tempest is come vpon you.

Reuerchelesse, the men assaid to rowing to bryng the shyppe to lande: but yt wolde not be, because the see wroughte so: and was so troublous agaynst them. Wherefore they cryed vnto the Lorde, and sayde: O Lorde let vs not perishe for thys mannes deathe, & we will rather

Thou shalt sende out no man agaynst neither shalt y stande waytynge any moze at the corners of the stretes, to murder such as are fled, or to take them ptesoners. That warded euen vpon thyne heade. For lyke as ye haue broken vpon myne holpe so shal al heathen drinke continually: ye, dryncke shall they, and swalowe vp, so that ye shalbe as though ye had neuer bene.

But vpon the mounte Sion shal y sal uacion be, ad holynes, there shalbe holy ad the house of Jacob shal possesse euen thole, * yad them selues afore in possession. More ouer, the house of Jacob shalbe a fire, y house of Ioseph a flame, & the house of Efran shal be drawe: wyche they shal kyndle and burne, so that nothyng shalbe left of y house of Efran, the Lord hym selfe hath sayd They of the southe shal haue the moun te Sion in possession: and loke what ly eth vpon the ground, that shal the Philis tines haue: the playne felde shal Ephraim ad Samaria possesse: and the mountaynes of Galaad shal Ben Jamin haue: And thys shalbe the chyldren of Israels pteso n. Howe what so lieth from Canaan vn to Euphrat, and in Orpharad, that shalbe under the subsecryon of Ierusalem, ad the cryes of the south shal enberet it. Thus they that escape vpon the hyl of Sion, shal go vp to punyche y mounte of E fran. * &
the kingdome shalbe the Lordes.

Thus they that escape vpon
the hyl of Sion, shal go vp to punyche y
mounte of E
the

kingdome shalbe the Lordes.

The ende of the booke of the prophete of Abdy.

neither laye thou innocent blonde vnto oure charge: for thou, O Lorde haste done, euen as thy pleasure was.

So they toke Jonas and caste hym into the see, and the see leste ragynge, And y men feared the Lorde excedyngly, doynge sacrifices and makynge vowes vnto the Lorde.

The. ii. Chapter.

Jonas is swallowed of a whale. The prayer of Jonas.

At the Lorde prepared a greatysp to swallow vp Jonas. * So was Jonas in the belly of y fsh thre dayes & thre nyghtes: And Jonas praied vnto the Lorde his God, out of the fishes bely, & sayde: * In my trouble I called vnto the Lorde, and he herd me: out of the bely of hell I cryed, & thou her-dest my voice. Thou haddest cast me downe depe in the myddeste of the see, & the floudde compassed me about: yee, * al thy waues adroules of water went ouer me, I thought y

I had bene cast away out of thy sight: But I wil yet againe loke toward thy holy temple The waters compassed me, euen to the very soule: the depe laye aboute me, & the we-des were wrapte aboute myne head. I went downe to the botome of the hilles, and was barred in wyth earth for euer. But thou, O

Lorde my God, hast broughte vp my lyfe a-gayne out of corrupcyon. When my soule faynted wythin me, I thoughte vpon the Lorde: & my prayer came in vnto the euen in to thy holy temple. They y hold of vayne vanities, wyl forlake hys mercye. But I wyl do the sacrifice wyth the voyce of thankt-grynge, and wyl paye that I haue vowed for why: saluacyon cometh of the Lorde And the Lorde spake vnto the fsh, and it cast out Jonas agayne vpon the drye land.

The. iii. Chapter.

Jonas is sent agayne to Ninue. The repentaunce of the kynge of Ninue.

Then came y word of the Lorde vnto Jonas agayne, sayinge: vp & get the to Ninue that great cite & preach vnto them y preaching whych I bad y. So Jonas arose and went to Ninue at the Lordes commandement. Ninue was a great cite vnto God namely of thre dayes iourney.

And Jonas went to, and entred into the citty: euen a dayes iourney, and cryed, sayinge: There are yet foure dayes & then shal Ninue be ouerthrowen. * And the people of Ninue beleued God, and proclaymed fa-stynge, and arayed them selues in sackcloth as well the great as the small of them. And the tidynge came vnto the kynge of Ninue whych rose out of hys seat, and dyd hys apparel of, and put on sackcloth, and sat hym downe in ashes.

And it was cryed & commanded in Ni-nue, by the auctorite of the kynge and hys lordes sayng: * se that neither man nor beast ore of thepre fast ought at all: & that they nether fede nor drinke water: put on sackcloth both man and beast: & crye myghtely vnto God: * yee, se that euery mā turne from his euell waye, and from the wychednesse that he hath in hande,

Who can tel: God maye turne, & repente and cease from his searce wrath, that we perythe not. And when God sawe their wor-ches howe they turned from they wyched wayes: he repented on the euell, whych he sayde he wold do vnto them, and dyd it not.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Jonas is reproued of God.

Herfore Jonas was soze discontent and angrie. And he prayed vnto the Lorde, and sayde: O Lorde was not thys my sayinge (I praye the) when I was yet in my countre: therfore I hastid rather to fle vnto Tharsys. * For I knowe well ynough that thou arte a merciful God, ful of compassion, longe sufferynge, & of greate kindnes, and repentest when thou shuldest take punishment, And now: O Lorde, take my lyfe from me (I beseeche the) for I had rather dye then lyue. Then sayde the Lorde: art thou so angrie? And Jonas gat hym out of the cite, and sat downe on the castyde ther of: and there made hym a booth, and sat vnder it in the shadowe, tyll he myght se what shulde chaunce vnto the citty.

And the Lorde God prepared a wyldbene, whych sprange vp ouer Jonas, that he myght haue shadowe about hys head, to be liuer him out of his payne. And Jonas was excedyng glad of the wyld bene:

But vpon the next morowe agaynst the sprynge of the daye. The Lorde ordeyned a woyme, whych smote the wyld bene, so y it withered awaye: And when the sunne was vp, God prepared a feruent east wind: and y sunne bet ouer the head of Jonas, y he faynted agayne, & wyshed vnto his soule that he might dye, and sayd: It is better for me to dye, then to lyue. And God sayde vnto Jonas: Art thou so angrie for the wyld bene? And he sayde yee, verye angrie am I, euen vnto the death. And the Lorde sayde: y hast compassion vpon a wyld vine, wherof thou bestowedest no labour: nor made it growe, whych sprang vp in one nyght, and perished in another: And shuldest not I then haue compassion vpon Ninue y greate citty, wherin there are aboue an. C. &. xx. y. personnes, that knowe not they ryghte hande from the lefte, belydes moche catel.

The ende of the prophery of Jonas.

The booke of the prophete Micheas.

The first Chapter.

Of the destruction of Samaria because of the ydolatrie.

This is the worde of the Lorde, þ came vnto Micheas þ Mozaite in the dayes of * Iothan & Ahas * Jezechiah kynges of Iuda: whych was shewed him vpo Sa maria and Ierusalem. * Heare all ye people marke thys wel: & earth & al that therin is Pre the Lorde God hym selfe be wytnesse a monge you, euen the Lorde from hys holpe temple. For why? beholde the Lorde shall go out of hys place, and come downe, & trea se vpon the hye thynges of the earth. The mountaynes shall consume vnder hym, and the halles shall cleane a sunder: lyke as ware consumed at the fyre, and as the wa ters runnedowne warde. And all thys shall be for the wyckednesse of Jacob, and the sin nes of the house of Israel.

But what is the wyckednesse of Jacob?
I not: Samaria: whych are the hye pla ces of Iuda: Is not: Ierusalem: Therefore I shall make Samaria an heape of stones in the feilde, to lape about the vineyarde: her stones shall I cast into the valley, and disco uer her foundacyons. All her Images shall be broken downe & all her garmentes shall be brente in the fyre: yee, al her ydoles wyll I destroy: for why? they are gathered out of the fyre of an whoze, and into an whozes pyre shall they be turned agayne, wherfore I wyll moune and make lametacyon, bare and naked wyll I go: I must moune lyke þ magons, and take sorowe as the Estriches in theyr wound is past remedy. And why? it is come into Iuda, and hath touched the pynte of my people at Ierusalem already. *
Wepe not, lest they at Seth perceauie it.

Thou at Bataphra, welter thy selfe in the dulle and ashes. Thou that dwellest at Sephay, get the hence wyth shame. The proude shall booste nomoze for very sorowe: and why? her neyghbour shall take hope in her that she hath. The rebellious citie hopeth that it shall not be so cruel: but for al that, the pouge shall come from the Lorde, euen into the porte of Ierusalem. The great noyle of the charrettes shall feare them, that dwel at Lachys, whych is an occasyon of the syn ne of the daughter of Syon, for in the came of the wyckednesse of Israel. Per, the sent her countrey into the land of Seth.

The houses of Iyes wyll disceane þ kyn ge of Israel. And as for þ (O thou þ dwel est at Mozaia) I shall bringe a possessor vnto þ, & the plage of Israel shall reache vnto to Odolla. Make the halde, and haue the, bycause of thy tendre chyldren: Make the cleane halde as an Aggie, for they shall be cas tyd awaye captiue from the.

The ii. Chapter.

Of the thynges agaynst the synfull people.

No vnto them, that ymagyn to do harme, and deuyse vngaciousnesse vpon theyr beddes, to perfourme it in the cleare daye: for theyr power is agaynst God. When they come to haue lande, * they take it by violence, they robbe men of theyr houses. * 16. 11. 11. 4

Thus they oppresse a man for his house, and euery man for his heritage. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, * agaynst this housholde haue I deuised a plage, wher out ye shall not plucke your neckes: Ye shall nomoze go so proudly, for it wyll be a perpi lous tyme. In that daye shall this terme be vsed, and a mourning shall be made ouer you on this maner: We be utterly desolate, the porcion of my people is translated. When wyll be parte vnto vs the lande, that he hath taken from vs.

Neuerthelesse, * there shall be noman to de uyde the thy porcion in the congregacion of the Lorde. Cusch, holde your tonge (say they) It shall not fall vpon this people, we shall not come so to confusyon, sayeth the house of Jacob. Is the spyrite of the Lorde so cleane awaye? or is he so mynded? Truthe it is, my wordes are frendly vnto the that lyue right: but my people doeth the contrary, therefore, muske I take parte agaynst them: for they take awaye bothe coote and cloke from the symple. * 2. 2. 11. 11. 1

Ye haue turned your selues to fyght, the women of my people haue ye shut oute from theyr good houses, and taken awaye myne excellent gyftes from theyr chyldren. Aye, get you hence, for here shall ye haue no rest.

Bycause of theyr ydolatrie, they are cor rupt, and shall miserably perishe. If I were a flethly felowe, & a preacher of lyes, and tolde them, that they myght syt by byrge and bollyng, and be broken. O that were a pro phet for this people. But I wyll gather the in dede, O Jacob, and dyue the remnaunte of Israel all togyther. I shall cary them one with an other as a flocke in the folde, and as the cattell in theyr stables, that they maye be disquyeted of other men. Whoso breaketh the gap, he shall go before. They shall breake vp the porte, and go in and out at it. The kyng shall goo before them, and the Lorde shall be vpon the head of them.

Ad I sayde: heare, O ye headers of the house of Jacob, and ye leaders of the house of Israel: * Shulde not ye knowe, what were lawfull and ryght: * But ye hate the good, and loue the euil: ye plucke of mennes skynnes, and the flesh from theyr bones: ye eate the flesh of my people, & flay of theyr skynne: ye breake theyr bones, ye choppe them in peces as it were into a cauldron, and as flesh into a pot. Nowe the time shall come, * & when they cal vnto the Lode, he shall not heare them, but hyde hys face from them, because & thozow theyr owne imaginacions they haue dealt so wyckedly.

* Jer. l. b.
* Jer. lvi. d.

And as concernyng the prophetes that disceane my people, thus the Lozde sayeth a-gaynst them. * When they haue any thinge to bite vpon, then they preach & al shalbe wel but yf a man put not some thyng into their mouthes, they preach of warre agaynst hym.

* Jer. lxxv. b.

* Jer. lxxviii. c.

* Therefore your vision shalbe turned to nyght, & your prophcinge to darcknesse.
The Sunne shal go downe ouer those prophetes, & the daye shalbe darcke vnto them.
Then shal the vision seers be ashamed, and the sothsayers confounded: yee. they shalbe sayne all the packe of them, to stoppe theyr mouthes, for they haue not Gods worde. *
As for me I am ful of strenght, and of & spret of the Lozde, ful of Judgement & boldnesse: to shewe the house of Jacob theyr wycked-nes, and the house of Israel, theyr synne.

cob, and ye iudges of the house of Israel, ye that abhorre the thyng that is laful, and wylt asyde the thyng that is streyght. *
Ye that builde vp Sion wyth bloud, and Jerusalem wyth doing wronge. * O ye iudges ye geue sentence for gyftes: O ye preastes, ye teach for lucre. * O ye prophetes, ye pro-phcie for monye. Yet wyl they be taken as those that holde vpon God, ad saye: Is not the Lozde amonge vs: Tylke, there can no misfortune happen vs. * Therefore shal Sy-on (for your sakes) be plowed lyke a felde: & Jerusalem shalbe come an heape of stones, and the hyll of the temple shalbe turned to

* Jer. lxxv. b.
* Jer. lxxv. b.

At: in the latter dayes it wyl come to passe, that the hyll of the Lozdes house shalbe set vp hyer the anye mountaynes or hylls: Yee the people shal pzeace vnto it, ad the multitude of the Gentyles shal haſt them thither, saying: Come, let vs go vp to the hyll of the Lozde, and to the house of the God of Jacob: that he maye teach vs hys wayes, and that we maye walke in his pathes. * For the lawe shall come oute of Sion: and the worde of God from Jerusalem, and shal geue sentence amonge the multitude of the heathen, and reforme the people of farre countres: so that of theyr sweares they shal make ploughshares, and spea-res of theyr speares.

* One people shal not lyfte vp a sword agaynst another, yee, they shal nomore learne to fyghte: but every man shal syle vnder hys vyneparde and vnder hys fyggre, and no man to fraye hym awaye: for the mouth of the Lozde of hostes hath spoken it. Therefore where as all the people haue walked every man in the name of his owne God, we wyl walke in the name of our God for euer & euer. * At & same time, sayth the Lozde, wyl I gather vp the lame and the outcastes, ad suche as I haue chaffened, and wyl gene-sue vnto the lame, and make of the outcasts a great people: * and the Lozde him selfe shal be theyr kyng vpon the mount Syon, from this tyme forth for euermore. And vnto the (O thou tower of Eder, thou strong holde of the daughter Syon) vnto the shal it come euen the lordshipp and kyngdome of the daughter Jerusalem. Why then art thou nowe so heuy: is there no kyng in the: are thy co-uncellers a waye that thou arte so payned, as a woman in her trauple: And nowe (O thou daughter Syon) be soye, let it geue the as a wyfe laborynge w chylde: for nowe musse thou get the out of the citie, and dwel vpon the playne felde: Yee, vnto Babylon shalte thou go, there shalt thou be deliuered * and there the Lozde shal lowse the from the hande of thyne enemyes.

Now also are there many people gathered together agaynst the saying: what shal Syon be cursed, we shal se oure luste vpon her.
But they knowe not the thoughtes of the Lozde they vnderstande not hys counsell, & shal gather them to gether as the sheeues in the barne. Therefore get the vp, O thou daughter Sion, and chiesse the out the corne: For I wyl make thy hozne yron, ad thy clawes brasse, that thou mayest grynde many people: theyr goodes shalte thou appropriate vnto the Lozde, and theyr substance vnto the ruler of the whole worlde.

The. li. Chapter.

Of the destruction of Jerusalem.

After & shalst thou be robbed thy selfe O thou robbers daughter: they shal laye sege agaynst vs, & smyte & iudge of Israel w a rodde vpon the cheke. * And Bethleſ Ephrata, art lytle amonge & shonsades of Juda, Out of & shal come vnto me which shalbe the gouernour of Israel: whose outgoing hath bene from the begynnynges from euerlastyng. In the meane whyle be plageth plough them for a season, vntill the tyme that they which shall beare) haue bozne: the shall the remnant of hys brethren be couered vnto the chylde of Israel. He shall stande in the strength of the Lord, and in the victorie of the name of the Lord his God, and when they be couerted, he shall be magnified vnto the farthest par-tes of the worlde.

Then shall there be peace, so that the As-sirian may come into your lande, and treade in your houses. We shall bypunge vp seuen hundredes and viii. princes vpon the: these shall bode the lande of Assur with the sword, the lande of * Assyrod wyth theyr naked weapes. Thus shall he deliuer vs from the Assirian, when he cometh within oure lade, and letteth hys fote wythin our borders.

And the remnant of Jacob shall be amonge the multitude of people, as the dewe of the lande, and as the droppe vpon the grasse, that tarreth for noman, and wayteth of no body. * Per. the residue of Jacob shall be amonge the gentyls and the multitude of people, as he lyon amonge the beastes of the wodde, & as the lyons whelp amonge a flocke of shepe: which (when he goeth thorow) treadeth downe, feareth in peces, and there is noman that can helpe. Thyne hande shall lyfte vp vpon thyne enemyes, and all thyne aduer-saries shall perishe.

Thyng shall come also, sayeth the Lord, that I will take thyne doxes from the, and burne thy charettes. I will breake downe the cities of thy lande, and ouerthrowe all thy strong holdes. * All wythcraftes will I rote out of thyne hande, there shall no mo sorcerynges be within the. * Thyne Idols and thyne Images will I destrope out of the lande: thou shalt nomore bowe thy selfe vnto the workes of thyne owne handes. Thy gyltes will I plucke vp by the rotes, & breake downe the cyties. Thus will I be auenged vpon all the heathen that will not heare and what answer that Balaam the sonne of Beor gaue hym, from Bethin vnto Gal-gal, that ye maye knowe the longynge kyn-dnesses of the Lord.

What acceptable thyng shall I offer vnto the Lord? shall I bowe my knee to the hee God? shall I come before hym with byentofferpynges, and with calues of a yere olde?
Hath the Lord a pleasure in many thousande rammes, or innumerable streames of oyle?
Or shall I geue my first bozne for myne offences, & the frute of my bodye for the synne of my soule? I wyl shewe the, O man, what is good, and what the Lord requyryth of the famelie, to do ryght, to haue pleasure in louynge kyndnesse, to be lowlye, & to walke w thy God. * The Lordes voyce cryeth vnto the crite, & the man that shall be laued consydereth thy name (O Lord). Herken what is youre rodde, & here him that warnyth you. * Shulde I not be displeased, for the vnyghteous good in the houses of the wycked, & because the measure is minished? Or shulde I iustifie the false balaunces & the bagge of dysceitfull weyghtes, amonge those that be full of ryches vny-ghtuoulye gottē: where the cutesins deale wyth falschede, speake lyes, & haue dysceitfull tonges in theyr mouthes.

Therefore I wyl take in hande to punyssh the, & to make the desolate, because of thy sin-nes. * Thou shalt eate, & not haue ynough:
per. thou shalt bypunge thy selfe downe. Thou shalt sle but not escape: & those that thou wol-dest saue, wyl I deliuer to the. * Swearde.
Thou shalt lowe, but not reape: thou shalt presse oute olyues, but oyle shalt thou not haue to anoynt thy selfe withall: thou shalt treade out swete must, but shalt bypyncke no wyne. Per. kepe the ordinaunces of Amri, & all the customes of the house of Ahab: ye fo-lowe their pleasures, therefore wyl I make wast, and cause thy inhabytors to be abhored. O my people: and thus shalt thou beare thyne owne shame.

The vi. Chapter.

Thou shalt not heare the iudgement agaynst thee, because thou hast not done right. What manner of sacrifices doest thou offer?

Erken now what the Lord sayeth:
* Repreue the mountaynes, and lette the hylls heare the voyce, O Lord: the punishment of the Lord, ye mountaynes, and ye myghty foundacions of the earth: for the Lord wyll reproue hys people, & shall say vnto Israel. O my people what haue I done vnto the? or wherein haue I hurte the? geue me answere. * Because I broughte the out of the lande of Egypt, and deliuered the out of the house of bondage. * Because I said vnto Moyses, Aaron and Miriam to leade the people out of Egypt: what shall I do vnto the?
* Because I said vnto Moyses, Aaron and Miriam to leade the people out of Egypt: what shall I do vnto the?

The vii. Chapter.

Thou shalt not heare the iudgement agaynst
thee, because thou hast not done right. What manner of sacrifices doest thou offer?

Is me: I am become as one that goeth a gleanynge in the barne. There are no mo grapes to eate, yet wolde I sayne (vnto al my herte) haue of the best frute. * There is not a godlye vpon earth, there is not one righteous amonge men. They laboure all to shedde bloud, and euery man hunteth hys brother to death: yet they saye they do wel when they do euil. As the pynce wyl, so sayeth the iudge, that he maye do hym a pleasure agayne.
The great man speaketh what hys berte desireth: the hearers allowe it. The beste of the shepe is but as a thistle, & the most righteous of the shepe is but as a hyssop.

Of the destruction of Aimsur and of the help instance of Israel.

a breer in the hedge. But when the daye of thy preachers cometh, that thou shalt be vysited, the shall they be wasted awaye. * Let no man byleue his frende, nor put his confy-dence in a brother. Keepe thy porte of thy mouth from her that lyeth in thy bosome, * for the sonne shall put his father to dishonoure, the daughter shall rise agaynste her mother, the daughter in lawe agaynste her mother in lawe: and a mans foes shalbe euē they of his owne householde.

Reuerenteste I wyl loke vp vnto þ Lord.
I wyl patiently abide God my sauour: my God shal heare the. O thou enemy of myne retiole not at my fall, for I shal get vp againe: and though I lye in darknesse, yet the Lorde is my lycht. I wyl beare the punishment of the Lorde: for why, I haue offended him: tyl he lye in iudgement vpon my cause, e le that I haue right. he wil bring me forth to the lycht, and I shal se his ryghtousnesse.

E She that is myne enemye shall loke vpon it & be cōfounded, which nowe sayth: * Wher is thy Lorde God? Myne eyes shall beholde her, whē she shalbe troden downe as the clay in y^e strettes. * The tyme wyl come that thy gappes shalbe made vp, & the lawe shall go abrode: & at y^e tyme shall they come vnto the frob Assur vnto the stronge cyties, & from the stronge cyties vpon the ruuer: fro the one see to y^e other, fro the one mountayne to y^e other.

Notwithstandynge, þe lande muste be wasted, because of them that dwel therein, and for the frutes of their owne ymaginacions.
Therefore fede thy people wth thy rod, the flock of thyne heritage which dwell desolate in the wodde: that they may be fed vpon the mounte of Carmel, Basan, and Galaad, as a fore tyme. Maruelous thiges wil I shewe the, * lyke as whē they came out of Egypte.

D This shall the heathen se, and be ashamed for all their power * so that they shall laye their hande vpon their mouthe, and stoppe their eares. * They shall lycke the dust lyke a serpent, & as the wormes of the earth, that tremble in their holes. They shall be afrayed of the Lord our God, & they shall feare the.

Where is there suche a God as thou: that pardonest wyckednesse, and forgiveness of fences of the remnaunte of thyne herpytage? he kepeth not his wrath for euer: and why? his delite is to haue compassion: * he shall turne agayne, and be merciful to vs: he shall put downe our wyckednesses, and caste all oure synnes into the botome of the sea. Thou shalt kepe thy trust with Jacob, & thy mercye for Abraham, lyke as thou hast sworne vnto our fathers longe agoo.

The end of the prophecy of Micah.

This is the heuie burthen of Nineue, whiche Nabum of Elchos dyd wyte as he sawe it. * The Lord is a ge lous God, & a taker of ven geaunce is the Lord, and worthyfull. * The Lord ta keth vengeance of his enemyes, & reuereth displeasure for his aduersaries. * The Lord suffreth longe he is of great power, and so in nocent: that he leueth no man faultlesse be fore hym. The Lord goeth forth in trespas sory wether, & clondes are the dust of hys fete. When he reponeth the see, he dyeth it vp, & turneth the floudes to drye lade: Bala is desolate: Charmel & the pleasure of Liba nus wasteth awaye. The mountaynes trem ble for him, the hylls consume. At the sight of hym, the earth quaketh: yea, the whole worlde, and all that dwell therein. * Who may endure before hys wrath: Or who is able to abyde hys grym displeasure: his an ger taketh on lyke fyre: and the harde rockes are clouen in sundre before hym.

Ful gracious is the Lorde, and a strong holde in the tyme of trouble, he knoweth that put theyr trust in hym: when the floude renneth ouer, and destroyeth the place: and when the darknesse foloweth styll upon hys encampes. What do ye p'magyn then against the Lord on this manner: (Cush whē he hath once made an ende, there shall come no more trouble.) For lyke as the thornes that strike together, & as the dyse strawe, so shall the dyshardes be consumed together, euen when they be full. There come oute of the suchē as p'magyn in myschefe: & gyue vngracious counsell agaynst the Lorde.

Therefore thus saith the Lord: Let them be as well prepared: yee, & as many as they can, yet shall they be hewen downe, and passe awaye. And as for I, I will bere it, but not utterly destroye the. And nowe wyl I breake his rodde from thy backe, & burst thy bddes in sundze. But the Lord hath geuen a commandment concernynge the, & there shall come no more sede of thy name. * The carued & casten ymagines wyl I roote oute of the house of thy God. Thy graue shal I prepare for the, and thou shalt be confounded.

The. II. Chapter.

¶ He describeth the victory of the Church against the Minuters.

Behold, * upon the mountaynes come the multitude of him, that bringeth good tidings: and preacheth peace. O Jude, hope thy holy dayes, perfourme thy promises: for Beilall shall come nomore in the, he is utterly rooted out.

The scatterer shall come by agaynst the, & lay siege to the castell. Loke thou wel to the fortres, make thy loynes stronge, arme thy selfe with all thy myght: for the Lord shall reuenge agayne the glory of Jacob, lyke as the glory of Israel. The destroyers haue broke downe, and marred the vyne branches: the wynde of bys gyauntes glystereth, bys armour of warre are clothed in purple. His charrettes are as fyre, when he maketh hym forwarde, & his spere shafte are soaked in venim. The charrettes rolle vpon y streets, & welter in the fyre wayes. They are to loke vpon lyke multitudes of fyre, & go swyftly, as the lyghte wynde. When he doth but warne bys gyauntes, they fall in the dych araye, & hastily they clyme vpon the walles: yee, the engyns of the warre are prepared already. The water poynt shall be opened, and the higes palace shall fall. The quene her selfe shall be led away captiue, and her gentyl women shall mourne as the doves, and grone wythin theyr hertes.

Minie is lyke a pole full of water, but thei that they be sayne to fle. Stande, stand, (shal they crye) & there shal not one turne backe. Away is the syluer, awaye wyth the golde: here is no ende of treasure. There shalbe multitude of al maner of costly ornametes: thus muste the be spoyled, emptied & cleane shipped out: that thei hertes may be melted away, their knees tremble, all theyr loynes be weake, & theyr faces blacke as a pot.

Where is nowe the dwellinge of the lyons the pasture of the lyons whelpes: where y lyon & the lyonelle went w the whelpes, & no man traped the away: But the lyon spoyled enough for bys yonge ones, & deuoured for bys lyonelle: he filled his dens w his praye, & his dwelling place w that he had rauished. Beholde, I wyll vpon y, sayeth the Lord of hostes, and wyll set fyre vpon thy charrettes & theyr hall smoke wythal, & the swearde shall deuoure y yonge lyons. I wyll make an ende of thy spoylunge fro oute of y earth, and the mouth of y messengers shal nomore be herde.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The fall of Minie.

Wo to y bloudthursty cytie, whych is all full of lyes & robberye, & wyll not leaue of fro rauishyng. There a man may heare scourging, russhyng, & noyse of the wheles, & cryenge of y hoyses, and the wyng of the charrettes. There the horsemen are w naked swerdes, & glisteryng speares: there lyeth a multitude slayne, & a great heap of deeth bodyes: there is no ende of deeth coarces: yee, men fall vpon theyr bodyes. And that for the great & many folde whozedom, of the fayre and bewtyfull harlot: whiche is a maistrisse of wythchecraft, yee, ad selleth y people thozowe her whozdom, & the nations thozowe her wythchecraft.

* Beholde, I wyll vpon the (sayth the Lord of hostes) and wyll pull thy clorhes ouer thy heade: y I maye shewe thy nakednes amoge the heathen, and thy shame amoge y kyngdomes. I wyll cast dyte vpon the, to make the be abhored, & a galyng stocke: yee, all they that loke vpon the, shall starte backe, & saye: Minie is destroyed.

Who wyll haue pytie vpon y: where shal I seke one to cōforte the? Arte y better then the great cytie of Alexandria: that laye in the waters, and had the waters roude about it: which was strongly fenced & walled w the see: Ethiopia & Egypt were her strenght, & that excedyng great, about measure. Aphrica & Lybia were her helpers, yet was she dyspayd awaye, & brought into captiuite, her yonge chyldren were smytten downe at the heade of euery strete, the lottes were cast for the moost auncient me in her, & all her myghty men were boude in cheynes. Enf so shalt thou also be dyspayd, & hyde thy self, and seke some helpe agaynst thyne enemye. All thy stronge cyties shalbe lyke fygge trees wyth rype fygges: whyche when a man shaketh, they shal fall into the mouth of the eater.

Beholde, thy people wythin the, are but wemen, the portes of thy lande shalbe opened vnto thyne enemyes, and the fyre shal deuoure thy barres. Draw water now agaynst thou be beleged, make vp thy stronge holdes go into y claye, tēper y mortar, make stronge dyck: y yet y fyre shal consume the, the swerde shal destroye the: yee, as the locuste doth, so shal it eate y vp. It shal fall heuely vpon y as the locustes: yee, ryght heuely shal it fall vpon the, enf as the greshoppers. Thy marchantes haue bene nobzed w the starres of heauē, but now shal they spede abrode as the locustes & fle theyr waye: Thy Lordes are as the greshoppers: & thy captaynes as the multitude of greshoppers, whych whan they be cold, remaine in the hedges: but whan the sunne is vp, they fle awaye, ad no man can tel where they are become. Thy shepherdes are a slepe (O kyng of Assur) thy wycthyes are layed downe, thy people is scattered abrode vpon the mountaynes, and noman gathereth them together agayne. Thy woulde cannot be byd, thy plage is so soze. Al they y heare thys of the, shal clappe their handes ouer the. For what is he, to whom thou hast not alwaye bene doyngs hurte.

This is the heuy burthen, which the prophete Abacuc vpd se. O Lorde, * howe longe shall I crye, & thou wylt not heare: * howe longe shall I complayne vnto the, sufferynge wronge, & thou wylt not helpe: Why lettest thou me se werpnesse & labour: * Tyanny and violence are before me, power ouergoeth right: for the lawe is toarne in peces, & there canot ryght iudgement go forth. And why: the vngodly is more set by then f ryghteous: this is the cause, that wronge iudgement proceedeth. * Beholde, amonge the heathen, and loke well, wondre at it, and be abashed: for I wyl do a thyng in poure tyme, whych thou thought be tolde you, ye shall not beleue.

* For lo, I wyl rayse vp f Caldees, that bytter and swifte people: whych shall go as wyde as the lade is, to take possessio of dwelling places, f be not their owne. A grimme & horstuous people is it, these shall spe in iudgement & punysh. Their horses are swifter then the cattles of the mountayne, & byte sozer then the wolues in f enenyng. Their horsemen come by great heapes from farre, they flye hastily to deuoure as f Aegle. They come all to spoyle, out of them cometh an eastwynde, whych bloweth ad gathereth theyr captaynes, lyke as the sand. They shall mocke the kynges, and laugh the prynces to scozne. They shall not let by any ströge hold, for they shall lape ordinaunce agaynst it ad take it. Then shall they take a frethe corage vnto them: to go forth and to do more euell, and so ascrpe the power vnto * theyr God.

But thou O Lorde my God: my holpe one, thou arte from the begymyng, therfore shall we not dye. O Lord, thou hast ordered the for a punyshment, and set the to reprove the myghtie. Thyne eyes are cleane, thou mayest not se euell, thou canst not beholde f thyng that is wycked. * Wherefore the doest thou loke vpo the vngodly, and holdeste thy tonge, when the wycked deuoureth the man f is better then hym selfe: Thou makest me as the fywe in the see, & lyke as the creppynge beastes, that haue no gypde, they take vp al wyth their angle, they catch it in theyr net, & gather it in theyr pearne: whereof they reioyce and are glad. Therfore offre they vnto their net, & do sacrifice vnto their pearne: because f thozowe it their porcpd is become so fat & theyr meate so plentous. * Wherefore, they cast out theyr net agayne, & neuer cease to slaye the people.

The ii. Chapter.

Of the byson of the prophete. Agaynst pollynge, & uncousnes, and ydolatre.

I stode vpo my watch, & set me vpon my bulworke, to loke and se what he wolde say vnto me, & what answer I shulde geue hym that reproveth me. But f Lorde answered me, & sayd: Wryte the vision playnly vpon thy tables, that who so cometh by, maye rede it: for the byson is yet farre of for a tyme, but at f laste it shall come to passe, ad not faple. * And though he tary, yet wryte thou for hym, for in very dede he wyl come, and not be slacke. * Beholde, the vnrightheous thinketh hym selfe in sauegard as in a stronge holde: * but the iust shall lyue by vps sayth. Like as the wynde dyfcreaueth the dyoncharde, euen so the proude shall faple and not endure. He openeth his desyre wyde vp as the hell, * & is as vnfaciable as death. All heathen gathereth he to hym, and heapeth vnto hym all people.

But shall not all these take vp a prouerbe agaynst him, & mock him with a bye worde, & saye: Wlo vnto him that heapeth vp other mens goodes: howe longe wyl he lade him selfe with thyck clape: O howe sodenly wyl theyr stande vp, that shall byte, & awake, that shall teare f in peces: yee, thou shalt be their praye: * Scynge f haste spoyled many heathen: therfore shall the remnaunt of f people spoyl the: because of mer & bloude, and for f wronge done in the lande, in the cytie & vnto all them that dwell therein.

* Wlo vnto him, that couetously gathereth euell gotten goodes into his house, that he maye set vps nest an hye, to escape fro the power of mysfortune. Thou hast deuised the shame of thyne owne house, for f hast slayne to much people, and hast wyfully offended: so that the very stones of the wall shall crye out of it, and the tymbre that lyeth betwixt the ioyntes of the buyldynge shall answer. * Wlo vnto hym that buyldeth the towne to blend, & maynteineth the cytie with vnrightrousnes. Shall not the Lord of hostes blyge this to passe, that f labourers of the people shall be vyente wyth a greute fyre, and that the thyng where vpon the people haue weered the selues, shall be losse: * For the earth shall be full of knowledge of the Lordes honoure, lyke as the waters that couer the let.

Wlo vnto him that geueth his neyghboure dyynke, puttynge in gall and makynge hym dyonchen, * that he maye see vps preyntes, & therfore wyth shame shalt thou be fylled, in steade of honoure. Dyynke thou also, tyll thou flomber wyth all: for the cuppe of the Lordes ryghte harde shall compasse the aboute, and shameful spewynge in steade of thy the worlde. * For the wronge þ thou haste done in Libanus, shall ouerwhelme the and the wyde beastes shall make the afrayed: be cause of mens bloude, & for the wronge done in the lande, in the cytie, and vnto all such as well therein.

What helpe then will þ ymage god, wherein the workman hath fastyoned: O þ vayne ymage, wherein because the crafterman putteth hys trust, therefore maketh he dome dulle: No vnto him that sayeth to a peece of wodde: aryse, & to a dome ston: stand vp, for what instruccyon maye suche one geue thee, it is layd ouer with golde & siluer and there is no bryeth in it. * But the Lorde hys holly temple is he: whom all the world doe feare.

The.iii. Chapter.

Chapter of the prophete Abacuc for the signaunte.

Lorde, when I herde speake of the,
I was afrayed. The worke that thou hast takē in hāde, walte thou performe in hys tyme. O Lorde: & when thy tyme cometh, thou shalt declare it.
With very wrath þ thynkest vpon mercy, God commeth from Themā, & the holly one from the mount of Pharan: Selah.

Hys gloze couereth the heauens, & þ earth is full of his prayse. His wyne is as þ sunne, and beames of lyghte go out of hys handes, there is his power byd. Destruction goth before him, and a pestilente spcknesse goeth fro his face. * He stādeth, & measureth the earth. heleth, & the people consume awaye, the mountaynes of þ world fall downe to poulder, & the hilles are fayne to bowe the selues, by hys goynge are euerlastyng and sure.

I sawe, that the pauilions of the Mozi-tes, & the tentes of þ lande of Madian were bred for weynesse. Wast thou not angry, O Lorde, in the waters: was not thy wrath in seoudes, & thy displeasure in þ see: yee, when thou sattest vpon thyne horse, and whā thy charrettes had þ vyctory. Thou sweled thy bow openly, like as thou haddest prouoked to an othe: vnto the trybes Selah.

Thou dydest deupde þ waters of þ earth.
When the mountaynes sawe the, they were afraid, the water streame went awaye: the fayre made a nopsle at the lyfing vp of thyne hande. The sunne and moone remayned in their habitacis. Thyne arrowes went in gyltynge, and thy speares as the wyne of the lyghtenyng. * Thou trodest downe þ lande in thyne anger, and dydest threde the fayth in thy displeasure. Thou cameste to helpe thy people, to helpe thyne a-nymed. Thou smotest downe the head of þ kinge of the vngodly, & discoverdest his fou-lours, euen vnto the necke of hym. Selah.

Thou dydest stryke thozow to hys sceptre the heades of his playne people: whych come as a stormy wynd to scatre me abrode, & are glad whē they maye eat vpon þ pooze secretly.

Thou makest awaye for thyne horses in the see, cut in þ myddest of great waters. Whē I heare this, my body is vexed, my lippes treble at þ voyce therof, my bones corrupte, I am afrayed where I stāde. O þ I might rest in the dape of trouble, þ I might go vpon vnto our people, whych are already prepared.

For the fygge trees shall not be grene: and þ vynes shall beare no frute. The labour of þ olyue shall be lost, & the lāde shall brynge no corne: þ shepe shall be takē out of the folde, and there shall be no catell in the stalles. But as for me, I will be glad in the Lorde, & will reioyce in God my Sauoure. * The Lorde God is my strength, he shall make my fete as the fete of hertes: & he which geneth the vyc-tory, shall brynge me to my hpye places syngynge vpon my psalmes.

Chapter of the prophete of Abacuc for the signaunte.

This is þ worde of the Lorde, I ny þ sōne of Chusi, þ sōne of Gedoliah, þ sōne of Ama-riah, the sōne of Hezekiah in the tyme of * Josiah the da. I wyl gather vp al thin-ges in the lāde (sayeth the Lorde) I wyl gather vp mā & beast: I wyl gather vp the foules in the ayre & the fysh in the see: to þ great decay of the wicked) & wyl utterly destroye the mē out of the lāde, sayth the Lorde. I wyl stretche out myne hande vpon Iuda, & vpon all suche as dwell at Jerusalem. Thus wyl I rote out the remnaunt of Baal from thys place, & the names of the Remurins ad pre-stres: yee, & such as vpon their house toppes worshyp and bowe the selues vnto the doost of heauen: whych swore by the Lorde, and by they: Malchom also: whych starte aback from the Lorde, and nether seke after the Lorde nor regarde hym.

* Be styll at the presence of the Lorde God, for the dape of the Lorde is at hande: yee, the Lorde hath prepared a daye of offeringe, and called hys gesses therto. And thus shall it happen in the dape of the Lorde daye of offeryng. I wyl vset the prynces, & the kynges chylidren: and all such as were straunge clothyng. In the same dape also wyl I vset all those that treade ouer the thresholde so proudly

The prophete.

C proudly, which fylle their Lordes house with robbery & falshepe. At the same tyme (sayeth the Lorde) there shalbe herde a greates crye from the * fythe porte & an howlyng from the other porte, & a greates murthure from the hylls. Howle ye that dwell in * mpt, for all the marchaunt people are gone, & all they that were laden wpth syluer, are roted oute.

At the same tyme wyll I seke thozow Jerusalem wpth lanternes, & vylet them that contynue in theyr dregges, and sape in their bertes: * Tuff, & Lorde wyll do nether good nor euell. Their goodes shalbe spoyled, and their houses layed wast: * they shal buyde houses, & not dwell in them, they shal plante vynyardes, but not drinke the wyne therof.

For the great * dape of the Lorde is at hade, it is harde by & cometh on a pace. Horrible is * tydynges of the Lordes dape, then shal the gyaunte crye out: for that dape is a dape of wryath, a dape of trouble and heynesse, a dape of vtrer destruccyon & mysery, a darcke & glomyng dape, a cloudy & stormy dape, a dape of the nople of troppettes & shawmes, agaynst the stronge cyties and hie towres. I wyll byngne the people into such veration, & they shal go aboute lyke blynde mē, because they haue synned agaynst the Lorde. Theyr bloude shalbe shed as the dust, & their bodies as the myze. * Nether their syluer nor theyr golde shalbe able to deluyer them in * wroth full dape of the Lorde, but the * whole lande shalbe consumed thozowe the fyze of hys geloupe: for he shal soone make clene riddauce of all them that dwell in the lande.

The ii. Chapter.

In the houses of Ascalon shal

Therefore, as truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel) Moab shalbe as Sodome & Ammon as Gomozra: euē dize thorne hedges, salt pites & a perpetuall wyldernes: The residue of my folke shal spyle them, the remaunt of my people shal haue the in possessiō. * Theyr shal happen vnto them for theyr pryde, because they haue dealt so shamefully wth the Lorde of hostes people, & magnified the selues aboute them. The Lorde shalbe grymme vpon the, & * destroye all the goddes in the lande. And all the Iles of the heathen shal worshyp hym, euery man in hys place.

Pe moziās also shal perysh w my sword: Pee, he shal stretch oute hys hande ouer the north, and destroye Assur. * As for Aintue he shal make it desolate, dize & waste. The flockes and all the beastes of the people shal lye in the myddest of it: pellicanes & storkes shal abyde in the vpper postes of it, fowles shal syng in the wyndowes, & rauens shal lye vpo the balkes, for the borders of Cedre shalbe ryuen downe. This is the proude and carelesse cytie, that sayd in her bert: * I am, and there is els none. O howe is she made so wast, that the beastes lyeth therein: Who so goeth by, mocketh her, and poynteth at her wpyth hys synger.

In the seconde yere of king Darius, in the vi. moneth the fyrste daye of the moneth, came the worde of Lord (by the prophet Aggeus) vnto * 300ba- bell the sonne of Salathi- ell the prynce of Iuda, and to Iesua the sonne of Iosedech the hie p[re]ste saying. Thus speaketh the Lord of hostes, and sayeth. Thys people dothe saye. The tyme is not yet come to builde vp the Lordes house. Then spake the Lord by the p[ro]phete Aggeus, and sayde. * Pe poure selues can synde tyme to dwel in syled houses, and shall thys house lye waste? Consyder nowe pour owne wayes in youre hertes (sayeth the Lord of hostes) * Pe sowe muche, but ye drynge lytle in: ye cate, but ye haue not p[ro]u- ugh. ye dryncke but ye are not fylled: ye dec- he pour selues but ye be not warme: and ye that earneth any wages, putteth it in a bro- ken purse.

Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. Con- sydre your owne wayes in your hertes, get you vp to the mountayne, fetch woodde, and builde vp the house * that ye maye be accer- table vnto me, & that I maye shew myne ho- noure, sayeth the Lord. Ye loked for muche and lo, it is come to lytle, & though ye byng it home, yet do I blowe it awaye. And why so sayeth the Lord of hostes? * Euen because that my house lyeth so wast, & ye runne eue- ry man vnto his owne house. Wherefore the heauen is forbydden to geue you any dew and the earthe is forbydden to geue you en- crease. * I haue called for a dryth, bothe vpon the lande and vpon the mountaynes, vpon corne, vpon wyne, and vpon oyle, vpon euery thyng that the grounde byng- geth forth vpon men and vpon catel, pee, & vpon all handy labour.

Nowe when 300babel the sonne of Sa- lathiel, & Iesua the sonne of Iosedech the hie p[re]ste wyth the remaunt of the people, dede the voyce of the Lord the God, and the wordes of the prophet Aggeus (lyke as the Lord the God hath sent hym) the people d[re]d feare the Lord. Then Aggeus the Lo- des aungel sayde in the Lordes messenge vnto the people * I am w[ith] you, sayeth the Lord.

* So the Lord waked vp the sp[ir]ite of 300babel the Prince of Iuda, and the sp[ir]ite of Iesua the sonne of Iosedech the hie p[re]ste and the sp[ir]ite of the remaunte of all the people with I shall byset the. But neuerthe- less, they stande vpon early, to folowe the syl- ues of the p[ro]p[he]tys owne p[ro]phagacyes. Ther- fore, he shall wayte vpon me (sayeth the Lord) vntill the tyme that I stande vp: for I am aduised, to gather the people & to bynge the kingdomes together, that I maye poure myre anger, yee all my wrathfull * dys- pleasure vpon the. * For all the worlde shall be consumed wyth the fyre of my gelousye. And then wyl I cleanse the lippes of the peo- ple, that they maye euerychone cal vpon the name of the Lord, and serue hym wyth one fader. Such as I haue subdued, and my people also whom I haue scatred abrode, shall bynge me p[re]sentes beyonde the wa- ters of Ethiopia.

In that tyme shalt thou nomore be con- founded, because of all thy p[ro]phagacions, where thou wouldest haue offered me: for I wyl take awaye the proude boasters of thyne honour from the, so that thou shalt no more triumphe because of my holy byl. In the which I leaue a small poore symple p[ro]p[he]t: which shall trust in the name of the Lord. The remaunt of Israel shall do no wycked- nes, nor speake lyes: nether shall there any dy- shonfull tynge be founde in the; mouthes. For they shall be fed, and take they rest, and no man shall make them afrayed. Geue than- kes. O daughter Sio, be ioyful, O Israel: reioyce and be glad from thy whole hert, O daughter Jerusalem, for the Lord hath ta- ken away thy punysshment, and turned backe thyne enemyes. The kyng of Israel, cuse the Lord hym selfe is wyth the: so that thou ne- ver nomore to feare any mysfortune.

In that tyme it shall be sayde to Jerusa- lem: feare not, & so syon: let not thyne han- der be slacke, for the Lord thy God is wyth the, it is he that hath power to saue: he hath shewed pleasure in the, & a maruelous loue towards the: pee, he reioysseth ouer the wyth gaudes. Suche as haue bene in heuynesse, wyl I gather together, and take oute of thy disperacyon: as for the shame and reproche that hath bene layed vpon the, it shall be farre from the. And lo, in that tyme wyl I destrope the that vnto the. * I wyl helpe the lame, & I wyl byng up the cast awaye: pee, I wyl get the people and honoure in all landes, where they haue bene put to shame. At the same tyme wyl I bring you in, and at the same tyme wyl I gather you. I wyl get you a name and a name repute amonge all people of the erthe, when I turne bakke youre captiuite before your eyes, sayeth the Lord.

The sheweth that the goodlynes of the second temple shal exceede the first, because of the coming of Christ.

In the xxiii. daye of the vi. moneth in the seconde yere of kynge Darius, the xxi. day of the seventh moneth, came the worde of the Lorde by the prophete Aggeus, sayinge: speake to zozababel the sonne of Salathiel, prince of Iuda, and to Iesua the sonne of Josedech the hye p[re]ste, & to the resydue of the people, and say: *Whos lyste among you, y sawe thys house in derfyste bewtie: But what thinke ye now by it: Is it not in your eyes, euen as though it were nothyng: Neuerthelesse, be of good chere. *Zozababel (sayeth the Lorde) *be of good comforte, & Iesua thou sonne of Josedech hye p[re]ste: take good hertes vnto you also all ye people of the lande, sayeth the Lorde of hostes, & do accordyng to the word (*for I am wyth you, sayeth the Lorde of hostes) like as I agreed with you, when ye came out of the lande of Egypte: and my sp[irit]e shalbe amonge you, feare ye not.

He sayde moreouer, sett a saye myter vpon hys heade. So they set a saye myter vpon hys heade, & put on clothes vpon hym, and angel of the Lord stode there. Then an angel of the Lord restified vnto Iesua, and spake thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. If thou wilt walke in my wayes, & kepe my watch: thou shalt rule my house, & kepe my courtes, & I will geue the place amonge these that stode here. Heare (O Iesua) thou hye preste, thou and thy frends that dwell before the, for they are wonderous people. Behold, I wyl bring forth the bzaunches of my seruaunt: for lo, I stone I haue layed before Iesua: vpon one stone shalbe vii. eyes. Beholde I wyl be-wee hym out (sayeth the Lord of hostes) & take awaye the synne of the lade in one day.
Then shal every man cal for his neyghbour vnder the vyne and vnder the figgyre, saying the Lord of hostes:

The. liii. Chapter.

The vision of the golden candlesticks and the exposition thereof.

And an angel that talked with me cam agayne, and waked me vp, as a man that is rapted out of hys slepe & sayd vnto me: what seest thou? And I sayde I haue loked, and beholde: a candelsticke al of golde with a boule vpon it, & his seuen lampes ther in, and vpon every lape seuen stalkes.

And two olpue trees therby, one vpon the ryght syde of the boule, and the other vpon the lyfteside. So I answered, and spake to the angel that talked w me saying, O my Lord what are these? the angell that talked with me answered and sayde vnto me: knoweste thou not what these be? and I sayde: No my Lord. He answered & sayde vnto me: This is the worde of the Lord vnto zojobabel, saying: Neither thow nor an hoste of men nor thow nor strengthe, but thow nor my spete, sayeth the Lord of hostes. What art thou thou great mountayne, before zojobabel? I must be made euen. And he shal bygge vpon fyr: & stone, so that men shal crye vnto him good lucke good lucke.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lord came vnto me saying: The handes of zojobabel haue layed the foundacion of the house: hys handes, shall also synpse it, that ye maye knowe howe that the Lord of hostes hath sent me vnto you. For he that hath bene dispyssed a litle season, shall reioyce, when he seeth the tyme wepyng in zojobabels hande.
The. vii. eyes are the Lordes whych go tho-row the whole world. Then answered I, and sayd vnto him, what are these two olpue trees vpon the ryght and lefte syde of the candelstick? I spake moreouer, and sayd vnto him what be these two olpue bzaunches (whych thow the two golden pypes) emptye them selues into the gold: He answered me & sayd knowest thou not, what these be? And I sayde, no, my Lord. Then sayd he: These are the two olpue bzaunches, that stande before the ruler of the whole earth.

The. v. Chapter.

The vision of the sypinge booke, & synpse the curse of cheues and such as abuse the name of God, by the bypion of the measure, is synpse the bypion of Iuda to Babilon.

I turned me, lyfing vpon myne eyes, & loked, & beholde, a sypinge booke. And he sayd vnto me: what seest thou? I answered: I see a sypinge booke of. xx. cubytes longe, and. x. cubytes broad. Then sayd he vnto me: This is the curse that goeth forth ouer the whole earth: for all cheues shalbe Iudged after this booke, & all swearers shalbe Iudged accordyng to same, & I wyl bygge it furth (sayeth the Lord of hostes) so that it shall come to the house of these, & to the house of him, that falsly sweareth by my name: & shall remayne in hys house, & consume it, w the tymber and stones therof.
Then the angel that talked w me, wente forth and sayd vnto me: lyft vp thine eyes and se, what is this that goeth forth. And I sayde: What is it? He answered: this is a measure goinge out. He sayde moreouer: Euen thus are they that dwell vpon the whole earth: so loke vpon. And beholde, there was lyft vp a lent of leade: & lo, a woman sat in the myddell of the measure. And he sayde: this is vngodlynnes. So he cast her into the myddell of the measure, and therewe the lompe of leade into the mouth of the measure.

Then lyfte I vpon myne eyes, & loked: and behold, there came out. ii. womē, and I wote was in their wynges (for they had wynges lyke the wynges of a stork) & they lyft vp the measure betwixt the earth and the heauē.
The spake I to the angel that talked w me: why-ther wyl these beare the measure? And he sayd vnto me: into the lande of Synear to buyd them an house, whiche when it is prepared, the measure shalbe set there in his place.

The. vi. Chapter.

holde, there came foure charrettes out from betwixt two helles, whiche helles were of brasse.

In the fyrst charret were red hoxses, in the second charret were black hoxses, in the third charret were whyte hoxses, in the fourth cha-ret were hoxses of dyuers colours and stronge.
Then spake I, and sayde vnto the angell that talked with me: O lord what are these?

into the lande of the north, & the whyt flew them, and the speckled hoxses wente forth toward the south. The hoxses were very stronge, and wente out, and fought to go take theyr iourney ouer the whole erth.
And he sayde: get you hence, and go thorow the world. So they went thorowe out the world. Then cryed he vpon me, and spake vnto me, sayinge: beholde, these that go toward the north, shal styl my wyathe in the erth countre.

And the worde of the Lord came vnto me sayinge. Take of þ prisoners that are come from Babylon: namely, Heldai, Tobiah, & Jotha: and com thou the same day, and go into the house of Josiah, the sone of Shophonias. Then take golde & syluer, and make crownes therof, & set them vpon the head of Jehu, the sone of Josedeck, the hye prest, & speak vnto him. Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes.
Behold the man whose name is: the braun-che, and he that shall spyunge vp after hym, shall build vp the temple of the Lord, yee, and he shall build vp þ temple of the Lord.
He shall beare the prayse, he shall syt vpon the Lordes throne, and haue the domynacyō.

A prest shal be also vpon hys throne, and a peaceable counsell shal be wrytten them both. And the crownes shal be in the temple of the Lord, for a remembraunce vnto He-liah, Tobiah, Jadh, & Jhen, the sonne of So-phonia, and such as be farre of, shal come and worship the temple of the Lord, that ye may knowe howe that the Lord of hostes hath loved me vnto you. And thys shal come to passe, & ye wyl herke dyligently vnto þ voyce of the Lord your God.

The vii. Chapter.

The remembrance of fastynge without mercy, the dys-pente of harte, and cherefullnes of the people.

It happened also in the fourth yere of kynge Darius, that the worde of þ Lord came vnto zachary in the fourth day of the mynth moneth, whiche is called, Celen: what tyme as Sarasar and Rogonias, & the men that were wryth them sent Bethel far to praye before the Lord: and that they shulde saye vnto the prestes, which were in the house of the Lord of hostes, and to the prophetes. Shulde I wepe in the fourth moneth, and absteyne as I haue done nowe certayne yeres? Then came the worde of the Lord of hostes vnto me sayinge: I spake vnto all the people of the lāde that they shulde faste, and saye when ye fasted and mourned in that fyfthe & vii. moneth (this lxx. yeres) dyd ye fast vnto me? ye dyd eat also and dryncke, dyd ye eat and dryncke for youre owne selues?
And thus sayeth the Lord of hostes, whiche the Lord spoke by hys prophetes afore tyme whē Jerusalem was yet enhabtyed and welthy, she and þ cyties rounde aboute her: when there dwelte men, both toward the south and in the playne countrees.

And the worde of the Lord came vnto zachary, sayinge. Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. * Execute true iudgemente: shewe mercy and lounge kyndnesse, euery man to hys brother. Do the wydowe, the fatherles the straungers and poore no wrong: and let no man ymagen euell agaynst his brother in his hert. * Neuertheles, they wold not take heede, but turned theyr backs, and stopped theyr eares, that they shulde not heare: yee, they made theyr hertes as an Adamant stone least they shulde heare the lawe and wordes * whych the Lord of hostes sent in his holy sperte by the prophetes afore tyme.

Wherfore the Lord of hostes was very wroth at them. And thus is it come to passe: * that lyke as he spake and they wold not heare, euen so they cryed and I wold not heare (sayeth the Lord of hostes) but sca-tered them amonge all Gentiles, whom they knewe not: Thus the lande was made so desolate, that there traueled no man in yt neyther to nor fro, for that pleasaunt land was utterly layde wast.

The viii. Chapter.

Of the returne of the people vnto Ierusalem, and of the mercy of God toward them. Of good wor-ches. The calling of the Gentiles.

SO the worde of the Lord came vnto me sayinge: Thus sayeth þ Lord of hostes. I was in great gealousy ouer Shō, yee, I haue bene very gelous ouer her in a great dyspleasur thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. I wyl turne me a-gayne vnto Shō, & wyl dwell in the myd-dest of Ierusalem: * so that Ierusalem shalbe called a saythful and true citie, the hyl of the Lord of hostes, yee, an holy hyl.

Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. There shal your olde men & women dwel agayne in þ stretes of Ierusalem: yee, & such as go w traues in theyr hādes for very aenge. The stretes of þ cytie also shalbe ful of pong boy-es & damels, playinge vpon the stretes.

Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes: yf the residue of thys people thynke it to be vnpo-ssible in these dayes: * shuld it therfore be vn-possible in my syght, sayeth the Lord of hostes? Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. Be-holde, I wyl deliuer my people from þ land of the east and west, and wyl byynge them agayne: that they maye dwel at Ierusalem.
* They shalbe my people, & I wyl be theyr God in truethe and ryghteousnes.

Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes: let your handes be stronge, yee that nowe heare these wordes by the mouth of þ prophetes, which be in these dayes þ the foundacyon is layde,

And the woide of the Lozde of hostes, came vnto me sayinge thus sayeth the Lozde of hostes. The faste of the fourth moneth, the fast of the fyfthe, & faste of the seuenth, and the fast of the tenth shall be ioye and gladnesse, and prosperous hye feastes vnto the house of Iuda: Oulye, loue the trueth and peace.

Thus sayeth the Lozde of hostes. In that tyme shal ten men (out of al manner of language of the Gentiles) take one Jew by the hemme of his garmēt, and say we wyl go wpyth you, for we haue hearde, þe God is amonge you.

The ix. Chapter.

The conuersion of the Gentiles. The conuersion of the Gentiles on an Aile.

The woide of the Lozde shal be receyued at Adzache, & Damascus, shal be his offering: for the eyes of all men & of the trybes of Israel shal loke vnto þe Lozde. The borders of Hemah shal be heard therby, Tirus also and Sidon, for they are very wyse. * Tirus shal make her selfe stronge, heape vp syluer as the sand, & golde as þe clape of the stretes. Beholde the Lozde shal take her in, & haue her in possession: he shal symte downe her powre into the see, and she shal be consumed with fyre. * This shal Alcalon se, & be afrayed. * Gaza shal be very sorrowful, & be afrayed. * Gaza shal be very sorrowful, because her hope is come to confusyon. For þe kynge of Gaza shal peryshe: and at Alcalon shal noman dwell.

Strangers shal dwell at Adod, and as for the pyde of the Whelpstines, I shal rote it out. * Theyr bloude wyl I take awaye from theyr mouth, & theyr abhominacions from amonge theyr teth. Thus they shal be leste for oure God, yee they shal be as a pyne in Iuda, & Accaron lyke as a Jebusy. And so wyl I compase my house rounde aboute w my men of warre goyng to and fro: that no oppresseur come vpon them any more. For that haue I sene nowe w myne eyes.

* Reioyce thou greatly, O daughter Syon be glad, O daughter Jerusalem. For lo: thy kynge cometh vnto the, euen the ryghteous & sauoure. Lowly & symple is he, he rydeth vpon an Aile, & vpon the foote of an Aile. I wyl rote out þe charettes fro Ephraim & the horse from Jerusalem, & batel bowes shal be destroyed. He shal geue þe doctrine of peace vnto the heathen. * & his domynyon shal be from the one see to the other, & from þe floudes to the ende of the woide.

Thou also thou shalt knowe the bloude of thy conuenaunt, halt let thy prisoners oute of the pytte wherein is no water. Turne you now to the strong holde, ye þe in pyson, & long soze to be deliuered. And this daye I bringe the woide, that I wyl rewarde the double agayne. For Iuda haue I bent out as a bowe for me, & Ephraim haue I filled, theyr stones: O Sidon, wyl I rayse vp against þe Grekes & make the as a gyaunte's swearde, the Lozde God shal be sene aboue them, and his dartes shal go furth as the lychtning. The Lozde God shal blow the trompet, and shal come forth as a storme out of the south.

The Lozde of hostes shal defende them, they shal consume and deuoure, and subdue them with flying stones. They shal drinke & rage, as it were thow wpyne. They shal be fylled lyke the basens, and as the hoines of the aulter. The Lozde theyr God shal deliuer them in the day, as þe flocke of his people. For as precyous stones of a diademe they shal be set vpon ouer his land. O how prosperous and godly a thyng shal that be: The corne shall make the yonge men chearfull, & the newe wyne the maydens.

The x. Chapter.

The people is moued to requyre þe doctrine of trauel of the Lozde. The Lozde promysed to byld and comferte the house of Israel.

Praye

Raye the Lorde then by tymes to gyue the latter rayne. * so shall the Lorde make byrght cloudes, & geue you raygne ynough for al þe increse of the feld. For vayne is þe answer of Idols the sothe sayers se lyes, and tel but vayne wordes, the comforte that they geue, is no thing worth. Therfore, go they astray lyke a shepe, and are troubled, because they haue no shepheard. My wyrtful dyf- fidence is moued at the shepheardes, and I wyll vylet the goates. For the Lorde of ho- uses wyl graciously vylet his flocke, þe house of Iuda, and holde them as a goodly fayre baule in the battel. Out of Iuda shall come the naye, the batelbowe, and all the prynces together. They shall be as the grannes, whych in the battel tread downe the nyse upon the stretes. They shall fyght, for the Lorde shall be wth them, so that the heuemen shall be confounded.

I wyll comforte the house of Iuda, and restore the house of Ioseph. I wyll turne them also, for I petie them: and they shall be as they were, when I had not cast them. For I the Lorde am their God, and wyll restore them. Ephraim shall be as a graunt, and they shall be chereful as thozow wyne: for their chyldren shall se it, and be glad, and their harte shall reioyse in the Lorde. I wyll come for them and gather them together, for I wyll redeme them. They shall increase, as they increased afore. I wyll sowe them amonge the people, that they maye chynche vnto me in farre countrees, they shall lyue wth their chyldren, & turne agayne. I wyll bringe them agayne also from the lande of Egypte, and gather them oute of Assyria. I wyll cary them into the lande of Gilead and to Libanus and they shall wante nothinge. They shall go vpon the see of trouble, & smyte their waues, so that all the depe floudes shall be dyped vp. The proude boastyng of Egypte shall be cast downe, and the scripture of Egypte shall be taken awaye. I wyll com- fort them in the Lorde, that they may walke in his name, sayth the Lorde.

¶ The. xi. Chapter.

The destruction of the temple. The rare of þe sayth: that is committed to Chyrl by the father. A greuous warre agaynst Ierusalem and Iuda.

When thy dozes, O Libanus, that fire may consume thy Cedre trees howle þe fyre trees for þe Cedre is fallen: yee, al the proude are waied away howle. (O ye oke trees of Basaā) for the myghty stronge wood is cut downe. When maye here the shepherdes mourne, for the gloire is destroyed. When maye here the Lyons whelpes roare, for the pryde of Ioz- abab is waied awaye.

Thus sayth the Lorde my God: Kede the shepe of the slaughter, whych shall be slayne of those that possesse them: yet they take it for no synne, but they that sel the, saye: The Lorde be thacked, I am ryed: yee their owne shepherdes spare them not. Therfore wyll I nomore spare those that dwell in the lande, (sayth the Lorde) but so, I wyll deliuer the people, euery mā into his neygheboours hāde, and into the hande of hys kynge: that they maye smyte the lande, and out of theyr han- des I wyll not deliuer them.

I my selfe fed the slaughter shepe (a pooze flock verely) and toke vnto me twoo staues the one is called loupng mekenesse, the other is called destroyer, and so kepte the shepe.

These shepherdes I put oute of offyce in one moneth, for I myght not awaye with them, neyther had they any delyste in me. The sayd I: I wyll fede you nomore: the thynge that dyeth, let it dye: and that I wyll persyde, let it persyde, and let the remnaunt eate, euerye one the fleshe of his neyghebooure. I toke also my loupnge meke staffe, and brake it, that I myght dysanul the couenaunte, whych I made wth al people. And so it was broken in that daye.

Then the pooze symple shepe, that had a respecte vnto me, knewe therby, that it was the worde of the Lorde. And I sayde vnto them: yf ye thinke it good, bringe hither my payce: yf no, then leaue. So they wayed downe. xxx. syluer pence, þe value that I was payed at. And the Lorde laide vnto me: caste it vnto the potter (a goodly payce for me to be valued at of them) and I toke the xxx. syl- uer pence, and caste them to the potter in the house of the Lorde. Then brake I my other staffe also (namelye destroyer) that I myghte loofe þe brotherhead betwixt Iuda & Israel. And the Lorde sayd vnto me. Take the also the staffe of a folys shepheard, for lo, I wyll rayse vp a shepheard in þe lande, whych shall not seke after the thynge þe he losse nor care for such as go astray, he shall not heale the wounded, he shall not noyse þe thynge that is whole, but he shall eate the flesch of such as be fat, and teare their clawes in peces.

O Idols shepheard, that leauesth the flock The swerde shall come vpon hys arme and vpon his ryghte eye. His arme shall be cleane dyped vp, and hys ryghte eye shall be sooze blynded.

¶ The. xii. Chapter.

Of the destruction and buyldinge agayne of Ierusalem.

The deuy burthe which the Lorde hath deuoyed for Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde: which spred the heathens abroad, layde the foundacyon of the earth: and ge- ueth man the breath of lyfe. Beholde, I wyll make Ierusalem a cuppe of surfet, vnto all the people that are rounde aboute her.

* Zach. xliii. c.

* Yee, Iuda him selfe also shalbe in the seerge agaynst Jerusalem. At the same tyme wpll I make Jerusalem an heuy stone for all people, so that all such as lyffe it vp, shalbe tozned and rente. and all the people of the earth shal be gathered together agaynst it.

B In that daye, sayeth the Lorde, I wpll make all horses abashed, and those that ryde vpon them, to be out of theyr wyttes. I wpll open myne eyes vpon the house of Iuda, and smyte all y^e horses of the people wth byndnesse. And the p^{ri}nces of Iuda shal saye in their hartes. The inhabytters of Jerusalem shal geue me consolacyon in the Lorde of hostes they^e God. In that tyme wpll I make y^e p^{ri}nces of Iuda lyke an hote burninge ouen wth wood, and lyke a cresset of fier among the strawe, so that they shal consume all the people rounde aboute them, both vpon the ryght hande & the left. Jerusalem also shalbe inhabyted agayne: namelye, in the same place where Jerusalem standeth.

C The Lorde shal preserue the tentes of Iuda like as a fore tyme, so that the glorie of y^e house of Dauid: & the glorie of the cytelens of Jerusalem, shalbe but lytle regarded, in comparyson of the glorie of Iuda. In y^e daye shal the Lorde defende the cytelens of Jerusalem, so that the weakest then amonge the shalbe as Dauid: and the house of Dauid shalbe lyke as gods house, and as the Angell of the Lorde before them.

* 1. reg. xliii. f

At the same tyme wpll I go about to destrope all such people as come agaynst Jerusalem. Moreover, vpon the house of Dauid and vpon the cytelens of Jerusalem * wpll I poure out the sperte of grace & compassyō, so that they shal loke vpo me, who they haue pearled, & they shal bewepe bi as me mourne for their only begottē sone: yee, & be sozpe for him, as me are sozpe for they^e synners.

the Lord: I pet haue I loued Jacob, and hated Esau: * yet, I haue made his hylls waste, & his heritage a wilderness for dragons. And though God sayd: wel, we are destroyed, we wyl go by the way agayne the places that be wasted, yet (sayth the Lord of hostes) what they buylded, that brake I downe: so that it was called a cursed lande, and a people, whos the Lord hath euer bene angry wthall.

Your eyes haue sene it, and ye your sel-ues must confesse, & the Lord hath brought it downe of Israel to great honour. * Shulde not a sonne honour his father, & a seruant his master? If I be now a father, where is myne honour? If I be the Lord, where am I feared? sayth the Lord of hostes.

In this that ye saye: the autler of the Lord is not to be regarded. Ye offre the blynde, is not that euell? And ye offre the lame and stes? Yee, what is he amonge you, that wyl do so much as to shut the doores: or to kynde the fyre vpon myne autler for naught? * I haue no pleasure in you, sayth the Lord of hostes: and as for the meat offryng, I wyl not accepte it at your hande. * For fro the rising vpon of the sone vnto the goinge downe of the same, my name is greates amonge the Gentiles: yee, in every place shal there sacri-fyce be done, & a cleane meat offryng offered vnto my name: for my name is greates amonge the heathen sayth the Lord of ho-

Howe saye ye: It is but laboure and tra-that be lyghte, other cleare or bynne.

Thys shalbe that speyall daye whiche is knowne vnto the Lord, neyther day nor night but about the eueninge tyme it shalbe light.
In that tyme shal there waters of lyfe flynne out fro Jerusalem: the halfe parte of them toward the east see, and the other halfe toward the uttermost see, & shal contynue both somer & wynter. * And the Lord hym self shalbe kyng ouer all the earth.

In tyme shal there be one Lord onely, & his name shalbe but one. Wher shal go about the whole earth, & vpon a felde fro Gibeon to Jerusalem, & fro the south to Jerusalem. Shal belet vp, & inhabited in her place: fro the west porte, vnto the place of the fyrste porte, & vnto the corner porte: & from the tower of Babylon, vnto the kynges wyne press.
There shalmen dwel, & there shalbe no more teyng, but Jerusalem shalbe safely inhabyted. Thys shalbe the plage, wherwyt the Lord wyl synne all people, & haue fought agaynst Jerusalem. Namely, they: flesch shal consume awaye, though they stode vpon their feet, they: eyes shalbe corrupt in their holes, and their tynge shal consume in their mouth.

In that daye shal the Lord make a great scheyne amonge the, so that one man shal take another by the hande, & saye his handes vpon the handes of his neyghboure. * Iuda shal saye also agaynst Jerusalem, & the goddess of all: heathen shalbe gathered together to ride about golde & syluer, & a very great multitude of clothes. And so shal thys plage goo amonge horses, mules, camels, asses, & al the be-astes that shalbe in y^e host, like as y^eder plage was. Every one that remaineth then of all the people, whiche came agaynst Jerusalem, shal go vpon perly, to worshippe the kyng (the Lord of hostes) * and to kepe the lawe of tabernacles. And loke what generation vpon the earth goeth not to Jerusalem to worshippe the kyng (euen the Lord of not, it shal not rayne vpon them nether.

Thys shalbe y^e plage wherby the Lord wyl synne al y^e heathen, & come not vp to kepe the lawe of tabernacles: yee, thys shalbe y^e synne plage of Egypt & the synne plage of al people that go not vp to kepe the lawe of tabernacles.

In that tyme shal the rydynge grece of the horses be holpe vnto the Lord, the kettels in the Lordes house shalbe lyke the basens vpon the autler: yee, all the kettels in Jerusalem and Iuda, shalbe holpy vnto the Lord of hostes: and all they that shal offerynges, shal come & take of them, & bygyde the there in. And as that tyme there shalbe no mo Canities in the house of the Lord of hostes.

uaple and thus haue I thought scozne at it, (sayeth the Lord of hostes) offerynge toberp, yee, the lame and the synke. Ye haue brought me in a meatofferynge, shulde I accepte it of poure hāde, sayeth the Lord: Cursed be the dissembler, which hath in his flock one that is a male, & whē he maketh a vow, offereth a spotted one vnto the Lord. For I am a greute hyuge (sayeth the Lord of hostes) and my name is fearfull amonge the heathen.

The ii. Chapter.

Of the messaunger agaynst the prestes bynges to duce the people.

Ad nowe (O ye prestes) this comaundment toucheth you: if ye wil not heare it, nor regard it, to geue þe gloz vnto my name, sayeth the Lord of hostes. * I wyll sende a curse vpon you, and wyll curse your blessings: ye, curse them wyll I, yf ye do not take hede. Behold, I shall corrupt poure sede, and cast donge in poure faces, euen the donge of poure solemne feastes, & it shall cleue fast vpon you. And ye shall knowe, that I haue sente this comaundment vnto you: that my couenaunt which I made with Levi, might stande sayeth the Lord of hostes.

I made a couenaunt of lyfe & peace with him: this I gaue him, that he myghte stande in awe of me: and so he dyd feare me, & had my name in reuerence. The lawe of trueth was in hys mouth, & there was no wyckednesse founde in hys lypes. He walked with me in peace and equitye, and dyd turne many one awaye fro their synnes. * For in the prestes lypes shulde be sure knowledge, that men mape seke the lawe at hys mouth, for he is a messaunger of the Lord of hostes. But as for you, ye are gone clene out of the way, and haue caused the multitude to be offēded at the lawe: * ye haue broken the couenaunt of Levi, sayeth the Lord of hostes. Therefore wyll I also make you to be despyed, and to be of no reputacyon amonge all the people: because ye haue not kepte my wayes, but haue bene parcyall in the lawe.

Haue we not all one father? hath not one God made vs: * why doth euerye one of vs the despyse his owne brother, & so breake the couenaunt of oure fathers? Howe hath Juda offended: yee, the abhominacio is done in Israel and in Ierusalem: * for Juda hath despyled the Sanctuary of the Lord, whiche he loued, & hath kepte þe daughter of a straung God. But the Lord shall destroye the man that doeth this: (ye, both the master and the scoler) oute of the tabernacle of Jacob, with him that offereth vp meatofferynge vnto the Lord of hostes. Howe haue ye brought it to this poplite agayne, þe aniter of the Lord is couered with teares, wepyng and mournyng: so that I wyll nomore regarde the meatofferynge, neyther wyll I receiue or accepte any thyng at your handes. And yet ye saye: wherfore? Euen because that wher as the Lord made a couenaunt betwixte the and thy wyfe of thy yowth, thou hast despyled. * Yet is the thyne owne companyon and married wyfe.

So dyd not the one, and yet had he an re. & tellent sprete. What dyd then the one? he sought the seede promised of God. Therefore loke well to poure sprete, and let no man despyle the wyfe of hys yowth. Yf þe hateth her, * put her away sayeth the Lord God of Israel, and geue her clothyng for the shame, sayeth the Lord of hostes. Loke well then to poure sprete, and despyse her not. Ye geue the Lord with poure wordes, & yet ye saye: wherwithal haue we greued hym. In this, that ye saye. All that do euell are good in the sight of God, & such please him. O, els wher is the God that punyssheth.

The iii. Chapter.

Of the messaunger of the Lord John Baptiste, of the daye of the Lord, and of Eliab.

Beholde, * I wyll sende my messaunger Iger, whiche shall prepare the waye before me: and the Lord: whom ye wolde haue: shall soone come to hys temple, yee, euen the messaunger of the couenaunt whom ye longe for.

Beholde, he cometh, sayeth the Lord of hostes. But whome may abyde the daye of hys coming? Alho shalbe able to endure, when he appeareth? For he is lyke a goldsmiths fyre, and like wallwers sope. He shall set him downe to trye and to cleanse the siluer, he shall pouerge the chyldren of Levi, and purifye the lyke as golde and syluer: that they mape byngne meatofferynges vnto the Lord in ryghteousnes. Then shall the offring of Iuda and Ierusalem be acceptable vnto the Lord, lyke as from the begynnyng & in the years, afore tyme, I wyll come and punyssh you, and I my selfe wyll be a swifte wytnes agaynst the wyches: agaynst the aduocates, agaynst false swearers: yee, & agaynst those that wrongeously hepe back the byrelinges dewty: whiche were the wyddowes and the fatherlesse, and oppresse the straunger and feare not me sayeth the Lord of hostes. For I am the Lord that chaunge not: and ye, (O chyldren of Jacob) wyll not leaue of: ye are gone awaye fro myne ordynances, and sence þe tyme of your forefathers haue ye not kepte them.

Turne you nowe vnto me, and I wyll turne me vnto you, sayeth the Lord of hostes, ye saye: wherin shall we turne? shulde a man be falsch and dysceypte with God as ye be ye falsed and dysceate wyth me: yet ye wherin ble we dysceate wyth the: * In beaue offerpings. * Therfore are recorde wyth penury, because ye dyssemble wyth me, all the sorte of you.

* Binge euery Tythe into my barne, that may be meate in my house: & proue me wythal (sayeth the Lord of hostes) yf I wyl open the wyndowes of heaue vnto you, and poure you out a blessinge wyth plentefulnesse. Per, I shall reprove the consumer by your sakes, so that he shall not eate vp your grounde, neyther shall the vywende be barren in the felde, sayeth the Lord of hostes: In so moche that all people shall say, that ye be blessed, for ye shall be a pleasant lande, sayeth the Lord of hostes.

Pe speake harde wordes agaynst me, sayeth the Lord. And yet ye saye: What haue we spoken agaynst the: Ye haue sayde:

It is but lost labour, to serue God: * what haue we for keepinge hys commaundements, and for walkyng humbly before the Lord of hostes: * Therfore maye we saye, that I proude are happye, & that they which haue with vngodlynesse, are set vp: for they tempt God, and yet escape.

But they that feare God, saye thus one to another: The Lord consydereth and heareth. Per, it is before him a memorial booke written for suche as feare the Lord, and remembre hys name. And in the daye that I wyl make (sayeth the Lord of hostes) they shall haue myne owne posselion: and I wyl sauoure them, lyke as a man fauoureth hys owne soune, that doth hym serue. Turne you therfore, and consydre what dysference betwixte the ryghteous and vngodly, because him that serueth God, and hym that smyth him not.

* On marche, the daye cometh þ shall burne as an ouen: and all the proude, yee, and al soche as do wickednesse, shall be strawe, and þ day that is for to come, shall burne the vp (sayeth the Lord of hostes) so that it shall leaue them neyther rote nor branche.

But vnto you that feare my name, shall that Sunne of righteounesse aryle, & health shall be vnder hys wynges: ye shall go forth, and multiplie as þ fat calues, ye shall treade downe the vngodly: * for they shall be lyke þ ashes vnder the soles of your fete in þ daye þ I shall make sayeth the Lord of hostes.

Remembre the lawe of Moyses my sernaunte, * whych I comytted vnto hym in Dreb for all Israell, wyth the statutes and ordinaunces. Beholde: I wyl sende you *

Hierome sheweth: we haue separat them, & sett them asyde, that they maye the better be knownen: to thyntent that men maye knowe of whych bokes dyntes ought to be receaued, and of whych not. For the sayde S. Hierome speakinge of the boke of Iudith (which is hagiogryphe) sayth, þ the auctoritie therof is not esteemed worthy and sufficient to confyrme and stablysh the thynges that lyght in disputacyō. And generally of all þ bokes called hagiogrypha, he sayth, that men maye reade them to the edifyinge of the people: but not to confyrme & strengthen the doctrine of the Church. I leane oute here the lawe (as they call it) of Canon. c. Sancta Romana. xv. distinc. where he sheweth his iudgement. I pke wyle the Glose of. c. Canones. xvi. distinc. which sayth, that men reade the, but not in generall: as though he shulde saye, that generally and thoz only they are not alowed. And not wpythout a cause: For that they haue bene corrupted and falsified in many places, it appeareth sufficiently by Eusebius in his boke called hystoria Ecclesiastica: Whych thyng is easie to be knownen euen now a dayes in certen poyntes, namely in the bokes of the Machabees: whose second boke S. Hiero. confesseth that he founde not in the hebreue, by the meanes wherof it is become vnto vs the more suspect and the lesse receaued. In lyke maner is it of the thyrde and fourthe boke of Esdras, whych S. Hierome protesteth that he wolde not haue translated, esteeming them for dreames: where as Iosephus set in his booke of hys Antiquities declareth þ summe of þ matter after the maner of a foyre, as well of the boke of Machabees as of the iii. of Esdras: all though he esteame the bokes compyled from the raygne of kynge Artaxerxes vnto hys tyme, to be hagiogrypha.

Wherfore then, whē thou wilt maynteyne any thyng for certen, renderyng a reason of thy sayth, take heade to proceade therein by þ luyng and ppytyme Scriptures, folowynge S. Peter, whych sayeth: he þ speaketh, let hym speake as though he speake the worde of God. he sayeth the worde of God, as a thyng most true and certen, opened by the Prophetes and Apostles, inspyred wpyth the holy goost: of whom we haue wpyntle moare cleare then the daye. Lawers haue greate desyre to confyrme and stablysh theyr opynions by the lawe of man, saye, that they shame to speake wpythout lawe: how moch more feare and dreade then ought he to haue, that sayth he is a Chyrtian, the whych holdeth not hym selfe, or reaseth not in þ lawes of the luyng God: but in memmes inuencions, iudgyng of all thynges accordynge to them, and leanyng to an vncerten ymagynacyon and phantasie. Let vs therfore that are buylded on the foundacyon of the holy Prophetes and Apostles, and on the head corner stone (on whych they them selues were founded, and whych they preached, that is Iesus Chyrt, the sure stone) leane the thynges that are vncerten to folowe the certē: holdynge vs and reasynge vs in them, and fastenynge oure ancre there, as in a sure place. For oure Chyrtten sayth conspyseth not in doutefull thynges, but in playne and moost certen assurannee, and in moost true perswasyon, taken & confirmed by infallible write. In whych God graunte vs to walcke perpetual-lye, to thyntent that accordynge to it (fulfyllynge his holy wyl in vs, and lettynge asyde all inuencions contrary vnto hym) we maye lyue to hys honour, and to the edifyinge of hys Church.

So be it.

The fyrste Chapter.

Josias helde Pasche. After his death in Jericho his son made kynge in hys steade: whome the kyng of Egypt putted out, & setted in hys brother Jehoiakim. Jerusalem is destroyed: & Jehochian is taken.

And * Josias helde þe feast of Easter in Jerusalem vnto þe Lorde, & slewe the passeouer the xiiii. daye of the fyrst mo-neth. He let the preastes also in ordre (accordynge to theyr dayly courses) beynge arayde in garmentes in the temple of the Lorde þe spake vnto the Leuites the holy impious of Israel, that they shoulde halowe the Lorde, to sette the holy man the sonne of Dauid had buyded, sayde: Ye shall no more beare the Arke in your shulders. Nowe serue your Lorde the charge of hys people of Israel, the your byllages and your trybes: accord-ynge as kynge Dauid the kynge of Israel, had ordeyned, and accordynge as Salomon had donatably prepared: yee, loke ye all do scrupce in þe temple accordynge to the charge and distribucion of the principal men whiche are appoynted out of the tribes, to do scrupce for the chyldren of Israel. * And the Pascheouer, and prepare offe-ringes for your brethren, and do accordynge to the commaundement of the Lorde, which he gaue vnto Moyses. And vnto the people was founde, Josias gaue. xxx. thousande of shepe, lambes, kyddes, and goates, and ten thousande oxen. These the kynge (of his liberalyte) gaue vnto the people, as he had promysed: & to the Prestes, & Pascheouer, he gaue two. W. shepe, and ten thousande oxen. Mozeouer Jehochias his sonnes, & Bathanael his brethren, and Jehiel, and Josabab gaue them the Pascheouer, fyue thousande shepe, and ten hundred bullockes.

And when these thinges were brought to the Prestes & the Leuites stode goodly in ordre, & had the vntuned bread out the tribes. And after þe ordynge the principal men in the trybes, they offered the Lorde in the syght of the people as it is wyrtten in the booke of Exodus, & so they rosted the Easter lambe as was sayd. As for the thankofferynges the other, they dyght in the kettelles and boyles, & let them before þe people with good meate. For the Prestes offered the fat the tyme was cryped, but þe Leuites prepared for them selues & for theyr brethren the chyldren of Aaron. The holy syngers also the chyldren of Asaph stode in theyr order accordynge as Dauid deuyded. So dyd Asaph zachary & Jothan, which were appoynted by the kynge. Mozeouer the porters and doze keepers stode by the dozes and þe diligent lye, so that none went out of his standynge & scrupce: for theyr brethren (the Leuites) prepared for them. Thus were all thynges per-fourmed, that belonged to the offerynge of þe Lorde. In that daye they held the Pascheouer, and offered thankofferynges besyde the sacri-fyce of the Lorde accordynge to the commaun-dement of kynge Josias.

So the chyldren of Israel whiche were then present helde an honourable Pascheouer, and the feaste of swete breade. vii. dayes longe.
Yee suche a passeouer was not kept in Israel from the tyme of þe prophet Samuel. And al the kynges of Israel held not such an Easter: as this which kynge Josias helde, & the Prestes, the Leuites, & Jewes, & all Israel, of al the þe were at Jerusalem. And in the xviij. yere of the raygne of Josias was this Pascheouer kept. And with a partyte harte dyd kynge Josias orde all his workes, before the Lorde and the thynges that were wyrtten of hym in tymes past, concernynge those that synned & were vngodly agaynst the Lorde before all people, & that sought not þe worde of þe Lorde vpon Israel. * After all these actes of kynge Josias, Pharaos the kynge of Egypt went vp & came towarde Carnis by Euphrates, and Josias went to mete hym. Then sent þe kynge of Egypt to Josias, sayinge: what haue I to do with the, O kynge of Juda? I am not sent of the Lorde to fyght agaynst the, for my warre is vpon Euphrates, go thou thy way home agayne in all þe hast. And Josias wold not turne agayne vpon his charet, but vnder toke to fyght agaynst hym, & berkened not vnto the worde of the prophete, whiche he tolde hym out of the mouth of God, but pryched battayle agaynst him in þe felde of Mageddo. And the wyrces preassed to kynge Josias. Then sayde the kynge vnto his ser-uautes. Carry me awaye out of the battayle, for I am sore wounded. And immediatly his seruautes toke hym awaye out of the front of the battayle. Then sat he vp vpon the second charet, came to Jerusalem, dyed, & was buryed in his fathers sepulchre. And in al Jude they mourned for Josias, yee: þe rulers also with theyr wyues made lamentacyon for him vnto this daye. And this was done euer syll in Israel.

These thynges are wyrtten in the boke of the stoyres of the kynges of Juda, namelpe, all the Actes and workes of kynge Josias, his kyngly power and maiesty, his vndersta-ndynge in the lawe of God, & what he dyd, yee thynges whiche are not wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Israel and Iuda. * And the people toke Iechonias the sonne of Josias, & made hym kyng in strate of Josias hys father, when he was. xxiij. yere olde. And he raygned ouer Israel thre monethes. And the kyng of Egypte put hym downe, & he shulde not raygne in Ierusalem, & rayled vp a taxe of the people: namely, an. C. talentes of syluer, and one talent of golde. The kyng of Egypt also made Joachim his brother kyng of Iuda and Ierusalem. As for them of the kynges counsell wth the kyng hym selfe, and zaraccles hys brother, he toke them and carped them awaye prysoners into Egypte. Fyne and twentie yere olde was Joachim, when he was made kyng in the lande of Iuda & Ierusalem, & he dyd euell befoze the Lord. After this * Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon came vp, & bounde hym wth bandes of pryn, & carped hym vnto Babilon. Nabuchodonosor also toke all the vessels that were halowed in the temple of the Lord, & all the seruitours, & carped them vnto Babilon, & brought the into his owne temple at Babilon. Of his vncleynesse & vngodlynes, it is wrytten in the boke of the actes of the kynges. And Joachim his sonne raygned in hys steade: he was made kyng beyng. xviij. yere olde, and raygned but thre monethes and. x. dayes in Ierusalem, & dyd euell befoze the Lord. So after a yere Nabuchodonosor sente and caused hym to be brought vnto Babilon with the holy vessels of the Lord, & made Sedechias his brother kyng of Iuda & Ierusalem, when he was xxi. yere olde: & he raygned. xi. yere.

* Jer. xli. a. And he dyd euill also in the syght of the Lord, & cared not for the wordes that were spoken vnto hym by the prophet Jeremy at the mouth of the Lord. And where he had made an oth vnto the kyng Nabuchodonosor, he forswore hym selfe, and fell from hym hauing a styneck & a hert, & transgressed all the statutes and ordynances of the Lord God of Israel. The rulers also & the heades of the people of the Lord dyd much euell, & became vngodly, more then the heathen, beyng defyled in all maner of abhominacions: Pee, & defyled the holy temple of the Lord at Ierusalem. And the God of theyr fathers sente hys messengers vnto them, to turne the backe: & to cal the agayne fro theyr synnes: for he wold sayne haue spared them for his holy tabernacles sake. Neuertheles, they had his messengers in derision: & loke what god spake vnto the by his prophetes, they made but a spozte of it. This dyewe on so longe tyll the Lord was wroth with his people for theyr vngodlynes, & tyll he caused the kynges of the Chaldees to come vp, whiche slewe theyr yong men with the swerd, pee: euen in the compasse of theyr holy temple, & spared no body, neyther ponge nor olde, neyther mayde nor yong man but they were all deliuered in to the power of the kynges of the Chaldees, and all the holy vessels of the Lord and the kynges treasures toke they, and carped them vnto Babilon. * As for the house of the Lord, they went vp into it, and bent it, & brake downe the wallles of Ierusalem, sette fyre vpon her towres, destroyed all her noble buyldinges & brought them to naught, & the people that were not slayne wth the swerde, they carped vnto Babilon.

Thus became they prysoners and bonde men of the kyng of Babylon, tyll they were deliuered & raygned for them selues, * When the wordes of the Lord were fulfilled, which he promysed them, by the mouth of the prophete Jeremy, and tyll the lande had her rest: namely, all the tyme that it laye wast, had it rest and quyetnes. lxxviij. yeres.

The. ii. Chapter.

* Cyrus spaketh to the Jewes to returne to Ierusalem, & restoreth them the vessels of the temple. Also are there letters sent to Artabares: which accuseth the Jewes for buyldinge of the temple: so is the buylding begun of the temple the seconde yere of Darius.

Nowe * when kyng Cyrus raygned ouer the Persians, & when the Lord wolde perfourme the worde that he had promysed by the mouth of the prophete Jeremy: the Lord rayled vp the sperte of Cyrus, the kyng of Persians: so he caused this wryttinge to be proclaimed thorowout his whole realme, saying: Thus sayeth the kyng of Persians: The Lord of Israel that the Lord hath made me kyng of the lande, and commaunded me to buylde hym an house at Ierusalem in Jewry. If there be any nowre of your people, & the Lord be with him, and go vp with him to Ierusalem. And all they that dwell rounde aboute that place shall helpe them, whether it be wth golde, wth syluer, wth gyftes, wth horses and necessary catell, and all other thynges that are broughte with a free wyll to the house of the Lord at Ierusalem.

Then the principall men out of the tribes and villages of Iuda, and Ben Jamin stode vp: so dyd the prestes also & the Leuites (whiche the Lord had moued) to go vp, and to buylde the house of the Lord at Ierusalem. And they that were aboute them helped the with all maner of golde, and syluer, and catell also and with many lyberall gyftes, and this dyd many one, whose mynde was stered by the Lord. * Kyng Cyrus also brought forth the vessels and ornaments, that were halowed vnto the Lord (whiche Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon had carped awaye fro Ierusalem, and consecrated them to his Idoll and ymage) and deliuered them to Gedaltas his treasurer, and by him they were deliuered ward to Salmanaſar ſe debytte in Jewry. This was the nombre of the: Two thouſand .iii. C. ſyluer boules. xxx. ſyluer baſens of golde. ii. M. .v. iii. C. beſides ſyluer, and a thouſande beſyde. All ſyluer of gold and ſyluer were. v. M. viii. c. These were nūbryd vnto Salmanaſar, and to them that were come againe with him to Jeruſale out of the captiuyte of Babilon. Howe in the tyme of kynge Artaxerxes, Balſamius, Sabellius, Rathimus, Balſamius, Semelius the ſcrybe, & other that dwelt in Samaria and in other places vnder the kynge, wrote a letter vnto kynge Artaxerxes, wherein they complayned vnto the kynge of them in Jewry and Jeruſalem. The letter was made after this maner.

Our ſeruauntes Rathimus the ſcrybe, Balſamius the ſcrybe, & other indwelers of the court in Celosyria and Phenices. Is knownen and maniſeſt to our Lorde the kynge, & the Jewes whiche are come vp from Babilon vnto vs into the rebellyous & wycked cytye, to buyde it agayne, & the walles aboute it, and to ſet vp the temple a newe. Howe if this cytye & the walles therof be let agayne, they ſhall not only reſuſe to geue taxes and tares, but alſo rebell vnto the kynge. And for ſo muche as they ſet in hande nowe about ſettinge it reaſon, to thynke no ſcore of it, we ſet it vnto our Lorde the kynge, and we praye hym therof: to the intent that yf it be the king, he maye cauſe it to be ſoughte oute of olde: and thou ſhalt fynd ſuch maner wyrtten, & ſhalt vnderſtande that the cytye hath alwaye bene rebellyous and diſobedient, that it hath ſubdued kinges and lordes, and that ſe Jewes whiche dwell there, haue bene a rebellyous, obſtynate, vnſubdued, and fygthinge people, for the which this cytye is waſted. Wherefore nowe we praye our Lorde the kynge, that yf this cytye be buyded and occupied agayne, & the walles therof ſet vp a newe, thou canſt haue ſellage into Celosyria and Phenices.

Then wrote the kynge to Rathimus, the ſcrybe, to Balſamius, to Sabellius, to Balſamius, & to the other officers & dwellers in Samaria and Phenices, after this maner: I haue receyved the epyſtle which thou ſenteſt vnto me, and haue commaunded to make diligent ſearch, and haue found, & the cytye hath euery daye rebellyous, that ſe ſame people are diſobedient, and haue cauſed much warre, and the kynge hath repyned in Jeruſalem, whiche alſo haue rayſed vnto taxes of Samaria and Phenices. Wherefore I haue commaunded thoſe people, & they ſhall not buyde the cytye, that they make no more in it, and they proceede no farther with the buydyng: for ſo muche as it myght be the cauſe of warre and diſpleaſure vnto kynges.

Howe when Rathimus and Sabellius the ſcrybe & the rulers in the lande had red the wyrtynge of kynge Artaxerxes, they gat them together, & came in all the haſt to Jeruſalem w an hooſte of hoſemen, and w muche people of ſote, & forbad the to buyde. And ſo they left off from buildyng of the temple, vnto the ſeconde yere of kynge Darius.

The. iij. Chapter.

Darius maketh a feaſt. The thre ſentences of the thre ponge men, of whiche the ſpyt is declared.

Kynge Darius made a great feaſte vnto his ſeruauntes, vnto all his court, & to al his officers of Medea & Perſia, yee to all the debytes and rulers that were vnder hym, fro India vnto Ethiopia, an hundred & .xxvii. countres. So when they had eaten and dronken beynge ſatiſfied, and were gone home agayne. Darius the kynge went into his chambere, layde hym downe to ſleape, and ſo awaked.

Then the thre ponge men, that kepte the kynges perſonne, and watched his body, comoned amonge them ſelues, & ſpake one to another: let euery one of vs ſaye ſome thyng & loke whoſe ſentence is wyſer and moze excellent then the other, vnto hym ſhall kynge Darius geue great gyftes, and clothe hym w purple. He ſhall geue hym veſſelles of golde to drynke in, clothes of golde and couerpynges: he ſhall make hym a coſtely charet and a bydle of golde, he ſhall geue him a bonette of whyte ſylke, and a cheyne of golde aboute his necke: yee, he ſhall be the ſeconde and principall nexte vnto kynge Darius, and that becauſe of his wyſdome, and ſhall be called the kynges kynſman.

So euery one wrote his meanyng, ſealed it, and layde it vnder the kynges pelow, and ſayde: when the kynge aſpleth, we wyl geue hym oure wyrtynge, and loke whoſe worde the kynge and his chefe Lordes iudge to be the moſte wyſely ſpoken, the ſame ſhall haue the victorie. One wrote: Wyne is a ſtronger thyng. The ſecond wrote: The kynge is ſtronger. The thirde wrote: I ſhall haue yet moze ſtrength, but aboue all thynges ſe truth deareth awaye the victorie. Howe when ſe kynge was ryſen vp, they toke they wyrtynge & deliuered them vnto hym, and ſo he red them. Then ſent he forth to cal all his chefe Lordes all the debytes and rulers of the countres of Medea and Perſia. And when they were ſet downe in the counſayle, the wyrtynge were red befoze the. And he commaunded to call for the ponge men, that they might declare their meanynges them ſelues by mouth. So when they were ſent for, & came in, the kynge ſayde vnto the: ſewe vs & make vs to vnderſtand what the thynges are that ye haue wyrtten.

The. iij. boke.

D Then began the fyrst (which had spoken of the strength of wyne) and sayd: O ye men * wyne is maruelous stronge, and ouercometh the y dyynke it: it disceaueth the mynde and byngeth both the poore man & the kyng to doctage & vanyte. Thus doth it also with the bondma and with the fre, with the poore and ryche: it taketh awaye theyr vnderstandynge, and maketh them carelesse and mery, so y none of them remembreth any heynesse det or dewtye. It causeth a man to thynke also that the thyng whiche he doth is honest and good: and remembreth not that he is a kyng, nor that he is in auctoryte, and that he ought not to do such thynges. Whereouer whē men are bynkyng, they forget all frendshipp al brotherly faythfulnes & loue: but as soone as they are dronken, they draw out y swerd and wyl fyght: & when they are layde downe from the wyne, & so ryse vp agayne, they cā not tell what they byd: iudge ye nowe is not wyne the strongest? For who wolde els take in hand to do such thynges? And when he had spoken this, he helde his tonge

The. iij. Chapter.

The declaracion of the. ii. last sentences of the ponge men: propounded in the Chapter before: of whiche the last that is, y derite beareth the victorie in all thynges is most commended & alowed. Warius wyrteth letters to all the rulers vnder hym, that they shulde abyde zojobabel to the bypdyng of Ierusalem.

A Then the seconde (which had sayd, that the kyng was stronger) began to speake, saying: O ye men, are not they the strongest & moste excellent, that conquere the lande and the see, and all that is in the see and in the earth? Howe is the kyngs Lorde of all these thynges and hath dominyon of them all and loke what he commaundeth, it is done. Yf he sende his men forthe a warfare, they go and breake downe bylles, walles and towres. They are slayne, and slaye (other men) them selues, and overpasse not the kynges worde. Yf they get the victorie, they byng the kyng al the spoyle. Yf he wyle the other that medle not with warres and fyghtynge, but tyl the grounde: when they rape, they bynge tribute vnto the kyng. And yf the kyng alone do but commaunde to kyll, they kyll: Yf he commaunde to forgeue, they forgeue: Yf he byd dyue awaye, they dyue awaye: yf he commaunde to buylde, they buylde: Yf he commaund to breake downe, they breake downe: Yf he comaunde to plante, they plante.

25 The comen people and the rulers are obedyent vnto hym. And the kyng in the meane season syteth hym downe, eateth, and dyneketh, & taketh his rest: then kepe they watch rounde aboute the kyng, and not one of them dare get hym out of the waye, to do his owne busynes, but must be obedyent vnto y kyng as a worde. Iudge ye nowe, O ye men howe shulde not he go far aboue vnto whome men are thus obedyent? And when he had spoken thus, he helde his tonge. The thyrd whose name was zojobabel, whiche had spoken of women, and of trouth began to saye after this maner: O ye men, it is not the greates kyng it is not the multitude of men, neyther is it wyne that excelleth: who is it then that hath the Lordshyppe ouer them? Haue not women bozne the kyngs, and all the people that rule those thynges? Haue not women bozne them, and brought them vp, that plante the bynes, whereout the wyne cometh: They make garmentes for all men, they geue honoure vnto all men, and without women can not men lyue. Yf they gather golde and syluer and all precyous thynges, and se a fayre wel fauoured woman, they leane altogether and turne theyr eyes only vnto the woman & gaze vpon her, & haue more desyre vnto her, then vnto the syluer and gold, or any maner of precyous thyng. * A man leaureth his father that brought hym vp, leaureth his owne natural countre, & cleaueth vnto the woman yf he leopardeth his lyfe with the woman, & remembreth neyther father, nor mother, nor countre. By this then ye must nedes knowe that women haue dominyon ouer you.

D Doth it not greue you? A man taketh his swerde, & goeth his waye to steale, to kyll, to murder, to sayle vpon the see, and seyth a Lyon, and goth in the darkenes: and when he hath stollen, dysceaued and robbed, he byngeth it vnto his loue. Agayne, a man loueth his wyfe better the father or mother: yee many one there be, y ren out of theyr wittes, and become bondmen for theyr wyues sake: many one also haue perished, haue bene slayne, and haue synned because of women.

D And nowe beleue me, I knowe a kyng, whiche is great in his power, and all landes stande in awe of hym, and no man dare laye hande vpon hym: yet byd I se, that Apame (the daughter of the great kyng Bartacus) the kynges concubyne, sat besyde the kyng vpon the ryght hande, & toke of hys crowne from his heade, & set it vpon her owne heade and smote the kyng with her lefte hande.

Whereouer, the kyng looked vpon her with open mouth: yf she laughed vpon hym, he laughed also, but yf she toke any displeasure with hym: y kyng was fayne to flatter her, and to geue her good wordes, tyll he had gotten her fauoure agayne.

D O ye men, are not women then stronger? Great is the earth, & hye is the heauen. Altho doth these thynges: Then y kyng & the princes looked one vpon an other. So he began to speake of the trouth: O ye men: are not women stronger? Great is the earth, hye is the heauen, swyft is the course of the sunne, & he com passeth the heuen round about, and ferreth his

the same agayne to hys owne place in one place. As he not excellent that doth this: For the truth, & stronger then all thynges.
All the earth calleth vpon the truth, the men prayse it, all workes make & treble it, and with it is no vnryghteous thyng.
The vnryghteous: the kynge is vnrygh-teous: men are vnryghteous, all the chyldren of men are vnryghteous, yee: all they workes are vnryghteous, & there is no truth in them: vnryghteousnesse also shall be destroyed & perishe. As for the truth it endureth, and is alwaye strong: it lyueth and conquereth for euermore: worlde without end.

The truth accepteth no personnes, it maketh no difference betwixte ryche or poore nor the myghtye or simple, but dothe iustice vnto every man, whether they be euell or good, & all men are longynge dealt wthin the workes of it. In the iudgment of it there is no vnryghteous thyng but strength and power and maiestie for euer: Blessed be the God of truth.

And with that he helde his tounge, and all the people & sayde: Great is the truth, and shal be all. Then sayde the kynge vnto him: What thou wilt, more then is appointed in the writinge, and I shall geue it the, as thou art founde wiser then thy company, thou shalte speake next me, and be my counsailler. Then sayde he vnto the kynge: Remember thy promise and vowe, whiche thou hast vowed and promysed (in the daye when thou camest to the kynge) to buyld Jerusalem, & to sende agayne all þe vessels and Jewelles that were taken awaye out of Jerusalem: which Cyrus separated, when he was in Babylon, & wold sende the agayne.
And thy mynde was to buyld vpon the Temple which the Edomytes bzent, when Jerusalem was destroyed by the Chaldees. This my (O kynge) is the thyng that I requyre of the maiesty, whiche I desyre and aske of thee: that thou performe the vowe, whiche thou with thine owne mouth hast made vnto the kynge of heauen.

Then Darius the kynge stode vp, and wrote hym, & wrote a letter vnto all þe kynnes and shreues, to all the Lordes and nobles, that they shulde conuey hym forth, and that they wolde go vp with hym. He wrote also vnto all the shreues that were in Assyria and Phenices, and vnto Lyba-nus, that they shulde drawe Cedre trees fro Libanus vnto Jerusalem, to buyld the cytie newe. Moreover, he wrote vnto all the Je-wes that were gone out of his Realme into Exyle, because of þe freedom, that no offyce nor shreue, shulde come to theyr domynion: and that all theyr lande whiche they had possessed, shulde be fre & not tributary: And that þe Edomytes shulde geue ouer the cyties and vylages of the Jewes, whiche they had taken in, yee: and that they shulde petyly geue xx. talentes to the buylding of þe temple, vntyl the tyme that it were synished, and to the dayly halowynge of the bzent offrynges (as it is commaunded) ten talentes yearly also:

And that all they whiche come fro Babylon to buyld the cytie, shulde haue fre libertie, they and theyr chylidren, & all the prestes.

He wrote the greatnes also, & commaunded that þe holy garment shulde be geuen the wherin they ministred: and wrote that commaundementes shulde be geuen to the Leuites, vntill the daye, that the house were synished, and Jerusalem buylded vp, and commaunded that all they that watched the cyte shulde haue theyr payes and wages.

He gaue ouer also all the vessels that Cyrus had separated from Babylon: & all that Cyrus had geuen in commaundementes, the same charged he also: that it shulde be done, and sent vnto Jerusalem. Nowe when this yong man was gone forth, he turned his face towards Jerusalem, and prayled the kynge of heauen, and sayde: * Of the cometh the victory, of the cometh wysdome & clarenes & I am thy seruant. Blessed art thou, whiche hast geuen me wysdome: that will I prayse O Lorde thou God of our fathers.

And so he toke the letters, & wente vnto Babylon. And when he came there, he tolde this vnto all his brethren that were at Babylon, and they prayled the God of theyr fathers, that he had geuen them refrechyng & libertie to go vp, & to buyld Jerusalem and the temple (wherin þe name of þe Lorde is called vpon) and they reioysed with instrumen-tes and gladnes seuen dayes longe.

The v. Chapter.

¶ They that returne to Jerusalem are nombred. They begyne to laye the foundacyon of the temple: but are let by the means of enemyes: and so is the buylding dy-uerse of by the space of two yeres.

After this were þe principall men of al þe vylages chole in the trybes & kynredes, that they shulde go to their wines & chylidren, & their seruantes & maydens to all their catell and substance. And Darius þe kynge set with them a. M. horsemen, to conuey them safely vnto Jerusalem: and theyr brethren were glad, playinge vpon instrumentes, and syngynge. And these are the names of the men, whiche went vp out of the vylages, accor-dyng to the trybes. Of the Beniamites, þe sonne

These folowynge are they, that went vp from Chelmei at Chelarsa (whose bypnes were Carmelam & Careth) and myghte not shewe forth theyr egyptes & kynredes, howe they were of Israel: The sonnes of Dalarus the sonnes of Tuben, the sonnes of Archodaisus. Of the prestes that executed & offyce of the presthode, and were not founde: The sonnes of Obia, the sonnes of Achilos, the sonnes of Addin, whiche marped one of the daughters of Phargelen, and were named after hym. The wytyng of the same kynred was sought in the regystrer of theyr genealogy, but it was not found: & therfore were they forbydden to execute the offyce of presthode. Vnto the sayde Nehemias & Asparas that they shoulde haue no porcyon in the Sanctuary, tyll there rose vp an hye preste, that were well instructe in the playne clearenesse and truely. Of all Israel (besyde seruantes and maydens) there were. xlii. thousand and maydens. vii. iii. c. & xxxvi. Of syn-gery men and syngynge women there were two hundred & lxxv. foure hundred & xxxv. seuen thousande, and. xxxvi. horses two hundred thousande and. xlv. Mules.

And. xlv. asses.

They heedes also and the rulers in the countrie, when they came to Ierusalem, and buielde and set vp the temple of God in his place, they gaue (after they) buielde vnto the temple, to the treasure, & to the seruyce of the Sanctuarie. xii. iii. pounds of golde, fyue thousand of silver, and an hundred prestes garmentes. And so dwelt the prestes and Leuytes, and the people that wet out to Ierusalem, and in the countrie there a longe tyme the syngers also and the porters, euer in Israel in his owne lande.

So when the seuenth mooneth came:
when the chyldren of Israel were euerpe at his busynesse, they came all with one consent into the court which was before the temple. And there stode Iesua the sonne of Josede, and his brethren the prestes, and zo-robabel the sonne of Salathiel, and his brethren, settinge vp an alter, to offre burnt sacrifices vpon it, as it is wyrtten in the lawe of Moyses.

There came people also of other countreys, and the hepythen out of all landes to set vp the temple in his place, and offered sacrifices and burnt offerynges vnto the Lorde in the mo-neth. And so they helde the feast of tabernacles, as it is commaunded in the lawe.

And buyde they as accordynge was,
and made the sacrificies appoynted, the of-ferynges also of the Sabbothes, and of the newe moones, and all holy feastes. * And all that vowed offerynges vnto the Lorde, began at the newe moone of the vii. moneth to offre vnto God, for the temple of the Lorde was not yet buyled. And they gaue vnto the builders and carpenters, moneys, meate, and drinke with cherefulness. Vnto them of Sidon also and Tyre, they gaue carres, & they carried Cedre tyes from Lybanus to be laydes, and beames, and that they shoulde make theyppes in the haven of Ioppe, accor-dyng as it was appoynted and ordeyned by Cyrus kynge of the Persians.

And in the seconde yere, they came into the temple of God at Ierusalem. * In the seconde mooneth began zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Iesua the sonne of Josede, & their brethren the prestes and Leuytes: and all they that were come vnto Ierusalem out of the captiuitie of Babylon, & layde the foundacion of the temple, in the newe moone of the seconde moneth in the seconde yere & they were come into Jewry & Ierusalem. And they appoyned the Leuytes (that were aboue. xx. yere olde) vnto the seruyce of the Lorde: so Jesua and his sonnes, and his brethren, all the Leuytes stode togyther, and performed the lawe and ordinaunce in the house of the Lorde.

And the prestes stode, and had their garmentes and trompettes, and the Leuytes, the sonnes of Asaph had cymbals, geyng thankes and playes vnto the Lorde, accordynge * as Dauid the kynge of Israel had ordeyned.

And the songe that they dyd synge vnto the Lorde, was after this maner. * The synge vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious, and his goodnesse vnto Israel endureth for euer. And all the people blewe out with trompettes, & lange with loude voyce prayng the Lorde togyther, in the rearyng vnto the house of the Lorde. * There came also from amonge the prestes and Leuytes the rulers and elders accordynge to the trybes and kynredes (such as had sene the house afore) to the buydynge of this temple with great crye and great mour-nyng, many also with trompettes and greate ioye: In so moche, that the trompettes might not well be herde for the wepyng and mour-nyng. For the comune people blewe goodly vpon the trompettes.

* Then came the enemyes of the trybes of Juda & Ben Jamin, to knowe what that trompetynge and noyse of shawmes myght be. And they perceyued that it was they whiche were come agayne out of captiuitie, & wold buyde the temple vnto a newe vnto the Lorde God of Israel. So they went to zorobabel, and Iesua, and to the rulers of the villages, and sayde vnto them. Shall we buyde with you also? For we lyke wyse haue heard you the Lorde, and we walke after the same maner, from the dayes of Abasareth the kynge of Assyria, which brought vs hither. Then zo-robabel and Iesua, and the rulers of the villages of Israel sayde vnto them: It is not mete, that ye shoulde buyde the temple of our God with vs: we oure selues alone wyl buyde vnto the Lorde, lyke as Cyrus the kynge of the Persians hath commaunded vs.

But the hepythen in the lande layde them selues agaynst those that were in Jewrye, helde vnto the buyldynge fro them, layde wayte vpon them pryncipally, stopped such as brought any thyng to them, forbad them to buyde, and hyndred those that made them passage, that the buyldynge shoulde not be finishyd: and this continued so longe as kynge Cyrus lyued: and soo they put of the buyldynge, for the space of two yeres, vntill the reygne of kynge Darius.

Notwithstanding in the seconde yere of the raygne of Darius. * Aggeus and zachary the son of Addo prophesied vpon them in Jewrye, and Jerusalem, in the name of the God of Israel: * Then zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Iesua sonne of Josedec stode vp, and begā to build the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, whē the Prophetes of the Lord helped the. At the same tyme came Silennes the vnderthene in Syria and Phenices, with the landlordes, and his companions, and sayd vnto them: Who hath bydden and commaunded you to buyde the house, to make the rooffe and al other thynges agayne? And who are the workemen, that buyde them? Neuerthelesse, the elders of the Jewes had suche grace of the Lorde, that they wolde not be let (though they were prouoked thereto) but buylded on styll, vntill the tyme that kynge Darius were certisyed thereof, and an answer receyued from hym. The letter that these men sent vnto kynge Darius was after this maner.

Silennes the vnderthene in Syria, and Phenices, and the landlordes with theyr companions, whiche are heerdulers in Syria and Phenices, sende theyr salutation vnto Darius the kynge. We certisye the lorde the kynge, that we came into the lande of Jewrye and went to Jerusalem: where we fodde them buyldynge the great house of God and the temple, with great costly free stone, and with goodly tymbre for the walles: yea, they make great haste with the worke, and helpe one an other, and it goeth forth prosperously in theyr handes, and with great diligence & workshipp is it made. Then asked we the elders, who had commaunded them, to make vp the house and the buyldynge, and this we dyd, to the intent that we myght certisye the perfectly, and wyte vnto the, the names of those that were the rulers of the worke. So they gaue vs this answer: we are the seruantes of the Lord, which made heauen & earth: and as for this house, * it hath bene buylded, and set vp afore tyme by the great and myghty kynge of Israel. But when oure fathers prouoked God vnto wrath, & sinned against the God of Israel, * he gaue them ouer into the power of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon the king of the Chaldees, which brake downe the house and bzente it, and carped awaye the people prisoners vnto Babylon.

* Neuerthelesse, in the fyrst yere that kynge Cyrus raygned at Babylon, Cyrus the kynge wrote and commaunded, to buyde vp this house agayne: and all the ornaments that Nabuchodonosor carped awaye from Jerusalem vnto Babylon, and appropriated vnto his owne temple: these brought Cyrus forth agayne, and deliuered them to zorobabel, and to Salmanaasar the vnderthene, com-maundynge them, that they shoulde bringe those same ornaments agayne to Jerusalem, into the temple, and to begyn fro that tyme forth, to buyde the temple agayne, in theyr owne place. Then Salmanaasar layed the foundacyon of the Lordes house at Jerusalem: and euer syns haue they buylded, and yet is it not ended. And therefore, O kynge, if thou thynkest it good, let it be soughte in the Lybraries and rolles of kynge Cyrus. If it be founde then, that it is done with the counsell and consent of kynge Cyrus, and if our lorde the kynge be so mynded, let hym wyte vnto vs therof.

* Then commaunded kynge Darius to seke in the Lybraries: and so at Egbathanis in a lytle cytie in Medea there was founde suche a wytyng. In the fyrst yere of the raygne of Cyrus: the same kynge Cyrus commaunded that the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem shoulde be buylded agayne (and odoures to be made there continually vnto the Lorde) whose heighth shalbe .x. cubytes, and the bredth the scope in bytes, and foure square with thre hewen stones, with a loft of tymbre of the same countre: yea, with a newe losse, and the expenses therof to be gyven of the house of kynge Cyrus. And the ornaments of golde and syluer that Nabuchodonosor toke oute of the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, shalbe set agayne in the temple at Jerusalem, where they were afore. Silennes also the vnderthene in Syria and Phenices, the princes and theyr companions, and the other that be heerdulers in Syria & Phenices, shall not medle nor haue any thyng to do with that place.

* Cyrus haue commaunded also, that they shall buyde the house of the Lorde hole vp, and haue ordeyned them, to helpe those that be come out of captiuitie: tyll the house of the Lorde be finished: and out of the tribute and tarynge that is perlye rayled vp in Syria & Phenices, diligently to gyue them a certayne summe of the offrynge of the Lorde: and the same to be deliuered vnto zorobabel the officer, that he therewithall maye ordeyne oren, rammes, lambes, and corne, salte, wyne and oyle, and that continually euer yere: after the expenses * whiche the prestes that be at Jerusalem, shewe to be made daylye: this shall be gyven vnto the without delaye, that they may offre sacrifices daylye to the best God, for the kynge and for his seruantes, and to praye for theyr lyues. Let it be proclaimed also on euery lyde, that whosoeuer breatheth or dispiseth this comaundement of the king, shalbe hanged vpon a galowes (made of his owne good) and all his goodes shalbe seyled vnto the kynge. The Lord therfore (whose name is there called vpon) roote out, and destroye all the kynges and people, that undertake by violence to bynde the same, or to deale vncerte-continuously with the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem. Darius the kynge haue ordeyned, that these thynges shal be done with all diligence.

¶ The vii. Chapter.

The temple is fynished and dedicated: and the feast of the vnleuened bread is holden.

Ethen Synennes the vnder shewes in Eclipsia, and Phenices, and other landelordes with theyr companions, shewed the thynges that kynge Darius had ordeyned, and were diligent in the holy woorkes, and were felowe helpes with the olde miers of the Jewes. And so the woorkes of the sanctuary went forth and prospered, wher Aggeus and zachary prophced. And they performed all thynges thowto the commaundement of the Lorde God of Israel, and after the deuyce of Cyrus, Darius and Artaxerxes kynges of Persia.

And thus was our house fynished vnto the xiii. daye of the moneth Adder in the. vi. yere of kynge Darius. And the chyldren of Israel, the prestes and Leuites, and the other that were come out of captiuytie: and suche as were ioyned vnto them, dyd accordynge as it is wytten in the booke of Moyses. And in the dedication of the temple: they offred an hundred oxen, two hundred rāmes, foure hundred lambes, and twelue gootes, for the synnes of all the people of Israel, after the nomber of the trybe of Israel. The prestes also and the Leuites stode arrayed in theyr prestly garments, after the trybes, ouer all the woorkes of the Lorde God of Israel, accordynge to the booke of Moyses, and the porters by alle doores.

And the chyldren of Israel (with those that were come out of captiuytie) helde þ Passouer the fourtenth daye of the fyrst moneth, when the prestes and Leuites were sanctified. They that came out of captiuytie were not all sanctified togyther: but the Leuites were all sanctified togyther, and so all they that came out of captiuytie, kyled þ Easter lambe for theyr brethren, for the prestes and for them selues. And the chyldren of Israel that came out of captiuytie, and escaped fro alle the abhominacions of the heythens, sought the Lorde, and kepte the feast of þ vnleuened bread seven dayes longe, eatynge and drynkyng and were mery befoze the Lorde: that the Lorde had turned the deuyce of the kynge of Assyria, & comforted theyr handes to the woorkes of the Lorde God of Israel.

Esdras causeth the people to assemble and come togyther, and then readeth them the lawe. They here the feast of tabernacles.

And after hym when Artaxerxes the kynge of the Persians ragued, there wrote vnto hym Esdras the sonne of Saraias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Helchiah the sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Sadoch, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amarias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Boccus, the sonne of Abylu, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron the fyrst prest. This Esdras wente vnto Babylon (for he had good vnderstandynge in the lawe of Moyses, that was gyuen of the Lorde God of Israel, to be taught and done in deed.) And the kynge fauoured hym, and dyd hym great woorthyppe and honoure, after all his desyres. There wente vnto hym also certayne of the chyldren of Israel, of the prestes, of þ Leuites, of the syngers, porters and mynisters of the temple at Jerusalem.

In the seuenth yere of the ragne of king Artaxerxes, in the fyfth moneth, that is in the seuenth yere of the ragne, they went fro Babylon in the new moneth of the. v. moneth, and came the hygh waye to Jerusalem after his commaundement, lyke as the Lorde had prospered theyr iourney. For in these Esdras gat greate instruction, that he shoulde leaue none of the thynges behynde, which ar in the lawe and commaundementes of God. And he taught hole Israel all ryghtousnesse and iudgementes.

Then came the Secretaries of kyng Artaxerxes, and deliuered the wytynges (that were come fro Artaxerxes the kynge) to Esdras the prest and reader of the lawe of the Lorde: And this is the coppye of the letter: Kyng Artaxerxes sendeth his greetynge vnto Esdras the preste and reader of the lawe of the Lorde. Of frendshyppe and good wyll I haue ordeyned and charged, yf there be anye of the Jewes, of the prestes and Leuites in my realme, whiche desyeth and is content to go with the vnto Jerusalem, that he may do it. Therefore, yf anye be mynded to beare the company, let them come togyther, & go with the (lyke as I am content and my seuen frendes, my counsaillers) to se what they do at Jerusalem and in Jewrie, and kepe the thynges accordynge as thou hast, in the lawe of the Lorde: and to byynge the gyftes vnto God þ Lorde of Israel, that I and my frendes haue promysed to Jerusalem, and all the syluer & golde that is in the countrey of Babylon, vnto the Lorde to Jerusalem, with the thynges that is gyuen for the people in the Lorde temple at Jerusalem: Pca, that the same syluer and golde maye be gathered, and oxen, rāmes, shepe and gootes, and other that belong to these thynges: and that they may offre sacrificies vnto the Lorde, vpon þ alter of the Lorde, which is at Jerusalem.

And whatsoeuer thou and thy brethren wyll do with the syluer and golde, that do after thy mynde, accordynge to the commaundement ment of the Lorde thy God, & lyke wyse with the holy vessels that are gyuen the, for þe seruyce of the house of the Lorde thy God: and other thynges whatsoever is necessary for þe to the worke of the temple, that shalbe gyue the of the kynges treasure, & loke what thou with thy brethren wylt do with the gold and syluer, that do after þe wyl of the Lorde. And I kyng artharxes haue comaunded þe keepers of the treasures in Siria and Phenices that whatsoever Eldas the preast and reader of the law of the Lord doth wyte, it shalbe gyuen hym: tyll an hundred talentes of syluer, and of golde in lyke maner. Of coyne also an hundred measures, and tyll an hundred vessels of wyne, & other plenteous thynges, without nombre. Let all thynges be done after the lawe of the prest God, that the wrath of God aryse not in the realme of the kyng, and of his sonnes: I comaunde you also that ye requyre no tax nor trybute of the prestes, Leuytes, syngers, and mynstres of the temple, nor of the wyters: and that noman haue authoryte to medle any thyng agaynst the. As for the (Eldas) let thou iudges & arbytrers in the hole lande of Siria and Phenices, after the wysdome of God: and learne al suche as are ignoraunt in the lawe of God thy Lorde, and let all the that offend agaynst the lawe, be punysshed: whether it be with death, with payne, to be condemed in money, or to be banished.

*1. ch. vii. a

Then sayd Eldas the wyter: * Blessed be the God of oure fathers, that hath gyuen so good a mynde and wyl into the hert of the kyng, to magnifye his house that is at Ierusalem, and hath made me to be accepted in the syght of the kyng, of his counsaile, of his frendes and of his nobles. And so I was steadfast in my mynde, accordyng as the Lord my God helped me, and I chose me out of Israel to go with me. * And these are the heedes, (after theyr kynredes and houses of their fathers) that went vp with me from Babylon out of the kyngdome of Artharxes. hei, and with hym two hundred & .viii. men. Of the sonnes of Elead: Iohannes, Ezechia and with him an hundred and ten men. Of the sonnes of Adoniram those that were the last: and these are theyr names. Eliphalam son of Sebel and Seineias, and with hym. lxx. men. All these called I togyther by the water Chia, where we pytched oure tente the dayes: and there I mustred them.

* As for the sonnes of the prestes & Leuytes, I founde none there. Then sent I vnto Eleazar, and Eccelom, and Hasmam, and Palobam, and Enaathan, and Samea and Jozibimathan, Eunagan, zachary, Wosolamun (these were the leders and men of experience) and I sente them word, that they shoulde come vnto Loddens, whiche was by the place of the treasure, and comaunded them that they shoulde speake vnto Loddens and to his brethren, and to those that were in the treasury, to sende vs suche men, as might execute the prestes offyce in the house of the Lorde our God. And with the myghtie hand of our Lorde God, they brought vnto vs me of good experience, from amonge the sonnes of Woolus, the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israel, Debedeam, and the sonnes, and bys brethren Alvin & Anin, of whom there were xviii. From amonge the chyldzen of the sonnes of Cananeus, and theyr sonnes were. xx. men. And of them that serued in the temple, whome Dauid had ordeyned, and the principal men that mynistred for the worke vnto the Leuytes in the temple two hundred and twenty men, whose names are all tokened vp in wytyng.

* Then comaunded I a fastyng vnto the younge men befoze the Lorde, that I myght desyre of hym a prosperous iourneye, and a good waye for vs, yea for vs: for our chyldre and for the cattell, bycause of the laynges awayte, and I durst not requyre of the kyng men of horse and of fote, to conuey vs safely agaynst our ennemyes, for we had sayde vnto the kyng, that the power of the Lord our God shoulde be with them, that seeke hym with theyr whole herte. And therfore, we besought God our Lorde earnestly, bycause of these thynges, and he was merciful vnto vs, and herde our prayer. And I separated from among the rulers of the people, and from the prestes of the temple. xii. men, and Sebeia, and Alanias, and ten men of theyr brethren with them. And I weped them the golde and the syluer and all the prestly ornaments of the house of our God, which the kyng, & his counsaile, and his princes, and whole Israel had gyuen. And whē I had weped it, I gaue them, an hundred and fyftee talentes in syluer, and an hundred talentes of syluer vessel, an hundred talentes of golde, and of golden vessel seven tymes twenty, and vessels of other other metal (pea, of good metal) twelve glysinger as the golde, and sayde vnto them: pe holpe vnto the Lozde, and the vessels of holpe, and the golde and the syluer is proposed vnto the Lozde God of oure fathers.

Be diligent now, and kepe it, vntyll the time that ye deliuer it to the rulers of y^e people to the prestes to the Leuytes, and to the principall men of the cyties of Israel in Jerusalem, and in the chambze of the house of our God.

* So the prestes and the Leuytes which mynded me the golde, the syluer, and the well, broughte it vnto Jerusalem into the temple of the Lozde. And from the ryuer of Euphrates we brake vp the twelue daye of the first moneth, til we came to Jerusalem. And when the thyrde daye was past, the weped golde and syluer was deliuered in the house of the Lozde the fourth day, vnto Harimoth the sonne of Ioz the prest, and with him was Eliab the sonne of Whineas, and with the sonne of Iosabab the sonnes of Iasnet, Medias the sonne of Banus, and certayne of the lawes to the nombze and to the weyght: & the weyght of the was writen vp the same day. As for those that were come out of ca-ptiuitie, they offered sacrifice vnto the Lozde God of Israel: euen twelve oxen for al Israel. rammes. lxxii. shepe. xii. gootes in lym: twelve kyne for a thankoffring al the sacrifice of y^e Lozde. And the kynges deliuered they vnto the stewardes and deputies of the kyng: and to the under-shanes in Celosyria and Phenicys.

* Nowe, when those thynges were done the rulers came vnto me, and sayde: The ge-neracyon of Israel, the princes, the prestes, and Leuytes, the straunge people & indwel-ling of the lande, haue not put awaye theyr iniquities, from the Cananites, Hethytes, Moabites, Egyptians and Edomites. For both they and theyr so-nes haue myngled them selues wth the doughters of them, and the holy seede is mixte with the outlandish hepythen, and syns the begyn-ning of theyr raygne haue the rulers & bee-come partakers of theyr wyckednesse.

* As soone as I had hearde these thynges I went my holpe garmentes, and piled out the beere of my heed and my berde and late me downe sorowfull and heupe. So all they that were moued thowowe the word of the God of Israel, came vnto me, & I late full of heupnesse vntyll the euening sadaye. Then stode I vp from fastyng, havinge rent clothes & the holpe garment, kne-led downe vpon my knees, helde out my han-des vnto the Lozde, and sayd: O Lord, I am confounded and ashamed befoze thy face: for our synnes are become manye vpon our hea-des: and oure wyckednesse are exalted vnto the heauen: for syns the tyme of oure fathers we are in great synne vnto this day. And for the synnes of vs and oure fathers, we wyth our byerthen and with our prestes haue ben deliuered vnto the kynges of the earth: into the swerde: and into captiuitie: and became a spolie with confusion and shame vnto this daye. And nowe O Lozde God: howe great is the mercy that we haue gotten of ther in y^e thou hast lefte vs a name and a roote in the place of thy Sanctuarpe, to discouer oure lyght in the house of the Lozde our God, and hast gyuen vs meate at all tymes of our mynistracion. And when we were in captiuitie we were not forsaken of the Lozde our God: but he made the kynges of Persia gracyous and fauourable vnto vs: so that they gaue vs bytapes and meate: pea, & leane to build vp the temple of oure Lozde God agayne, to repayze the wasted places of Syon: and to dwell in Jewye and Jerusalem. And nowe O Lozde, what shall we saye: hauyng all these thynges in posseltyon? For we haue broken thy commaundementes, whiche thou gauest vnto vs by the handes of thy seruau-tes the Prophetes, sayinge: The lande that ye go vnto and that is gyuen you for an herytage to haue in posseltyon, is defyled with the vncleennesse and fylthynesse of the heathen and with theyr abhominacyon haue they po-luted it altogether. Therefore, shall ye not ispyne your doughters vnto theyr sonnes, nor many poure sonnes vnto theyr doughters.

Moreover, ye shall not seeke to make peate with them, that ye maye increse and eate the best in the lande, and that ye maye deuyde the inherytaunce of the lande vnto your chyldren for ever moze. As for the thynges y^e now happeneth vnto vs, it cometh all for oure wycked wykes and great synnes, yett hast y^e gyuen vs such a rote that we are com agayn into our owne lande, and we are so wycked, that we haue broken thy statutes and coman-dementes agayne: and mengled our selues wth the vncleennesse of the outlandish hepythen. O Lozde, arte thou angrey with vs: wyll thou rote vs cleue out: that our rote and name re-mayne nomore? O Lozde God of Israel thou art true: for our roote endureth yett vnto this present daye. And beholde, now ar we befoze the in our synnes, now can we not stande be-foze the in them.

* And when Eldas with this prayer had knowledged the synne, wepyng, and lpyng flat vpon the grounde befoze y^e temple, there gathered vnto hym from Jerusalem a great multitude of men and women, of yonge men and maydens: for there was a verpe greake wepyng and mourning in the congregacyon.
So when Jerchomias the sonne of Jedel one of the chylidren of Israel cryed, he sayde vnto Eldas: we haue synned agaynst the Lozde, by cause

because we haue maryed outlandish women of þe hepten. Now art thou ouer all Israel. We will swaie an othe therefore vnto the Lozde, that we shall put away all oure wyues, whiche we haue taken of the hepthe, & they children: lyke as it is appoynted the by oure foze elders. Stande vp then, open thou it, & declare it playnely vnto vs, accordynge to þe lawe of the Lozde: for the matter belongeth vnto the, and we will helpe the, quyte thy selfe manly. So Eldas arose, and toke an othe of the rulers of the prestes, and of the Leuytes, & of Israel, to doo after these thynges: and they swaie.

The.ix.Chapter.

After Eldas had red the lawe, the people put away theyr strange wyues: and then returned euery man merrily vnto his owne dwellinge.

When Eldas stode vp from þe court of the temple without, and wente into the chambze of Ionathas the sonne of Hasabus, and remayned there and dyd eate no meate, nor dronk drinke: for the multitude of the wickednesse of þe people. And there was made a proclamation in all Jewry and at Jerusalem, for all suche as were gathered at Jerusalem out of captiuitie, that who so euer came not to Jerusalem within two or thre dayes (accordynge to the iudgement of the olde lordes of þe coslapy) his goodes shulde be taken from him, and be excluded fro the congregacion of the captiuitie. And in thre dayes were all they of the trybe of Iuda and Ben Iamin gathered togyther at Jerusalem, the .xx. dape of the nynt moneth. And the hole multitude sat tremblyng in the court of the temple, for it was winter. So Eldas arose vp, and sayde vnto them: ye haue done vnrightheouslye, in that ye haue taken outlandish wyues to marpage, and so to encrease the synnes of Israel. And now we knowledg the same, and gyue prayse vnto the Lozde God of our fathers, and perfoyme his wyll, departyng from the hepten of the lande, and from the outlandish wyues. They cryed þe hole multitude with loude voyce, and sayde: lyke as thou haste spoken, so wyll we do: but for so moche as the people are many, and the wynter here, we maye not stande withoute the house: I gayne, this worke is not a thyng, that can be fynished in a dape or two: for we be manye, that haue synned in these thynges. Dydene therfore that the rulers of the multitude, and they that dwell with vs, and as manye as haue outlandish wyues, the prestes also and iudges of euery place may stande in the tyme appoynted, tyl they swaie the wyathe of the Lozde in thys busynesse.

Then Ionathas the sonne of Ezei, and Ozias and Theba receyued þe charge of this matter, and Bozoramus, and Leuis, & Sabatheus helpeth them therto. After this, all they stode vp that were come out of captiuitie. And Eldas the prest chose vnto hym the principall men from amonge the fathers accordynge to theyr names, and in the newe mone of the tenth moneth they sat togyther, to exami this matter. And so the mater was a determinyng (concernyng the men that had outlandish wyues) vntyll the newe mone of the fyrst moneth. And of þe prestes that had myxt them selues with outlandish wyues, there were founde. * Of the sonnes of Iehoshafat: Joseder, and his brethren, Wazeas, Eleazar, Jozibus, & Joadens, whiche offered them selues to put away theyr wyues and to offre a ramme for theyr ignorance. And of the sonnes of Semmery, Wallas, & Elles, and Jeelech, Azarias. Of the sonnes of Kofera, Limolias, Hilmarn, Rathana, Justio, Jeddus, and Tallas. And of the Leuytes: Josabbus, Semeis, and Colus, Calletas, Factas, Colnas, and Elionas. Of the syngers of the Sanctuarie, Eliarib, zacharus: Of the porters, Shallamus and Tolbanes. And of Israel, of the chyldren of Koz, Osi, and Remias, and Geddias, and Welchias, Michelus, Eleazarus, Jemmedias, & Hannas. And the chyldren of Jolama, Chanias, zachary, Jetzreus, Joddus, Erimoth and Elias. And of the sonnes of Jachoin, Eliadas, Lialamus, and Jochias, Lartimoth, Sabbis, and Tebedias. And of the sonnes of Jeebes, Johanne, Amarias, zabbias, and Saureus. And of þe sonnes of Hannus, Ollimus, Waluchus, Jeddus, Jalsub, Alabus, & Jerimoth. And of the sonnes of Joddi, Rastus, and Woolias and Caleus, and Ranas, Waalius, Wathathias, Wel, Banus and Manalles.

And of the sonnes of Raue: Rones, Afeas, Welchias, Sameas, Symon, Ben Iamin, Walchus and Varras. And of the sonnes of Acom: Carianus, Wathathias, Hannus, Eliphalach, Manalles, Semei. Of the sonnes of Hannus: Jeremie, Woodias, Ahamas, Jobel, Hannas, Peliaas, Jona, Wari moth, Eliasib, Wathaneus, Eliasib, Otiel, Dielus, Semeidus, zambus and Joleph. Of the sonnes of Robeus: Joelus, Wathathias, Sabadus, Jecheda, Sedmi, Jelleus, and Baneas. All these had taken outlandish women to marpage, and they put the away with theyr chyldren. The prestes and Leuytes, and all they that were of Israel, dwelt at Jerusalem and thowownte all the lande, in the newe mone of the seventh moneth, and the chyldren of Israell were in theyr dwellinges: And the whole multitude came togyther vpon the flooze at the East syde of the holy port of the temple. And they spake vnto Eldas the hye prest and reader, þe wolde byngge the lawe of Moyses, which was gyf

the Lorde God of Israell. So Eldras the by first broughte the lawe vnto the whole multitude, to mā and woman and to al pre-sat by him Marthabias, Samus, Ananias, Azarias, Azias, Ozechias, and Ballaof the lawe, & red the lawe vnto the whole multitude, for he was the principal and had in moost honoure of them all. And whan he had red out the lawe, they bore al prayght vpo they: sete. So Eldras prayed the Lorde the moost hye God, y Al-myghty God of hooftes. And all the people answered: Amen: and helde vpo their handes, in yonne flat vpon the earth, & prayed the Lorde. And Jesus, Weneas, Sarebias, Jad-

And yet tokest thou not awaye from the that wycked hert, & thy lawe myght byynge forth frute in them. For the fyrst Adam bare a wycked herte, transgressed: and was ouercome, & so be all they that are bozne of hym.

* Rom. vii. a.

* Thus remayned weaknes wyth the lawe: in the hertes of the people, & the wyckednes of the rote: so that the good departed awaye and the euell abode styll. So the tymes passed awaye, and the peares were broughte to an ende. * Then dydest thou raple the vp a seruante called Dauid, & whom thou comaundedst to buyde a cytic vnto thy name: and to offre vp incense and sacryfye vnto the: therein. This was done nowe many yeres. The the inhabyters of the cytie forsoke the, and in all thynges dyd euen as Adam & all his generacions had done: for they also had a wycked herte.

And so thou gauest thy cytic ouer into the handes of thyne enemyes. Are they of Babylon then better and more ryghteous then thy people, that they shall therfore haue the dominyon of Syon? For when I came there and sawe they vngodlynesse, and so greete wyckednesse: that it coulde not be nombred: yee when my soule sawe so many euell doers (in the thyrtie yere) my herte sayled me, for I sawe, howe thou suffrest them in such vngodlynes, and sparest the wycked doers: but thyne owne people hast thou roted out, and preferred thyne enemyes, and this hast thou not shewed me.

I can not perceaue howe this happeneth Do they of Babylon then better, then they of Syon? Or is there any other people, that knoweth the, laupnge the people of Israel? Or what generacion hath so beleued thy couenantes, as Jacob? And yet they: rewardes appeareth not, & they: labour hath no frute. For I haue gone here and there thorow the heathen, & I se that they be ryche & welthy, and thynke not vpon thy comaundementes. Wlepe thou therfore oure wyckednesse nowe in the balaunce, and they: also that dwel in the worlde, and so shal thy name be no where found but in Israel. Or where is there a people vpon earth, that hath not synned before the? Or what people hath so kepte thy comaundementes? Thou shalt fynde that Israel by name hath kepte thy preceptes, but not the other people and heathen.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The Angel crypounth &c: as, because he stoned to entre into the profounde iudgementes of God.

And the Angel that was sent vnto me (whose name was Apyel) gaue me an answer and sayd: thy hert hath take to much vpo it in this world and thou thinkest to compyhende the wape of the byest. Then sayde I: Yee my Lorde. And he answered me, & sayde: I am sent to shewe the thre wapes, and to set forth thre symplytudes, before the: wherof þ thou canste declare me one, I wyll shewe the also the wape, that thou desyrest to se: and I shall shewe the from whence the wycked herte commeth. And I sayde: Tell on my Lorde. Then sayde he vnto me: So thy wape, wepe me the weyghte of the fyre, or measure me the blast of the wynde, or call me agayne agayn the daye that is paste. Then answered I and sayde: What man borne is able to do that? why requirest thou such of me? And he sayde vnto me: If I shulde aske the howe the dwellynges are in the see? O howe grete waterspynges are vpon the fyrmament? O howe grete waterspynges are in the begynnyng of the depe? O whiche are the outgoynge of Paradyse? Peradventure thou woldest saye vnto me: I neuer wente into the depe nor hel, nether dyd I ascende vnto heauen. Neerthelesse thou haue I asked the but onely of fyre, and of the depe, where thou owest thou hast traupled, and fro the which thou canst not be seperated: and yet canst thou geue me the answer of them.

He sayde mozeouer vnto me: Thyne owne thynges, & soche as are growen vp with the earth thou not knowe: howe shulde thy vessel then be able to comprehend the waye of the best, and nowe outwardly in & corrupte thynges, to vnderstande the corrupcyon that is present in my syght? Then sayde I vnto him: It were better that we were not at all, than that we shulde lyue in wickednesse, and to suffer, and not to knowe wherfoze. He answered me, & sayde: I wente in a woode, and the trees toke such a deuyce, & sayd: Come in vs go, and syghte agaynst the see, that it maye departe a waye befoze vs, and that we maye make vs yet moze woddys.

The floudes of the see also in lyke maner toke this deuyce, and sayde: Come let vs go in, and syghte agaynst the trees of the wood that we maye make oure lande the wyder. The thoughte and deuyce of the woode was but vayne and nothyng worth, for the fyre came and consumed the wood: The thoughte of the floudes of the see: came lyke wyse to nought also, for the sande stode vp and stopped them.

If thou were iudge nowe betwyte these two, whome woldest thou iustifye, or whome woldest thou condemne? I answered & said: Truly it is a folyshe thought that they both have deuyled. For the grounde is geuen vnto the wood, and the see also hath his place to be his floudes. Then answered he me, & sayde: Thou hast geuen a ryght iudgement, but iudget thou not thy selfe also? For lyke as the grounde is geuen vnto the wood, and the see to his floudes, euē so they that dwell vpon earth maye vnderstande nothyng, but that which is vpon earth: and he that dwelleth aboue the heuē, maye only vnderstande the thynges that are aboue the heauens. Then answered I, and sayde: I beseeche þe, O Lord let me haue vnderstandynge: for it was not my mynde to be curyous of thy hye thynges, but of such as we daylye medle withall, namely wherfoze that Israel is blasphemed of the heathen, and for what cause the people (whom thou hast euer loued) is geuen ouer, to be punished of vngodlye nacionys: & why the lawe of our fathers is brought to nought and the wyttē couenauntes come to none effecte, and we passe awaye out of the world as þe grethoppers, & oure lyfe is a very feare, and we are not worthy to optayne mercede. What wyll he do then vnto his name, which is called vpon ouer vs? Of these thynges haue I asked questyon.

Then answered he me, & sayde: The moze thou searcest, the moze thou shalt maruell, for the worlde hatheth faste to passe awaye, & cannot comprehend the thynges, & are promysed for the ryghteous in tyme to come for * this worlde is full of vnyghteousnes and weaknes.

* I. Iohn. v. c.

But as concernyng the thynges wherof thou askest me, I wyll tell the. The euell is sowen, but the destruccyon thereof is not yet come. If the euell now be that is sowen, be not turned vpsyde downe, & yf the place where þe euell is sowen, passe not a waye, then can not the thyng come that is sowen w good. For the corne of euell seide hath bene sowen in the bert of man from the begynnyng, and howe muche vngodlines hath be brought vp vnto this tyme: and howe much shall be yet bryng forth, vntyl he come into þe barne.

Bondze now by thy selfe, when þe corne of euell seide is cut downe, howe grete a barne shall it fyll? I answered and sayde: How and whē shall these thynges come to passe? Wherfoze are our yeares fewe & euell? And he answered me, sayinge: Hast not thou to muche vpon the best, for thy hastynes to be aboue him is but vayne, thou makest to much a do. Dyd not the soules also of þe ryghteous aske questyon of these thynges in the holynesse, sayinge: * How longe shall I hope of thynges fasthyon? When cometh the frute of my barne and my rewarde? And vpon this Jeremiel the Archangel gaue them answer, & sayde: Euen when the nombze of the sedes is fylled in you, for he hath weyed the worlde in the balaunce: in measure and nombze hath he measured the tyme, and moneth it not vntyl the same measure be fulfilled. Then answered I & sayde: O Lord, Lozde, nowe are we all full of synne, and for oure sake peradventure it is not, that the barne of the ryghteous shall not be fylled, because of the synnes of them that dwell vpon þe earth.

* Apoc. vi. 8

So he answered me, & sayde: So thy way vnto a woman with chyld, & aske of her, when she hath fulfilled her nyne monethes, yf her chyld be maye kepe the byrth any longer w in her. Then sayde I: O Lord, that can she not. And he sayde vnto me: In hell the secreete places of soules are lyke the pryue chambze of a woman. For lyke as a woman that trauayleth, maketh haste, when the tyme and necessitie of the byrth is at hande: Euen so doeth he haste to deliuer it that is commyt- ted vnto her. Loke what thou desyrest to se, it shalbe thewed the from the begynnynge. Then answered I, & sayde: Yf I haue founde fauoure in thy syghte, and yf it be possyble, & yf I be mete therfore, shew me then whether ther be moze to come the is past, or moze past then is for to come. What is past, I knowe but what is for to come, I knowe not.

And he sayde vnto me: Stande vp vpon the ryghte syde, and I shall expounde the sp- miltude vnto the. So I stode, and beholde. an whote burnynge ouen wente ouer befoze me: and it happened that when the flamme was gone by, the smoke had the vpperhande. After thys there went ouer befoze me a wa- tery cloude, and sente downe muche rayne w a strome: & when the stromy rayne was past the droppes remayned still. Then sayde he vnto me: lyke as the rayne is moze then the droppes, and as the fyre excedeth the smoke euen so the measure of the thynges that are past, hath the vpperhande. Then went the droppes and the smoke abone: and I prayde and sayde: maye I lyue (thynkeste thou) vntyl that tyme: Or what shal happen in those dayes: he answered me, and sayde: As for þ tokens whereof thou askest me, I maye tell the of them in parte: but as touchynge thy lyfe, I maye not shewe the, for I am not sent therfore.

The. v. Chapter.

Howe as the Angell commen together.

A Euertheles, as concernynge the to-kens, marke thys: Beholde, the dayes shal come, that they which dwell vpon earth, shal be taken in a great noyse, & the waye of the truth shalbe hyd, and the lande shal be baren from fapth: but * iniquitie shal haue the vpperhand, lyke as thou haste sene nowe, and as thou haste hearde longe ago. And the lande that thou seyst nowe to haue rule, shalt thou shortly se waste. But yf God graunt the to lyue, thou shalt se after the thyrde trumpet that þ sunne shal sodenly wyne agayne in the nyght, and the moone thre tymes in the daye, and blood shal droppe out of wood, and the stone shal geue his voyce, & the people shalbe vniquet: and euen he shal rule, whome they hope not, that dwell vpon earthe, and the foules shal flye, & the Sodomitys shal cast out hys fryd, and make a noyse in the nyght, whiche many shal not knowe, but they shal all heare the voyce therof.

There shalbe a confusyon also in many places, & the fyre shalbe oft sent agayne, and the wyde beastes shal go theyre waye, and mēstruous women shal beare monstres, and salt waters shal be founde in the swete: one frend shal fyght agaynst another: then shal all wyt and vnderstandynge be hyd and put a syde into theyr secret places, & shalbe sought of many, and yet not be found: then shal v- righteousnes and voluptuousnes haue þ vpper hande vpon earth. One lande also shal aske another, & saye: Is ryghteousnes gone thowowe the: And it shal saye: No. At the same tyme shal men hope, but nothyng op- tayne: they shal labour, but their wayes shal not prosper.

To shewe the suche tokens I haue leue and yf thou wylte praye agayne, & wepe as nowe, and fast seuen dayes, thou shalt heare yet greater thynges. Then I awaked, and a fearfulness went thowowe all my bodie, and my mynde was feble and carefull, so that I almost soned withall. So the Angell that was come to talke with me, helde me, cōfor- ted me, and set me vpon my fete.

And in the seconde nyght it happened, & Salathiel the Captayne of the people came vnto me, sayng: Where hast thou bene: and why is thy countenance so heuy: knowest thou not, that Israel is commyted vnto the in the lande of theyr captiuytie: Clip then and eate, & forsaake vs not, as the shepherde that leaueth hys flocke in the handes of wyched wolues. Then sayde I vnto hym: Go thy wayes fro me, and come not nye me: and he hearde it. and as I sayde: so went he his way fro me. And so I fasted seuen dayes, mournynge and wepyng, lyke as Eliel the Angell commaunded me. And after seuen dayes it happened, that the thoughtes of my herte were very greuous vnto me agayne, and my soule receaued the spere of vnderstandynge, and I beganne to talke wyth the most myst agayne, and sayde: O Lorde, Lorde, of euery wood of the earth and of all the trees ther- of, thou hast chosen the one onely vyneyard: and of all landes of the whole worlde, thou hast chosen one pyt: and of all floures of the gromde thou hast chosen the one lytle: and of all the depthes of the see: thou hast fylled the one ryuer: and of all buylded Cyties thou hast halowed hyon vnto thy selfe: and of al the foules that are created, thou hast named the one doue: & of all the catell that are made thou hast prouyded the one shepe: & amonge all the myltitudes of folkes: thou haste got- ten the one people, & vnto this people towhome thou louedest, thou gauest a law, that is pro- ued of all.

And nowe, O Lorde. why hast thou ge- nen this one people ouer vnto many: And vpon the one rote thou hast prepared other, and why hast thou scatered thy one only peo- ple amonge many: which tread them downe pee, whiche haue euer wythstande thy pro- myses, and neuer beleued thy couenauntes.

And

And thoughe thou were enemy vnto thy people, yet wildest thou punyſhe them with ſome of my handes. Now when I had ſpoke theſe wordes, þe aungell that came to me the ſame aſore, was ſent vnto me, and ſayd vnto me: heare me, and herken to the thyngge þe ſaye: I ſhall tell the moze. And I ſayde: ſpeake on my Lorde. Then ſayde he vnto me: Thou art ſore vexed & troubled for Iſraels ſake. Loueſt thou that people better then that made the? And I ſayde: No Lorde: but of very grete & compaſſyon haue I ſpoken. For my reynes payne me euery houre, becauſe I wolde haue experyence of the way of the moſt beſt, and to ſeke out parte of þys iudgement. And he ſayde vnto me: that thou myſt not. And I ſayde: wherefore Lorde? Where vnto was I bozne the? Or why was my mothers chyldbed then my graue? ſo had I not ſene the myſterye and trouble of Jacob, and the trauayle of my people of Iſrael.

And he ſayde vnto me: ſombyze the thynges are not yet come: gather me together whiche: that are ſcattered abrode, make me the ſoures grene agayne, that are wythe me, open me the thyngge that is cloſed: and ſhewe me forth the wyndes, that are Out of me the ymage of a voyce, and then I declare the thyng, that thou labourreſt in now. And I ſayde: O Lorde, Lord, who may knowe theſe thynges, but he that hath in his dwelling with men? As for me, I am whyle: howe maye I then ſpeake of theſe thynges wherof thou aſkeſt me?

Then ſayd he vnto me: lyke as thou canſt do one of theſe thynges that I haue ſpoken of, ſo canſt thou not fynde oute my iudgement, as in the ende, the loue that I haue promyſed vnto my people. And I ſayde: Behold O Lorde, yet arte thou nye vnto them that haue no ende: and what ſhall they doo, that haue bene befoze me, or we that be nowe, or they that ſhall come after vs? And he ſayde vnto me: I wyll lyken my iudgement vnto thyng. Lyke as there is no ſlackneſſe of the law, ſo is there no wyſtneſſe of the ſpyrit. So I answered and ſayde: couldeſt thou not make thoſe (that haue bene made, & be nowe, and that are for to come) in one, that thou myghteſt ſhewe thy iudgement the ſooner? Then answered he me, and ſayde: The creature maye not haſt aboue the maker, neyther maye þe worlde holde them at once, that ſhall be created.

And I ſayde: howe haſt thou ſayde then vnto thy ſeruaunte, that thou ſpyunge maade haſte made the creature ſpyunge at once, & the creature haue it: euen ſo myght it nowe ſhewe them that be preſent, at once. And he ſayde vnto me: Alke the chyldbed of a woman, and ſaye vnto her: Of thou bypnygeſt for the chyldzen, why doeſt thou it not together, but one after an other? Wraye her therefore to bypnyng forth ten chyldzen at once. And I ſayde: ſhe can not, but muſt do it one after another.

Then ſayde he vnto me: Euen ſo haue I geuen a chyldbed vnto the earth, for thoſe þe be ſowē vpo it by proceſſe of tyme. For lyke as a ponge chyld maye not bypnyge forth the thynges þe belonge to the aged: eue ſo haue I ordered þe worlde which I made.

And I aſked and ſayd: ſeyng thou haſt nowe geuen me awaye, I wyll ſpeake befoze the: for our mother of whom thou haſt tolde me, is yet ponge, and nowe ſhe draweth nye vnto age. He answered me and ſayde: Alke a woman that beareth chyldzen, and ſhe ſhall tell þe. ſhaye vnto her: wherefore are not they (whome thou haſt nowe brought forth) lyke thoſe that were befoze the, but leſe of ſtature? And ſhe ſhall anſwere the: They þe be bozne in the pouth of ſtrength, are of one faſhyon, and they that are bozne in the tyme of age, (when the chyldbed ſayleth) are other wyſe. Conſydre nowe thy ſelfe, howe that ye are leſſe of ſtature, then thoſe that were befoze you, and ſo are they that come after you, leſſe then ye: as the creatures which nowe begyn to be olde, and haue paſſed ouer the ſtrength of youth. Then ſayd I: Lorde I beſeeche the, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy ſpyght, ſhew thy ſeruaunt, by whom doeſt thou yſet thy creature?

¶ The aungell inſtructeth Eldras, and graunt hym anſwere to his queſtyons.

And he ſayd vnto me: In the begynnyng whē þe grounde was made befoze the worlde ſtood, or euer þe wyndes blew befoze it thōdred & lychtyned or euer þe foundacyon of Baſylis were layde, befoze the ſayre ſoures were ſene, or euer þe moueable powers were ſtablyſhed, befoze the innumerable multitude of aungels were gathered together, or euer the hyghneſſes of the ayre were lyfted vp, afore the meaſures of the firmamēt were named, or euer the chymneys in Syon were hote, and or the preſente yeares were ſought out, and or euer the inuencyons of them that no to ſynne, were put aſyde, befoze they were ſealed that nowe gather ſayth for a treaſure then byd I conſydre and pondre all theſe thynges, and all they were made thowow me, and thowowe none other: by me alſo they be ended, and by none other. Then answered I and ſayde: which ſhall be þe partynge a ſunder of the tymes? Or when ſhall be the ende of the fyrſt, and the begynnyng of it that foloweth? And he ſayde vnto me: From Abrahā vnto Iſaac, when Jacob and Eſau were bozne of hym, Jacobs hande helde faste the heile of Elau: for Elau is the ende of thys worlde, and Jacob is the begynnyng of it that followeth. The hande of man betwixt the heile and the hande. Other questyō (Eldras) aske thou not.

The. iiii. boke

I answered then, & sayd: O Lorde Lord of I haue founde fauoure in thy syght, I beseeche the, shewe thy seruant the ende of thy tokens, wherof thou shewdest me parte the last nyght. So he answered and sayde vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete, and heare the perfect voyce and sounde. There shall come a greates moorpon, but the place where thou standest shall not be moued. And therfore when thou hearest the wordes be not afrayd for of the ende shall the worde and foundacyon of the earthe be vnderstande. And why? the worde therof trembleth and quaketh, for it knoweth, that it muste be chaunged at the ende. And it happened, & when I had hearde it, I stode vp vpon my fete: and herkened, & beholde, there was a voyce that spake, & the sounde of it was lyke & sounde of many waters, and it sayde: Beholde, the dayes come, that I wyll begynne to drawe nye, & to vyllet them that dwell vpon earth, and wyll begynne to make inquisycion of them, what they be that haue hurt cquyte with vnyghteousnes, and when the lowe estate of Syon shall be fulfilled: and when the worlde, that shall vanishe awaye, shall be ouerscald, then wyll I do these tokens.

B The booke shall be opened before the firmament, and they shall be all together, & the chyldren of a yere olde shall speake with their voyces: the women with chyldre shall byrnye forth vntymely chyldren of thre or foure monethes olde, and they shall lyue: and be raysed vp: and sodenly shall the lowen places appere as the vnlowen, the full stoze houses shall sodenly be founde emptye, and the trompet shall geue a sounde, which when euery mā heareth, they shall be hastily afrayde. * At & tyme shall frendes fyght one agaynst another lyke enemyes, & the earth shall stande in feare with them.

The sprynges of the welles shall stande still, and in thre houres they shall not renne. Who soeuer remayneth from all these thynges that I haue tolde the, shall escape, and se my saluacyon, and the ende of your worlde. And the men that haue receaued, shall see it, they that haue not taked deathe from theyre byrth: and the hert of the indwellers shall be chaunged, & turned into another meanyng: for euell shall be put out, and dysscrete shall be quenched. As for sayth, it shall flozpe, cozsupcyō shall be ouercome: & the tructh, whiche hath bene so longe without frute, shall be declared. And it happened when he talked with me, that I looked demurely vpon hym, before whom I stode, and these wordes sayde he vnto me: I am come to shewe the, the tyme of & nyght for to come.

If thou wilt praye yet more, and faste seuen dayes agayne, I shall tel the more thynges, and greater then before: for thy voyce is hearde before the hyst: for why? the myghty hath sene thy ryghteous dealing, he hath sene also thy chastyte, whiche thou hast had euere sence thy yowth: & therfore hath he sente me to shewe the all these thynges, and to say vnto the: Be of good conforste, and feare not, and haste not wryth the tymes that are passe to thyne wayne thynges, & make not hast of the latter tymes.

And it happened after this, that I wept agayne, and fasted seuen dayes in lyke manner, & I myght fulfill the thre weekes: which he tolde me. In the vyght nyght was my betwexed within me agayne. And I beganne to speake before the hyst: for my sprete was greatly set on fyre, and my soule was in distress, & I sayde: O Lord, thou spakest vnto thy creature from the begynnyng (euene the fyrst daye) and saydest: * Let heuen and earth be made, & thy worde was a perfect worke. And then was there the sprete, and the darknesse were yet on euery syde, & silence: there was no mans voyce as yet from the. Then commaundest thou a fayre lyght to come forth out of thy treasures, & thy worke myght appere and be sene.

Vpon the seconde daye thou madest the sprete of the firmament, and commaundest it to part a sunder, and to make a deuyson betwixt the waters, that the one parte myght remayne aboue, and the other beneth. Vpon the thyrde daye thou broughtest to passe, that the waters were gathered in the south part of & earth: & the partes hast thou dyed vp, and kepte them, to thyntent that men myght lowe & occupie husbandrye therein. As soone as thy worde wente forth, the worke was made. For immediatly there was greates innumerable frute, & many dyuerse pleasures and desyres of temptacyon, floures of chamegeable coloure and smell, and this was done the thyrde daye.

* Vpon the. iiii. daye thou commaundest that the sunne shoulde geue hys shyne, and the moone her lyghte: the starrs dydest thou set in ordze: and gauest them a charge, to do luyce euē vnto man, that was for to be made. Vpon the fyfte daye thou saydest vnto the seuenth parte (where the * waters were gathered) that they shoulde byrnye forth dyuerse beastes, foules and fyshes. And so it came to passe, that the domme water: and withoute soule brought forth the byrnyng beastes, at the Commaundemente of God, that all people myght prayse thy wonderous workes. Then dydest thou preserue two shoules, the one when calledst Enoch: and the other Lemuel, and didest seporate the one from the other: for the seventh parte (namely where þ water was gathered together) myghte not be the same bothe. Unto Enoch thou gauest one parte, whiche was dyed vp the thyrde parte, that he shulde dwell in the same parte, where are a thousande hylles. But vnto Lemuel thou gauest the seventh part, namely the most, & hast kepte hym to deuoure what thou wilt, and when. Upon the syrte thou gauest commaundement vnto the earth, that before the, it shulde bynge forth beastes, catell, and all that crepe, and (besydes) Adam also, whom þ madest Lorde of all creatures. Of hym come we al, and the people also, whome thou hast chosen specially vnto thy selfe. All thys haue I sayde vnto and spoken before the, that I myghte knowe howe that the worlde is made for our uses. As for the other people whiche also are of Ada thou hast sayde that they are no thyng, but be lyke a synne, & hast lykened the abundance of them vnto a drop (þ sallow) from the rose of the house.

And now, O Lorde: the heathen which are bene reputed as nothyng, haue become to be Lordes ouer vs, and to deuoure what we thy people (whome thou hast called thy first borne, thy only begottē, and thy louer) are geuen into theyre handes and power. Vt the worlde now be made for us, why haue we not the inheritaunce of all thyng vnto the worlde? howe longe shall this endure?

¶ The. vii. Chapter.

¶ The kynge hereth Eldras many thynges to come.

As it happened after that I had spoken out these wordes, there was sente vnto me an Aungell, whiche had bene with also the myghtes afore, and he sayd vnto me: Up Eldras, & heare the wordes that I haue come to tell the. And I sayde: speake on Lord my God. Then sayde he vnto me. The king is set in a wyld place, that it myghte be great and great, but the entraunce is narrowe and small lyke a ryuer. For who wolde go into the see, to loke vpon it, and to rule it? Vt he went not thowowe þ narrow, howe myghte he come into the brode?

Item another: A cytie is buylded and set vnto a brode felde, and is full of all goodes: the entraunce is narrow and sodayne, lyke as there were a sye at the ryght hande, and a wyllow water at the left, and as it were only one narrowe path betwixte them both, so small þ that it coude but one man go there.

¶ This cytie now were geue vnto an heire that neuer went thowow þ perilous waye, howe wolde he receaue his inheritaunce? And sayde: It is so Lorde. Then saide he: Euen so is Israel also a porcyb. And why: for their sakes haue I made þ worlde: & when Adam transgressed my statutes, then was þ thyng iudged that was done. Then were the en-traunces of the worlde made narrowe, full of sorrowe & traunple. They are but few & euil, full of paelis and labour. For the entraunces of the fore worlde were wyde & sure, and brought immortall frute.

¶ If they nowe whiche are entred into this worlde, maye not comprehend these strapte and vayne thynges, much lesse maye they coprehende & vnderstande the secretes thynges: Why disquyetest thou thy selfe then sayng þ art but a corruptible man? And what wol-dest thou knowe, where as þ art but mortall?
And why hast thou not receaued into thyne herte the thyng that is for to come, but that is present?

Then sayde I: O Lorde, Lorde, & thou hast ordeyned in thy lawe, that the ryghte-ous shulde inheret these thynges, but that þ vnsaythfull and vngodly shulde perishe. Reuertthelesse, the ryghteous shall suffer strapte thynges, and hope for wyde: for they þ haue lyued vngodly and suffered strapte thynges, shall not le the wyde.

And he sayde vnto me: There is no indge about God, and none that hath vnderstandyng aboue the best. For there be many þ perishe, because they despyse the lawe of God that is set before them. For God hath geuen strapte commaundement to such as come, that they know what they do, & howe they shuld lyue: and if they kepte thys, they shulde not be punysshed.

Reuertthelesse, they were not obedyent vnto hym, but spake agaynst hym: ymagyned vayne thynges, and purposed to synne, and sayde mozeoner, that there was no God, and that God regarded it not. Thys waye haue they not knowen, his lawe haue they despyrsed, and denyed his promyses: in his statutes and ordynaunces haue they not bene saythful and stedfaste, and haue not persourmed hys wordes.

And therfore Eldras: vnto the ful, plenty: and to the emptye, emptynesse. Beholde, the tyme shall come, that these tokens which I haue tolde the, shall come to passe, and the bryde shall appeare, and the earthe that nowe passeth awaye, shall be shewd: and who soe-uer is deliuered from þ forsayde euils, shall se my wonders. For my sonne Iesus shall be openly declared, with those that be with him and they þ remayne, shall be mery in four þ dyed peares.

After these same peares shall my sonne Christ dye, and all men that haue lyfe, & the worlde shall be turned into the olde splenece seuen dayes, lyke as in the fore Iudgementes so that no man shall remayne. And after sent dayes, the worlde þ yet awaked not, shall be rased vp, and shall be corrupte. And the earth, shall restore those that haue slepte in her: & so shall the dust those that dwell in silence, & the secrete places shall deliuer those þ be comytted vnto them. And the most hieft shall be openly declared vpon the seate of iudgement, and all mysery shall vanysh awaye and longe suffering shall be gathered together. But the iudgement shall contynue, the truth shall remayne, and sayth shall ware strong, the worke shall folowe, & the rewarde shall be shewed: the ryghteousnes shall watch, and þ vnryghteousnes shall beare no rule.

Then sayde I: * Abraham prayde for the Sodomytes, & and Moses for the fathers that synned in the wylernes, and he þ came after hym for Israel, in the tyme of A- chas & Samuël: and Dauid for the destruc- ryon: and Salomon for them that came in- to the sanctuary, * and helias for those that receaued rayne, and for the deerd, þ he myght lyue, & Ezechias for the people in the tyme of Sennacherib: & dyuerse other in lyke maner, which haue prayde for many.

Euen so now, seing the corrupt is gro- wen vp, & wychednes increased, & the ryghte- ous haue prayd for þ vngodly, wherfore shall it not be so now also?

He answered me, and sayd: This present woelde is not the end, there remaineth much honoure in it, therfore haue they prayde for the weake. But the daye of dome shall be the ende of this tyme, and the begynnyng of the immortallite for to come, wherin all corrup- cyō is vanyshed, all voluptuousnes is lowled all mysbelue taken awaye, ryghteousnesse growne, and the verpce spronge vp. Then shall no man be able to saue hym that is de- stroyed, nor to oppresse hym that hath gottē the victoꝝ. I answered then, & sayd: This is my fyrste & last saying: þ it had bene better, not to haue geuen the earthe vnto Adam: or els when it was geuen him, to kepe him that he shulde not synne. For what profit is it for men now in this present tyme to lyue in be- uynnes, & after death to loke for punishment. O thou Adam, what hast thou done? For thoughe it was thou þ synned, thou arte not fallen alone, but we all that come of the. For what profit is it vnto vs, yf there be promp- sed vs an immortall tyme: where as we me- dle wyth deadly workes? And that there is promysed vs an euylastynge hope, where as oure selues are euell & vayne, and that there are layde vp for vs dwellynges of helth and fredome, where as we haue lyued euell, and þ the wo: shyppe of the hyst is kept to defende them which haue led a pacyente lyfe, where as we haue walcked in the mooste wyched dayes of all. And that there shall be shewed a Paradyse, whose fruite endureth for euer, wherē is fredome and medecyne, where as we shall not go in: for we haue walked in vn- pleasaunt places: And that the faces of them which haue absteyned, shall shyne about the statres, where as oure faces shall be blacke & darcker: For whyle we lyued and dyd vnryghteously, we consyded not, that we shuld suf- fre therfore after death.

Then answered he me, and sayde: This is the consyderacyon and thought of the bat- tle, whiche man hath vpon earthe: that yf he be overcome, he shall suffre as thou hast sayde. But yf he get the victoꝝ, he shall receane the thyng that I saye. For this is the lyfe, wherof Moses spake vnto the people, whyle he lyued: saying: * Chuse the lyfe that thou mayst lyue: Neuertheles, they beleued hym not, neither the Prophetes after hym. No, nor me which haue spoken vnto them, that heuynnes shulde not reache vnto them to theyr destruction, lyke as I hope is for to come ouer those þ haue suffred them selues to be en- fourmed in saluacyon.

I answered then, and sayde: I knowe Loꝝde, that the hyst is mercypfull, in that he hath mercy vpon them, which are not yet in the world, & vpon those also that walked in his lawe: & that * he is pacyent and longe suffering towards those that haue synned in theyr workes, and that he is lyberall to geue where as it requyret: and that he is of great merce, for he multiplied his louyng kynd- nesses towards those that are present, and þ are past, and to them which are for to come.

For yf he multiplie not his mercyes, the worlde shall not be made lyuing, wyth those that dwell therein. He gyueth also, for yf he gaue not of his goodnes þ they which haue done euell, myght be cald, from theyr wy- kednes, the ten thousande parte of men shuld not be made lyuing. And yf þ iudge forgaue not those þ be healed wyth his worde, & yf he wolde destroye the multitude that styue, there shulde be very fewe left in an vnume- rable multitude.

The. viii. Chapter.

And he answered me, saying: The moost hyst made this woelde for many, but the woelde to come for fewe. I wyll tell the a symple- tude, & sayd: As when thou as- kest the earthe, it shall sape vnto the, þ it ge- ueth much moulde, wherof earthen vesselles are made, but lytle of it that gold cometh of. Euen so is it to the worke of this woelde. * There be many created, but fewe shall be preferred. The answered I & sayd: The shal- lowe vp the wpt (thou soule) and denouerte the vnder-understandynge, for thou art agreed to herand to gyue care, and wyllynge to profor: for thou haste no longer space gyuen for, but onely to lyue, O Lorde, wylte thou not gyue thy seruante leaue, that we maye goe before the, and that thou mayeste gyue into our hert, and buylde our understandyng, that there maye come frute of it: and for every one which is corrupt, and beareth the state and place of a man, may lyue for thou art alone, & we al are one workmā of thy handes, lyke as thou hast sayde, & lyke as the body is fashioned now in the mothers wombe, and thou gyuest the membez of thy creature is preserued in fyre and water: and it moouethes both thy worke suffre thy creature which is fashioned in her: but þ thy creature that preseructh, and it that is preserued shal bothe be kepte togyther: and when time is, the wombe deliuereth the thing that is here and growen in her.

for thou hast commaunded the bestes to gyue myke vnto the frute, that the thyng, which is created and fashioned, may be no-uised for a tyme: and the thou disposest and wylte it with thy mercye, byngest it vp v thy ryghteousnesse: nuturet it in thy lawe, and reformest it with thy understandynge, manifest it as thy creature, and makest it ly-ke as thy worke. Seing then that thou de-spisest hym, whiche is so great laboures is created and fashioned theowe thy commandment, thou couldest lyghely ordeyne also, that the thyng which is made myght be preserved.

And this I speake now of all men in general, as thou knowest: but of thy people, for whose sake I am sorowful: and of thy inheritaunce in whose cause I mourne: and of Israel, for whom I am dooful: and for Jacob, for whose like I am greued: therfore begyn I to praye before the, for my selfe and for them, for I se the fall of vs: euen of vs, that dwel vpon erth. for I haue herde the swiftnesse of the iudge which is to come: therfore heare my voyce, & understande my wordes: and I shall speake before the.

This is the begynnynge of the wordes of Eldras, before he was receyued: O Lorde that dwellest in euerlastingnesse, whose wordes lyfte vp in the ayre, whose scoole is encompassynge hye, whose gloze & maiestye may not be comprehended, before whome the hoo-lies of heauen stand with trembling, whose wordynge is turned in wynde and fyre, whose word is true, whose talkynge is stedfast, whose commandemente is stronge, whose commandment is fearfull, whose loke dyeth v the depthes, whose wrath maketh the mountynes to melte awaye, and whose truthe burneth wytnesse: O heare the prayer of thy seruants, and marke with thyne eares the pettyon of thy creature.

For whyle I lyue I wyl speake, and so longe as I haue understandynge, I wyl answer. O loke not vpon the synnes of thy people which serue in the truthe. haue no respect v to the wycked studeys of the heythen, but to the desyre of those that kepe thy testimonys with sorowes. Thynke not vpon those that haue walked saynedly before the, but vpon them, whiche with wyl haue knowen thy feare.

Let it not be thy wyl to destroye them, whiche haue had deasly maners, but to loke vpon them that haue clearly taught thy law Take thou no indignacion at the, whiche are worse then beastes: but loue them, that al-way put theyr trust in thy ryghteousnes and gloze: for we and oure fathers haue all the same speakes and diseale, but because of oure synnes thou shalt be called mercyfull.

For if thou hast mercy vpon vs, thou shalt be called mercyfull, where as we haue no wor-kes of ryghteousnes: for þ ryghteous whiche haue layed vp many good workes together, shal out of theyr dedes receyue rewarde. For what is man, that thou shouldest take displeasure at hym? O what is the corruptible morall generaciō, that thou shouldest be so rough toward hym?

* For of a truthe there is noman amonge them that be bozne, but he hath dealede wy-kedly: and amonge the saythful there is none which hath not done amysse. For in this (O Lorde) thy ryghteousnesse and thy goodnesse shal be prapled and declared, if thou be mercyfull vnto them, whiche are not riche in good workes.

Then answered he me, and sayde: Some thynges hast thou spoken aryght, and accor-dyng vnto thy wordes it shalbe. For I wyl not verely consydre the workes of the, which haue synned before death, before the iudge-ment, before destruction: but * I wyl reioyse ouer the worke and thought of the ryghteous.
I wyl remembre also the pylgrymage, the holpe makynge and the rewarde. Lyke as I haue spoken nowe, so shall it come to passe.
For as the husbnde man soweth moche seed vpon the grounde, and planteth many trees, and yet alwaye the thyng that is sowed or planted is not all kepte safe, neyther doeth it all take roote: Euen so is it of them that are sowed in the worlde, they shal not all be preserved.

I answered then and sayde: If I haue founde grace, then let me speake: Lyke as the husbnde mans seede perissheth, if it receyue not rayne in due season, or if there come to moch rayne vpon it: Euen so perissheth man also, whiche is created with thy handes, and is lyke vnto thyne owne ymage, and to thy selfe, for whose sake thou hast made all thy-nges, and ges, and lykened hym vnto the husbandmans seed. Be not wroth at vs, O Lord: but spare thy people, and haue mercye vpon thyne owne inheritance: O be mercifull vnto thy creature.

D Then answered he me, and sayd: Thynges present are for the present, & thynges to come for suche as be to come. For thou lackest yet moche, seinge thou mayest loue my creature aboue me. I haue ofte tyme drawen nye vnto the, but neuer to the vncryghtous. In this also thou art maruailous befor the hyghdest in that thou hast humbled thy selfe, as it becometh the, and hast not regarded thyne owne selfe, that thou arte had in suche honoure amonge the ryghtous. Therefore shall greete wretchednesse and mysery come vpon them in the latter tyme shall dwell in the worlde, because they haue walked in great pryde.

But vnderstande thou for thy selfe, and seke out glozy for suche as be lyke the: for vnto you is paradys opened: the tree of lyfe is planted, the tyme to come is prepared, plenteousnesse made readye, a cytie is buyled for you, and a rest is prepared: yea, perfect goodnesse and wysdome. The roote of euyl is marked from you, the weakenesse & moche is byd from you, & into hell flyeth corruption in forgetfulnessse. Sorowes are vanisshed awaye: and in the ende is shewed the treasure of immortallitie. And therefore aske thou nomore questions concerninge the multitude of them that perishe. For they haue taken lybertie, despyed the hyest, thought scoyne of his lawe, and forsaken his wayes.

 W. la. fill. a* Howeuer, they haue troden downe his ryghtous, and sayd in theyr heart, that there is no God: yea, and that wyttyngly: for they dye. For lyke as the thyng that I haue spoken of, is made ready for you: Eue so is thurst and payne prepared for them. For it was not his wyl that man shoulde come to nought: but they whiche be created haue despyed the name of hym that made them, and are vnthankfull vnto hym, whiche prepared lyfe for them. And therefore is my iudgement now at hande. These thynges haue I not shewed vnto al men, but vnto fewe: namely vnto the, and to suche as be lyke the.

Then answered I and sayde: Beholde, O Lord, now hast thou shewed me the multitude of the tokens, whiche thou wylt begyn to do at the last: but at what tyme and when thou hast not shewed me.

The.ii. Chapter.

Answered me then, and sayde: Measure thou the tyme diligently in it selfe, when thou seest that one parte of the tokens come to passe, which I haue tolde the before: so shalt thou vnderstande, that it is the very same tyme wherein the hyghdest wylt begynne to vylit the worlde, whiche be made. And when there shall be sene earthquake and vproye of the people in the worlde, then shalt thou well vnderstande, that the moost hyest spake of those thynges, from the dayes that were before the, euen from the begynnyng.

For lyke as all that is made in the worlde hath a begynnyng and ende, and the ende is manifest: Euen so thynges also of the hyest haue playne begynnynges in wonders, and signes, and the ende in workyng and, in tokens. And euery one that shall be saued, and shall be hable to escape by his workes and by sayth: wherein ye haue byleued, shall be preserved from the sayd peryles, and shall be my sayuour in my lande, and within my borders: for I haue halowed me from the worlde.

Then shall they be in carefulnesse, which now haue abused my wayes, and they that haue cast them out dyspytfully, shall dwell in paynes.

For suche as in theyr lyfe haue receyued benefytes, and haue not knowen me, and they that haue abhorred my lawe, whyle they had yet fredome, and when they had yet open leysure of amedement and conuersyon, and vnderstode not, but despyed it: the same must knowe it after death in payne. And therefore be thou nomore carefull, howe the vngodlye shall be punished, and howe the ryghtous shall be saued, and whose the worlde is: & for whyle the worlde is: and when it is. Then answered I, and sayd: * I haue talked before, and now I speake, and wyl speake also hereafter, that where be many moode of them which perishe, then shall be saued, lyke as the floude is greater then the droppes.

And he answered me, saying: lyke as the felde is, so is also the seede: as the floures be, so are the coloures also: suche as the workman is, suche is also the worke: and as the husbandman is hym selfe, so is his husbandrye also: for it was the tyme of the worlde.

And when I prepared for them that are now, or euer the worlde was made, wherein they shoulde dwell, then was there noman that withstode me. Howe when euery one was, and the maker also in the worlde which is now prepared, and the mooneth that ceaseth not, and the lawe which is vnsearchable: theyr maners were corrupte. So I conspyed the worlde, and beholde, there was peryll, because of the thoughtes, that were come in to it. And I sawe, and spared them greatlye, and haue kepte me a wyneberpe of the grapes, and a plante from amonge many generacions. Let the multitude perishe then, whiche are growen vp in vayne: and let my grape and wynebery be kepte: euen my plante, for wylth greate labour haue I made it vp.

Reuerenceless,

Nevertheless, if thou wilt take vnto the ten dayes mo (but thou shalt not fast in them) go thy waye then into the felde of floures, where no house is buylded: and eate one-ye of the floures of the felde, taste no fleshe, drinke noo wyne, but eate floures onelye.
I praye vnto the hyghest continually: so wyl I come, and talke with the.

So I went my waye and came into the felde which is called Ardath (lyke as he commended me) and there I sat amonge floures, and dyd eate of the herbes of the felde, & the meate of the same satysfied me. After seuen dayes I sat vpon the grasse, and my hert was vexed within me lyke as afore: and I opened my mouth, and began to talke before the hyghest, and sayde: O Lord, thou that knowest thy selfe vnto vs, * thou hast declared and opened, thy selfe vnto oure fathers, in the wilderness, in a place where no man dwelleth, in a barren place, when they came out of Egypt, and thou spakest, sayig: Heare me O Israel, and marke my wordes & seede of Jacob. Beholde, I sowe my lawe in you, it shall byynge fruite in you, & ye shall be ho-mored in it for euer. For oure fathers whiche receyued the lawe, kepte it not, and obserued not the ordynances and statutes, and the lawe of thy lawe was not declared: for it was not: for why? it was thynne. * For they receyued it, perslyd by cause they kept not the thyng that was sown in them.

It is a custome when the ground receyueth: or the see a shipp, or a vessel meate and drynke, that when it perslyth or is brought in a drynke is sown, or wherein a drynke is put: the thynges also persly and are broken: whiche are sown or put therein.
But vnto vs it hath not happened so: for we haue receyued the lawe, persly in synne: and our herte whiche also receyued the lawe: withstandyng, * the lawe perslyth not:
but remaineth in his labour.

And when I considred these thynges in my herte after this maner, I looked about me with myne eyes, and vpon the ryghte syde, I sawe a woman, whiche mourned sore, made great lamentation, & wept with loude voys: her clothes were rent in peces, and she had alshes vpon her heed.

Then let I my thoughtes go, that I was in, and turned me vnto her, and sayde: wherefore wepest thou? Why art thou so sorowful and sorrowful? And she sayde vnto me: Sower, let me bewaile my selfe, and take yet moze sorrow: for I am sore vexed in my mynde, and brought verie lowe. And I sayde vnto her: What ayleth the? O who hath done any thyng to the? tell me: She sayde: I haue bene fruitfull and barren, and haue had an husbande thyrtye yeres. And these thyrtye yeres I doo nothyng els daye and nyght, and all houres: but make my prayer to the hyghest.

After thyrtye yeres God herde me thy hand-mayden, looked vpon my myserte, considred my trouble, and gaue me a sonne, and I was glad of him, so was my husbnde also and all my neyghbours, and we gaue great honoure vnto the myghtye. And I nourished hym with great trauayle. So when he grew vpon, and came to the tyme, that he shoulde haue a wyfe, I made a feast.

The .x. Chapter.

Eldras and the woman that appeareth vnto hym, commune together.

As it happened, that when my sonne went into his chambze, he fell downe, and dyed: then ouer-threw we all the lpydres, and all my neyghbours rose vp to comforte me. Then toke I my rest vntill the seconde daye at nyght: and when they had al-rested, that they myght comfort me, I rested and also rose vp by nyght, and fled, and am come hyther into this felde, as thou seest: and am purposed not to come in the cytye, but to remayne here: and neither to eate nor drynke, but contynuallye to mourne and to fast, vntill I dye.

Then let I my meditatio and thoughtes fall that I was in, & spake to her in displeasure: Thou foolish woman: seest thou not oure heynesse and mournynge, and what happe-neth vnto vs? howe? Upon our mother is all wofall and sorow: howe she is cleane brought downe and in myserte: seinge we be all now in heynesse, and make our mone (for we be al sorrowful.) As for the heynesse that thou ta-kest: it is but for one sonne. Demaunde I earth and she shal tel the: that it is she which ought (by reason) to mourne, for the fall of so many that growe vpon her.

For from the begynnynge all men are bozne of her, and other shal come: and beholde, they walke almost al into destruction, and many of them shal be rooted out.

Who shoulde then (by reason) make moze mournynge then she, that hath lost so great a multitude: and not thou which art sorowful: but for one. But if thou woldest saue vnto me: My mournynge is not lyke the mournynge of the earth: for I haue lost the frute of my body, whiche I hate w heynesse: but the earth is accordynge to the maner of the earth, and the present multitude goeth agayne into her as it is come to passe. Then sayde I vnto the: lyke as thou hast bozne, w trauayle and so-rowe, eue so the earth also frō the begynnynge gyueth her frute vnto mā, for him that made her. And therfore withholde thy sorowe and heynesse by thy selfe, * and looke what happeneth vnto the, beare it stronglye. For if thou indigest the marke and ende of God, to be ryghtous

be ryghtous and good, & receyuest his coun-sayl in tyme, & shalt be comended therein. So thp wape then into the cylie to thy husband.

B And she sayde vnto me: that wyl I not do: I wyl not go into the cylie: but here wyl I dye. So I communed moze with her, and sayde: Doo not so, but be counsayled, and fo-lowe me: for howe many falles hath Syon?
Be of good comfort bycause of the sorowe of Jerusalem. For thou seest that our Sanctuarye is layed waste, oure aultare broken, oure temple destroyed, our playing of instrumen-tes and syngynge layed downe, the thankesguyng put to sylene, our myght is vanished awaye, the lycht of our candelltycke is quenched, the Arke of the couenaunt is taken from vs, all oure holpe thynges are despyled, and the name that is called vpon ouer vs, is dishonoured: oure chyldren are put to shame: our prestes are bynt: oure Leuytes are carped awaye into captiuitie: our virgins are despyled, and our wyues rauished: our rhyg-teous men spoyled: and oure chyldren destroped: our younge men are brought in bondage and our stronge worthyes are become weake: and Syon (which seale is the greatest of all) is loosed vp from her worshyppe: for she is deliuered in to the handes of them that hate vs.

And therfore shake of thy great heuynesse and put awaye the multitude of sorowes: & the myghtye may be mercifull vnto the: and that the hyghest may geue the rest from thy labour and trauayle. And it happened, that when I was talkynge with her, her face dyd shyne & glyste, so that I was afrayed of her and muled what it myght be. And immediately she cast out a great voyce, very fearful, so that the earth shoke at the noyse of & woman: and I looked, and beholde, the woman appeared vnto me nomoze: but there was a cylie buylded, and a place was shewed from the grounde and foundation.

C Then was I afrayed, and cryed, with loude voyce, and sayde: Where is Ariel the Angel, which came to me at the fyrst? For he hath caused me to come in many consyde-rations and hygh thoughtes, and myne ende is touned into corruption: and my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speakynge these wodes, he came vnto me, and looked vpon me: & I laye as one that had ben deed, and myne vnderstandynge was altered, and he tooke me by the right hand, and comforted me, and set me vpon my feete, and sayde vnto me: what ayleth the: and why is thyne vnderstanding bered: and the vnderstandynge of thy herte? and wherfore arte thou sorpe? And I sayde: Bycause thou hast forsaken me: and I haue done accordynge vnto thy wordes, I wente into the felde, and there haue I sene thynges that I am not hable to expresse. he sayde vnto me: Stande vp, and be manly, and I shall gyue the exhortation.

Then sayde I: speake vnto me my lord: forsake me not, lest I dye i bayne: for I haue sene that I knewe not, and herde that I doe not knowe. & shall my vnderstandynge be disceyued, and my mynde? But nowe I be-seche the, that thou wylt shewe the thy seruante of this wddze. he answered me then, & sayd: heare me, and I shall enfourme the, and tell the wherfore thou art afrayed, for the dyet hath opened many secreete thynges vnto the.

he hath sene that thy wape is ryght, and that thou takest sorowe continuallie for thy people: and makest greate lamentation for Syon: and therfore vnderstande the vylion, which thou sawest a lytle while a goo after this maner: Thou sawest a woman moun-nyng, and thou hast comforted her: Reuer-thelesse, now seest thou the lphenesse of & woman nomoze, but thou thoughtest there was a cylie buylded: and lyke as she tolde the of fall of her sonne: so this is the answer. The woman whome thou sawest is Syon: and where as she tolde the, that she hath ben & thetye yeares vnfrutefull and barren, those are the xxx. yerres wherin there was no offsprynge made in her.

But after xxx. yerres Salomon buylded her, & offered, and then bare the barren a sonne And where as she tolde the: & the noysed hym with labour, that was the wellpyng of Jerusalem. But where as she tolde the that her sonne dyed when she came into her chambre, that is the fall of Jerusalem. And thou sawest her likenesse, how she mourned for her sonne: & what els happened vnto her, I haue shewed the. And now God seeth, that thou art sorpe in thy mynde, and suffrest from thy herte for her, & so hath he shewed the her clea-nesse, and the faynesse of her beautye.

And therfore I had the remayne in & felde where no house is buylded. For I knew that the hyghest wolde shewe this vnto the: therfore I commaunded the to go in to the felde, where no foundacyon nor buyldynge is. For in the place where the hyghest wyl shewe his cylie, there shal be nomans buyldynge. And therefore feare not, and let not thyne hert be afrayed, but go thy wape in, and se the glo-ryous sayre buyldynge, and howe great it is and howe greate thou thynkest it, after the measure of thyne eyes, and then shalt thou heare as moche as thyne eares maye comprehend. For thou art blessed aboue many other and art called with the hyghest as the fewe.
But tomorowe at nyght thou shalt remayne here: and so shall the hyghest shewe the vylions of hygh thynges, whiche he wyl do vnto them, that dwell vpon earthe, in the laste dayes. Doo I slepte the same nyght, lyke as he commaunded me.

The xi. Chapter.

In this Chapter and in the two next ensuing is contained of certayne visions, and of the interpretations thereof.

Then sawe I a dycame: and behold there came vp from the see an Aegle, whiche had. xii. wynges, and thre heedes: And I sawe, and be-holde, he spredde his wynges ouer all the earth, and all the wyndes of the ayre blew in them, and so they were put togyther agayne. And I beheld, and out of his fethers grew other lytle contrarie fethers, the heedes rested, the heed in the myddest was greater then the other, yet rested it with the myddest.

Whereafter I sawe, that the Aegle flew with his wynges, and ragyned vpon earth, and ouer all them that dwel vpon the earth:
And I sawe that all thynges vnder heauen were subiect vnto hym, and noman spake against hym: no nor one creature vpon earth.
I sawe also that the Aegle stode vp vpon his clawes, and gaue a sounde with his fethers, and a voyce sayng after this maner: watche ye all togyther, slepe euery man in his owne place, and warke for a tyme, but let the bee-es be persued at the last. Reuerthelesse, I sawe, that the voyce went not out of his bee-es, but from the myddest of his bodye. And I sawe his contrarie fethers, and behold, they were epyght of them. And I looked, and beholde, vpon the ryght syde there arose one lytle: and ragyned ouer all the earth. And it happened, that when it ragyned, the ende of tyme, and the place thereof appeared no-more. So the nexte folowynge stode vp, and ragyned, and had a great tyme: and it happened, that when it ragyned, the ende of it came as lyke as the fyrste, soo that it appered no-more.

Then there came a voyce vnto it, & sayd:
heare thou: thou hast kept in the earth so longe, thou I saye vnto the: before thou begynnest to appere nomore. There shall none after thee appere vnto thy tyme. Then arose the second, and ragyned as the other afore, and appeared nomore also. So went it with all the re-maine one after an other, so that euery one raygned, and then appeared nomore. Then I looked, and beholde: in processe of tyme the fethers that folowed were set vp vpon the ryght syde, that they myght rule also: and some of them ruled, but within a whyle they appeared nomore: for some of them were set vp, but ruled not. After this I looked, and behold the xii. fethers appeared nomore, and the two wynges: and there was nomore vpon the Aegle bodye, but two heedes that rested, and the fethers. Then sawe I also, that the lytle fethers were parted in two, and remayned vnder the heed, that was vpon the ryght syde by the foure continued in theyr place. So I looked, and beholde, they that were vnder the wynges, thought to set vp them selues, and to haue the rule. Then was there one set vp, but shortly it appeared nomore, & the seconde was sooner awaye then the fyrst. And I be-holde, & lo, the two thought also by the selues to raygne: and when they so thought, behold, they awaked one of the heedes that were at rest: namelpe, it that was in the myddest, for that was the greater of the two heedes. And the I sawe, that the two heedes were fylled with hum, and the heed was turned with the,

that were by hum, and did eate vp the two vnder wynges that wolde haue raygned.

But this heed put the hole earth in feare, and bare rule in it, ouer all those that dwelte vpon earth with moche labour, and he had the gouernaunce of the worlde, ouer all the foules that haue ben. After this I looked, and beholde, the heed that was in the myddest, sodaynly appeared nomore, like as the wynges: then came the two heedes, which ruled vpon earth, & ouer those that dwelt therein. And I beholde, & lo, the heed vpon the ryght syde denoured that was vpon the left syde. And I herde a voyce which sayde vnto me: loke before the, and consyde the thyng that thou seest. Then I sawe, and beholde, as it were a lyon that roareth, rennyge hastily ouer the wood, and he set out a mans voyce vnto the Aegle, and sayd: heare thou: I wyl talke with the, and the best that saye vnto the: Is it not thou that hast the vpreiour of the foure beastes, whom I made to raygne vpon earth and in my worlde, and that the ende of theyr tymes myght come thorow: them?

And the fourth came, and ouerranne all the beastes that were past, & had power ouer the worlde with great fearfulness, and ouer the hole compasse of the earth with the moost wyched labour, and so longe tyme dwelle he vpon the earth with discreete, & the earth hast thou iudged not with truthe. For thou hast troubled the meke: thou hast hurt the peaceable and quyet: thou hast loued lyers, and destroyed the dwellinges of them that brought forth the frute: and hast cast downe the wallies of suche as did the no harme. Therefore is thy wrongfull dealing and blasphemie come vp vnto the hyghdest: and thy pryde vnto the myghtye. The hyghdest also hath looked vpon the proud tymes: and beholde, they are ended and theyr abominations are fulfylled. And therefore appeare nomore, thou Aegle, & thy horrible wynges, and thy wyched fethers, & thy vnglacious heedes, and thy synfull clawes, and all thy vayne bodye: that the earth maye be refreshed, and come agayne to her selfe: when she is deliuered from thy violence: and that she maye hope for thy iudgement and mercy of hym that made her.

The xii. Chapter.

And it

The.iii.booke

Ad it happened whē ſion ſpake theſe wordes vnto the Aegle, I ſawe, and beholde, the heed that afore had the vpper hande, appeared nomore: neyther dyd the foure wiges appeare any more, that came to hym and were ſet vp to raigne: and theyr kyngdome was ſmall and full of vprōoze. And I ſawe, and beholde, they appeared nomore, and the whole bodye of the Aegle was brent, and the earth was in great feare. The awaked I out of the traunce of my mynde, & from great feare, and ſayde vnto my ſpyrite: Lo, this haſt thou gyuen me in that thou ſearchest out the wapes of the hyghbeſt: lo, yet am I wery in my mynde, and very weake in my ſpyrite, and lytle ſtrength is there in me, for the great feare that I receyued this nyght. Therfore wyl I now beſeeche the hyeſt, that he wil, comfort me vnto the ende: and I ſayd Lozde, Lozde, yf I haue founde grace before thy ſpyght, and yf I am iuſtified with the before manye other, and yf my prayer be come vp before thy face, comfort me then, and ſhewe me thy ſeruaunt the interpretation & playne difference of this horrible ſpyght, that thou mayeſt perfectly comforte my ſoule: for thou haſt iudged me worſt, to ſhewe me the laſt of tymes.

And he ſayde vnto me: this is the interpretation of this ſpyght. The Aegle whome thou ſaweſt come vp from the ſee, is the kyngdome * Dan. vii. * whiche was ſene in the vſion of thy brother Danyel, but it was not expounded vnto him, for nowe I declare it vnto the. Beholde, the dayes come, that there ſhall ryſe vp a kyngdome vpon earth, and it ſhall be feared aboue all the kyngdomes that were before it. In the ſame kyngdome ſhall twelue kynges raigne, one after an other. For the ſeconde ſhall begynne to raigne and ſhall haue more tyme then the other twelue: and this do the twelue winges ſignifye, which thou ſaweſt. As for the voyce that ſpake, and that thou ſaweſt go out from the heed, but not from the body: it betokeneth, that after the tyme of the kyngdome there ſhall ariſe grete ſtryuynge, and it ſhall ſtande in peryll of fallig: neuertheleſſe, it ſhall not yet fall, but ſhall be ſet into his begynnynge. And the eyght vnder wiges which I ſaweſt hange vnto ſy winges of hym, betoken, that in hym there ſhall ariſe eyght kynges, whole tyme ſhall be but ſmall, and theyr peres ſwyft, and two of the ſhall beare. But when the myddelt tyme cometh, there ſhall be foure kepte in the tyme, when hyſ tyme begynneth to come, that it maye be ended, but two ſhall be kepte vnto the ende.

And where as thou ſaweſt thre heedes re- kyng: this is the interpretation. In his laſt ſhall the hyeſt raiſe vp thre kyngdomes, and call many agayne in to them, and they ſhall haue the dominion of the earth, and of thoſe that dwell therein, with moche labour aboue al thoſe that were before them. Therfore are they called ſy heedes of the Aegle: for it is they that ſhall bynge forth his wyckednelle agayne, and that ſhall perſourme and finiſhe his laſt. And where as thou ſaweſt, that the greates heed appeared nomore, it ſignifyeth, that one of them ſhall dye vpon his bed, and yet with payne, for ſy two that remaine ſhall be ſlayne with the ſwerde. For the ſwerde of the one ſhall deuoure the other, but at laſt, ſhall he fall thowoe the ſwerde hym ſelfe.

And where as thou ſaweſt two vnder- wynges vpon the heed that is on the ryght ſyde, it ſignifyeth that it is they, whome the hyghbeſt hath kepte vnto theyr ende: this is a ſmall kyngdome, & full of trouble. The ſyde whome thou ſaweſt ryllynge vp, oute of the wood, and rorynge and ſpeakynge vnto the Aegle, and rebukynge hym for his vnrigh- toulnelle, is the wynde which the hyeſt hath kepte for them and for theyr wyckednelle vnto the ende: he ſhall reproc them, and rente them a ſundre before them. For he ſhall ſet them lyuyng before the iudgement, and ſhall rebuke them: for the reſidue of my people ſhall be deliuered with trouble, thoſe that be perſe- uered ouer myne endes: and he ſhall make them to full, vntyll the commynge of the daye of iudgement: whereof I haue ſpoken vnto the from the begynnynge. This is the dreame I thou ſaweſt: and this is the interpretation. Thou onely haſt ben meete to knowe the ſe- crete of the hyghbeſt.

Therfore, wyrite all theſe thynges I thou haſt ſene in a booke, and hyde them, and teche them the wyſe in ſy people, whole hertes thou knoweſt maye comprehend and keepe theſe ſecretes. But wyrite ſy here thy ſelfe yet ſeuē dayes mo, that it maye be ſhewed the, what- ſoever it pleaſeth the hyghbeſt to declare vnto the: and with that he went his waye.

And when all the people perceyued, that the ſeuē dayes were paſt, and I not come agayne into the cylie, they gathered them all togyther, from the leaſt vnto the moſt, and came vnto me, and ſayde, what haue we offe- ded the: and what euyl haue we done againſt the, that thou forſakeſt vs, and ſpyteſt here in this place: For of all people, thou onely arte left vs, as a grape of the vyne, and as a cable in a darke place, and as an haue and ſhypp preſerued from the tempeſt. Haue we not di- aduerſitye ynough, but I muſt forſake vs? Were it not better for vs, that we had bene brent with ſpyon: for we are not better theſe they that dyed there: and they wepte with loude voyce. Then answered I them, & ſayd: Be of good comforte, O Iſrael, and be not beny thou houſe of Jacob: for the hyeſt hath you in you in remembrance, and the myghtie hath not forgotten you in temptation. As for me, I have not forsaken you, neyther am I departed from you: but am come into this place to you, because of the myserye of Israel, that I myght seeke mercye for the lowe estate of your Sanctuarye. And nowe go your waye every man, and after these dayes wyll I come vnto you. So the people wente they: waye into the cytie, lyke as I commaunded them: but I remayned styll in the felde seuen dayes, as the Angell had me, and dyd eate myghte of the floures of the felde, and had my meat of the herbes in those dayes.

The. xiii. Chapter.

Ad it happened after the seuen dayes, that I dreamed a dreame by nyght. And beholde, there arose a wynde from the see, that it moued all the cloudes thereof.

And I looked, & beholde, the man was strong, and increased with the cloudes of heauen: & when he tourned his countenance to conspye all the thynges trembled that were scene vnder hym: and when the voyce went out of his mouth, all they bzente that hearde hym, as the earth when it feleth the fyre.

After these I sawe, and beholde, there was gathered togyther a multitude of men out of all the world, from the foure wyndes of the heauen, to fyght agaynst the man that came out of the see. And I looked, and beholde, he graunted hym selfe a great mountayne, and steepe vpon it. But I wolde haue scene the battle in place, wherout the hyl was grauen, and I coude not.

I sawe after these, that all they which came to fyght agaynst hym, were soze afrayed, that they durst not fyght. Auerthelesse, when I sawe the fearenesse and violence of the people, whether lyst vpon his hande nor held a sword nor any weapon: but onely (as I sawe) he sett out of his mouth as it had ben a blast of fyre, and out of his lippes the wynde of the flame: and out of his tonge he cast out sparkes and flames, and they were all mixt togyther: the blast of fyre, the wynde of the flames, and the great strome, and fell with a rustle vpon the people, which was prepared to fyght, and smote them vpon euerychone: so that of the unnumerable multitude there was nothyng sene, but onely dust and smoke. When I sawe this, I was afrayed.

Afterwarde, sawe I the same man come downe from the mountayne, and callinge vnto hym an other peaceable people, & there came moche people vnto him: some were glad, some were sozpe, some of them were bounde, some they were carped and brought forth.

Then was I sycke thozowe great feare, and I awaked, and sayde: thou hast shewed thy seruante all thy wonders, from the begynnyng, and hast counted me worthy, that thou myghtest receyue my prayer: shewe me nowe yet the interpretation of this dreame. For thus I conspyde in my vnderstandyng: wo vnto the that shalbe lefte in those dayes, and moche moze wo vnto them that are not left behynde: for they that were not lefte, were in heuynesse.

Nowe vnderstande I the thynges that are layed vp in the latter dayes which shal happen vnto them, and to those that are not left behynde. Therfore are they come into greates perilles, and many necessities, lyke as these dreames declare. Yet is it easer, than to passe awaye as a cloude out of the worlde, and now to see the thynges that shal happen in the last.

Then answered he me, and sayd: The interpretation of the spight shal I shewe the, and I wyll open vnto the, the thynges that thou hast requyred. For thou hast spoken of them that are left behynde, and this is the interpretation. He that taketh awaye the perill in that tyme, hath kept hym selfe. They that be fallen into harme, are suche as haue weapons and sayth vnto the most myghtie. Know this therfore, that they which be left behind are moze blessed then they that be ded. This is the meanyng of the vylion.

Where as thou sawest a man commyng vpon the depe of the see, the same is he whom God the byggest hath kept a greates season: whiche by his owne seife shal deliuer his creature, and he shal ordeine them that are left behynde. And where as thou sawest, that out of his mouth there came a blast of wynde, fyre and strome: and how that he lyst vpon neyther swerde nor weapon, but that the rustle of hym destroyed the hole multitude, that came to fyght agaynst hym: it signifieth, that the dayes come, when God wyll deliuer them that are vpon earth, and in a traunce of mynde shal he come vpon them, that dwell in the earth.

And one shal undertake to fyght agaynst another, one citie agaynst another, one people agaynst another, one realme agaynst another. When this cometh to passe, then shal the tokens come, that I shewed the before: and then shal my son be declared, whom thou sawest clyme vpon as a man. And when all the people heare his voyce, euery man shal in theyr owne lande leaue the battayle that they haue, one agaynst another, and an innumerable multitude shal be gathered togyther, as they that be wplyng to come, and to ouercome him by fyghtyng. But he shal stande vpon the top of the mounte Syon. Auerthelesse, Syon shal come, and shal be shewed, beyng prepared and buylded for all men, lyke as thou sawest the hyl grauen forth without any handes.

des. But my sonne shall rebuke the people, that are come: for they? wyckednesse, with the tempest: and for they? euil ymaginaciō: and they? paynes wherewith they shalbe punished, are lykened vnto the flame: and with out any labour, shal he destroye them, euen by the lawe, which is compared vnto the fyre.

And where as thou sawest, that he gathered an other peacable people vnto hi: those are the ten tribes whiche were carped away prisoners out of they? owne lande, * in the tyme of Oloas the kynge whom Salmana- sar the kynge of Assyria toke prisoner, and carped them ouer the water, and so came they into an other lande.

But they gaue them this counsaile that they shoulde leaue the multitude of the he- tyen, and to go forth into a farther countrie, where neuer mankynde dwelte: that they myght there kepe they? statutes, which they neuer kepte in they? owne lande. And so they entred in at the narrow passages of the wa- ter of Euphrates, and so God shewed tokens for them, * and heide it vntill the floude tyll they were passed ouer, for thowowe the countrey, there was a great wape: namelpe of a peare, and a halfe iournepe, for the same regyon is called Asareth. Then dwelt they there vntill the latter tyme: and when they come forth agayne, the hyghest shall holde tyll the springes of the streame agayne, that they may go thowow, therfore sawest thou the multitude with peace. And they that be left behynde of thy people, are those that be founde within my voyde. Now when he destroyeth the mul- titude that is gathered together, he shall de- fende his people that remaine, and then shall he shewe them great wonders.

Then sayd I: O Lorde, Lorde, shewe me this, wherfore haue I sene the man comynge by from the deepe of the see? And he sayde vnto me: Lpe as thou cannest neyther seke oute nor knowe these thynges that are in the deepe of the see, euen so mayest thou not se my sonne, or those that be with hym, but in the tyme of the dape. This is the interpretacion of the dreame whiche thou sawest, therefore thou onely arte here lyghtened, for thou hast forsaken thyne owne lawe, and applyed thy dylygence vnto myne, and sought it. * Thy lpe vailt thou ordred in wyldome, and * hast called vnderstandynge thy mother, and ther- fore haue I shewed the, the treasure of the hyghest. After thre dayes, I wyll shewe the more, and talke with the at more large: pea- ceup and wonderful thynges wyl I declare vnto the.

Then wet I forth vnto the feld, gyuing prayle and thankes greatlye vnto God, by- cause of this wonders which he byd in tyme and bycause he gouerneth the same, and suche as is in tyme, and there I lat thre dayes.

God appeared vnto Oloas in the bush, and shewed hym what he shall do.

Vpon the thyrde dape I late vnder an oke tree, then came there a voyce vnto me out of the bush, and sayde: Oloas: And I sayde: here am I Lorde, and stode vp vpon my feete. Then spake he vnto me: * in the bush byd I appeare vnto Moyses and talked with him when my people seryed in Egypt. And I sent hym, and led my peo- ple out of Egypt, and brought him vpon the mounte Syon, where I helde hym by me a longe season, and tolde hym my wonderous workes, and shewed hym the secretes of the tymes and the ende, and commaunded hym, sayinge: These wordes waite thou declare, and not hyde them: And nowe I lape vnto the: that thou lape vp in thyne bert the dreames that thou hast sene, and the interpreta- cyōs which I haue shewed the: for thou shalt be receyued of all, thou shalt be tourmed, and remaine with my counsaile, and with suche as be lyke the, vntill the tymes be ended. For the world hath lost his pouth, and the tymes begynne to wane olde. For the tyme is de- uided into twelue partes, and ten partes of it are goone al redye, and halfe of the tenth parte, yet remaineth there that which is al- ter the halfe of the tenth parte.

Therfore, prepare and ordre thy house, & reforme thy people: comforte suche of them as be in trouble: and tell nowe of the destruc- tion: let go from the, moztall thoughtes: cast a wape the burthens of man: put of the weake nature: lape vp in some places the thoughtes that are moost heuye vnto the, and haue the to flye from these tymes: for suche euell and wyckednesse as thou hast sene nowe happen, shall they doo pet moche worse. * For the weaker that the worlde and the tyme is, the more shall synne and wyckednesse increase, in them that dwel vpon earth. For * truth is fled farre awaye, and lesynge is harde at had. For nowe hasteth the vpsion to come, that I hast sene.

Then answered I before the, and sayde: Beholde Lorde, I wyll go as thou hast com- maunded me, and reforme the people which are present. But they that shalbe home after warde, who wyll exhoite or rebuke them? Thus * worlde is set in darkenesse: and they * dwell therein are without lyght: for thy law is kyndled, bycause noman knoweth the thynges that are done of the, or that shal be done. If I haue founde grace before the, sende the holpe ghost into me, & I shall wyte all that hath ben done in the worlde syns the begyn- nyng, which was wyrtten in thy lawe, that men maye fynde the path, and * they whiche popl lyue in the latter dayes, maye lpe.

And

And he answered me, sayinge: Go thy way, gather the people together, and save them: that they seke the not for fourtye dayes, but loke thou gather the many bore wyes, & take with the Barca, Dabzia, Sele mus, & Amis, and Asiel, these fyue, which ar wyllyng to wyte swyftly, and come hither, & I will geve the a candle of understanding in thine hand, whiche shall not be put out, tyll I thyn ke to be performed whiche thou shalt begyn to wyte. And then shalt thou declare some of thy wyte openly vnto the perfect, & some thin gs shalt thou shewe secretly vnto the wyle.
For as much as this houre shalt thou begynne to wyte.

Then went I forth (as he commaun de) and gathered all the people together and sayde: Heare these wordes, O Israel: Our fathers at the begynnyng were straun gers in Egypte, from whence they were de liuered, and receaued the law of lyfe, which they kept not, which ye also haue transgre ssed them. Then was this lande, and the lande of Sion parted amonge you by lot and by the sword. But yowre fathers and ye pour selfes also haue done vnrightheousnesse, and haue kept the wayes which the best co mmanded you. And for so much as he is a mercifull Judge, he toke from you in tyme of tyme that he had geuen you. And now ye are here and your brethren amonge you.
For ye so be that ye wyl subdue yowre neighbour vnderstandyng, & resourne your hert to the wayes kept alwaye, and after death shall ye enjoye mercy. For after death shall I iud ge you. When we shall lyue agayne: & I shall the names of the rightheous be ma de, and the workes of the vngodly shall be blotted. Let no man therfore come now vn to me, nor aske any questyon at me these four tye dayes.

So I toke the fyue men (as he commaun de) and we wente into the felde, and re mained there. The nexte daye a voyce called me sayinge: Eldas, open thy mouth, and saye that I geue the. Then opened I my mouth, and beholde: he reached me a full cup which was full as it were with water, but the colour of it was lyke fyre. And I toke it and dranke. And when I had dronken it, my heart had understanding and wysdome grew in my hert: for my sperte was kept in reme mber, and my mouth was opened and shut at wyte. The best gaue vnderstandyng to the fyue men, & they wrote the hys thyn gs of the nyght, which they vnderstode not till I nyght they dyd eat bread: as for me I was in the daye & helde not my tounge by myght. In .xii. dayes, they wrote .ii. hundred & fourtye wordes.

And it happened when the fourtye dayes were fulfilled, that the best spake, sayinge:

The fyrst & thou hast wyrtten speake openly that the worth & unworth maye reade it.
But kepe the .xii. last, that I may shewe it only to suche as be wyle amonge thy people.
For in them is the spring of vnderstandyng the fountayne of wysdome, and the streame of knowledge. And I dyd so.

The xv. Chapter.

The punishment that euill people shall haue: which God commaundeth Eldas to shewe vnto them.

Behold, speake thou in the eares of my people & wordes of prophecy which I wil put in thy mouth, sayth the Lord: and cause them to be wyrtten in a letter, for it is the tyme.

Feare not the ymaginacions agaynst the. Let not the vnfaithfulnesse of them trouble the, that speake agaynst the. For all the vnfaith ful shall dye in theyr vnfaithfulnesse. Behold sayth the Lord, I wyl byng plagis vpon the worlde, the swerde, hunger, death, & destru ction, for wyckednes hath the vpperhande in all the earth, & theyr shamefull workes are fulfilled.

Therfore sayth the Lord: I wyl holde my tounge nomore vnto theyr wyckednesse, which they do so vngodly: nether wyl I suf fer them in the chynge, that they deale wyl so wyckedly. Beholde, the innocent blood of the troubled cryeth vnto me, and the soules of the rightheous complayne continually: & therfore (sayth the Lord) I will surely auenge and re ceane vnto me all the innocent blood from a monge them.

* Beholde, my people is led as a flocke of shepe to be slayne. I wyl not suffer them nowe to dwel in Egypte but wyl byng the out with a myghty hande and a stretched out arme, and smyte it wyl plagis as afore and wyl destroie all the lande of it. Egypte shall mourne and the foundacions of it shall be smytten wyl the plage and punishment of God shall byng vpon it.

They that tyll the grounde shall mourne for theyr sedes shall be destroyed thow the blastyng and hayle, and an horrible starre.
No worth the worlde and theyr destruction draweth nye, and one people shall stande vp to fyght agaynst another, & merdes in their handes. For men shall be vnstedfast, & some shall do violence vnto other: they shall not re garde theyr kynge and prynces, the wayes of theyr doynges and handelynges in theyr power. A man shall desyre to go in the cytie and shall not be able. For because of theyr pryde the cyties shall be brought in feare, the houses shall shake, and men shall be afayde.
A man shall haue no ppyte vpon his neygh bour.

boune, but one shall prouoke an other vnto batayle to spoyle theyr goodes, because of þe donger of breade, and because of the greates trouble.

D Beholde, I gather and call together all the kynges of the earth, whiche are from the vpprlyng, from the South, from the East, & Lybanus to turne vnto them, and restore the thynges that they haue geuen them. Lyke as they do yet this daye vnto my cholen, so wyl I do also, and recõpense the in theyr bolome. Thus sayth the Lorde God: My ryght hand shall not spare the synners, & my swerde shall not cease ouer them þe innocent bloud vpon earth. The feare is gone out from þys wyath, and hath consumed the foundacyons of the earth, and the synners lyke the strawe that is kyndled. No worth them þe synne, & kepe not my commaundementes, sayeth the Lorde: I wyl not spare them. So pour wape ye chyldren from violence despyle not my sanctuary: for the Lorde knoweth all them that synne agaynst hym, and therfore deliuereth þe them vnto death and destruccyon: For nowe are the plagis come vpon the worlde, and ye shall remayne in them. For God shall not deliuer you, because ye haue synned agaynst hym.

E Beholde, an horrible vpspon cometh from the East, where generacions of Dragons shall come out, and the people of þe Arabies with many charets, and the multitude of them shall be as the wynde vpon earth that all they whiche heare them ragynge in theyr wyathe, make feare and be afrayde, and as the wynde bores out of the woode, so shall they go oute, and wyth greates power shall they come, and stande fyghtyng wyth them: and shall waste the pozcyon of the lande of þe Assyrians.

And then shall þe Dragons haue the vpper hande, not remembryng theyr byrth, & shall turne aboute swearpynge together in great power, to persecute them. But these shall be afrayde, and kepe silence at theyr power, and shall lie: and one out of the lande of the Assyrians shall besege them, & consume one of the and in theyr host shall be feare and drede, and stryfe amonge theyr kynges.

F Behold, cloudes from the East, and from the North vnto the South, and they are very horrible to loke vpon, full of wyath and storme. They shall smyte one vpon an other: and they shall smyte at the great starre vpon earthe and theyr starre, and the bloude shall be from the swerde vnto the helpe: and the smoke of man vnto the Camels lytter: And there shall be great fearfulness and tremblyng vpon earth, and they that se the wyath, shall be afraide, and a tremblyng shall come vpon them.

And then shall there come greates raynes from the South, and from the North, & part from the West, and from the stormy wynde from the East, and shall shut the vp agayne, and the cloude which he rased vp in wyath, and the starre to cause feare toward the East and West wynde shall be destroyed: & the great cloudes shall be lyft vp, and the mighty cloudes full of wyath, and the starre þe theyr make all the earth afrayd, and them þe dwell therein, and that theyr make poutre out ouer all places an horrible starre, fyre, and hayle and swerdes, and many waters: that al felde may be full, and all ryuers, and they shall breake downe the Cyties and walles, mountaynes and hylles, all trees, wood, and the grasse of the medowes, & all theyr frute. And they shall go stedfast vnto Babylon, & make her afrayde, they shall come to her and besege her: the starre and all wyath shall theyr poutre out vpon her.

G Then shall the dust & smoke go vp vnto the heauen, and all they that be aboute her shall bewaile her: and they that remayne vnder her shall do serupce vnto them that haue put her in feare: And thou Asia þe comfortest thy selfe also vpon the hope of Babylon, and art a wythp of her perforce: No be vnto the thou wyetche, because thou hast made thy selfe lyke vnto her, and hast dected thy daughters in whordom, that theyr myghte triumph and please thy louers, whiche haue alwaye despyed to conmyt whordom wyth the: thou hast folowed the abhomyable Cytie in all her workes and inuencions.

Therfore sayth God: I wyl send plagis vpon þe wyddowhode, pouerte, hunger, warres, and pestilence, to wast thy houles wyth destruccyon and deathe, and the gloyp of thy power shall be dyed vp as a floure, when the heat ryseth þe is sent ouer the: Thou shalt be lycke as a pooze wyfe that is plaged & beate of women: so that the myghte and loue shall not be able to receaue the. Wolde I so hate the sayth the Lorde: If thou haddest not alwaye slayne my cholen, exaltynge the stroke of thy handes, and sayde ouer theyr deathe, when thou wast drunken: set forth þe bewyfe of thy countenance.

The rewarde of thy whordom shall bere: & compensated the in thy bolome, therfore shalt thou receaue rewarde.

Lyke as thou hast done vnto my cholen, (sayth the Lorde) euen so shall God do vnto the, and shall deliuer the into the plage. Thy chyldren shall dye of hunger, and thou shalt fall thowowe the swerde. Thy cyties shall be broken downe, & all thyne shall perthe wyth the swerde in the felde. They that be in the mountaynes shall dye of hunger, and eat theyr owne flesh, & drynke theyr owne bloud for very hunger of bred and theyr of water. Thou unhappye shalt come thowowe the see and and receane plagis agayne.

In the passage they shall caste downe the lame Cyrie, and shall rote oute one parte of the lande, and consume the porcyon of glory. They shall treade the downe lyke stubble, and they shall be the fyre, and shall consume the: the cyries and the lande, the wood and the frutefull trees shall they burne by the fyre. The chyldren shall they carry awaye captive, & loke what I haue, they shall spoyle it, and marre the bewtye of the face.

¶ The. xvi. Chapter.

¶ The heathen shall be punyshed.

Vnto the Babylon & Asia, vnto the Egypt and Syria: gyde pour sel-ues to clothes of sacke and heare, & mourne pour children, be soyr for pour destruccion is at hand. A sword shall be vpon you, & who wyll turne it backe?
There is kyndled amonge you, and who wyll quench it? Plages are sent vnto you, & what shall they do? They shall dwelle in the wynde and they shall dwelle in the wynde. Wape any man vnto awake an hongry vpon in the wood or wape any man quench the fyre in stubble when it hath begonne to burne? Wape one man agayne the arrowe, & is shot of a stronge arowe. The myghty Lozde sendeth the plages, and what is he that wyll dwelle them awaye? The fyre is kyndled and gone forth in the wynde, & what is he that wyll quench it?
He shall cast lyghtenynge, and who shall not fear? He shall thunder, & who shall not be afraid? The Lozde shall threaten, and who shall not utterly be beaten to poulder at his presence? The earth quaketh, and the founda-ment thereof: the see aryleth vp with waues from the depe, & the floudes of it are unquyet and the fyres thereof also befoze the Lozde, & before the gloze of his power. For stronge is his myghte hande that holdeth the bowe, his armes that he shotheth are sharpe, and shall not mysse, when they begynne to be shote into the endes of the worlde.

Beholde, the plagis are sent, and shall not turne agayne, tyl they come vpon earth. The fyre is kyndled, and shall not be put out, tyl it consume the foundacions of the earth. Lyke as an arrowe which is shot of a myghty archer, returneth not backward: euen so the plages that shall be sente vpon earth, shall not turne agayne. Who is me, who is me, who wyll deliuer me in those dayes? The begyn-nyng of sorowes and great mournynge: the begynnyng of derth and greete deathe, the begynnyng of warres, and the power shall stand in feare: the begynnyng of euell, and they shall tremble every one. What shall I do in these thynges, when the plagis come?

Beholde, hunger, and plage, trouble and an-guysh are sent, as scourges for amendement.
But for all these thynges they shall not turne from theyr wyckednes, nor be alwaye mynd full of the scourges.

Beholde, bytayles shall be so good cheape vpon earth, that they shall thynke the selues to be in good case, & euen then shall myschefe grow vpon earth, warres, dearth, and great disquyetnes. For many of them that dwell vpon earth shall perishe of hunger, and the other that escape the hunger, shall the sword destroie: & the deade shall be cast out as donge and there shall be no man to confort them. For the earth shall be wasted, and the cyries shall be cast downe: there shall be no man left to tpe the earth and to sowe it. The trees shall geue frute, & who shall plucke them of and gather them? The grapes shall be rype, & who shall treade them? For all places shall be desolate of men, so that one man shall desyre to see another, or to heare his voyce. For of one whole cyrie there shall be ten leste, and two in the felde, which shall hyde them selues in the thynke bushes, and in the clyffes of stoness: lyke as when there remaine there four oly-ues vpon the olyue tree, or as when a vyneparde is gathered, there are left some grapes of them that diligently sought thowowe the vyneparde.

Euen so in those dayes there shall be three or foure left for them that searche theyr houses with the sword. And the earth shall be leste waste, and the feldes thereof shall ware olde: and her wapes and all her pathes shall grow full of thornes, because no man shall trauallye there thowow. The daughters shall mourne, haupng no bydegroms: the women shall make lamentacyon, haupng no husbandes, theyr daughters shall mourne, haupng no helpe of theyr bydegrome. In the warres shall they be destroyed, and theyr husbandes shall pe-rysh of hunger. O ye seruantes of the Lozde heare these thynges, and marke them. Be-holde, the worde of the Lozde, & receane it: beholde, the plagis drawe nye, and are not slacke in taryng. Lyke as a trauallyng woman which after the ix. moneth byngeth forth a sonne, when the houre of the byrth is come, an houre two or thre afore that the paynes come vpon her body, and when the chyld cometh to the byrth, they tary not the twyn-kelyng of an eye: Euen so shall not the plages be slacke to come vpon earth, & the worlde shall mourne, and sorowes shall come vpon it on every syde.

O my people, heare my worde, make you ready to the battayle: and in all euell be euen as pylgryms vpon earth. He that selleth, let hym be as he that flyeth bys wape: he that byreth as one that wyll lease.

¶ Ccc ii. Who so

The boke

Who so occupieth marchaundys, as he that wynneth not: & he that buydeth, as he that shal not dwell thereyn: he that soweth, as one that shal not reape: he that twyseth y vyne- parde, as he that shal not gather the grapes, they that mary, as they that shal get no chyl- dren: and they that marpe not: as the wyd- dowers, and therefore * they that labour, la- bour in vayne. For straungers shal reape they frutes, and spoyle they goodes, ouer- throw they houses, and take they chyl- dren captiue, for in captiuite & hunger shal they get chyl- dren. And they y occupie their mar- chaundys with robbery, howe longe decke they they cyties, they houses, they posses- syons, and persons: the moze wyll I puny- shen them for they synnes, sayeth the Lord. Lyke as an whoze enuieyth an honest womā, so shal ryghteousnes hate iniquyte. whē she decketh her selfe, and shal accuse her to her face, whē he cometh that defendeth, whiche shal make inquisition for all synne vpo earth. And ther- fore be not ye lyke ther vnto, nor to y wo- kes therof: for o: euer it be longe, iniquite shal be take awaye out of the earth: & ryghteousnes shal raygne amonge you.

If let not the synner saye, that he hath not synned: for coles of fyre shal burne vpon his heade, which sayth befoze the Lord God and hys gloze: I haue not synned. Beholde, the Lord knoweth all the wo:kes of men, they ymaginacions, they thoughtes, and they per- ces. * For he spake but the wo:de: let the earth be made, and it was made: let the hea- uen be made, and it was made. In his wo:de were the starres made, and he knoweth the nombze of them. He searcheth the ground of the depe, & the treasures therof: he hath mea- sured the see, and what it cōteyneth. He hath shut the see in the myddest of the waters, and with his wo:de hath he hāged the earth vpo the waters. He spredeth out the heauen lyke a vawte, vpon y waters hath he founded it: In the deserte and drye wyldernesse hath he made spynges of water, and poles vpon the toppe of the mountaynes, that the floudes myght poure downe frome the stony rockes to water the earth. He made man, & put hys her- te in the myddest of the bodye, and gaue hym byeth, lyfe and vnderstaundyng, yee, and the spete of the almighty God, which made all thynges, and hath searched the ground of all the secretes of the earth.

He knoweth your ymaginacions and in- uencions, & what ye thynke when ye synne and wolde hyde your synnes. Therefore hath the Lord searched and sought out all your wo:kes, and he shal bewape you all. And whē your synnes are brought forth, ye shal be ashamed befoze men, and your owne synnes shal be your accusers in that day. What wyl ye do? howe wyl ye hyde your synnes be- fore God and hys Angelles? Beholde, God hym selfe is the iudge, feare hym, leaue of frō your synnes, and forget your vnyghteou- nesses, and medle nomoze wyth them: so shal God leade you forth, and deliuer you frō all trouble. For beholde, y heate of a great mul- titude is kyndled ouer you, & they shal take awaye certayne of you, & fede the pylle wyth Idols: and they that cōsent vnto the, shal be had in derisyon, laughed to scozne, and trode vnder fote.

For vnto the places there shal be a place, and in the nexte cyties a greates insurreccyon vpon those that feare the Lord. They shal be lyke mad men, they shal spare no mā: they shal spoyle & waste such as feare the Lord, they goodes shal they take from them, and shute them out of they houses. The shal be knownen who are my chosen, & they shal be tryed as the golde in the fyre. Heare, O ye my beloued, sayeth the Lord: beholde, the dayes of trouble are at hand, but I wyl deli- uer you from the same. Be not ye attraped, dyspayre not, for God is your captayne.

Who so keepeth my commaundementes and pzeceptes (sayth the Lord God) let not your synnes wape you downe, and let not your vnyghteousnesse be lyfte vp. Mo:be vnto them that are subdued vnto they syn- nes, and tangled in they wyckednesse: lyke as a felde is hedged in wyth busshes, and the path therof couered wyth thornes, that no man maye traunple thow: and so is he taken, and cast in the fyre, and byent.

The booke of Tobias.

The fyrst Chapter.

Tobias beyng taken prysoner, forsaketh not the lawe of God. The mercy and charite of Tobias: and the manner of hym in his poynt. He taketh Hannah to wyfe: by whome he hath a sonne named Tobias. He receiveth Gabiel with money. He and his are sayne in syce, but after the death of Sennacherib they retorne agayne.

Tobias was of the trybe & cytie of Nephtali, which lieth in the countrees of Galile aboute Nazareth the waye toward the west hauing the cytie of Sephet vpon the syde.

Though he was taken prysoner in the wyre of Salmanasar kynge of the Assyrians wherheles beyng in captiuitie, he forsake not the waye of truth: In so much that what tyme he myghte get, he parted it daylye with his prysoners and byethen, that were of his kynred. And though he were ponger than all in the trybe of Nephtali, yet he had not leaue hym selfe chyldeslye in his wyres. And when all the other went to the golddynnes, whiche Jeroboam the kynge of Israel had made, he hym selfe alone fled all his companies, and gat hym to Jerusalem into the temple of the Lorde, and there worshipped the Lorde God of Israel, saythful-ly prayng of all his fyrst frutes and rythes what in the thyrde yere he mynistrer all the rythes vnto the straungers and conuerteres. These and such lyke thynges he obserue accordyng to the lawe of God, when he was yet but yonge.

But when he was a man, he toke out of his owne trybe a wyfe called Anna, and of her he begat a sonne, whome he called after his owne name, and taughte hym from his yowth vp, to feare God, and to refraine from all synne.

Nowe when he with his wyfe, his sonne and with all his kynred was come in captiuitie vnto the cytie of Ninine, what tyme as they all had eate of the meates of the heathen kepte his soule, and was neuer defyled in their meates. And for so muche as he was myghty of the Lorde in all his herte, God gaue hym fauoure in the syght of Salmanasar the kynge, whiche gaue hym power to go where he wolde, and so had he libertye to do what he wold hym selfe.

So went Tobias vnto all them that were in captiuitie, and comforted them, and gaue them wisdom and exhortacions. And when he came to Ragas, a cytie of the Medes, hauing ten talents of syluer (of the thynges wherewith the kynge had honoured hym) & saw amonge a greute compaignie of people of his kynred, one Gabiel (which was of his owne trybe) beyng in necessyte, he gaue hym the sayde weyght of syluer vnder an handwrytyng.

After a longe season when Salmanasar the kynge was deade, and Sennacherib his sonne reygned in his steade, which hated the chyldren of Israel. Tobias went daylye thowrowe out all his kynred, and comforted them and gaue of his goodes to euery one of them as much as he myght: he fed the hungry clothed the naked, & buryed the deed and slayne: and that diligently.

And when Sennacherib the kynge came agayne and fled oute of Jewry (what tyme as God punished hym for his blasphemie) & in his waye the slewe many of the chyldren of Israel. Tobias buryed thei bodies. But when it was tolde the kynge, he commaunded to slaye hym, and toke awaye all his goodes. Neuerthelesse, Tobias with his sonne and with his wyfe fled his waye, and was byd naked, for there were many that loued hym. But after xlv. dayes the kynge was slayne of his owne sonnes. Then came Tobias agayne to his house, and all his goodes were restozed vnto hym.

The ii. Chapter.

Tobias dydeth such of his frendes as feare god to a banquet or feast. He is reproued of his frendes. He feareth God more then the kynge. He berdmed dygnite by the permission and sustenance of god. His kynfolkes mocke hym.

After those thynges vpon a solle-lyne daye of the Lorde, Tobias made a good feast in his house, & sayd vnto his sonne: So thy way and byng byther some of our trybe, suche as feare God, that they maye make merue with vs. And when he was gone, he came agayne, and tolde his father, that one of the chyldren of Israel laye slayne vpon the strete. And immediatly he leapt from his table left the feast, came talkyng to the deade carcase, toke hym & bare hym preuely into his house, that when the sunne was downe, he myght safely burye hym. And when he had byd the carcase, he had eate his meate with mourning and feare, remembryng the wordes, that the Lorde sayde by the prophete Amos: yourre hye feastes shall be turned to sorowe and be-lypnesse.

But when the sunne was downe, he went his waye & buryed hym. Then all his neyghbours reproued him, saying: It is not longe, sens it was commaunded to slaye the: because of this matter, and haste scarce escaped the daunger of death, & buryest thou the deed agayne. Neuerthelesse, Tobias fearyng God more then the kynge, toke the bodies of the slayne, & byd them in his house, and buryed them at mydnyght.

It happened vpon a daye, that he had buryed the deed, & was wey, came home, & layd hym downe by the wal and slept. And while he was a slepe, there fel downe vpon his eyes warme dunge out of the swalowes nest, so þ he was blynde. This temptacyon dyd God suffre to happen vnto hym, that they whiche came after, myghte haue an example of hys patience lyke as of holy Job. For in so much as he euer feared God from hys yowth vp, & kepte his commaundementes, he grudged not agaynst God, þ the plague of blyndnes chaunced vnto hym, but remayned stedfaste in the feare of God, and thanked God all the daies of his lyfe.

D For lyke as blessed Job was had in derysion of kynge, euen so was he laughed to scorn of hys elders and kynsfolkes, whiche sayde vnto hym: where is thy hope, for the which thou hast done almes, and buried the dead? But Tobias rebuked them, and spake saye not so, for we are the chyldren of holy men, and loke for the lyfe, whiche God shall geue vnto them, þ neuer turne theyre beleue from hym. Anna his wyfe went dailly to the weaupng worke: and loke what lpyng she could get with the labour of her handes she brought it. And it happened þ she toke a kynd and brought it home.

And when her husbade hearde it crye, he sayd: loke þ it be not stolen, restore it agayne to the owners: for it is not lawfull for vs to eate or to touch any thyng of theste. Then was his wife angry: and sayde: Howe is thy hope become vayne openlye, and thy almes dedes are manyfeste. With these & such lyke wordes dyd she cast hym in the teth.

The .iii. Chapter.

The prayer of Tobias. Sara the daughter of Raguel is reclaimed of her fathers seruants. The prayer & sacrifice of Sara. And also the innocency and chastite of her. The prayers of Tobias & of Sara are heard.

Then Tobias toke it heuelye, and wpyth teares: began to make hys prayer sayinge: O Lorde, thou art ryghteous, and all thy iudgements are true, yet, all thy wayes are mercy, fapthfulnesse and iudgement. And nowe O Lorde: be mynde full of me, and take no vengeance of my synnes, nether remembre my mysdedes, nether the mysdedes of my elders. For we haue not bene obedyent vnto thy commaundementes, therfore are we spoyled, brought into captiuytie, into deathe, into derysion, and shame vnto all nacions, amonge whome thou hast scattered vs. And nowe O Lorde, thy iudgements are greates for we haue not done accordyng to thy commaundementes, nether haue we walked innocently before þ. And nowe O Lord, deale wpyth me accordyng to thy wyll, and commaunde my sperte to be receaued in peace, for more expedyent were it for me to dye, then to lyue.

25 At the same tyme it happened that Sara the daughter of Raguel at Raguel a cytye of the Medes was slea undered of one of her fathers handmaydes: namely, that she shoulde haue had seuen husbandes, whiche as soone as they were gone in vnto her, were slayne of the deuell called Asmodeus. Therfore, when she reproued the mayde for her faulte, she answered her, saying: God let vs neuer se sonne nor daughter of the moze vpon carthe, thou kyller of thy husbandes. Wylt thou slay me also, as thou hast slayne seuen men? At this voyce wet Sara into an hye chamber of her house, and thre dayes & thre nyghtes she nether eate nor dranke, but cōfyned in prayer and besought God wteares, that he wold be lyuer her from this rebuke.

Alpon the thryd daye it chaunced, þ when she had made an ende of prayer, she prayed the Lorde, saying: Blessed be thy name, O God of oure fathers, whiche when thou arte wroth: the west mercy, & in tyme of trouble thou for geuest the synnes of them, that call vpon the. Vnto the O Lord turne I my face vnto the lyfte I vp myne eyes. I beseeche the O Lorde, lose me out of the bondes of this rebuke, or elles take me vterly awape frame of the earth. Thou knowest Lorde, that I neuer had desyre vnto man, & that I haue kept my soule cleane from all vnclely lust, I haue not kepte compaigny wpyth those that passe theyr tyme in sporte, nether haue I made my self partaker wpyth them that walke in lpych behauioure. Neuerthelesse an husbade haue I consented to take, not for my pleasure, but in thy feare.

Now peraduenture ether I haue bene in wroth of them, or els were they vniuers for me, for thou happily hast kept me to another husbade. For wpyth thy counsel is not in the power of man. But whosoener loueth the & serueth the a ryghte, is sure of thyng, that yf hys lyfe be tempted and proued, it standeth in the tryng, and yf he endure in payence, he shall haue a reward and be hply crowned: and yf he be in trouble, that God (no doubt) shall deliuer hym: and yf hys lyfe be in chastenynge, þ he shall haue leane to come vnto thy mercy.

For thou hast no pleasure in oure dampnation: and wpyth after a stozme thou makest the wether fayre and styl: after weppng & heuyng thou geuest great loye. Thy name, O God of Israel, be prayed for euer. At þ same tyme were both their prayers heard in þ sight of the maiesty of the hpest God. And Raphael the holy Aungell of the Lorde was sent to helpe them both, whose prayers came at one tyme together before God.

The .iiii. Chapter.

Tobias thynkyng to be greued a godly whortey: on and monyng to his soune,

The v. Chapter.

The obedience of ponge Tobias to his father, which is sent into itages. An Angel accompanieth with him in his iourney.

When Tobias thought his prayer to be heard, that he myght dye, he called vnto hym his sonne Tobias, and sayde vnto hym: My sonne, these wordes of my mouth, I laye them in thy herte as a foundacyon. When God shal awake my soule, bury thou my body, and holde thy mother in honoure all þe dayes of thy lyfe. For I oughtest to remembre, what my grete parels the suffred for þe in her wambe. And when she also hath fulfilled þe dayes of her lyfe, burye her besyde me. Haue God in thy thought all þe dayes of thy lyfe, & leaue, lest at any tyme þe consent vnto syn, and leste thou let slyp the comaundentes of þe Lord our God.

Seue almes of thy goodes, and turne neare the face from the pooze: & so shall it come to passe, that the face of the Lord shall not be turned awaye from the. Be mercyfull after thy power. If thou haue muche, geue plentifully: if thou haue lytle, do thy diligence, to geue of that lytle. For so gathrest thou thy selfe a good rewarde in the daye of iudgement. For mercy deliuereth fro all synne, and from death, and suffereth not the soule to come in darknes. A grete comfort is mercede: the face of God, vnto all them that feare hym.

My sonne, kepe the well from all whoredoms, and (besyde thy wyfe) le that no faute be knowne of þe. Let neuer pydde haue rule in thy wambe: nor in thy wordes, for in pydde becometh all destruction.

Who soeuer worketh any thyng for the, immediatly geue him his hyre, and loke that he byd seruantes wages remayne not by thy night. Loke that thou neuer do vnto another man, the thyng that thou woldest not another man shoulde do vnto the. Eate thy bread with the hongrye and pooze, and clothe the naked with thy clothes. Set thy handes wyne vpon the buryall of the ryghteous, and do not thou eate and drynke thereof with the symners. As he euer counsel at the wyfe.

Be alwaye thankfull vnto God, and be-leeue hym, that he wyll ordeyne thy wayes, and that what soeuer thou deuysest or takeste in hande, it maye remayne in hym. I certifie þe, that my sonne, that (when thou wast yet but a childe) I deliuered ten talentes of syluer vnto Gabelus, at Rages a cytie of the Medes, and his hande wytyngge haue I by me. And thou seke some meanes, howe thou mayst receyue of hym the sayde syluer, & geue hym his hande wytyngge agayne.

My sonne, be not afrayde: trueth it is, we haue here a pooze lyfe: but grete good shall we haue, if we feare God, and departe from all synne and do well.

Then answered Tobias his father, and sayde: father, all that thou hast comaunded me, wyll I do and that dyligently. But howe I shall requyte this money I can not tell. Nether doth he knowe me, nor I hym. What token shall I geue hym? And as for the waye thither, I neuer knewe it. Then his father answered hym, and sayde: I haue his hand wytyngge by me, which when thou shewest him immediatly he shall paye the. But go thy waye now, and get the some saythfull man to go with the for an hyre; that thou mayest receaue the money, whyle I am yet lyuyng. Then went Tobias out, and vpon the strete he founde a sayde ponge man standyng, gyrded vp, and as it were one ready to take his iourney. And he knewe not that it was an Angel of God, but saluted him and sayde: Frome whence arte thou; thou good ponge man? he answered: Of the chyldren of Israel.

And Tobias sayde vnto hym, knowest þe the waye þe leadeth vnto the countre of þe Medes? he answered: I knowe it wel, & all those stretes haue I gone oft tymes, and haue lodged with our brother Gabelus, & dwelleth in Rages a cytie of þe Medes, whiche lyeth vpon the mount Egbathanis: Tobias sayd vnto hym, I praye the tary for me, tyl I haue told my father these thynges. Then went Tobias in, and tolde his father all. At the whiche his father marueled, and prayde, þe he wolde come in vnto hym.

Now when the angell came in, he saluted hym, and sayd: Ioye be with þe for euermore. And olde Tobias sayd: what ioye ca I haue that I sit here in darknes, & se not the lyght of heuen? The ponge man sayde vnto hym: Be of good chere. God shall helpe the shortly. And Tobias sayde vnto hym: Canst þe bring my sonne to Gabelus, vnto the cytie of Rages in Medea? And when þe comest agayne, I shall paye the thy hyre. And the Angell sayde vnto hym: I shall leade thy sonne, and bying hym to the agayne. Then Tobias answered hym: tel me I praye þe, of what houle or of what trybe art thou? The angell Raphael sayde vnto hym: I shew the thou after the hynred of an byzeling, or schest thou a guyde for thy sonne to go with hym? But that I make þe not carefull, I am Azarias the sonne of great Hananias. And Tobias answered: thou art come of a grete kynred: but I praye the, be not displeased, that I desired to knowe thy kynred. The Angell sayde vnto hym: thy sonne shal I leade forth safely, & bying hym whole to the agayne.

¶ Then

D Then answered Tobias and sayde: well go on your waye, and God be in your journey, and his Angel beare you company. So when they hadde prepared all thynges, that they wolde take with them in theyr journey, Tobias bad his father and his mother fare well, and they went on theyr waye both together. Nowe when they were gone, his mother beganne to wepe, and sayde: The staf of our age hast thou taken awaye, and sent him from vs.

Wolde God that money had neuer bene, for the whiche thou hast sent hym awaye. If we had bene content with our pouertie, this had bene great ryches vnto vs, that we saw oure sonne here. Then said Tobias vnto her wepe not, our sonne shall come to vs agayne safe and sounde, and thyne eyes shall se hym. For I truste, that the good Angell of God shall beare hym company, and orde well all the thynges that he doth: so þe shal come to vs agayne wiope. At these wordes his mother left of from wepyng, & helde her tongue.

The. vi. Chapter.

¶ Yonge Tobias is deliuered from the fysh, by the Angel. The Angel sheweth Tobias to take Sara to his wyfe.

A Tobias wente on his waye, and a dogge folowed hym, and the fyrst nyghte they abode by the water of Tigris. Then went he out to wash his fete, and beholde, there came forth an horrible fyre to deuoure hym. Of whome Tobias was afrayde, and cryed wyth a loude voyce, saying: Lorde, be cometh vpon me. And the Angel sayde vnto hym: Take hym by the gyll, and draw him to the. And he dyd so, and drew hym vpon the lande. And þe fysh beganne to leape at his fete.

Then sayde the Angell vnto hym: take out the bowels of this fyre, and as for the herte, the gall & the lyuer, kepe them by the. For these thynges are necessary and good for medecyne. Tobias dyd so, & rolled the fysh, & they toke hym wyth them in theyr journey: the resydue they salted, as muche as was sufficient for them, tyll they came to Rages a cite of the Medes. Then Tobias asked the angel, & sayde vnto hym: I praye þe brother Azaria tell me, where to are these thynges good of þe fysh that þe hast bydden me kepe.

The Angell answered hym, and sayde: If thou layst a pece of the herte vpon the coales, the smoke therof dryueth awaye all manner of euell sprytes, whether it be fro man or from womā, so þe from thenceforth the same shal come nomore vnto the. The gall is good to anoynt or to streke þe eyes with all, where as there is any blemish in them, so that they shalbe whole.

C And Tobias sayd vnto hym, where wilt thou þe remayne? The Angell answered and sayd: Here is a nye kynsma of thyn, one Raguell by name, whiche hath a daughter called Sara, & hath nether sonne nor daughter but her. All his good belongeth vnto the and thou must mary her, and therefore desyre her of her father, and he shall geue her the to wyfe. Then answered Tobias and sayde: As I vnderstande, she hath ben maryed vnto seuen husbundes, and they all are dead: and I haue herde saye, that the deuell slewe the. I am afrayed therfore, lest such thynges happen vnto me also: whych if it came to passe (seyng I am the onely sonne of my father & my mother) I woulde bypunge the in theyr age wyth sorrowe to theyr graues.

Then sayd þe Angell Raphael vnto him: heare me, & I wyll tell the what they be, of whom the deuell hath power. Namely, they that receaue mariage of such a fashion, that they shut God out from the, & fro theyr herte & geue the selues to theyr owne lust, euen as it were an horse & a mule, whych haue no vnderstandyng: vpon suche hath the deuell power. But when thou takest her, & arte come into the chamber, wythholde thy selfe from her thre dayes, and geue thy diligence vnto no thyng but vnto prayer wyth her.

And in the fyrst nyght, rolle the linen of þe fysh, & the deuell shalbe dryuen awaye. The seconde nyght shalt thou be receaued into the company of the holy patriarches. The thyrde nyght shalt thou opteyne þe blessing of God so that whole chyldren shalbe bozne of pou. After þe thyrde night take the mayden in the feare of God, and more for the desyre of chyldren, then for any fleshy lust: that in the seide of Abraham thou mayest optayne the blessing in chyldren.

The. vii. Chapter.

¶ Yonge Tobias and the Angel come to the house of Raguell. He requyret Raguelis daughter to wyfe, and obteyneth her.

Then wente they into Raguell, which receaued the ioyfully. And whē Raguell looked vpo Tobias he sayde vnto Anna his wyfe. Howe lyke is this yonge man vnto my sisters sonne? And when he had spoken this he sayd: whence be ye good brethren? They sayd: Of the trybe of Nephtali, out of the captivitye of Babilone. Then sayde Raguell vnto them: knowe ye my brother Tobias? They sayde: yee, we knowe hym wel. And when he had spoken much good of hym, þe angel sayde vnto Raguel: Tobias of whome þe askest, is this yonge mans father.

Then Raguell bowed hym selfe downe: and wepte, toke hym aboute the necke, and kyssed hym, and sayde: Gods blessinge haue thou my sonne, for thou arte the sonne of a good good vertuous man. And Anna his wyfe, & Sara his daughter wept also.

Now when they had talked togyther, Raguel had kyl a wether, and to make a feast: And whil he prayed them to syt downe to dyner, Tobias sayde: I wyll neyther eate nor drynke here this day, except thou spyst grauit my petition, and promysse me to gyue me thy daughter Sara. Whil Raguel herd this, he was astonnyed: for he knewe, what had happened vnto the other seuen men, that wnt vnto her, and he began to feare, yf it shoulde chaunce vnto hym also in lyke maner.

And whyle he stode so in doubt, and gaue the yonge man no answer, the aungell sayde vnto hym: Feare not to gyue him thy doughter, for vnto this man that feareth God, be-lyght thy daughter to wyfe, therfore myght some other haue her.

Then sayde Raguel: I doubte not, but God hath accepted my prayers and teares in thy syght: and I trust he caused you to come vnto me for the same intent, that this doughter of myne, myghte be maryed in her owne wyddow, accordyng to the lawe of Moyses.

And nowe doubte thou not, but I wyll gyue her vnto the: So he toke the ryght hande of his daughter, and gaue her in to the ryght hande of Tobias, and sayde: The God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob be with you, ioyne you togyther, and fulfill his blessinge in you. And they toke a kisse and made a wytyng of the marriage: And then made they mery, and prayled God.

And Raguel called Anna his wyfe vnto hym, and bad her prepare an other chambze, wher they brought Sara his daughter, and she wept. Then sayde he vnto her: Be of good cheere my daughter, the Lorde of heauen gyue the ioye, for the bentynesse that thou hast found.

¶ The viii. Chapter.

¶ The Aungell byndeth the deuyll. Tobias exhorteth his wyfe to praye: and they praye thye dayes before they lye togyther.

NOWE, after that they had supped, they brought the yonge man into her. Then thought Tobias vpon y wordes of the Aungell: and toke out of his bag, a peece of the leuer of the fyre, and layd it vpon the hote coles. So the Aungell Raphael toke holde of the deuyll, and sente hym awaye, and bounde hym in the wylder-nesse of the hyer Egypt. Then spake Tobias vnto the virgin, and sayde: Up Sara, let vs make our prayer vnto God today, to morrow and after to morrow: for these thye nyghtes wyll we requyte our selues with God: and when the thyrde holye nyght is past, we shal ioyne togyther in the dutye of maryage. For we are the chyldzen of holy men, and we may not come togyther, as the heythen, that knowe not God.

Then stode they by both togyther, and besought God earnestly, that he wolde pze-serue them. And Tobias sayde: O Lord God of our fathers, prayled be thou of heauen and earth, of the see, welles and founteynes, and of all thy creatures that be therein. Thou madest Adam of y * moule of the earth, and gauest hym Eua for an helper. And now Lord thou knowest that it is not bycause of voluptuousnesse, that I take this syster of myne to wyfe but onely for the loue of chyldzen, in whome thy name be blessed for euer. And Sara sayd: haue mercy vpon vs (O Lorde) haue mercye vpon vs: and let vs both come hole & sounde togyther to a good age.

And about the cocke crowngre it happened, that Raguel called his seruantes, and they went with him to make a graue. For he sayd: it is chaunced now vnto hym peradventure, as it dyd vnto the other seuen men, that went in vnto her. Now when they had made the graue, Raguel came agayne to his wyfe, and sayd vnto her: sende one of thy maydens, to loke yf he be deed, that I maye burye hym afore the lyght day: So she sent a mayden to se: whiche when she came in to the chambze, founde them hole and sounde, slepyng togyther. And so she came agayne, and broughte good tydynges. Then Raguel and Anna his wyfe prayled the Lorde, and sayde: Prayled be thou, O Lorde God of Israel, for it is not happened vnto vs, as we thought. For thou hast dealt mercifully with vs, and put a way from vs the ennemye that persecuted vs, and haste shewed mercye vnto ponder two beloued. O Lorde cause them to magnifye the more perfectyue, and to offre the sacrifice of thy prayse, and of theyr healeth: that all people may knowe, that thou onely art God in all the earth.

And immediatly, Raguel commaunded his seruantes, to fil the graue, that they had made, with earth afore it was light, and bad his wyfe prepare a feast, and to make redye all thynges that were necessarie for meate, to suche as went by the waye. He caused two fat kyne also, and foure wethers to be slayne and meates to be prepared for all his neighbours and frendes. And Raguel charged Tobias to remayne with hym two weekes. As for all the good that he had, he gaue Tobias the halfe of it, and made this wytyng, that the halfe which remayned, shoulde fall vnto Tobias after theyr deatly.

¶ The Aungell goeth to Gabriel at the desyre of Tobias: whiche desired the letter and receyued the moneye.

¶ Then

1 Then Tobias called vnto hym the Angell whom he thought to haue ben a mā, and sayd vnto hym: 2 Sother Azarias, I pray the herke vnto my wordes: 3 If I shulde geue my self to be thy seruante, I shall not deserue thy prouidence. 4 Acuerthelesse, I beseeche the, that thou wylte take the deasles & the seruantes, & go vnto Gabelus in Rages the cytie of Medes, and deliuer hym his hande wrptynge, & receyue the moneye of hym, and praye hym to come to my marpage. 5 For thou knowest thy self, that my father dooþ nombze the dayes: and if I tarye one daye to longe, he wyl be sope in his mynde. 6 Nowe seist thou howe earnestly Raguel hath requyred me, so that I cannot save hym nape.

7 Then toke Raphael foure of Raguels seruantes, and two camels, and went vnto Rages the cytie of the Medes: and when he had founde Gabelus, he gaue hym his hande wrptynge, and receyued all the moneye. 8 He tolde hym also of Tobias the sonne of Tobit howe all thynges had happened, and caused hym to come with hym to the marpage. 9 Nowe when he came in to the house of Raguel, he founde Tobias sptyng at the table: and he leaped vp, and they kyssed one an other, and Gabelus wepte, and prayesd God, and sayd: the blessinge of the God of Israel haue thou for thou arte the sonne of a ryght vertuous and iust man, and of one that feareth God, & geueth great almes. 10 And blessinge haue thy wyfe and pour elders, that ye maye se poure chyldzen, and poure chyldzen chyldzen, vnto the thyrde and fourth generacion, and poure frede be blessed of the God of Israel, whiche raygneth woulde without ende. 11 And when they all had sayd Amen: they went to þ feast, but with the feare of the Lorde held they the feast of the marpage.

The .x. Chapter.

1 Tobias, and his wyfe are sad for the taryng of theyr sonne. Raguel cometh agayne Tobias with his wyfe.

1 Nowe whyle yonge Tobias made longe taryng by reison of the marpage, his father was full of care & heuynesse, and thought: what shuld be the cause, that my sonne taryeth so longe? 2 Why shulde he be kept so long there? 3 Her adventure Gabelus is deed, and noman wyl geue hym the moneye. 4 Thus began he to be very sorowfull, he and Anna his wyfe, with hym, and began to wepe bothe togpyther, because theyr sonne was not come agayne vnto them at the daye appoynted. 5 As for hym mother, she wepte with discomfortable teares and sayd: Who is me, my sonne: Oh what ayled vs to sende the awaye into a straunge countrey, thou lyght of our eyes, thou salte of our age, thou cōfort of our lyfe, thou hope of our generacyon: Seinge all the thynges þ we haue are onely in the, we shoulde not haue sent the awaye from vs.

Then Tobias comforted her, and sayde: holde thy tonge, and be not discomforted, our sonne is whole and sounde: the man that we sent hym withall is fapthful ynough. 2 Acuerthelesse, we myght in no wyse be comforted: but dayly went out, looked about, and wente about all the stretes, wherby he thought he shulde come agayne: that (if it wer possible) we myght se hym comynge asafarre of.

But Raguel sayd vnto his sonne in lawe: 1 Stay here, and I shal sende a messenger vnto thy father Tobias, to tell hym that thou art in good health. Tobias sayde vnto hym: I am sure, that my father, and my mother counte euerye daye, and that theyr bettes are sope.

So when Raguel prayed Tobias with manye wordes, and woulde in no wyse heare hym, he deliuered Sara vnto hym, and the halfe parte of all his good, in seruantes and handemaydens, in sheepe, in Camels, and in kyne, and moche moneye, & so sent hym awaye from hym with peace and iope, and sayde: 1 The holy aungel of the Lorde be with you in your iourney, and byngge you forth safe and soude, that ye maye fynde al thynges in good case with poure elders, and that myne eyes maye se pour chyldzen asofore I dye. 2 So the elders embraced theyr daughter, kyssed her, and let her go, exhortynge her to honoure her father and mother in lawe, to loue her husbande, to rule well her household, to kepe her house in good ordze, and to shewe her selfe faultlesse.

The .xi. Chapter.

1 Yonge Tobias leuyng his wyfe and household in the mydwape, cometh befoze with the Angell. 2 The dycame of his mother lokinge after her sonne. 3 He is fully receyued of his father and mother. 4 Sara cometh frum dayes after.

1 As they now were goinge homeward agayne, vpon the .xi. daye, they came to Charra, whiche lyeth in the halfe wape towarde Ninus. And the Angell sayd: 2 Brother Tobias, thou knowest howe thou hast left thy father: therfore if it please the, we two wyl go befoze, and let the household with thy wyfe and the cattell come softe and lapye after vs. 3 And when Tobias was content that they shoulde goo befoze, Raphael sayde vnto hym: 4 Take of the gaulle of the fylthe with the, for it shal be necessarye. 5 So Tobias tooke of the gaulle, and they wente theyr waye. 6 But Anna the mother of Tobias sat daylye by the wape syde vpon the top of an hyll, from whence she myght se safte aboute her. 7 And whyle she was wapyng, she, ther for his commynge, he looked a farre of and anon she perceyued her sonne commynge, and ranne and tolde her husbande, sayinge: Beholde, thy sonne commeth. And Raphael said vnto Tobias: As soone as thou comest into the house, immediatly worship the Lord thy God, and gyue thanks vnto him: the go to thy father, and kysse hym, and stryke his eyes ouer with the gall of the fysh, that thou hast brought with the. For be sure, that his eyes shall straggle wape be opened, and thy father shall see the lycht of heauen, and shall reioyce at the syght of the. Then the dog that had ben with them in theyr iourney, ranne be fore, and came as a messenger, and wagged his tayle for gladnesse.

So the blynde father arose, and began to run and stombled with his feete, and gaue allemant his hande, ran to mete his sonne, re ceyued hym, and kysed hym, he and his wyfe and they beganne to wepe for ioye.

Now when they had worshipped & thanked God, they sat downe. Then toke Tobias of the fyshes gall, & anoynted his fathers eyes: and taryed halfe an houre, and then began to see out of his eyes, lyke as it had ben the wyte (shyn) of an egge: which Tobia toke, and dyed from his eyes: and imme diatly he receyued his syght.

Then they prayled God, he and his wyfe and all they that knew hym. And Tobias said: O Lord God of Israel, I giue & prayse and thanks, for thou hast chastened me, and made me hole. And lo, now we do I see my sonne Tobias. After seuen dayes came Sara his wyfe also hole and sounde with al the householde and cattell, with camels & moche more of his wyues, and with the moneye that he had receyued of Gabrias, and he told his father and his mother all the benefytes, which God had done for hym, by the ma that was hym. And also and Sabach Tobias sy ster comys came, and were glad, and reioyced with hym, by reason of al the good that God had shewed vnto him. And so for the space of seuen dayes they made mery, and were ryght full of merychone.

The xii. Chapter.

Now Tobias reckened by vnto his father the pira: uers that the Angell dyd hym. He offerd vnto the Angell halfe the goodes that he brought with hym.

Then Tobias called his sonne vn to him and sayd: What may we gyue this holpe man, that went with the? Tobias answered his father, and sayd: Father, what shal we gyue hym? Or what thing shal we gyue him? he hath bene my wyfe, and brought me safe agayne: he recey ued the moneye fro Gabrias, he caused me to get my wyfe, he dyed for euyl spyrite from her he hath ben an occasyon of gladnesse to her fa ther and mother: he deliuered me, that I was not deuoured of the fysh, he hath made the to see the lycht of heauen, yea, we all haue recey ued great good of hym. How shulde we wor shely deserve these thinges vnto hym? But I pray the my father, that thou wylte desyre hym, yf haply he wyl vouchsafe, to take with hym the halfe of all that we haue dyntre.

So the father and the sonne called hym, toke hym aspyde, and beganne to praye hym, that he wold be content to take in good worth the halfe parte of all that they had brought.
Then sayde he secretly vnto them. Prayse ye the God of heauen, and gyue thanks vnto hym before all men lyuyng, for he hath shew ed his mercy vnto vs. It is good to hyde & kynges secrete, but to shewe and to prayse & workes of God, it is an honourable thyng.
Prayer is good with fastyng, and mercy is better then to hoorde by treasures of golde.
For mercy deliuereth fro death, clenseth syn, and causeth to fynde euerlastyng lyfe. But they that do synne and vnrightheousnesse, are the enemyes of theyr owne soule.

Wherfore I tell you the trueth, and wyl hyde nothyng from you. When thou praye dest with teares, and burydest the deyd, and ledest thy byner, and hydest the deyd in thy house vpon the daye tyme, that thou myght test bury the in the night: I offered thy prayer before the Lord. And because thou wast ac cepte and beloued of God, it was necessarie, that temptation shoulde trye the. And now hath the Lord sent me to heale the and to de liuer Sara thy sonnes wyfe from the euyl spyrite. For I am Raphael an Angell, one of the seven that stande before God.

When they herde this, they were sore a frayed, and trembled, and fell downe vpon theyr faces vnto the ground. Then sayde & Angel: Peace be wyth you, feare not. Where as I haue bene wyth you, it is the wyll of God: gyue prayse and thanks vnto hym.

Now thou thought that I dyd eat and drinke wyth you, but I vse meate that is inuisible, and drinke that can not be sene of men.

Nowe therfore is the tyme that I must turne agayne vnto hym, that sent me: but be ye thankfull vnto God, and tell out all his wonderous workes.

And when he had spoken those wordes, he was taken awaye out of theyr syght, so that they sawe hym nomore. Then fell they downe flat vpon theyr faces, by the space of three houres, and prayled God: when they a roose vp, they tolde all his wonderous wor kes.

The xiii. Chapter.

Tobias the eldier gyue thanks vnto God. Then

A he olde Tobias opened his mouth, & prayes the Lorde, and sayde: Greate arte thou, O Lorde for evermore, and thy kyngdome world without ende: for thou scourgest and brailest, thou ledest vnto hell, and byngest oute agayne: and there is none that maye escape thyne hande. O gyue thankes vnto the Lorde, ye chyldren of Israel, and prayse hym in the syght of the hepten. For amonge the hepten which knowe hym not hath he scattered you, to thyntent that ye shuld shewe forth his maruaylous workes, & cause them for to knowe, that there is none other God almyghty but he. He that chasteneth vs for our myddes, and for his owne mercy sake shall he saue vs.

25 Consydre then, how he hath dealte with you, and prayse hym with feare and drede, & magnifye the euerlastyng kyng in youre workes. I wyl prayse hym euen in the lande of my captiuitie, for he hath shewed his maiestie vnto a synfull people. Turne you therefore O ye synners, and do righteounesse before God, and be ye sure, that he wyl shewe his mercye vpon you. As for me, & my soule, we wyl reioyse in God. O prayse the Lorde all ye his chosen, holde yf dayes of gladnesse, and be thankfull vnto him. O Ierusalem thou cytie of God, the Lorde hath punished the for the workes of thyne owne handes. O prayse the Lorde in thy good thynges, & gyue thankes to the euerlastyng God, that he maye buyde vp his tabernacle agayne in the, that he maye call agayne vnto the, all suche as be in captiuitie, and that thou mayest haue ioye for evermore. With a fayre lyght shalt thou shyne, and all the endes of the world shal honour the. The people shall come vnto the for farre, they shal byngge gyftes, and worshyp the Lorde in the, and the land shal they haue for a Sanctuarie, for they shal call vpon the great name in the.

Cursed shall they be that despyse the, and all that blasphemie yf, shalbe condemned: but blessed shall they be yf buyde the vp. As for the, thou shalt reioyse in thy chyldren, for they all shalbe blessed, and gathered togyther vnto the Lorde. Blessed are they all that loue the and that be glad of thy peace. Prayse thou the Lorde, O my soule, for yf Lorde oure God hath deliuered his cytie Ierusalem from all her troubles. I wyl counte my selfe happye, yf my seed remaine to se the clearnesse of Ierusalem.

The gates of Ierusalem shalbe buylded with Sapphyre, and Smaragde, and all the compasse of her walles with precious stones. Al her stretes shalbe paved with whyte marble stoon, and in all stretes shal Alleys be longe. Prayed be the Lorde, which hath exalted her, that his kyngdome maye be vpon her for evermore. Amen. And so Tobias made an ende of his talkyng.

The xliii. Chapter.

Tobias proph. of the destruction of Ninus. His sonne returneth to Raguel after the death of his father and mother.

And after that Tobias had gotten his syght agayne, he lyued. xlii. yeres, and sawe his chyldren chyldren. Now whē he was, C. and. ii. yere olde, he dyed: and was buryed honourably in Ninus. For when he was syre and fyfthe yeres of age he lost the syght of his eyes, and when he was thre score yere olde, he gat his syght agayne. The respydue of his lyfe led he in ioye, and increased well in yf feare of God, and departed in peace.

But in the houre of his death he called vnto hym his sonne Tobias, and seuen yonge spryngaldes his sonnes chyldren, and sayde vnto them: The destruction of Ninus is at hande, for yf worde of the Lorde cannot fayle: and oure byrthen that are scattered out of the lande of Israel, shall come thither agayne. And the hole lande of it that hath ben waste, shalbe fylled: and the house of God that was bynt in it, shalbe buylded agayne: & al suche as feare God, shall returne thither: the hepten also shall forsake their ydols, and come to Ierusalem, & dwell there, and all the kynges of the earth shalbe glad of her, and worshyp the Lorde God of Israel.

And therefore my chyldren, heare your father: Serue the Lorde in the truthe, seeke after his wyl, and do the thyng that pleaseth hym. Command your chyldren that they do right: gyue almes: be myndfyll of God, and euer to be thankfull vnto hym in truthe, and with all theyr power: heare me now therefore my chyldren, and abyde not here: but in what dape so euer ye haue buryed youre mother besyde me, get you from hence. For I fele that the wychednesse of it shall byngge it to destruction and ende.

After the death of his mother, Tobias departed awaye from Ninus, with his wyfe & chyldren, and with his chyldres chyldren, & came agayne to his father & mother in lahe, and founde them hole and in a good age, and toke the care of the. And he closed their eyes, and was he yf vnto Raguel's goodes, & sawe the fyfth generacio, and his chyldres chyldren. And when he was. xxi. yere of age, he dyed in the feare of the Lorde, and his kynfolkes buryed hym. And all his posteritie continued in a good lyfe, and holy conuersacion: so that they were loued and accepted bothe of God, and men: and of all the people of the lande.

The ende of the booke of Tobias.

The booke of Judith.

The first Chapter.

The beginning of the book of Judith. The beginning of Nabuchodonosor against Spharath. The name of Nabuchodonosor is despised.

Alpharath the kynge of the Medes subdued manie people vnto his dominion, & buylded a noble stronge ctyte, which he called Egbathanis: The walles of it made he of free stone, foure squared, seuentie cubites hye, & thre type cubytes brode. He made there vpon an hundred cubytes hye. He vpon the foure corners euery syde was twenty fote brode. He made the portes in the mydd, lyke as the towres. This kynge trauayled in his myghty hooste, and in his gloryng charrettes.

So in the welueth yere of his raygne, it happened, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of the Assyrians (which reigned in the great yere of Ninue) fought agaynst alpharath, and ouercame hym in the greates felde called Egi, besyde Euphrates and Tigris, and led him in the felde of Erioth the kynge of the Elphes.

Then was the kyngdome of Nabuchodonosor exalted, and his heet was lyfte vp: and he went vnto all them that dwelte in Calicea, in Damascus, in Libanus, and vnto the hept that dwelt in Carmel and Cedar, and to the that dwelt in Galile in the greates felde of Chelou, to all them that dwelt in Samaria, and beyonde the water of Iordane vnto Iudaea and the hole lande of Jesse, vnto the mountaynes of Ethiopia. Vnto all these he sent messengers. But they all wone could wolde not agree vnto hym, and sent the messengers agayne emptye, and put them away without honour. Then Nabuchodonosor the kynge toke indignacion at all those lātes, and swore by his throne, and by his kyngdome, that he wolde be auenged of all those ctytes.

The ii. Chapter.

Holofernes in sent of Nabuchodonosor to subdue all the world. The preparation and pursure of Holofernes.

In the thirtenth yere of king Nabuchodonosor, vpo the xiii. day of the first mooneth, it was deuysed in the court of Nabuchodonosor, & of the Assyrians, that he wold defende himselfe. So he called vnto hym all the eliers, all his captaynes, and men of war, and shewed them his secreete counsaile, and tolde them that his purpose was, to bring the hole earth vnder his dominion. Nowe when they were all content with this saying, Nabuchodonosor the kynge called Holofernes & chefe captayne of his warres, and sayd vnto hym: Go thy waye forth agaynst all the kyngdomes of the west, and specially agaynst those that haue despyled my comalidement. Thou shalt spare no realme, all stronge ctytes shalt thou bringe in subiection vnto me.

Then Holofernes called together all the captaynes and rulers of all the power in Assiria, & mustred the souldyers vnto the hoost (lyke as the kynge commaunded hym) namely an hundred and twenty thousande sygh-tinge men vpon foote, and twelue thousande archers vpon horsebacke. All his ordinaunce sente he before with an innumerable multitude of camels, so that the hoost was wel prouyded for with oren, and small cattell, and withoute nombre. He caused corne to be prepared out of all Syria for his hoost. Moche golde and syluer also toke he out of the kynges house. So he toke his iourney, he and all his hoost with charrettes, horsemen, and archers, of whō there were so manye, that they couered the ground of the lande, lyke the grete hoppers.

And when he was gone past the borders of the Assyrians, he came towarde the greates mountaynes of Ange, which lye vpon y left side of Celicia: & so he went vp into all they castels, and wanne euery stronge holde. As for the welchie citie of Belotus, he brake it downe, and spoyled all the chyldren of Charis and the Ismaelites, whiche laye towarde the wylbernesse, and vpon the South syde of the lande of Chelou. He wet ouer Euphrates also, and cam into Mesopotamia, and brake downe all the hye ctytes that were there, fro the broke of Hambr to yll a man come to the see: and he tooke the borders in from Celicia, vnto y coostes of Iaphet towarde y South: he caried awaye all the Adianites, & spoyled all they goodes, & whosoener withstode hym, he slewe them with the swerde. After this he went downe into the felde of Damascus in the tyme of haruest, and brent vp all y corne and all the trees, and caused the vynes to be cut downe. And the feare of hym fel vpo all them that dwelt in the earth.

The iii. Chapter.

Holofernes become wyllynge subject to Holofernes. The synne and crueltie of hym.

So the kynges and princes of all ctytes and landes sent they Embassadors: namely they of Syria, and Mesopotamia, Syria, Sobal: and Lybia and Celicia, whiche came to Holofernes, and sayd: Let thy wyath cease towarde vs: For vs: It is better for vs to serue þ great kynge Nabuchodonozor with oure lyues, and to be subiecte vnto the then that we shoulde dye, & be slayne: and receyue great hurte. All oure cyties and possessyons, all mountaynes and hilles, all felde, great and smal cattel, shepe gootes, hoxses and camels, all our goodes & householdes, be in thy power, vnder thy subiection be it al togyther. We our selues also & oure chyldzen wyll be thyne owne, come vnto vs a peaceable lord, and vse our seruice at thy pleasure.

B Then came Holofernes downe from the mountaynes with hoxsamen, and greate power, and coquered all stronge defended cities and all that dwelt in the lande. And out of al cyties he toke ströge men, and suche as were mete for the warre, to helpe hym. Ther came suche a feare also vpon those countreies, that the indwellers of all the cyties, the princes & rulers, and the people togyther went forth to mete hym as he came, and receyued hym honourably with garlandes and torches, with daunces, tabrettes and pypes.

C Heretofore, though they dyd this, yet myght they not swage his rigozous stomak: but he destroyed theyr cities, & hewed downe theyr wooddes. For Nabuchodonozor the kynge had commaunded hym that he shoulde roote oute all the goddes of the lande: to the intent that he onely myght be called and taken for the god of the nations whiche Holofernes with his power brought vnder hym. So wot he thozow Syria Sobal, & thozow all Appamia, and all Mesopotamia, & came to the Iudumans, in the lande of Sabaa, and Septopol, and toke theyr cyties and remayned there thyrtye dayes, wherin he caused all the hole multitude of his hooste to be gathered togyther.

The .iiii. Chapter.

¶ Achior requyeth helpe of God, agaynst Holofernes. They fast and praye.

When the chyldzen of Israel þ dwelt in Jewry herd this, they were sore afrayed of hym. There came suche tremblyng also and feare vpon the that they sorowed he shoulde doo vnto the cite of Ierusalem, and the temple of the Lorde, as he had done to other cyties and theyr temples. So they sent into all Samaria round about vnto Jericho, toke in and occupped all þ toppes of þ mountaynes, & made fast the townes with walles, and prepared coyne for them agaynst the battayle.

Eliachim also the preeste wrote vnto all them that dwelt towarde Eldozelon (whiche lyeth ouer agaynst þ greate felde by Dorham) and vnto al those by whome men myght haue passage vnto them, þ they shoulde take in the wayes of the mountaynes, whereby there myght be any waye and passage to Ierusalem. And that they shoulde holde diligent watche where any strapte was betwixte the mountaynes. And the chyldzen of Israel dyd as Eliachim the preeste of the Lorde had commaunded them. And all the people cryed earnestly, and hūbled theyr soules with fastynges and pzaers, they and theyr wyues. The preestes put on heerde clothes, and layed the yonge babes befoze the temple of the Lorde, and couered the aulter of the Lorde with an heerde cloth. And w one accorde they cryed vnto the Lorde God of Israel, that their chyldzen shoulde not be gyuen into a pray, & theyr wyues into a spoule, that theyr cyties shoulde not be layed waste, & that theyr Sanctuarie shoulde not be vnhalowed, and so they to be a shame and rebuke vnto the heythens.

The Eliachim the hye preeste of the Lorde went rounde about all Israel: and spake vnto them, sayinge: Be ye sure, that the Lorde wyll heare your petitions, yf ye cōtinue fast in fastynges and pzaers in the syght of the Lorde. Remembre Moyses þ seruant of the Lorde, which ouerthrew the Amalekites (that trusted in theyr myght and power, in theyr hoost, in theyr spydes, in theyr charrettes and hoxsamen) not with weapons, but with holy pzaers. Euen so shal all the cōtymes of Israel be, yf ye cōtinue in this work that ye haue begon. So vpon this exhortacion they cōtinue in prayer befoze the Lorde: In so moche that they which offred burnt sacrificies vnto the Lorde, offred the offringes vnto the Lorde, beinge arayed in heerde clothes, and had alshes vpon theyr beedes. And they all besought God from theyr hole heart, that he wold vplite his people of Israel.

The .v. Chapter.

¶ Holofernes is discontent with the Jewes. Achior cometh vnto Holofernes the marquis of God come vnto the Jewes: for whiche thing the rulers vnder Holofernes were very angry with hym.

Ad worde came to Holofernes þ ppynce of the warre of the Assyrians, that the chyldzen of Israel prepared them selues to makereystaunce, & how they had stopped the wayes betwixte the mountaynes. Then was he exceeding wroth, and called all the priees of Moab, and þ captaynes of Ammon, & sayd vnto them. Tel me, what people is this, that kepeth in the mountaynes? What maner of cytis are they? What is their power? What maner of hoost haue they? What is theyr captayne? And why doo they despyse vs (more then all those that dwell in the East) and come not forth to mete vs, that they myght receyue vs with peace? Then Achior the capitayne of all the Ammonites answered, and sayde: Sy, yf it please the to heare hate, I will tell the truth before the, concerning this people that dwell in the mountaynes, and there shall no lyfe goo oute of my mouth.

This people is of the generacion of the Caldees, they dwelt fyrst in Mesopotamia, but they wold not folow the goddes of theyr fathers that were in þe lande of the Caldees, and so forsoke they the custome of theyr forefathers (which had many goddes) and worshipped one God, that made heauen & earth: which also commaunded them, that they shuld go from thence, and dwell at Haran. Nowe, when there came a dearth into the hole lande, they went downe to Egypte, and there they dwelt foure hundred yeres, in the whiche they multiplied greatlye, that theyr booste myght not be nombred. And when the kynge of Egypt oppressed them, and subdued them in buydyng of bysyties with makynge of claye and brycke, they cryed vnto God theyr Lozde, which punished þe hole land of Egypt with dyuers plagues.

Now when the kynge of Egypt let them go, theyr waye, and the plage ceased, and theyr lordes after them, to take them & to bryng them agayne into his seruyce, while they were in waye, the God of heauen opened þe sea, so that the waters stode fast vpon bothe sides as a wall, and these went thow we be become of the see by the God. In the which place when an innumerable people of þe Egyptians folowed vpo them, they were so ouerwhelmed with the waters: that there remayned not one to tell them that came after, how it happened. So when this people was past thow we the red see, they came into þe wilderness of mount Synai, where neuer man myght dwell afoze, and where the son of man had neuer rested. There were the bytter waters made swete for them, that they myght drinke, and for the peres had they meate fro heauen. Wheresoeuer they went (without bowe and arrow, without buckler or sword) theyr God fought for them, and caused them to haue the victorye. Yea, no man was hable to hurt this people, except it were, that they departed vnfaithfully from the worshiping of the Lozde theyr god. But as ofte as they worshipped any other helpe theyr God, he sent them oute to be spoyled, to be slayne, & to be put to confusion. Neuerthelesse, as ofte as they were forþ for theyr departynge from the worship of theyr God, the same God of heauen gaue them power and strength to wende theyr enemyes.

Moreouer, they slue the kynge of the Canaanites, Jebusites, where theyr, herthytes, Euphrates, and Amozites, & all the myghty in helebion, and tooke theyr landes and cities in posseltyon: and so longe as they synned not in the sight of theyr God, it went wel with them, for their God hateth vnryghtousnesse. For in tymes past when they went out of the waye which God had gyuen the, that they shoulde walke in it, they were destroyed in dyuers battayles of many nacions: and many of them were carryed awaye prisioners vnto a straunge countrey. But now lately they haue turned the selues agayne vnto þe Lozde theyr God, and are come togyther agayne, out of the countreyes where they were scattered abroode: and thus haue they conquered these mountaynes, and dwell therein: and as for Jerusalem where the Sanctuarie is, they haue it agayne in posseltyon.

And therfore my lozde, make diligent inquisition, if this people haue doone wyckednesse in the sight of theyr God, then let vs go vpo agaynst them, for doubtlesse theyr God shall deliuer them into thy handes, and subdue them vnto thy power: But if this people haue not displeased theyr God, we shal not be hable to withstand them, for theyr God shal defende them: and so shal we be a shame to all the world.

Nowe when Achior had spoken out these wordes, all the great me of Holofernes were wroth, and thought to slaye hym, and sayde one to an other: What is he this, which dare saye, that the chyldre of Israel are hable to withstand Nabuchodonozor the kynge, and his host: where as they are an vnweapened people without strength, or vnderstandynge of the fentes of warre? That Achior therfore maye knowe that he hath disceyued vs, we will goo vpo into the mountaynes: when the myghty men of them are taken, he also shall be fychte with the swearde, that all people maye knowe, that Nabuchodonozor is the god of the earth, and that there is none other without hym.

The vi. Chapter.

Achior is carryed into the handes of the Hebrews by Holofernes. He is tyed to a tree, but is loosed of the Hebrews. The prayer of the people. Achior is chosen of the Hebrews.

When they had left of speakynge Holofernes toke soze indignacion, and sayd vnto Achior: Forsomuch as thou hast prophesied vnto vs, sayynge: that the people of Israel shall be defended of theyr God, I will shewe the, that there is no god but Nabuchodonozor. Yea, when we slaye them all as one man, thou also shalt perishe with them thow we the sweerde of the Assyrians, & al Israel shalbe destroyed with the, and the thou shalt fele, that Nabuchodonozor is the lozde of the whole earth. Then shall the sweerde of my knyghthode go thow we thy sydes, and thou shalt fal downe styghte amonge the wounded of Israel, and shalt shalt not come to thy selfe agayne, but be utterly destroyed with them. But yf thou thinkest thy prophesye to be true, why dost thou then chaunge thy colour? why arte thou afrayed? Thyngest thou that my wordes are not able to be perfourmed? But that thou mayest know that thou shalt see these thynges with them, beholde, fro this houre forth wyll I sende the vnto ponder people, & when the punishmente of my swerde (whiche they haue worthely deserved) falleth vpon them, thou mayest be punished with them.

B So Holofernes commaunded his seruantes to take Achior, & to carpe hym vnto Bethulia, and to deliuer hym into the handes of the chyldren of Israel. Then Holofernes seruantes toke hym, and went thowow þe playne felde. But when they diewe nyghte vnto the mountaynes, the syngers casters came out agaynst them. Neuerthelesse, they gat them awaye by the syde of the mountayne, and bound Achior hande and foote to a tree, and so lefte hym bounde with wythes, & tourned agayne vnto theyr lord.

Now withstanding, the chyldren of Israel went downe from Bethulia came vnto him looked hym, brought hym into Bethulia, set hym in the myddest of the people, and asked hym what the matter was, that the Assyrians had left hym bounde.

C Othias the sonne of Micha of the trybe of Symeon, & Charnim (whiche is also called Gothoniell) were the principall rulers at the same tyme. Nowe when Achior stode in the myddest of the Senatours, and befoze them all he tolde them, what answer he gaue Holofernes to the thyng that he asked him, and howe Holofernes people wolde haue slayne hym for so sayinge: and how Holofernes him selfe was worth, and commaunded hym for the same cause to be deliuered vnto the Israelites: that when he overcame the chyldren of Israel, he myght commaunde Achior also to be put to death with dyuers tormentes, because he sayde: the God of heauen is theyr defender. And whē Achior had playnely told

D out all these thynges, all þe people fell downe vpon theyr faces, prayyng the Lorde, and poured out theyr prayers togyther vnto the Lorde, with a generall complaynte and wepyng, and sayd: O Lorde God of heauē and of earth, behold theyr pryde: & loke vpon our lowlynesse, & consydre how it standeth with thy saynetes, and make it to be knowen, that thou forsakest not those, whiche holde them fast by the, and how that thou bringest them lowe that presume of them selues, and make theyr boost of theyr owne strength. So whē the wepyng and prayer of the people (whiche they had made the hole dape longe) was ended, they comforted Achior, sayinge: The God of our fathers, whose power & strength thou hast prayd, shall so rewarde the, that thou shalt rather see theyr destruction. When the Lord our God then shall gyue his seruantes this lybertie: God be alio wth amonge vs: so that yf it please þe, thou with all thyne mayest dwell with vs.

Now when Othias had ended the consayle he toke hym into his house, and made a great supper, called the elders to it: and so they refreshed them selues after the fastyng. And afterwarde was all þe people called togyther which made theyr prayers al the nyght long in the congregacion, and besought the God of Israel for helpe.

The vii. Chapter.

Bethulia is besieged of Holofernes. The people request helpe of God. They of Bethulia doubt whether the ctye for want of water. The prayers of þe people with teares and lamentation.

The next dape Holofernes commaunded his boost to go vp agaynst Bethulia. There was an hundred and twenty thousand fighting men on fote. & xxi. horsemen, besyde the preparyng of them that were wonne: and came to them on every syde out of the countreyes and ctyes which he had taken. All these prepared them selues vnto the battayle agaynst þe Israelites, and came on by the hylly syde, vnto the toppes that looketh ouer agaynst Dothaim, from the place which is called Belma, vnto Chelmo that lyeth towardes Eszraelon.

Now, when the chyldren of Israel sawe so great a multitude of the Assyrians, they fel downe flat vpon the ground, drawed almes vpon their heedes, and prayed w one accord, that the God of Israel wolde shewe his mercye vpon his people. And so they toke theyr weapons, and sat betwixte the mountaynes in the narowe place, and kept the waye dape and nyght. But whyle Holofernes was goinge aboute, he founde the water springe, whiche from the South syde was conueyed into the ctye by a condyte: this commaunded he to be directe an other waye, & to cut theyr condyte in sondre. There were welles also not farre from the walles, whiche they used secretly, moze for pleasure then for necessitie.

C He went the Ammonites and the Arabites vnto Holofernes, & sayde: The chyldren of Israel truste neyther in speare nor arrowe, but haue taken in, and kepe the mountaynes and hylles. That þe mayest overcome them, therfore without þe strykyng of any battayle set men to kepe the welles, that they drawe no water out of them: so shalt thou destroye the without swerde, or at the leest they shall be so feeble, that they must be fayne to gyue ouer the ctye, whiche they thynke not habile to be wonne: for so moche, as it lyeth in the mountaynes

These wordes pleased Holofernes well: all his men of warre, and he set an watch at euery wel round about.

And when this watch had endured twety dayes, & Cisternes & all that had water, saying they dwelt in the cytie of Bethulia, so that in the whole Cytie they had not drynke for one daye, for y^e people had water from them daylye in a measure. Then came men and women, yonge personnes & chyldren all vnto Olias, & sayd all wth one voyce: God be iudge betwixte vs and the, for thou hast dealt euill wth vs: thou wouldeste not live peaceably wth the kynge of the Assyrians, therefore hath God solde vs in theyr handes, & there is no man to helpe vs where we are brought downe before theyr eyes in this and great destruccion. Therefore gathered they together all the people that be in y^e cytie, that we maye all yelde our selues wyllyngly vnto y^e people of Holofernes, for better is that we be captiue and praye the lode wth our lyues, then to be slayne and died, and to be laughed to scoorne & shamed among men, when we se our wyues & chyldren before our eyes. We take heauen & earth to daye to record, and the God of our fathers (which punyssheth vs accordyng to the synne of oure synnes) and geue you advice, y^e geue v^{nto} the cytie nowe vnto the people of Holofernes hoste, that our ende maye be wth the swerde, whiche els shoulde haue longe, for wante of water and fynell.

When they had spoken out these wordes, there was a great weeping & howling in the cytie, and y^e of euery man, & they cryed an whole houre longe vnto god wth teares, saying: we haue synned wth our fathers, we haue done amysse, we haue delt wth the. Thou y^e art gracious, haue mercy v^{nto} us, punyssh our vnrightheousnesse, wth thy rodde & scourge, and geue not thole ouer to the vnto a people which know thee, lest they saye amonge the heathen:
The Lord is God.

And when they were so wery wth this weepyng, that they helde theyr eyes, Olias stode v^{nto} wth watrye eyes, and sayd: Take good hertes vnto you, & be of good cheare, and in wth ye pet these fyue dayes for mercye of the Lorde: peradventure he shal put away his indignacion, and geue gloire vnto hys name.

But yf he helpe vs not when these dayes are paste, we shall do as ye haue sayd.

The viii. Chapter.

Of the vertuous woman Judith: whiche repouerted the people because they tempted the Lorde. She also moueth to courage & bidden the people, and sheweth her example to the churche.

As it happened when these wor-des came to the eares of Judith a wyddowe, which was the doughter of Merari, the sonne of Idor, the sonne of Joseph, the sonne of Olla, the sonne of Elai, the sonne of Jammor, the sonne of Jedron, the sonne of Raphoim, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Welchia, the sonne of Euam, & sonne of Rathania, the sonne of Salathiel, the sonne of Symeon, the sonne of Ruben. And her husbande was called Manasses, whiche dyed in the dayes of the barly harvest. For whyle he was buyldyng the shewes together in y^e feilde the heate came vpon hys heade, and he dyed at Bethulia his cytie, and there was he buryed helpe his fathers.

Nowe was Judith his desololate wyddowe thre yeres & fyve monethes. And in the hyer partes of her house, she made her self a pryue chambre, where she dwelte, beyng closed in wth her maydens. She ware a smock of heare and fasted all the dayes of her lyfe, except the Sabbotthes, and newe moones: and the solemne dayes that the people of Israel kept.
She was a very fayre and bewtyful person.
Her husbando also had left her great ryches, a plenteous housholde, greate vnnoucabie possessions and many catell. This Judith was a woman of a very good reporte wth euery one, for she feared the Lorde greatlye, and there was no body y^e spake an euill word of her.

When this Judith hearde, howe Olias had promysed the people, that after the fyfte daye he wolde geue v^{nto} the cytie vnto the Assyrians, she sent for the elders Chamby and Charmy, and whē they came to her, she sayd what thyng is this, wherein Olias hath consented, that yf God helpe not wthin fyue dayes, he wyl geue ouer the Cytie to the Assyrians: What are ye, that ye tempte the Lorde? This deuice oytayneth no mercye of God, but prouoketh hym to wth and dyspleasure. Wyl ye let the mercye of the Lorde a tyme, and appoynte hym a daye after yow wylle?

Nevertheless, for so much as the Lorde is pacient, let vs rather repent, pouerage out teares, and beseeching hym of grace. For god sheweth not as a man, neyther wyl he be prouoked vnto wth as the children of men.
And therefore lette vs hertely fall downe before hym, and serue hym with a meke spere, and wth weeping eyes saye vnto the Lorde, that he deale wth vs accordyng to hys owne wylle and mercye: that lyke as our hert is nowe vexed, and broughte lowe thow the pryde of the, it maye be so comforted thow owne his grace: in so much as we shewe not the synnes of oure fathers, whiche forsoke theyr God, and worshipped other goddes: Wdd for

for the whiche synne they perished with the sword, were spoiled and brought to shame of all theyr enemyes. As for vs we knowe none other God but only hym, for whose cause let vs tary with mekenesse. He shall requyre and make inquisition for oure bloude, from the betraycons of our enemyes: he shall byrninge downe all the heathen, that rise vp against vs, & put them to dishonoure, euen the Lorde our God.

D Therefore deare brethren, sayng ye are the honorable and elders in y^e people of God, vnto whome all the people haue respect, & vpon whom the lyfe of the people standeth, lyfe vp theyr hertes with your exhortacyō that they maye call to remembraunce. howe our fathers also in tymes past were tempted, that they myght be proued, yf they worshypped theyr God a ryght. They ought to remembre, howe our father Abraham beyng tempted, and tryed thowow many tribulacions, was found a louer and frende of God. So was Isaac, so was Jacob, so was Moses, and all they that pleased God, being tryed thowow many troubles, were founde stedfast in fayth. Agayne, they that receaued not theyr temptacions wth the feare of God, but put them selues forth wth vnpatyency and murmuring agaynst God, perished of the destroyer, & were slayne of serpentis. And therefore shulde not we undertake to be auenged, for the thyng y^e is don vnto vs, but consydre, that all these punishmentes are farre lesse then our synnes and meritedes. Receyvyng also that this correccion cometh vnto vs (as to the seruantes of God) for amendement, and not for our destruction.

E Then sayde Olias & the elders vnto Judith: All that thou speakest, is true, and no man can reproue thy wordes. Praye thou for vs nowe therefore vnto God, for thou art an holy woman, and fearest God. And Judith sayde vnto them: Saying, ye knowe that my wordes are of God, then proue my counsel & deapce, yf it be of God: & beseech god y^e he wyl byrning my counsel to good ende.

Thus haue I deuyled: Ye shal stand this nyght before the porte, and I wyl go forth wth Abys my mayden. Praye ye therefore vnto God, that he wyl graciously remembre hys people of Israel wthin fyue dayes, as ye haue sayde. As for the thyng that I go inhande withall, aske ye no questyons of it, tyl I open it vnto you my selfe: do ye nothing elles but praye vnto the Lorde your God for me. Then Olias the bypnce of the people of Iuda sayd vnto her: Go thy way in peace the Lorde be with the, that we maye be auenged of our enemyes. And so they went from her agayne.

The ix. Chapter.

The prayer of Judith for the victorie.

Nowe when they were gone, they waye, Judith went in to her closet, put on an heary smocke, strewed ashen vpon her heade, fell downe before the Lorde, and cryed vnto hym, saying: O Lorde God of my father * Symeon, whiche gauest hym a swerde for a defence agaynst the enemyes that vsed violence and wilfulnesse, and that ransyshed the byrgyne, and put her to dishonour. Thou that gauest theyr wyues into a praye, and theyr daughters into captiuitie, and all theyr praye for a spoule vnto thy seruantes, which haue a zeale vnto the: helpe me wyddowe, O Lorde my God, I beseeche the. For thou hast done all thynges from the begynnynge: and loke what thou hast taken in hande & deuyled, it came euer to passe. For all thy wayes are prepared, & thy iudgements are doone in thy euerylastynge knowelege. O looke nowe vpon the armyes of the Assyrians, lyke as it was thy pleasure sometyme to loke vpon y^e hooft of the Egyptians, when they beyng weapened, persecuted thy seruantes, and put theyr trust in theyr charrettes, horsemen, & in the multitude of theyr me of war. But thou lookedst vpon theyr hooft, casting a thyck darcknes before them: and when they came in to the depe, the waters ouerwhelmed them.

Euen so Lorde let it go with the, that is trust in the power & multitude of theyr men of war, in theyr charrettes, arrowes and speers, and knowe not that thou only arte our God, whiche destroyest warres from the begynnynge, and that thou arte the Lorde. O lyft vp thyne arme nowe, lyke as euer from the begynnynge, and in thy power byrnyng theyr power to nought: cause theyr myght to fall in thy wrath. They make theyr booke, y^e they wyl vnhalowe & desyle thy Sanctuary and to wast the Tabernacle of thy name, & to cast downe y^e house of thyne altier wth theyr swerde. Wyng to passe (O Lorde) y^e the pryde of the enemye maye be cutte downe wth his owne swerde, that he maye be taken wth the snare of hys eyes in me, and that y^e mayest synke hym wth the lppes of my loue. O geue me a stedfast mynde, that I maye bespye hym and his strength, & that I may destroye hym.

Thys shal byrnyng thy name an euerylastynge remembraunce, yf the hand of a woman ouerthrywe hym. For thy power (O Lorde) standeth not in the power of men, neither hath y^e any pleasure in y^e strenght of horses. There was neuer proude personne y^e pleased the, but in the prayer of the humble & meke hath thy pleasure bene euermore.

O thou God of the heauens, thou maker of the waters, and Lorde of all creatures,

me poore woman, calling vpon the, & putting my trust in thy mercye. Remembre thy covenannt, O Lorde, and minyſter worde in my mouth, and ſtablyſh this deuyce in my heart, that thy houſe may contynue ſtyl in thy name, and y all the heathen maye knowe that thou arte God, and that there is none other but thou.

C The. x. Chapter.

Which decketh her ſelfe to go to Holofernes. The which ſaw that the elders gaue Judith. Holofernes is in the name of Judith.

When ſhe had left of crying vnto the Lorde, ſhe roſe vp from the place where ſhe had lay flat befoze the Lorde, and called her mayden, wente downe into her chamber, layd the deary cloth from her, put of ſeruiantes of her wyddowhode, waſhed her ſelfe, anoynted her ſelfe with precious thinges, of ſweete ſauoure, brydded & platted her hair, ſet an houe vpo her head & put on ſuch apparell as belongeth vnto gladnes, ſpyppers vpon her ſete, armelets, ſpanges, earpynges, ſeruiantes, & decked her ſelfe with all her apparell.

The Lorde gaue her alſo a ſpecial bewty, and ſaynes (for all this deckyng of her ſelfe was not done for any volupty ouſnelle & ſhew of the fleſh, but of a ryght diſcrecyon and vertue, therfore vpo ſ Lorde increaſe her bewtie) ſo ſhe was excedding ampyable and well ſauoured in al mens eyes. ſhe gaue her alſo a bottel of wyne, a pot wryth ſpottage, cakebread and cheſe, and went in her chaire.

Howe when ſhe came to the porte of the cite, ſhe founde Oſias and the elders of the cite waityng there. Which when they ſaw her, they were aſtonyſhed, & maruelled greatly at her bewtie. neuertheleſſe, they aſked her how ſhe came thither, but let her go, ſaying: The will of our fathers geue the bys grace, and with his power perſourme all the deuyce of thy heart, that Jeruſalem maye reioyce ouer thee, and that thy name maye be in the nombre of the holy and ryghteous. And all they that were there, ſayde wryth one voyce: ſo be it. Judith made her prayer vnto the Lorde, and wente out at the porte, ſhe and her mayden.

And as ſhe was goyng downe ſ mount, it happened that aboute the ſpynges of the dape, the ſpyes of the Aſſyrians mette with her, and toke her, ſayinge: whence cometh thou? O whither goeſt thou? ſhe answered: I am a daughter of ſ hebrues, and am fled from the, for I knowe y they ſhalbe vnto you to be ſpoyled: becauſe they thought ſcozne to yelde the ſelues vnto you, but they myght fynde mercy in your ſyght. therfore, haue I deuyſed by my ſelfe after this maner: I wyll go befoze the Prince Holofernes, and tell hym all they ſecretes, and wyl ſhewe hym, how he maye come by them and winne them, ſo y not one man of his hoſt ſhal perſe.

And when theſe men had heard her wordes, and conſydered her ſayze face they were aſtonyſhed (for they wondered at her excellent bewty) & ſayd vnto her: Thou haſt ſaued thy lyfe by ſpyndyng out this deuyce, y thou woldeſt come downe to oure Lorde: and be thou ſure, that when thou commeſt vnto hym, he ſhall intreate the well, and thou ſhalt pleaſe hym at the herte: ſo they bzought her into Holofernes pauplyon, and toide hym of her. Howe when ſhe came in befoze hym, immediately he was overcome and taken with her bewty. Then ſayd his ſeruautes: who wold deſpyſe the people of the Jewes, that haue ſo ſayze women? ſhuld we not by reaſon ſyghte agaynſt the for theſe? ſo when Judith ſaw Holofernes ſpytynge in a canapy, that was wrought of purple, ſylke, golde, ſmaragde and precyous ſtones, ſhe looked faſt vpo hym & fel downe vpon the earth. And Holofernes ſeruautes toke her vp agayne, at their lordes comaundement.

C The. xi. Chapter.

Holofernes requyeth of Judith the cauſe of her coming: which geueh hym a ſweete anſwere.

Then ſaid Holofernes vnto her: Be of good chere, & feare not in thyne hert, for I neuer hurt man y wold ſerue Nabuchodonoloſ the kyng. As for thy people, yf they had not deſpyſſed me, I ſhulde not haue lyfte vp my ſpeare agaynſt the. But tel me now, what is y cauſe that y arte departed from them, & wherfore art thou come vnto vs.

And Judith ſayde vnto hym: ſpy, vnderſtand the wordes of thy handmayden: for yf y wyl do after y wordes of thy handmayden, the Lorde ſhal bring thy matter to a proſperous effect. As truly as Nabuchodonoloſ a lorde of the lande lyueth, & as truly as his powder lyueth, which is in the to the punyſhment of all men y go wronge, al men ſhal not only be ſubdued vnto hym thowowe the, but all the beaſtes alſo of y ſelde. For all people ſpeake of thy prudent actiurtye: and it hath euer bene reported, how y only art good and myghtie in all his kyngdome, & thy diſcrecyon is comended in all landes.

The thyng is maniſeſt alſo, that Achioz ſpake, and it is well known, what thou comaundeſt to do vnto hym. For this is playne and of a ſuretye, that oure God is ſo warde wryth vs (by the reaſon of oure ſynnes) that he hath ſhewed by bys prophetes vnto the people, howe that for they ſynnes he wyl de lyue them ouer vnto the enemye. And for wdd it ſo muche so much as the chyldren of Israel know that they haue so displeased they? God, they are for a frayde of the.

They suffre greate hunger also, and for wante of water, they are deed now in a manner. Moreover, they are apoynted to slaye all they? catell, that they maye drynke þ blonde of them, and are purposed to spende all þ holy ornamente of they? God (whiche he hath forbydden the to touch) for cozne, wyne, and oyle. Sepnge now, that they do these thynges, it is a playne case, that they must nedes be destroyed. Which whē I thy handmaiden perceaued, I fled from them, and the Lorde hath sent me vnto the, to shewe the these thynges. For I thy handmayden woꝝhypp God euen here nowe besyde the, & thy handmaiden shall go forth, and I wyll make my prayer vnto God, & he shall tell me when he wyll rewarde them they? synne: then shall I come & shewe the and drynke the thozowe þ myddest of Jerusalem, so that thou shalt haue all the people of Israel, as the shepe without a shepheard: there shall not so much as one dogge bark agaynst the, for these thynges are shewed me by the prouydence of God: and for so muche as God is displeased w them, he hath sent me to tell the þ same.

D These woꝝddes pleased Holofernes & all his seruantes, which marueled at the wysdome of her, and sayde one to another: there is not such a woman vpon earth, in bewtie & discrecyon of woꝝdes. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: God hath done well, þ he hath sent þ better before thy people that þ mayst geue them into our hādes. And for so much as thy promise is good, yf thy God perfourme it vnto me, he shall be my God also, & thou shalt be excellent and great in the court of Nabucho donosor, and thy name shall be spoken of in all the lande.

The. xii. Chapter.

¶ Holofernes commaundeth that Judith be well intreated. She despyeth licence to go out in the nyght season to praye, and oþtēneth it. Agao is sent vnto her, to moue her to come into Holofernes to a banquet, & she cometh. Holofernes is drunken.

Jhen commaunded he her to go in where his treasure laye, and charged that she shulde haue her dwelling there, and appoynted what shulde be geuen her from his table. Judith answered hym, and sayde: As for the meate that thou hast commaunded to geue me, I maye not eate of it as nowe (lesse I displease my God) but wyll eate of such as I haue brought with me. Then sayd Holofernes vnto her: Of these thynges þ thou hast brought w the sayle, what shall we do vnto the? And Judith sayde: As truly as þ lyuest my Lorde thy handmayden shall not spende all thyng, tyll God haue brought to passe in my hande, the thynges that I haue deuyled.

So his seruantes brought her into the tent, where as he had appoynted. And as she was goynge in, she despyed that she myght haue leue to go forth by nyght & before daye to her prayer and to make intercessyon vnto the Lorde. Then commaunded Holofernes his chamberlaynes, that she shulde go out & in at her pleasure, to praye vnto God thole these dayes.

And so in the nyght season she went forth into the valley of Bethulia, and washed her selfe in the well water. Then wente she vp and besought the Lorde God of Israel, that he wolde prospere her waye, for the deliuerance of his people. And so she went in, and remayned cleane in her tent, tyll she toke her meate in the euenyng.

Vpon the fourth daye it happened, that Holofernes made a supper vnto his seruantes, & sayde vnto Agao his chamberlayne: Go thy waye, and counsell thyngs hebynde, that she maye be wylling to consent to kepe company with me. For it were a shame vnto all the Assyrians, that a woman shulde laugh a man to scoorne, þ she were come from hym vnnedled with al.

Then went Agao vnto Judith, & sayd: Let not þ good doughter be a frayde, to come in to my Lorde, that she maye be honoured before hym, that she maye eate and drynke wyne, and be mery with hym. Vnto whome Judith answered: Who am I, that I shulde saye my Lorde naye? what soeuer is good he fore his eyes, I shall do it: and loke what is his pleasure, that shall I thinke wel done, as longe as I lyue.

So she stode vp, and deckt her selfe with her apparell, and wente in, and stode before hym. And Holofernes herte was whole moued, so that he bzant in desyre toward her. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: drynke now and sytte downe, and be mery, for thou hast founde fauoure before me. Then sayde Judith: Syr, I wyll drynke, for my mynde is meryer to day, then euer it was in all my lyfe. And she toke, and dyd eate, and dranche before hym, the thynges that her mayden had prepared for her. And Holofernes was mery with her, and dranche moze wyne, then euer he dyd afore in his lyfe.

The. xiii. Chapter.

¶ Holofernes sleapeth for very drunkennes, and Judith cutteth off his head: and goeth euer with it to her owne people of whom she is receaued with ioye. They geue thanks vnto God, for they? deliuerance. Judith speaketh vnto Achioz, which marueleth at her feat done to Holofernes.

Nowe when it was late in the nyght his seruantes made haste euerie man to his lodgyng. And Agao shut the chamber doores, and wente waye, for they were all ouerladen wth w^m. So was Judith alone in þ chamber.

As for holofernes he laye vpon the bed all drunken, and of very drunkennes fel a sleape.

Then commaunded Judith her mayden to stande without before the doze, & to wayte vpon Judith. So before the bed, makinge her prayer with teares, and moued her lippes softly, and sayde: Strengthen me, O Lord God of Israel, and haue a respect vnto the workes of my handes in this houre, for thou mayst set vp thy ctyie of Ierusalem like as thou hast promysed: O graunte that by the I maye perfourme the thyng, whiche I haue deuyled thowoe the beleue, that I haue in the.

And when she had spoken this, she wente to the bedstrade, and tooke the swerde that layed vpon it, and dreyne it out. Then toke she the holde of the beareye lockes of hys heade, and sayde: Strengthen me, O Lord God in this houre, and withe that she gaue hym two strokes vpon the neck, and smote of hys heade. Then toke she the canapp awaye, and layd the dead body asyde. Immediately she went forth, and deliuered the head of holofernes vnto her mayden, and had her put it in a wallet.

And so these two went forth together as they custome, as though they wolde go, and so passed by the hooke, and came vnto the valley vnto the porte of þ ctyie. Judith cryed a farre of vnto the watchmen vpon the walles: Open the gates (sayd she) for God is with vs, which hath geue us power in Israel. And when they hearde her voyce, they called the elders of the ctyie together. And they came all to mete her lytle and great, yonge & olde for they thought not that she shuld haue come so soone. So they lighted candles, & gathered about her euery waye: but she went vp into an hye place and made silence to be proclaimed.

When euery man now heide hys tonge, Judith sayde: O prayse the Lorde oure God, for he hath not despyed, nor forsaken them, but they trust in hym, & in me his handmaid he hath perfourmed his mercy, which he promysed vnto the house of Israel: yee, in my hande this same nyght hath he slayne the enemy of his people.

And with that she toke forth the heade of holofernes out of the wallet, & she wed it the waye. Beholde, the heade of holofernes the enemye of the Assyrians, & this is the canapp wherein he laye in his drunkennes: where our Lord our God hath slayne hym by þ hand of a woman.

But as truly as the Lorde lyueth, his angyll hath kepte me goyng thus, remayne there, & comynge hyther agayne from hence. And the Lord hath not sulked me his handmayden to be defyled, but without any syn hath he brought me agayne vnto you: & that wth great victorie, so þ I am escaped, & ye deliuered. O geue thanks vnto hym euerychone, for he is gracious & his mercy endureth for euer.

So they prayled the Lorde al together, & gaue thakes vnto hym. And to her they sayd: The Lorde hath blessed the in his power, for thowoe the he hath brought oure enemyes to naught. And whas the chiefe ruler of þ people of Israel, sayd vnto her: Blessed art thou of the Lorde the hye God, aboue all women vpon earth.

Blessed be the Lord, þ maker of heuen and earth, which hath guyded þ a ryght to wold and to smyte of þ head of the captayne of oure enemyes. For this daye he hath made thy name so honorabile, þ thy prayse shall neuer come out of þ mouth of men, whiche shall alwaye remeber the power of the Lorde, seeing thou hast not spared thyne owne self, but put the in iocundity, consyderyng the angurthe & trouble of thy people, & so hast helped they: fall before God our Lord. And all the people sayde: Amen, Amen.

Achior also was called, & he came. Then sayde Judith vnto hym: The God of Israel vnto whom thou grauest wytnes, þ he wolde be auenged of his enemyes, euen he hath this nyght thowoe my hande smytten of the heade of all the vnsapthfull. And that thou mayst see that it is so, beholde this is the heade of holofernes, which in hys presumptuous pryde, despised the God of the people of Israel, and threatened the wth destruction, sayyng: When the people of Israel is taken, I will cause the also to be syncke with the swerde. When Achior sawe holofernes heade, he fel downe vpon hys face to the ground, for very angurthe and feare, so that he sowned wth all. But after that he was come agayne to hym selfe, he fell downe before her, & prayled her, sayyng: Blessed art thou of the God, in all the tabernacles of Jacob: for al the people that beare of thy name, shall prayse the God of Israel bycause of the.

The xliij. Chapter.

The counsaile of Judith. Achior bringeth on Holofernes man turneth to God. The Assyrians are affrayed of the Jewes.

Judith sayde vnto all the people: Brethren, heare me. Stick vp this heed vpon oure walles, and when the sunne aryseth, take euery man his weapon, and fall oute vpon them: not as though ye wold go besyde them, but to ryme vpon them with violence. When the lippes in the tentes se this, they shall of necessity be compelled to fflye backwarde, and to rayse vp they: captayne to the battayle. So wold they: captaynes come in to holofernes paylison, and fynde the dead body wrapped in þ blood, and fynde the deede body wrapped in þ blood.

fearefulnes shall fall vpon them: and when ye perceauie that they flye, folow them without all care, for God shall deliuer them vnto you to be destroyed.

Then Achioz seynge the power of God, whiche he had shewed vnto the people of Israel, fel of from his heathenish belefe, and put his trust in God, and let hym selfe be circumcyled: and so was he nombred amonge the people of Israel, he and all his posteritie vnto this daye.

B Nowe as sone as it was daye, they styckt vp holofernes heade vpon the walles, and every man toke his weapon, and so they went out with an horrible crye. When the spyes sawe that, they ranne vnto holofernes tent. And they that were within the tent, came befoze his chamber, and made a great russhyng to wake hym vp, because they thought with the nople to haue rayled hym. For there durst not one of the Assyrians knocke, go in, or open.

But when the captaynes and wynges: & all the chiefe in the kyng of the Assyrians host came together, they sayde vnto the Chabrelaines: Go your way in, & wake him vp for the myle are crept out of the holes, & dare provoke vs vnto battayle.

C Then went Agao into his chamber, &ode befoze the bedde, and clapped with his handes, for he thought he had bene slepyng with Judith.

But when he had hearkened perfectly with his eares, and coude perceauie no steryng, he went nyr to the bed, and lyft it vp, and then sawe he the dead body of holofernes lying there without a hed, welctred in his bloude vpon the earth. Then cryed he w loude voyce, & with wepyng rent his clothes, and went into Judiths tent, and founde her not: And so he lepte out vnto the people and sayde: one woman of the Jewes, hath brought all Babuchodonosors people to shame. For lo, holofernes lyeth vpon the grounde and hath no heade.

When the chiefe of the Assyrians host heard that, they rent the clothes, and there fell an intollerable feare and tremblinge vpon them, so that they myndes were sore atryed. And there was an excredyng great crye in the whole host.

C The .xv. Chapter.

The flight of the Assyrians. The pursuit of Israel after them. Israel becommeth ryche: by the spoyle of the Assyrians. Judith is praised of Nootham: and of the people.

N Owe when all the host herd that holofernes was beaded, they mynded and counsell fell from them, & such a feare come vpon them, that they undertoke to defende them selues by flyng away: one spake not to another, but hanged downe theyr heades, lefte all behynde them, and made haste to escape from the Hebrewes: for they hearde, that they were battynge to come after wth theyr weapons, and so they fled by the wayes of the felde, & thowome al the fote pathes of the dales.

And when the chyldren of Israel sawe that they fled, they folowed vpon them, and went downe with trumpets, blowyng & making a great crye after them. As for the Assyrians, they had no ordre, and kept not them selues together, but fled theyr waye. Acherelies, the chyldren of Israel fell vpon them with one company and ordre, & discomfited as many as they myght get. And Othas sent messaungers vnto all the cyties & countrees of Israel.

So all the regyons and enery cytie sente out theyr best men after them in harness, and smote them with the swerde, tyll they came to the uttermost part of theyr borders. And the other that were in Bethulia came into the tentes of the Assyrians, and toke all that they which were fled had left behynde them, and so they founde greate good. And they that came agayne to Bethulia fro the battayle, toke with them suche thynges as had bene theyrs, there was no nombze of the castell, and of all costely Jewelles, so that from the lowest vnto the hiest, they were al made ryche of the spoiles of them. And Joachim the hye Pryeste at Jerusalem, came to Bethulia with all the elders, that they myght see Judith.

Nowe when she came out vnto the, they beganne all to prayse her wth one voyce, & sayinge: thou wortheppye of the Cytye of Jerusalem, thou toye of Israel, thou honour of oure people, thou haste done manly, and thy herte is comforted, because thou haste loued cleynnesse and chastyte, and hast knowen no man but thyne owne husbnde: herfoze hath the hande of the Lorde comforted the: & blessed shalt thou be for euer. And al people sayd so be it, so be it.

In the thre dayes coude the people of Israel scarce gather vp the spoiles of the Assyrians. But all that belonged vnto holofernes, and had bene his specially (whether it were of gold, of syluer, prepyous stones, clothyng, and all ornaments) they gaue it vnto Judith. And all the people reioysed, both women, maydes, and yonge people, wth pyppes and harpes.

C The .xvi. Chapter.

The lauge of Judith for the victory. After the victory the captaynes people cometh to Jerusalem to buye and sell the spoyle.

Then

When songe Judith thys songe vnto the Lozde: Begynne vnto the Lozde vpon the tabzertes, syng vnto the Lozde vpon the cyndales. O syng vnto hym a newe songe of thankesgeyunge, heuful and call vpon his name. It is the Lozde that destroyeth warres: euen the Lozde is his name. Which hath pitched his tentes in the myddest of his people, that he myghte beare vs from þe hand of all oure enemyes. He came out of þe mountaynes of þe North in the multitude of his strength. His people shaked the water brokes, & they: bozles covered the valleyes. He purposed to haue vnted in my lande, & to slaye my ponge men with the swerde.

He wolde haue caried a waie my chyldre, and byrgyns into captiuite, but þe almyghty Lozde dyndred hym, and deliuered hym from the handes of a woman, which brought hym to confusyon. For they: myghte was destroyed of the ponge men. It was not the names of Titan that slewe hym, nether the grete Gyautes let them selues avenge hym: but Judith þe daughter of Merari, with her saye bewty hath discomfyted hym, and brought hym to nought. For shee awaye her wyddowes garmente, and was in the apparell of gladnesse to the reioysing of the chyldren of Israel. Shee announced her face, and bounde vpon her heare in an harte beggyle hym. Her sylppers ransched hym, her bewty captiuated hym mynde, and the swerde smote hym of his neck. The Assyrians were astonied at her stedfastnes, and the Medes at her boldenes. Then howe in the tymes of the Assyrians, when my people appeared, dyde of thyng. The sonnes of the daughters haue pearled them thowowe and layne them as fugyue chyldren: they were in the battayle, for the very feare of the Lozde my God. Let vs syng a songe of thankesgeyunge vnto the Lozde, a newe songe of hymns wyl we syng vnto our God: Lozde, thou arte a grete God, myghty in power, who no man maye overcome. All thy creatures shulde serue þe: for thou spakest but a word, and they were made: thou sentest a spete, and they were created, & no man can withstande thy voyce. The mountaynes shall moue frome the foundacions wyl the waters, the stony rockes shall melte before þe lyke waxe. But they that feare the: shall be great wyl the in all thynges. Also vnto the people that rse vp agaynst my generacyon, for the almyghty Lozde wyl auenge hym selfe of them, and in the daye of indgemente wyl be vnted them. For he shall geue fyre & woymes into they: flesch, & they maye burne and sele it for euermore.

After thys it happened, that after the victory, all the people came to Ierusalem, to geue praye and thankes vnto the Lozde. And when they were purifyed, they offred al they: vnted sacrifices, & they: promysed of-feringes. And Judith offred all holofernes weapens, and all the Jewels that the people had geuen her, and the canopy that she toke from his bed, & hanged them vpon the Lozde. The people was ioyfull, as the vse is: & thys ioye by reason of the victory, & Judith, endu- red thre monethes.

So after these dayes, every man wente home agayne, and Judith was in grete reputacyon at Bethulia, and ryght honorably taken in all the lande of Israel. Vnto her vertue also was chastytie ioynd, so that af-ter her husbnde Manasses dyed, she neuer knewe man all the dayes of her lyfe. Vpon the hye solempne dayes she wente out wyl the grete woysynge. She dwelt in her husban- des house an hundred and fyue yere, and left her handmapden fre, and dyed: and was bu-ried besyde her husbnde in Bethulia. And all the people mourned for her seuen dayes. So longe as she lyued, there was none that troubled Israel, and many yeres also after her death.

The daye wherein this victory was got-ten, was solemply holden, and rekened of the Jewes in the nombze of the holy dayes, & it is yet greatly holden of the Jewes euer sence, vnto this daye.

The dreame of Harbocheus.

Harbocheus the sone of Jair, the sonne of Semei, & sonne of Cisei of the trybe of Ben Jamin, a Jewe: whiche had his dwellinge in the cite of Susis, a man of great reputacion, and excellent among all them & were in the kynges court. (Nethertheless, he was one of the pylsoners, whome Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon had carped awaye from Jerusalem vnto Babylon with Iechonias the kyng of Iuda.) In the seconde yere of the raygne of great Artaxerxes in the fyfth dape of the moneth, Assan, had thys Harbocheus suche a dreame: he thought he hearde a greate tempest, horrible thoderclappes, earthquakes, & great vpyoure in the land, & that he sawe two great dyagons redy to fyght one agaynst another.

Their crye was great. At the which roa-ryng & crye all the hethen were vp to fyghte agaynst the ryghteous people. And the same dape was full of darkness and very vnclere full of trouble & angursh, yee, a greate fear-fulnes was there in all the lande. The ryghteous were amased, for they feared the plage and euil that was dempled ouer them, & were at a poynt woth them selues to dye. So they cried vnto God: and while they were crying the lytle wel grew into a great ryuer and in to many waters. And with that it was dape and the sunne rose vp agayne. And the lowlye were exalted, and deuoured the glayous and proude.

Nowe when Harbocheus had sene thys dreame, he awoke, & mused stedfastly in hys berte, what God wolde do: and so he desyred to knowe all the matter, & his mynd was ther vpon vntyl the nyght.

The .xii. Chapter.

Harbocheus differeth the treason dempled agaynst the kyng, and is therfore rewarded of hym.

3

The same time dwelt Harbocheus with Bagatha and Tares in the kynges court, the kynges Chamberlapnes and porters of the palace. But when he hearde thez deuice, and had delygently considered thez ymaginacions, he perceaued that they wente aboute, to lape thez cruell handes vpon the kyng Artaxerxes: and so he certifyed the kyng therof. Then caused he the kyng to examen the two gelded wyth toymentes. And when they had graunte it, they were put to death.

Thys the kyng caused to be put in the Cronycles for an euertlastyng remembraunce, and Harbocheus wrote vp the same matter. So the kyng commaunded that Harbo-cheus shulde remayne in the court, and for thys faythfulnesse of hys, he gaue hym a re-warde. But Aman the sonne of Amadathu the Agagite, which was holden in great ho-noure and reputacyon in the kynges court vnder toke to hurte Harbocheus and his people because of the two Chamberlapnes & were put to death.

The .xiii. Chapter.

The copy of the letters of Artaxerxes agaynst the wes. The prayer of Harbocheus.

The great kyng Artaxerxes whiche raygneth fro India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred and sent and twentye landes, sendeth his frendly saluacyon vnto all the prynces & debtyes of the countrees, which be subiect vnto hys dominyon. While I was made Lord ouer many people, and had subdued the whole earth vnto my dominyon, my mynd was not with crueltye and wyonge to exalt my selfe by the reason of my power: but purposed with equi-te alwaye and gentylnes, to gouerne those be vnder my myrshipp, and wholy to set them in a peaceable lyfe, and thereby to bring my kyngdome vnto tranquilitye, that men myght safely go thorowe on euery spde, and to reuue peace agayne, which all men desyre.

Nowe when I asked my counsellors howe these thynges myght be broughte to a good ende, there was one by vs, excellent in wysd-om whole good wyl, truth and faythfulnes both off bene shewed & proued (which was also pryncipal and next vnto the kyng) Aman by name: whiche certifyed vs, howe & in all landes there was scattered abroode a rebellious folke, that made statutes and lawes agaynst all other people: and haue alwaye despyed & proclaimed comaundementes of kynges: and howe that for this cause it were not to be suffred that suche rule shulde contynue by you & not to be put downe.

Seing, now we perceaued the same, & this people alone are contrary vnto euery man, & lyng straung and other maner of lawes, and withstand our statutes and doynges, & go-about to stablysh theyr matters, that oure kyngdome shulde neuer come to good estate and stedfastnesse: Therefore haue we commaunded, that all they that are appoynted in wyrtynge and shewed vnto you by Aman (whiche is ordeyned and sette ouer all oure landes) and the moste pryncypall nexte vnto the kyng, and in maner as a father, shall w-theyr wyues and chyldren be destroyed and roted oute wyth the swerde of theyr ene-myes

mes and aduersaries, and that there shalbe no mercy shewed, and no man spared. And this shalbe done the. xiii. daye of the moneth (called Adar) of this yere, that they which of olde, and now also, haue euer ben rebellious maye in one daye wth violence be thrust downe into the hell, to thintent that after this maner our empyre maye haue peace and tranquillitye.

But Mardocheus thought vpon al the wordes and noble actes of the Lorde, & made his prayer vnto hym, saying: O Lorde, Lord thou valyaunt and almyghyte kynge (for all thynges are in thy power) and yf thou wylste helpe and deliuer Israel, there is noman that can withstande or let the: for thou hast made heuen and earth, and what wonderous thig is euer vnder the heauen: thou art Lorde of al thynges, and there is noman that can resist thy maiestye (O Lorde.) Thou knowest all thynges, thou wotest Lorde that it was neither of malice, nor of presumption, nor for a desire of glozpe, that I wolde not bowe before my selfe, nor wouldest thou ponder proude ambitious Aman (for I wolde haue bene content, and that with good wyll, yf it might haue done Israel any good, to haue kyssed euen his feete stepes) but that I dyd it, because I wolde not let the honour of a man in the steede of the glozpe of God: & because I wold wozshipp none but onely the my Lorde. And this I haue done in no pryde nor presumption.

And therfore O Lord thou God and kynge, haue mercy vpon thy people, for they ymagyn that they maye bypnyge vs to nought: yea, thy mynde and desyre is to destroye, and to destroye thy people, that hath euer bene thine inheritaunce of olde. O despyse not thy nation, which thou hast deliuered & brought out of Egypt for thyne owne selfe. Heare my prayer, and be merciful vnto thy people who haue been chosen for an heritage vnto thy self. Come our complaynt and sorowe into ioye, that we maye lyue, O Lorde, and prayse thy name. O Lorde, suffre not the mouthes of the that prayse the to be destroyed.

All the people of Israel in lyke maner, praye earnestly as they coulde vnto the Lorde, that they be deathe and destruction stode before the.

The. xliii. Chapter.

The prayer of Esther for the deliuerance of her and her people.

Esther also beinge in the battayle of death, refozted vnto the Lorde, layed awaye her glorious apparel, and put on pgarmentes that serued for syghynge and mourning. In the steede of precious ornaments, she scatred ashes and donge vpon her head: and as for her body, she humbled it with fastynge, and brought it verrey lowe. All the places where she was wont to haue ioy afore those fylled she with the beere that she pluckt of her selfe. She prayed also vnto the Lorde God of Israel with these wordes.

O my Lorde, thou onely art oure kynge, helpe me desolate woman, which haue no helper but the, for my myserie and destruction is harde at my hande. Fro my yowth vp I haue hearde out of the kynred of my father, that thou tokest Israel from amonge all people (and lo haue our fathers of their forefathers) that they shoulde be thy perpetual inheritaunce, & loke what thou dydest promysse them, thou hast made it good vnto them.

Nowe Lorde, we haue synned before the, therfore hast thou gyue vs into the handes of our enemyes, because we wozshipped theyr goddes. Lorde, thou art ryghteous. Reuerthelisse, it satisfied them not, that we are in bytter and heuy captiuitie and oppressed among them, but thou hast layed theyr handes vpon the handes of their goddes: so that they begyn to take awaye the thyng that thou with thy mouth hast ordeyned & appoynted, to destroy thyne inheritaunce, to shutte and stoppe the mouthes of them that prayse the, to quench the glozpe and wozshyppe of thy house, and thyne aulter, and to open the mouthes of the hepythen, that they maye prayse the power & vertue of the goddes, and to magnifye thyselfe kynge for euer.

O Lorde, gyue not thy sceptre vnto them that be nothinge, lest they laugh vs to scorne in our myserie and fall: but turne theyr deuple vpon them selues, and punish hym, that hath begonne the same ouer vs, and let hym to an example. Thyinke vpon vs O Lorde, & shew thy selfe vnto vs in the tyme of oure distresse, and of our trouble. Strengthen me O thou king of goddes, thou Lorde of all power, gyue me an eloquent & a pleasaunt speache in my mouth before the Lyon. Turne his herte in the date of our enemyes, to destroye hym, and al suche as consent vnto hym. Bat deliuer vs with thyne hande, and helpe me thy handmayde, which haue no defence nor helper but onely the Lorde, thou knowest al thynges, thou wotest that I loue not the glozpe and wozshyp of the vnyghteous, and that I hate and abhorre the bedde of the vnicircumcised, and of all hepythen.

Thou knowest my necessitye, that I hate the token of my preeminence and wozshyppe which I beare vpon myne heed, what tyme as I must shewe my selfe and be sene, and that I abhorre it as an vncleane cloth, and that I weare it not when I am quite and aloone by my selfe. The. xv. Chapter.

¶ Ardorchus moueth Esther to go into the kynge & make intercession for her people: and she perswademeth his request.

Ardorchus also bad Esther goo in vnto the kynge, and praye for her people, and for her countrey.
Remembre (sayth he) the dayes of thy lowe estate, howe þ wast nourished vnder my hande: for Aman which is nexte vnto the kynge, hath gyuen sentence of death agaynst vs. Call thou therfore vpon the Lozde, and speake for vs vnto the kynge, and delyuer vs from death. And vpon þ thirde dape it happened, that Esther layed awaye þ mourning garmentes, and put on her glozous apparel, and deckt her selfe goodly (after ter that she had called vpon God, whiche is the beholder and Sauxpoure of all thynges) toke two maydens with her: vpon the one she leaned her selfe, as one that was tendre: the other folowed her, & bare the trayne of her ve-sture. The shyne of her beautye made her face rose coloured. The similitude of her face was cheerfull and amiable, but her herte was sorowfull for great feare. She went in thorow all the doores, and stode befoze the kynge. The kynge sat vpon the thron of his kyngdome, and was clothed in his goodlye arape, all of golde, and set with pprecious stones. & he was very terrible. He lift vp his face, that shone in the clearenesse, and looked grymlye vpon her.
The fel the Quene downe, was pale & faynt leaned her selfe vpon the heed of the mayde, that went withe her.

Neuerthelesse, God touned the kynges mynde that he was gentle, that he leaped out of his seat for feare, and gat her in his armes, & helde her vpon tye she came to her self agayne.
He gaue her lounyng wordes also, and sayde vnto her: Esther, what is the matter? I am thy brother, be of good cheare, thou shalt not dye: for our commaundement toucheth the co-mons and not the. Come nye. And with that he helde vp his golden rod, and layed it vpon her necke, and embraced her frendly, and sayd talke with me. Then sayde she: * I sawe the (O lozde) as an Angel of God, and my hert was troubled, for feare of thy maiesty and clearenesse. For excellent and wondrous arte thou (O lozde) and thy face is full of Amptie.
But as ipe was thus speakyng vnto hym, she fell downe agayne for fayntnesse: for the whyche cause the kynge was afrayed, and all his seruauites comforted her.

Princes, and rulers of the same landes, suche as loue hym, his frendly saluta-cyon. There be many that for the sondre nerly done vnto them for theyr wo:shyppe, vndertake not onely to hurte theyr subiectes (for plenteous benefytes may they not suffre, and begynne to pmagin some thyng agaynst those that do them good, and take not onely all vntthankfulnesse awaye from men) but in pyde and presumption (as they that be vni-myndfull and vntthankfull for the good bedes) they go aboute to escape the iudgements of God, that seith all thynges, whiche iudgment hateth and punisheth all wyckednesse.

It happeneth ofte also that they which be set in offyce by the hyer power, and vnto whome the busynesse and causes of the subiectes are commytted to be handled, ware proude, and defylet hem selues wth headdynge of innoceptfull wordes, and with lying tales, discepue and betraye the innocent goodnesse of Princes.

Nowe is it profytable and good, that we

The booke of wysdome.

The fyrst Chapter.

How we ought to searche and enquire after God, and who be those that fynde hym. Of the holy ghost. We ought to fyre from backbityng and murmuring. &c.

Set your affectis vpon right councelle, ye that be Judges of the earth. Have a good opynion of the Lorde, and like him in the singlenesse of hert. For he wyl be founde of the that tempe hym not, and appeareth vnto luche as put theyr trust in hym. As for froward thoughtes, they separate fro God: but vertue (if it be allowed) reformeth the vntwyle. And why? wysdome shall not entre into a frowarde soule, nor dwell in the bodye that is subdued vnto synne. For the holye ghost abhorreth fawned nurtoure, and withdraueth hym selfe from the thoughtes that are without vnderstandyng: and where wychednesse hath the vpper hande, he flyeth from thence, for the spyrite of wysdome is lowynge, gentle and gracypous, and wyl haue no pleasure in hym that speaketh euill with his tpyppes. For God is a wytnesse of his reynes, a true searcher out of his herte, and an hearer of his tonge. For the spyrite of the Lorde fylleth the rounde compasse of the worlde: and he same that vpholdeyth all thynges, hath knowledg also of the voyce.

Therefore, he that speaketh vnryghtous thynges, can not be hyd: neyther maye he escape the iudgement of reppose. And why? inquisition shall be made for the thoughtes of the vngodlye, and the reppose of his wordes shall come vnto God, so that this wychednesse shall be punished. For the eare of gelously heareth all thynges, and the nople of the grubgins shall not be hyd. Therefore beware of murmuring, whiche is nothyng worth: and refrayne your tounge from sleaundre. For there is no worde so darke and secrete, that it shall go for nought, and the mouthe that speaketh lyes, slayeth the soule.

Deske not your owne death in the erreure of your lyfe: destroye not your selues thorow the workes of youre owne handes. For God hath not made death, neither hath he pleasure in the destruction of the lyuyng. For he created all thynges, that they myghte haue theyr beinge: yea, all the people of the earth he made that they shoulde haue healt, that there shoulde be no destruction in them, and that the kyngdome of heil shoulde not be vpon earth (for ryghteousnesse is everlasting and immortall, but vnryghteousnesse bynggeth death.) Seuerthelesse, the vngodlye call poster, which hath done vs good in al thyng: and innocent Esther the lyke partaker of our kyngdome, with al her people. For his wynde was (when he had taken them oute of the waye, and robbed vs of them) by this meanes to translate the kyngdome of the Perlys vnto them of Macedonia. But we fynde that the Jewes (whiche were accused of the wyched, that they might be destroyed) are no small doers, but vse reasonable & right lawes, and that they be the chyldren of the moost hye wynged God: by whom the kyngdome of vs and our progenytours haue bene well ordeyned. Therefore, as for the letters and commandementes that were put forth by Amadathu, ye shall do well, yf ye take them of none effecte: for he that set the wynde in them, hangeth at Sulis before the porte, with all his hyndred: and God, whiche hath all thynges in his power) hath rewarded hym after his deservynge.

And vpon this ye shall publyshe and set the coppe of this letter in all places, that the Jewes may frely and without hindraunce like them selues after theyr owne statutes, in that they maye be helped, and that vpon the xii. daye of the xii. mooneth Adar, they maye be angued of them, which in the tyme theyr anguysh and trouble, wolde haue opyned them. For the God that gouerneth all thynges, hath turned to iope the day, wherein the Iewes people shoulde haue perished.

Moreover, among the hye solempne dayes that ye haue, ye shall hold this daye also with gladnesse, that nowe and in tyme to come, there maye be a remembraunce to good, and luche as lone the prosperitie of Jerusalem: but a remembraunce of destruction to that that be sedicious vnto vs.

Cities and landes that do not this, shall be perished, and be destroyed with the wynde and fyre, and shall not onely be desolate inhabited of men, but be abhorred also of the wyld beasts and foules.

The ymaginations and desyres of the wycked, and theyr countsaie agaynst the saychfull.

Do the vngodly talke and ymagin thus amōg them selues (but not ryght): The tyme of our life is but short & tedious: and when a man is ones gone, he hath no more toye nor pleasure, neyther knowe we any mā þ turneth agayne fro death: for we are borne of nought, and we shalbe hereafter as though we had neuer bene. For our breath is as a smoke i our nostrilles, and the wordes as a sparke to moue our hert. As for our bodye, it shalbe verye aswes that are quenched, and our soule shal vanishe as the softe ayre. Our lyfe shal passe away as the trace of a cloude, and come to nought as the myst that is dyspersed awaye with the beames of the Sunne, & put downe with the heate therof. Our name also shalbe forgotten by lytle and lytle, and no man shal haue oure workes in remembrance.

For our tyme is a verye shadowe that passeth awaye. and after our ende there is no returnyng, for it is fast sealed: so that no mā cometh agayne. Come on therfore, let vs enioye þ pleasures that ther are, and let vs sone vse the creature lyke as in yowth. Let vs fyll our selues w good wyne and opyntment, and let there no floure of the tyme go by vs. Let vs crowne our selues with roles afore they be withered. Let ther be no saye medowe, but our lust go thorow it. Let every one of you be partaker of our volupentiousnesse. Let vs leue some token of our pleasure in every place, for that is our porcyon, els get we nothing. Let vs oppresse the poore ryghteous, let vs not spare the wydowe nor olde man: let vs not regarde the heedes that are graye for age. Let the lawe of vnrightheousnesse be our authoryte, for the thyng that is feble is nothyng worth. Therfore let vs defraude the ryghteous: and wher he is not for our prospe: pea, he is cleane contrarie to our doinges. He cheketh vs for offendyng agaynst the lawe, and sclandereth vs as transgressours of all nurture. He maketh his boost to haue the knowledg of God: pea, he calleth him self Gods sonne. He is the bewyaper of our thoughtes: It greueth vs also to loke vpon hym, for his lyfe is not lyke other mens, his wayes are of another fassyon. He counteth vs but vayne persons, he withdroweth him selfe from oure wayes as from fylthyngnesse: he commendeth greatly the later ende of the iust, and maketh his boost that God is his father. Let vs se then yf his wordes be true, let vs proue what shal come vpon hym: so shal we knowe what ende he shal haue. For yf he be the true sonne of God, he wll receyue him: and deliuer him from the handes of his enemyes. Let vs examyn hym with despytfull rebuke and toyme tyng, that we maye knowe his dignitie, and proue his pacyence. Let vs condemn hym with the moost shamefull deathe: for lyke as he hath spoken, so shal he be rewarded.

Suche thynges do the vngodly ymagin, and go astraye, for theyr owne wyckednesse hath bynded them. As for the mysteries of God, they vnderstande the not: they neyther hope for the rewarde of ryghtousnesse, nor regarde the worship that holy soules shal haue. For God created man to be vnderstode: pea after the ymage of his owne lykenesse made he hym. Neuerthelesse, thorow enuye of the deuyll, came death into the worlde: and they that holde of his lyde do as he doth.

The .iii. Chapter.

The confirmation and assurance of the ryghteous. The rewarde of the saychfull.

At the soules of the ryghteous are in the hande of God, and the payne of death shal not touche them. In the syght of the vngodly they appere to dye, and theyr ende is takē for very destruction. The way of the ryghteous is iudged to be vtter destruction, but they are in rest. And though they suffre payne before men, yet is theyr hope full of immortallite. They are punished but in fewe thynges, neuerthelesse, in many thynges shal they be wel rewarded. For God proueth them, and findeth the more for hym selfe: pea, as the golde in the fornace, doeth he trye them: and receyuethe them as a burnt offsprynge, and when the tyme cometh, they shalbe looked vpon.

The ryghteous shal thynke as the sparkes that runne thorow the red bush. They shal iudge the nacjons, and haue dominion ouer the people, and theyr Lorde shal raygne for euer. They that put theyr trust in hym, shal vnderstand the truthe, and suche as be saychfull, wll agree vnto him in loue: for his chosen shal haue gyftes and peace. But the vngodly shalbe punished accordyng to theyr owne ymaginations: for they haue despyed the ryghteous, and forsaken the Lorde.

Whoso despyseth wysdome and nurture, he is vnhappie: and as for the hope of such, it is but vayne: theyr labours vnfaytfull, and theyr workes vnproufytable. Theyr wyues are vndiscrete, and theyr chyldren moost vngodlye. Theyr creature is cursed. Blessed is rather the barren and vndefyled, which hath not knowen the synfull bedde: she shal haue frute in the rewarde of the holy soules. And blessed is the gelded, whiche with his handes hath wrought no vnryghtousnesse, no: imagined wycked thynges agaynst God. For vnto hym shal be gyuen the sperryll gyfte of lyppe, and the most acceptable porcyon in the temple of God. For glorious is the frute of good labour, and the roote of wyldome shal neuer fade awaye. As for the chylidren of aduersaries, they shal come to an ende, and the end of an vnryghtous bed shal be rootyd out. And though they lyue longe, yet shal they be not long regarded, and they: last age shal be without honour. If they dye hastyly, they haue no hope, neyther shal they be spoken to in the daie of knowledge. For horrible is þe death and ende of the vnryghtous.

Of the chaste generacion of the farythfull, and of they: felicitie. Of the death of the ryghtous, and of the condemnation of the vnfarythfull.

How fayre is a chaste generacion with vertue? The memoriall thereof is immortal, for it is knowen with God and with men. When it is present, men take example therat, and yf it is awaye, yet they desyre it. It is alwaye crowned and holden in honour, and winner of the rewarde of the vnderfyled battayle. But the multitude of vngodlye chylidren is vnpropheteable and the thynges that are planted with wordome shal take no depe roote, no: laye a fast foundacyon. Though they be greene by braunches for a tyme, yet they shal be shakyn with the winde: for they stād not fast, and knowe the vehemence of the wynde they shal be rooted out. For the vnperfect braunches shal be broken, they: frute shal be vnpropheteable and lowe to eate: yea, meete for nothyng. And why? all the chylidren that are borne of the wycked, must beare recorde of þe wyckednesse agaynst they: fathers & mothers when they be asked. But though the ryghteous be overtaken with death, yet shal he be iust.

Age is an horrible thyng: neuertheless, it standeth not onely in the lengthe of tyme, but in the multitude of yerres: but a mans wil is the grave heere, and an vnderfyled life in the olde age. He pleased God, and was beloved of hym: so y where as he lyued amonge hym, he translated hym. * Yea sodenly he was taken awaye, to the intent that wyckednesse shoulde not alter his vnderstanding, and that hypochrysy shoulde not begyl his heart. For the craftye bewitchynge of lyces maketh good thynges dark, the vnderfaldnesse of the wyckednesse of voluptuous desyre, maketh also the vnderstanding of the symple. Though he was soone deed, yet fulfilled he moche tyme. For his soule pleased God: therefore halted he to take hym a waye fro among the wycked. This þ people se, and vnderstād it not: they lape not vpon suche thynges in their vertes: how that the lounge fauour and mercy of God is vpon his saynctes, and that he hath respect vnto his chosen.

Thus the ryghteous that is deed, condemneth the vngodlye whiche are lyuynge: and þ youth that is soone brought to an ende þ long lyfe of the vnryghtous. For they se the ende of the wyle, but they vnderstande not what God hath deuyed for hym, and wherfore the Lorde hath taken hym away. And why? they se hym and despyse hym, therefore shal God also laugh them to scorne: so that they them selues shal dye hereafter (but without honour) yea in shame amonge the deed for evermore. For without anye voyce shal he burst those that be pufft vp, and remoue them from the foundations, so that they shal be laye waste vnto the hyghest. They shal mourne, and they: memoriall shal perishe. So they beinge astrayed, shal remembre they: synnes: and they: owne wyckednesse shal bewraye them.

The.v. Chapter.

The constancie of the ryghtous before they: persecuters. The hope of the vnfarythfull is vnderfald and vayne. The bitterness of the saynctes and godlye.

When shal the ryghtous stande in great stedfastnesse agaynst such as haue dealt extremely wth them, and taken away they: labours. When they se it, they shal be vexed with horrible feare, and shal wondre at þ hastynesse of the sodayne health: growynge for very distresse of mynde, and shal lape within them selues, haunynge inwarde sorowe, and mournynge for very anguyshe of mynde.

These are they, whome we somtyme had in derision, & tested vpon. We foolles thought they: lyfe very madnesse: and they: ende to be without honour. But lo, howe they are counted amonge the chylidren of God, and they: porcyon is amonge the saynctes. Therefore we haue erred fro the way of truth, & lyght of ryghteousnesse hath not shyned vnto vs, & summe of vnderstandynge rose not vpon vs. We haue weryed oure selues in the waye of wyckednesse and destruction. Teduous wayes haue we gone: but as for the waye of the Lorde we haue not knowen it.

What good hath oure pryde done vnto vs? O: what profyte hath the pompe of ryghteousnesse brought vs? All those thynges are passed awaye lyke a shadowe, and as a mellemer reuynge before: as a shyppe that passeth ouer the wanes of the water, whiche when it is gone by, the trace thereof cannot be founde, neyther the path of it in the floudes. O: as a byrde

by:de that flyeth thowowe in the ayre, and no man can se any token where she is flowe, but onely heareth the nople of her wynges, betyng the light wynde, partynge the ayre tho-rowe the veyemence of her goinge, and fly-eth on shakynge her wynges, where as after warde no token of her waye can be founde.

¶ Lyke as when an arrowe is shot at a mark it parteth the ayre, whiche immediatly commeth togyther agayne, so that a man cannot knowe where it went thowowe. Euen so we in lyke maner as soone as we were borne, be-ganne immediatly to drawe to our ende, and haue shewed no token of vertue, but are consumed in our owne wyckednesse.

E Suche wordes shall they that haue synned speake in the hell: for the hope of the vngodly is lyke a dyse thystle floure (oz duste) that is blowen awaye with the wynde: lyke a thyn scom that is scatred abrode with the strome: like as the smoke which is disperfed here and there with the wynde, and as the remembraunce of a straunger, that caryeth for a dape, and then departeth. But the ryghteous shall lyue for euermore: they: rewarde also is with the Lorde: and they: remembraunce with the best Therefore shall they receiue a glorious kyn-gdomme, and a beautifull crowne of the Lor-des hande: for with his ryght hande shall he couer them: and with his owne holpe arme, shall he defende them. His gelousye also shall take awaye the harness, and he shall weap the creature to be auenged of the enemyes.
He shall put on ryghtousnesse for a brestplate and take sure iudgement in stede of an helmet The inuincible wynde of equitie shall he take, his cruell wrath shall he sharpen for a speare, and the whole compasse of the worlde, shall fyght with hym agaynst the vnywyle.

D Then shall the thondre boltes go out of the lychtninges, and come out of the rapnebowe of the cloudes to the place appoynted: out of the harde stony indignacion. there shall fall thynke dayles, and the water of the see shall be wroth agaynst them, and the floudes shall runne roughly togyther. Yea, a mighty wynde shall stande vp agaynst them, and a strome shall scatred them abrode. Thus the viryghteous dealynge of them shall bynne all the lande to a wilderness, & wickednesse shall ouerthrowe the dwellynge of the myghtye.

The vi. Chapter.

The callinge of kynge, bynges and Judges: which are also exhorted to seache wysdome.

Wysdome is better then strength, & a man of vnderstandynge is moze worth the one that is strong. heare therfore (O ye kynge) and vnderstande: O learne ye that be Judges of the endes of the earth. Gye care ye that rule the multitudes, and delpe in moche people. For the power is gyuen you of the Lorde, and the strength from the hyghest: whiche shall trye your workes, and searthe out your imaginacions: howe ye beinge officers of his kyndome, haue not executed true iudgement, haue not kept the lawe of ryghtousnesse, nor walked after the wyl of God. Horribly, and that ryght soone shall he appeare vnto you: for an harde iudgemente shall they haue that beare rule. Where is graunted vnto the symple, but they that be in auctorytie shall be punnyshed. For God which is Lorde ouer all, shall except nomans person, neyther shall he stande in awe of any mans greatnesse. For he hath made the small and great, and careth for al alpe. But the myghtye shall haue the lozer punishment.

Vnto you therfore (O ye kynge) do I speake, that ye maye learne wysdome, and not go amysse. For they that kepe his rygh-tonnesse, shall be rightously iudged, and they that are learned in ryghteous thynges, shall fynde to make answer. Therefore, let your lust vpon my wordes, and loue them, so shall ye come by nourtour. Wisdome is a noble thyng and neuer fadeth awaye: yea, she is calyfe sene of them that loue her, and founde of such as seke her. She preuenteth them that desire her, that she maye fynde she we her selfe vnto them. Who so awaketh vnto her bynges, shall haue no great trauayle, for he shall fynde her lpytynge readye at his doores. To thynke vpon her, is perfect vnderstanding: and who so watcheth for her, shall be safe: and that soone. For she goeth about, sekyng such as are mete for her, sheweth her selfe cherefull vnto them in they: goiges, and meteth them with all dyligence. For the vnfayned desyre of reformation is her begynnynge: to care for nourtoure is loue, and loue is the keepynge of her lawes. Nowe the keepynge of the lawe is perfection, and an vncorrupt lpe: and an vn-corrupt lpe maketh a man famplier with God. And so the desyre of wysdome leadeth to the kyngdomme euerylastynge. If your de-lyte be then in royall seates and sceptres (O ye kynge of the people) let your lust vpon wysdome, that ye maye rapgne for euermore.
O loue the lpyght of wysdome, all ye that be rulers of the people. As for wysdome, what she is, and how she came by, I wyl tel you: & wyl not hyde the mysterpes of God fro you: but wyl seeke her out from the begynnynge of the natyuite, and bynne the knowledge of her into lpyght, and wyl not kepe backe the truthe. Neither wyl I haue to do with consu-myng erupe, for such a man shall not be partaker of wysdome. But the multitude of the wyle is the welfare of the worlde, and a wyle kyng is the vpholdynge of the people. O receiue nourtour then thowowe my wordes, and it shall doo you good.

The

The vii. Chapter.

Wysdome ought to be preferred aboue all thynges.

I My selfe am also a mortall man, lyke as all other, and am come of þe earthy generacyō of him that was fyrst made, & in my mothers wombe was I fastyned to be fleshy. In þe tyme of ten monethes was I brought together in bloud shewe the seed of man, and the comodious aspect of slepe. When I was borne, I receyved lyke ayre as other men, and fell vpon the earth (whiche is my nature) crynge and wynginge at the fyrst as all other do. I was wrapped in swadylinge clothes, and broughte up with great cares. For there is no kynge þat hath any other begynnynge of byrth. All men then haue one entrānce vnto lyfe, and one goynge out in lyke maner.

Wherefore I desyred, and vnderstandynge has giuen me: I called, & the spryite of wysdome came vnto me. I set moze by her the byrth of wysdomes and ropp all seates, and couēted ryghte nothyng in comparyson of her. As for my own skoon, I compared it not vnto her: for all golde is but grauell vnto her, and syluer shalbe counted but claye befoze her syght. I loued her aboue welfare and beautye, and was wyllynge to take her for my lyghte, for her lyghte cannot be quenched. All good thynges come to me with her, and innumerable richesse shewe her handes. I was glad in them all, for this wysdome went befoze me, & I knewe that she is the mother of all good thynges. Howe as I my selfe learned vntapnedlye, so I make other men partakers of her, and wyth her ryche she from noman: for she is an inmytreasure vnto men, which who so vse, become partakers of the loue and frendshipp of God, and are accepted vnto hym for þe gyft of wysdome.

God hath graunted me to talke wysely, and conveniently to handle the thynges that he hath graciously lent me. For it is he, that leadeth vnto wysdome, and teacheth to vse wysdome aright. In his hande are bothe we and oure woordes: yea, all our wysdome, oure vnderstandynge and knowledge of all oure woordes. For he hath gyuen me the true sciēce of these thynges: so that I knowe, how the worlde was made, and the powers of the elements: the begynning, endynge, and myddel of the tymes: how the tymes alter, how we goeth after an other, and howe they are fylled, the course of the pere: the ordinaunce of the starres: the nature and kyndes of beastes: the furyousnesse of beastes: the power of the wyndes: the ymagynacions of men: the diuersities of poynte plantes: the vertues of rootes, and all such thynges as are secret and not looked for, haue I learned. For the workmaster of all thynges hath taughte me wysdome. In her is the spryite of vnderstandynge whiche is holpe, manyfolde, one onely, subtyll, curteous, discrete, quykke, vnderstandynge, playne, swete, louynge the thyng that is good, sharpe, which forbyddeth not to doo well, gentle, kynde, stedfast, sure free, hauing all vertues circumspect in all thynges: receyving all spryites of vnderstandynge, bringe cleane and sharpe. For wysdome is mymbler then all mymbles thynges: she goeth thorowly and attayneth to all thynges, because of her cleannesse. For she is the breath of the power of God, and a pure cleane cryspynge of the cleannesse of almyghty God. Therefore can no vnderstandynge come vnto her: for she is the byghthnesse of the eternall syngye lyghte, the vnderstandynge of the maiesty of God, and the ymage of his goodnesse. And for so moche as she is one, she maye do all thynges, and beinge stedfast her selfe, she remueth all: and amonge the people cometh she her selfe into the holy soules. She maketh Gods frendes and prophetes: for God loueth nomā, but hym in whom wysdome dwelleth. For she is moze beautifull then the Sonne, and gyueth moze lyght then the starres, and the daye is not to be compared vnto her: for vpon the daye cometh nyght. But wyckednesse cannot ouercome wysdom: and foolisshnesse maye not be with her.

The effectes of wysdome.

Wysdome reacheth frome one ende to an other mightely, & louynge doth she ordeyne all thynges. I haue loued her, & laboured for her, euen fro my yowthe by: I did my diligence to mary my selfe to her, such loue had I vnto her beautie. Who so hath þe companye of God, commendeth her nobyltie: yea, the Lorde of all thynges hym selfe loueth her. For she is þe scholre maistrisse of the myrtoure of God, & the choler out of his woordes. If a man wolde desyre ryche in this lyfe, what is rycher then wydd, that worketh all thynges? Thou wilt saye: vnderstanding worketh. What is it amonge all thynges, that worketh moze the wysdome? If a man loue vertue and ryghteousnesse, let hym labour for wysdome, for she hath great vertues. And why? she teacheth sobernesse & prudence, ryghteousnesse and strenght, which are suche thynges as men can haue nothyng moze profitabell in thesē lyfe. If a mā desire moche knowledge, he can tell the thynges þat are past, and discerne thynges that to come: he knoweth the subteltyes of woordes, and can expounde darke sentences. He can tell of tokens, and wonderous thynges, of euen they come to passe, and þe endes of all tymes, and and ages. So I purposed after this maner: I wyll take her vnto my company, and comune louyngly with her: no doubt, she shall gyue me good counsaile, & speake comfortabily vnto me in my carefulnesse and greefe. For her sake shall I be well & honestly taken amonge the comens & lordes of the counsaile. Though I be ponge, yet shall I haue sharpe vndersta- dyng, so that I shall be maruaylous in sight of greate men, and the faces of Princes shall wondre at me. When I holde my tounge, they shall abyde my leysure: when I speake, they shall loke vpon me, and yf I talke moche, they shall lape theyr handes vpon theyr mouthe.

Moreover, by the meanes of her I shall ob- tayne immortallitie, and leaue behynde me an euerylastyng memorie amonge them that come after me. I shall set the people in ordre, and the nacys shall be subdued vnto me. For ryble tyrantes shall be afrayed when they do but heare of me: among the multitude I shall be counted good, and myghty in battaile. When I come home, I shall fynde rest with her: for her company hath no bytternesse, and her felowship hath no tediousnesse, but mirth and ioye.

Nowe when I consydered these thynges by my selfe, and pondered them in my herte, howe that to be ioyned vnto wysdome is im- mortalitie, and greate pleasure to haue her frendshipp, how that in the workes of her han- des are infinite myghtes: how that, who so ke- peth companye with her shall be wys: & that he whiche talketh with her, shall come to ho- nour: I went about sekynge, to gather vnto me: For I was a lad of a rypp wyte, and had a good vnderstandynge.

But when I grewe to moze vnderstan- dyng, I came to an vndeuyled body. Reuer- thelesse, when I perceyued that I coulde not kepe my selfe chaste, excepte God gaue it me, (and that was a poynte of wysdome also, to knowe whole gyft it was) I stepped vnto the Lord, and belought hym, and with my herte I sayde after this maner.

The .ix. Chapter.

A prayer of Salomon to obtayne wysdome.

God of my fathers, and Lord of mercyes (thou that hast made all thynges with thy worde, and ordeyned man thowow thy wysdome: that he woulde haue dominion ouer the crea- ture whiche thou hast made: that he shoulde ordeine the worlde accordynge to equitye and ryghtousnesse, and execute iudgement with a true herte) gyue me wysdome, whiche is euer about thy seate, and put me not oute from a- monge thy chyldren: for I thy seruaunte and some of thy handmayden am a feble person, of a shorte tyme, and to pounge to the vnderstandynge of iudgement and the lawes. And though a man be neuer so perfect amonge the chyldren of men, yet yf thy wysdome be not with hym, he shall be nothyng regarded. But thou hast chosen me, to be a kynge vnto the people, and the iudge of thy sones and dought- ters.

Thou hast commaunded me to buylde a temple vpon thy holy mounte, and an alter in the cytie wherin thou dwellest: a lycensse of thy holy tabernacle whiche thou hast pre- pared from the begynnyng, and thy wys- dome with the, whiche knoweth thy workes which also was with the, when thou madest the worlde, and knewe what was acceptable in thy syght, and ryght in thy commaunde- mentes. I sende her out of thy holy beaung, and from the throne of thy maiestie, that she maye be with me, and labour with me: that I may knowe what is acceptable in thy syght. For she knoweth and vnderstandeth all thynges: and she shall leade me soberly in my way- kes, and preserve me in her power. So shall my workes be acceptable, and the shall I go- uerne thy people ryghtously, and be worthy to sit in my fathers seate. For what man is he, that maye knowe the counsaile of God? Or who can thynke what the wyl of God is? For the thoughtes of mortall men are mel- rable, and our fourecalles are but vncertaine. And why? a mortall and corruptible body is heuie vnto the soule, and the earthly man- syon kepeth downe that vnderstandynge that museth vpon many thynges. Clerly hardly can we decerne the thynges that are vpon earth, & great labour haue we, or we can fynde the thynges whiche are before our eyes: who wyl the seke out the groundes of the thynges that are done in heauē? Oh Lord, who can haue know- ledge of thy vnderstandynge and meaning except thou gyue him wysdome, and send thy holy ghooste from aboue: that the wayes of them whiche are vpon earth, may be reform- med: that men maye learne the thynges that are pleasant vnto the, and be preserved tho- to we wysdome.

The .x. Chapter.

The despayraunce of the ryghtous comma- thyng wysdome.

Wysdome preserved the fyfthe man, whome God made a father of the worlde, whē he was created alone, brought him out of his offere, toke hym out of the * mould of the earth, & gaue hym power to rule all thynges. * When the vnrighous went awaye in his wrath from this wysdome, & by orderd perished thowow the wrath of myghter. Agayne, when * was destroyed the hole worlde, wysdome pre- served the ryghtous thowow a poore free, wherof she was gouernour her selfe. Moreo- ver, when wickednesse had gotten the vpper- hande,

And for the naciōs were putte up to payde unto God, and laped up sure mercede of his righteousnes. So he preserved the righteous, and he fled fro the vngodly that perished, at the tyme as the fyre fell downe vpon p. v.
Lpke as yet thys dape p vnfrutefull and smokyng land geueth testimony of the wychednes: pee, the vnrype & vntymely frutes that growe vpon the trees.

And for a token of a remembraunce of the wylful soule, there standeth a pylle of salt. For all such as regarded not wysdome not onely thys hurt, that they knew not the thynges whych were good, but also lest they shoulde vnto men, a memorial of the thynges: so that in p thynges wherin they were hurt, they coulde not be hpd. But as for such as take hede vnto wysdome, the shal de-liuer them from sorowe.

When the righteous fled because of his enemies wrath, wysdome led him the right way, shewed hym the kyngdome of God, gave hym knowledge of holy thynges, made hym rich in his laboures, & brought to passe the thynges that he went aboute. In the discussions of such as defrauded hym, he stode by hym, and made hym rich. So he saved hym from the enemies, & defended hym from the persecutors. So he made hym stronge in battyle, & gaue hym the victorie, that he myght knowe how that wysdome is stronger then all thynges. * When p righteous was sold, he forsooke hym not, but deliuered hym fro his hands. So he wente downe wyth hym into the dungeon, and sayled hym not in the bandons, yet he hadde brought hym the scepter of the realme, and power agaynst those that oppressed him. As for them that had accused him, he declared them to be lyers, & brought hym to perpetuall wo: thyspe.

So he deliuered the righteous people & his chylde, from the naciōs that oppressed them. So he entred into the soule of the seruant of God, and stode by hym in wondrous and tokens agaynst the horrible kyng. So he gave the righteous the rewarde of the p labours, & let them forth a marvelous waye: in the dape tyme she was a shadowe vnto him, and a lyght of starres in the nyght sea.
So he brought them thowow p red see, & led them thowowe the greates water. So he deliuered the enemies in the see, & brought him out of the depe. So the righteous toke the spoiles of the vngodly, & prayled the name of the Lorde, & magnified the victories of the Lorde. So he made the righteous the mouth of the domine, maketh the tongues of babes to speake.

The xi. Chapter.

The waye is shewed for the righteous. The remembraunce of his, the great power and mercy of God

He ordeined they workers in p hades of the holy prophet: * so p they were thowow p wyldernes that was not inhabited, & pitched they tents in p wast deserte. They stode agaynst the enemies, & were auenged of the aduersaries.

* When they were thys tyme, they called vpo the, & water was sent the out of p must hys rock, & they thys was quenched out of the hard stone. For by p thynges wher thowow their enemies were punished, were p chylde of Israel helped in their nede, to their cosort.
For vnto the enemies p gaust mas bloude in steade of luyng water. And where as they had scarcenelle in the rebuke, wher p chyldren were slayne, thou ganest vnto thyne owne a plenteous water vnloked for: decla-ryng by the thysse that was at that tyme, how thou woldest dryng thyne owne vnto honoure, and slape the aduersaries.

* For when they were trespas & noystrated with fatherly mercy, they knowledged how the vngodly were iudged, and punished tho-row the wrath of God. These hast thou exhorted as a father, and proued the: but vnto the other thou hast bene a doctours kyng, laped harde to the charge, & condemed the.
Whether they were absent or present, they punishment was a lyke. For their grete was double: namely, mourninge, and the remembraunce of thynges past. But wher they perceaued p thynges punishments byd the good, they thoughte vpon the Lorde, and wondered at p ende. For at the last they helde much of him, of who in p out casting they thoughte scorne, as of an abiecte. Nevertheless, the righteous byd not so when they were thysse: but eue lyke as p thoughtes of p for the worke, so was also their wickednes.

* Where as certayne men nowe (thowow errout) byd worship dome serpentes and bayne beastes thou sendest a multitude of domine beastes byd the for a vengeance: that they myghte knowe, that loke where wythall a man synneth, by the same also shall he be punished.

* For vnto the almyghty hande, p made p world of naughte, it was not vnpossible, to sende amonge them an heape of Serres, of wood Lyons, or cruell beastes of a strange kynde, such as are vnknewen, or spout fyre, or cast out a smokyng brest, or those horrible sparkes out of the eyes, which myghte not onely destroye them with burninge, but also kyl the with the horrible light. Pee wythout these beastes myght they haue ben slayne wyth one wynde, byng persecuted of their awne workers, and leaue a bynde thowow the byrth of the power.

Nevertheless, thou hast ordeined all thynges in measure, nobye & weight. For p hast euer had great strength & myght, & mo maye to stande the power of thys arme. And wher thou pardoned they synnes. For who wyl who wyl stande agaynst thy iudgement? Or who wyl come before thy face, an auenger of vnyghteous men? Or who wyl blame

21. Ps. 1. 2.

For so much then as thou art ryghteous thy selfe, þe ordrest all thynges ryghteously * & punydest euery hym that hath not deuered to be punydest, & takest hym for a stranger and an aleaut in the lande of thy power.
For thy power is the begynnyng of ryghteousnes: and because thou arte Lorde of all thinges, therfore art thou gracious vnto al.

When men thynke the not to be of a full strenght thou declarest thy power: & boldly delyuerest thou them ouer that knowe þe not.
But thou Lorde of power iudgest quietly, & ordrest vs with greates wyshpype, for thou mayest do as thou wylt:

By suche workes now hast thou taught thy people, that a man also shuld be iust and louynge: and hast made thy chyldren to be of a good hope: for euery whiche thou iudgest, thou geuest rowme to amende from synnes.

For in so much as thou hast punydest, and wroth such diligence delyuered the enemyes of thy seruantes, whych were worthy to dye (where thou wote thou gauest them tyme and place of amendement that they myght turne fro they wyckednes) with howe great dil-gence then punydest þe thyne awne chyldren vnto whose fathers þe hast wroge and made couenauntes of good promyses: So where as thou doest but chasten vs, thou punydest our enemyes diuerse wayes, to þe intent that when we punyde, we shulde remembre thy goodnesse: & whiche we our selues are punydest to put our trust in thy mercy.

Wherfore, where as men haue lyued ignorantly & vnyghteously, thou hast punidest the soze, euery thowde þe same thinges they wrothpyped. * For they wente astraye very longe in the waye of erreure, & helde þe beastes (whych euery they enemyes delypyed) for goddes, lyuynge as chyldren of no vnderstandynge. Therfore hast thou sent a scoynful punyment amonge the, as amonge the chyldren of ignorance. As for such as wold not be reformed by those scoynes and rebukes, they felt the worthy punyment of God For the thynges that they suffred they bare them vnpatiently, beyng not content in the but vnywyllynge. And when they perisshed by the same thynges that they toke for god-des, they knowledged then, that there was, but one true God, whome afore they wolde not knowe: therfore came the ende of they damnacion vpon them.

The. xiii. Chapter.

All thynges be bayne, except the knowledge of God. Idolaters and Idoles are marked.

Myne are all men, which haue not knowledge of God: as were they that out of þe good thinges whych are sene, knewe not hym, þe of hym selfe is euerylastynge. Rather toke they so much regarde of the workes that are made, as to

to know, who was the craftesma of the some toke the fyre, some the wynde oꝝ some the courle of the starres, some the water, some toke Sonne and Moone, oꝝ the myghtes of heauen whych rule the earth, foꝝ gouern. But though they had such pleasure in theyr bewty, & they thought the to haue goddess: yet shulde they haue knowen, much moze saynt he is that made the.

For the maker of beuty hath ordeined all thynges. Oꝝ yf they marueled at the gouern & woꝝkes of them, they shulde haue perceyued thereby, that he which made these thynges, is myghtyer then they.

For by the greatnesse & bewty of the creature, the maker thereof maye playnly be knowen. For wythstandynge they are the least to be blamed, that seke God, and wold praise hym, and yet myse. And why? foꝝ so much as they go about in hys woꝝkes and after them, it is a token, & they regarde and holde much of his woꝝkes that are sene and be it they are not wholly to be excused.
For yf they vnderstandynge & knowledge is so great, that they can diserne the woꝝld and the creatures, why do they not rather praise out the Lorde therof?

But vnhappy are they, and amonge the least is theyr hope, that call them Goddess which are but the woꝝkes of mens handes: gylde, syluer, and the thyng that is founde in by comynge, the similitude of beastes, or any wayne stone that hath bene made by hande of olde. Oꝝ as when a carpenter cut-teth downe a tree out of the woode, and parte of the bark of it conynge: and so with the one part maketh a vessel to be vsed, and maketh meate wyth the resydue. As foꝝ the other parte that is left, whych is profitable for nothinge: foꝝ it is a croked pece of wood and full of knobbes) he carueth it diligently to make hys vanite, and accordynge to the knowledge of hys conynge, he geueth it some proportion, fashioneth it after the symili-tude of a man, oꝝ maketh it lyke some beast and maketh it ouer with red, and paynteth it, & what foule spot is in it he casteth some coloure vpon it.

Then maketh he a conuenient tabernacle for it, lithereth it in the wall, & maketh it fast with yron, prouidyng so foꝝ it, lest it happē to fall: foꝝ it is well knowen, that it can not stand itself. And why? it is but an ymage, & must of necessity be helpe.

Then goeth he & offereth of hys goodes vnto it, foꝝ hys chyldren and foꝝ his wyfe: he se-keth helpe at it, he asketh counsell at it: he is as admaied to speake vnto it that hath no power for healeth, he maketh his petitiō vnto it that is speke: foꝝ lyfe, he prayeth vnto it that is dead: he calleth vpon hym foꝝ helpe that is not able to helpe hym selfe: & to sende hym a good iourney, he prayeth hym & may not go. And in al the thynges that he taketh in hāde (whether it be to obtayne any thyng oꝝ to woꝝke) he prayeth vnto hym, that can do no maner of good.

The. xliii. Chapter.

The detestacion and abhominacion of ymages.
A curse of them, & of hym that maketh them. The cuelles that come of ydolatre.

Gayne, another man purposyng to sayle, and begynnynge to take hys iourney thorow the ragynge see, calleth foꝝ helpe vnto a stock that is farre weaker the the tree that beareth him. For as foꝝ it, couetousnes of money hath soude it out, and the cra ftes-man made it wyth hys comynge.

But thy prouidece, O father gouerneth, all thynges fro the begynnynge: * For thou hast made a waye in the see, and a sure path in the myddes of y waues: declarynge ther-by that thou hast power to helpe in al thyngges, yea, though a mā wente to the see with out thyp. Neuerthelesse, that the woꝝkes of thy wple dome shulde not be wayne, * thou hast caused an arke to be made: and therfore do men comynge to the y? lyues to a final pece of wood, passynge ouer the see in a thyp, and are saued.

* For in the old tyme also whē the proud giannes perished, he (in whom y hope was lefte to increate the woꝝld) wente into the shyppe, whych was gouerned thorowe thy hande, & so lefte sede behynde hym vnto the woꝝld. For happy is y free where thorowe ygderousnes cometh: but cursed is y ydol that is made wyth hādes. * yea, both it & he that made it. he, because he made it: and it, because it was called god, where as it is but a fragile thyng. * For the vngodly and hys vngodlynes are both lyke abhominable vnto God. Eue so the woꝝke and he that made it also, shalbe punyshed together. Therefore shall there a plage come vpon the ydoles of the heathen: foꝝ oute of the creature of God they are become an abhominacion, a tempta-cion vnto the soules of men, and a snare foꝝ the fete of the vntwyse. And why? the sekynge out of ydoles is the begynnynge of whoꝝe-dome, and the byngynge vp of them is the destrucccion of lyfe. For they were not from the begynnynge, nether shall they continue foꝝ ever. The welch ydelnes of men hath founde them oute vpon earth, therfore shall they come shortly to an ende. When a father mourned foꝝ hys sonne that was taken awaye from hym, he made hym an ymage (in al the hāse) of hys dead sonne: & so began to woꝝship hym as god, which was but a dead man, & ordeined his seruantes to offere vnto hym. Thus by proces of tyme & thorowe an vngacious custome, this error was kept: Ecce it as a

as a lawe, and tyrantes compelled men by violence to honour ymages. As for those that were so farre of that men myghte not worshyp them presently, they picture was brought fro farre (lyke the ymage of a kyng whom they woldt honour) to p'intent that wth great diligence they myghte worshyp hym whiche was farre of, as though he had bene present. Agayne the synfuler conyng of the craftesman gaue the ignoraunt also a great occasion to worshyp ymages. For the workman wyllynge to do hym a pleasure p' set hym a worke, laboured wth al his con-nyng to make p' ymage of the best fashon.

D And so (thow the be wty of the worke) the comt people was dysceyued, in so much that they toke him now for a God, which a lytle afore was but honored as a man. And this was p'erroure of mans lyfe, whē mē (ether for to serue theyr owne affection, or to do some pleasure vnto higes) ascribed vnto stones & stockes the name of god, which ought to be geuen vnto no man.

Whereouer, this was not ynough for the that they erred in the knowlege of God: but where as they lyued in the great warres of ignoraunce, those many and greates plagis called they peace. For ether they slue theyr owne chyliden, and offered them, or dyd sacrifice in the nyght season, or els helde vnto alnable watches: so that they kept nether life nor marriage cleane: but ether one slue another to death maliciously, or els greued hys neighbour with aduouty. And thus were

E al thynges myxt together, bloud, m' slaughter, theft, dissimulation, corrupciō, vnfaithfulness, sedicion, perjurye, disquietynge of good men, vnthāfulness, despyng of sou-les, chaungynge of byeth, vnstedfastnes of marriage, mysorder of aduoutye and vncl-nesse. And why? the honourynge of abhominable ymages is the cause, the begynnyng and ende of all euell. For they that worshyp Idols, ether they are mad when they be me-ry, or prophete lyes, or lyue vngodly, or els lyghly forswear them selues: For in so muche as they trust is in the Idols (whiche haue nether soule nor vnderstāding) though they sweare falsely yet they thynke it shall not hurte them.

Therefore cometh a greates plage vpon them, and that worst helpe: for they haue an euell oppynion of God, geuynge hede vnto Idols, swearynge vnuly to dysceane, and despylynge ryghteousnes. For theyr swea-ryng is no vertue, but a plage of them that synne, and goeth euer with the offence of the vngodlye.

The. xv. Chapter.

The hope of the fapfull, praynynge the mercy of God, for whose graces sake they serue not Idols.

B At thou (O our God) arte swete & longe suffrynge, and true, and in mercy o' drest thou al thynges.

Though we synne, yet are we thyne, for we knowe thy strength. If we syn not, the are we sure, that thou regardest vs.
For to knowe the, is partye ryghteousnes.
Pea, to knowe thy righteousnes and power is the rote of immortalite. As for the thyng that men haue founde out thow theyr euil science, it hath not disceaued vs: as the pain-tyng of p' picture (an vnprofitable labour) and carued ymage, wth dyuers colours, whose syght entyleth the ignoraunt: so that he honoureth and loueth the picture of a deade ymage that hath no soule.

Nevertheless, they that loue suche euell thynges, are worst type of death: they p' trust in them, they that make the, they that loue them, and they that honour them. The potter also taketh and tempereth softe earth, in boureth it, and geueth it the fashon of a vessell, what soeuer serueth for oure vse: and so of one peece of claye he maketh some cleane vessel for seruice, and some contrarye. But where to euery vessel serueth, that knoweth the potter hym selfe. So wth hys bayne laboure he maketh a God of the same claye: this doth euen he, whyche a lytle afore was made of earth hym selfe, and wth in a lytle whyle after (whē he dyeth) turneth to earth agayne.

Notwithstanding, he careth not the more because he shall labour, nor because his lyfe is short: but stryuerth to excel goldsmithes, the syluer smithes and cooper smithes, & ca-kerth it for an honour to make bayne thynges. For his herte is ashyes, hys hope is but bayne erth, & his lyfe is more vyle the claye for so much as he knoweth not his owne maker, that gaue hym hys soule to worke, and bryethed in hym the byeth of lyfe. They cou-oure lyfe but a pastyme, and oure commucation to be but a market, and that men shal-euer be gettyng, and that by euell meanes.
Now he that of earth maketh fraile vessels and ymages, knoweth hymselfe to offende about all other.

All the enemyes of thy people & that hold the in subieccion, are vnwyse, vnhappy, and excedynge proude vnto theyr owne soules: for they iudge all the Idols of the heathen to be goddes, whych nether haue eye syght to se, nor noses to smell, nor eares to heare, nor synners or handes for to grope: & as for theyr fete, they are to slowe to go. For man made the, & he p' hath but a borrowed spete, fashioned them. But no mā can make a God lyke vnto hym: for seynge he is but mortall hym selfe, it is but mortall that he maketh wth vnryghteous handes. He hym selfe is better then they whom he worshypeth, for he lyued

though he was mortall, so dyd never. Pea, they wozthyppe beastes also, which are most miserable: for compare thin that can not fele vnto the, and they are made the those. Yet is there not one of these beastes, that with hys syght can behold any thyng, netter haue they geuen praple any thanks vnto God.

¶ The. xvi. Chapter.

The punishment of Idolaters, and the benefit that cometh vnto the faithful.

Of these and suche other thynges haue they suffred wozthyppe puny-shment & thozow the multitude of beastes are they rote out. In steede of the wozthypmentes thou hast graciously adored thyn owne people, and gyven them the desyre & they longed for: a new & freshe taste, & preparyng the quaples to be meate: to the intent that (by the thynges which were shewed and sente vnto the) that were so greedy of meate, myght be drawen euen from the desyre that was in theyr hertes. But these within short tyme were brought vnto pouerte, and tasted a newe meate. For it was requisite & (without any doubt) destruction shulde come vpon those which bled by synne, & to shewe only vnto the howe theyr enemyes were destroyed for when the cruell woodnesse of the heathen came vpon them, they pershed thorough the thynges of the cruel serpent.

For withstandyng, thy wyath endured perpetually, but they were put in feare in a lytle season, that they myght be refourmed by a token of saluacion, to remember the commaundment of thy lawe. For he that is converted, was not healed by the thing of the lawe, but by the. O sauoure of all.
For thou the weidst thyn enemyes, & thyng, which delyuerest from al euil. As when they were bytten w grethop pysses, they died, for they were wozthypped by such. But netter the teth of dragon, or of venemous woymes ouercame the children, for thy mercy was euer by the thyng the. Therefore were they punyshed for the thynges, but hastily were they drawn agayne, lest they shuld fal into so depe peruersion, that they myght not vse thy lawe. It was netter herbe nor playster that healed the to helth, but thy word (O Lorde) which healed al thynges. It is & (O Lorde) that haue the power of lyfe and death: & thou drawest into deatnes dooze, and byngest vp the soule, and when hys spere goeth in, it turneth not agayne, netter may he drawe the soule that is taken away. It is possible to escape thy hande. For the thyng that wolde not knowe the, were drawen by & strength of thyn arme: wyth strange waters, hayles and raynes were they persecuted, and thozow the fyre were they consumed. For it was a wonderous thyng that fyre myght do more then water which quengeth all thynges: but the wyldbe is the auenger of the ryghteous. Some tyme was the fyre so tame, that & beastes which were sent to punysh the vngodly, byente not: and that because they shulde se and knowe, that they were persecuted with the punyshment of God. And somtyme byente the fyre in the water on euery syde, that it myght destroye the vngodly nacio of & earth. * Agayne thou hast fed thyn owne people with Aun-gels fode, & sent the bread redy from heauen (wythout theyr labour) beynge very pleasant and of good taste. And to shewe thy ryches & swetnesse vnto thy chyldren, thou gauest euery one theyr desyre, so & euery man myght take what lyked hym best. But the snowe and ple abode the violence of the fyre and melted not: & they myght knowe, that the fyre burnyng in the hayle and rayne, destroyed the frute of the enemyes, & fyre also forgot hys strength agayne: that the ryghteous myght be noyshed. For the creature that serueth the (which arte the maker) is fearle in punyshyng & vngodly, but is easy & gentle to do good, vnto suche as put theyr trust in the. Therefore dyd all thynges alter at & same tyme, & were al obediēt vnto thy grace, which is the noyse of al thynges, accordyng to the desyre of them that had neede therof: & thy chyldre (O Lorde) whom thou louest, myght knowe, & that it is not & nature and the growyng of frutes that fedeth men, but that it is thy worde, which preserueth them that put theyr trust in the.

For loke what might not be destroyed with the fyre, as soone as it was warmed with a lytle shune beame, it melted: & al mē myght knowe, that thanks ought to be geue vnto the before the shune ryle, & that thou oughtest to be wozthyped before & dape springe For the hope of the vnthankfull shall melte awaye as the wynter ple, and perishe as water, that is not necessarye.

derouslye vexed: for the corner where they myght not kepe them from feare (because þe sounde came downe and vexed them) yea, many terrible and straunge byspons made them afrayed.

B No power of the fyre myght geue them lyghte, nether myght the cleare flammes of þe starrs lighten þe horrible nyght. For they appeared vnto them a sodayne fyre, verye dzedfull: At the whych (whē they sawe no-thing) they were so afrayed, þe they thought the thyng whych they sawe, to be the moze fearful. * As for the sozcery & enchauntement that they vsed, it came to derysyon, and the proude wysedome was brought to shanie. For they that prompted to dyspue awaye the fearfulness and dzed from the weake soules were lyke for feare them selues, and that to scozne. And though none of the wōders feared them, yet were they afrayed at the beastes whych came vpon thē, & at the byssinge of the serpent. In so much that wyth trem- blyng they sowned, and said they sawe not the aye, whych no man yet maye escape.

C For it is an heuie thyng, when a mans owne conscience beareth recorde of his wyckednes and condemneth hym. And why? a vexed and wounded conscience, taketh euer cruell thynges in hande. * Fearfulness is no chynge els, but a declaryng that a mā seeketh helpe and defence, to answer for hym selfe. And loke how much lesse the hope is within the moze is the vncerteynte of the matter, for the which he is punished. But they that cam in the myghty nyght, slept the slepe that fell vpo them from vnder and from aboue: som- tyme were they afrayed thowow the feare of the wōders, and sometye they were so weake that they sowned wythal: for an ha- sty and sodayne fearfulness came vpon thē.

Afterwarde, yf any of them had fallē, he was kepte and put in pzeon, but wythoute charynes. But yf any dwelte in a byllage, yf he had ben an hearde or hus bandmā he suffe- red intollerable necessity: for they were all bounde wyth one chayne of darkenesse.

Whether it were a blaspynge wynde, or a swete songe of the bydes amōge the thycke bzaunches of the trees, or the vehemency of hasty runnyng water, or great noyse of þe fallynge downe of stones, or the playenge & runnyng of beastes whome they sawe not, or the myghty noyse of roaryng beastes, or the sounde that answereth agayne in the hye mountaynes: it made thē sowne for ve- ry feare. For all the earth shyned w cleare lyght, and no man was hyndered in hys la- boure. Whelp vpon them there fell an heuie nyght, an ymage of darkenesse that was to come vpon them. Yea, they were vnto them selues the moost heuie & horrible darkenes.

C The. xviij. Chapter.

The fyre lyght that the ysracites had in egypt. The persecution of the sarchus. The Rois smote all the fyre bozme of egypte. The spate of the poe- ple in the wyldernes. Aaron sode destroyeth the fyre and the drabe, wch hys consoure.

Nethertheless, thy saynctes had a very great light (and þe enemyes herd their voyce but they sawe not þe fyre of them.) And because they suffred not þe same thynges they magnified the: & they that were vexed afore (because they were not hurte now) thanked the, and belounged the (o God) that there myght be a dyfference. * Therefore had they a burning pyre of fyre to leade them in the vnkowen waye, and thou gauest them the Sunne for a fre gyfte without any hurt. Reason it was that they shulde want lyght, and be put in the pzeon of darknes, whych kept thy chyldzen in cap- tiuete, by whom the vncorrupt lyght of the lawe of the worlde was for to be geuen.

* When they thought to slape the babes of the ryghteous (one beyng layed out, & pre- serued to be leader vnto the other.) * thou broughtest out the whole myltitude of the chyldzen, and destroyedst the in the myghte water. Of that nyght were our fathers certyfyed afore, that they knowynge vnto what othes they had geuen credence, might be of good cheare. Thus thy people receiued the health of the righteous, but the vngodly were destroyed. For lyke as thou hast putte out enemies, so hast thou promoted vs wch thou callest afore. For the ryghteous chyldzen of the good men offred secretly, and ob- dyed the lawe of ryghteousnes vnto vnto: that the iust shulde receaue good and euil in lyke maner. syngynge prayes vnto the fa- ther of all men. Agayne, there was herde an vnconuenient voyce of the enemyes, and a pyteous crye for chyldzen that were beway- led. The master and the seruante were punyshed in lyke maner. For they altogether had innumerable that dyed one death.

* Neither were þe lyfynge sufficient to by- ryte þe deed, for in þe twynklynge of an eye, a noblest nacion of thē was destroyed. As oft as God helped them afore, yet wolde it not make thē beleue: but in the destructiō of the fyre bozme they knowleged, that it was the people of God. For whyle all thynges were styll & whē the nyght was in the myddel of her course, thy almyghty worde (o Lorde) leapt downe from heauen out of thy royall throne, as a rough mā of warre, in the myd- del of the lāde þe was destroyed: & the sharpe swerde perfourmed they: strait commaunde- ment, standynge & fallynge al thynges wch death: yea, it sode vpon the earth and rea- ched vnto the heauen. Then the lyght of the euil dreames vexed them sodenly, and fear- fulnesse helle came vpon them vnawares.

Then laye there one here, another there, half dead, half quene, and the word of cause of death. For the visions that vered the world the theise thinges afore: so that they were not ignorant, wherfore they perished. The temptation of death touched the right also, and amonge the multitude in the world there was insurrection, but they were endured not longe. For the blameles man wente in all the hall, and toke the baton vpon hym, brought forth the weapon of manifestation: euen prayer and the censures of reconciliation: set hym selfe agaynst the wrath, and so brought the miserie to an end: declaringe thereby that he was the sonne of man. For he ouercame not the multitude with bodily power, nor with weapons of warre: but with the worde he subdued him that vered hym, puttinge them in remembrance of the othe and couenaunt made vnto the fathers. For when the dead were fallen downe by heapes one vpon an other, he was in the middell, pacified the wrath, and turned the wape vnto lypunge. And why? so longe garment was all the bewty, and the foure towres of the stones was the gloire of the fathers grauen, and the maiestie was written in the crowne of his heade. And these the destroyer gaue place and was sharpe of them: for it was onely a temptation worthy of wrath.

The xix. Chapter.

The death of the Egyptians, and the great hope of the Hebrewes. The meat that was given at the death of the people. The elementes serve not only to the will of God, but also to the will of man.

And for the vngodlye, the wrath came vpon them without mercy vnto the ende. For he knewe before what shoulde happel vnto them, how that (when they had consented to let the go, & had sent out with great diligence) they wold repente, & folow hym. For when they were yet mourninge and makinge lamentacion by the graues of the deade, they deuised another folpish way: so that they persecuted them in theyr synge, whome they had caste out afore with synge. Wherby necessitie also brought the vnto this ende, for they had cleane forgoten the thynges that happened vnto them afore. But the thynges that was wantynge at theyr punishment, was requisite so to be fulfilled vpon them with tormentes, that the people myghte haue a maruelous patience thow, and that these myghte synde a strange death.

Then was euery creature fashioned a newe of newe, accordynge to the will of theyr maker, obeyntge the comaundementes that the chyldezen myght be kept without hurte. For the cloude ouershadowed theyr tentes, & the drye earth appeared, wher afore was water: so that in the red see there was a wape without impediment: and the great depe became a grene felde: where thow al the people went that were defended with the harte synge the wonderous and maruelous workes. For as the hoxles, pray synge the Lord which haddest deliuered them: & why? they were yet myndfull of the thynges that happened whyle they dwelt in the lande: how the grounde brought forth lyes in steade of castell: & howe the rpuer scauled with the multitude of frogges in steade of fynes.

But at the last they sawe a newe creation of byrdes, what tyme as they were disceaued w lust, and despyed delicate meates. For when they were speakynge of theyr appetite, the quaples came vnto them fro the see, and punishmentes came vpon the synners, not without the tokens why the came to passe afore by the vehemency of the streames: for they suffered worthelpe accordynge to theyr wyckednesses, they deale so abhominably and churlyshly w straungers. Some receaued no vnknewe gesses, some brought the straungers into bondage that dyd them good. Welyde all these thynges there were some, that not onely receyued no straungers with theyr wylls, but persecuted thole also, and dyd them much euell, that receaued them gladly. Therfore were they punished with blindness, lyke as they that were couered with sodayne darkenelle at the doores of the ryghteous, so that euery one soughte the entraunce of his doore.

Thus the elementes turned into them selues, lyke as when one tune is chaiged vpon an instrument of musyke, and yet all the resydue kepe theyr melodye, wherby maye easily be perceyued, by the synge of the thynges that are come to passe. The drye lande was turned into a watery, & the thinge that afore swamme in the water, wente nowe vpon the drye grounde. The fyre had power in the water (contrary to his owne vertue) & the water forgot his owne kinde to quench Agayne, the flames of nopsome beastes hurte not the fleshe of them that went with them, neither melted they the yce, which els melteth lightly. In all thynges hast thou promoted the people (o Lord) and brought the to honour: & hast not dispised the, but alway, & in all places hast thou stande by them.

The ende of the booke of wysdome. Eccl. iii. The

The booke of The booke of Iesus the sonne of Syrach/ whych is called in latin Ecclesiasticus.

The prologue of Iesus the sonne of Syrach vnto hys booke.

Any and great men haue declared wysdome vnto vs out of the lawe, out of the prophetes, and out of other that folowed them. In the whych thinges Israel ought to be commended, by the reason of doctryne and wysdome: Therefore, they that haue it and reade it, shold not only the selues be wylle there to shewe, but serue other also wylth teachyng and wyltynge.

After that my graundfather Iesus had geuen diligent labour to reade the lawe, the prophetes and other bookes that were left vs of our fathers, & had wel exercised hym selfe therein: he purposed also to wylte some thyng of wysdome and good maners, to the intent that they whiche were wyllynge to learne & to be wylle, myght haue the more vnderstandynge, and be the more apte to leade a good conuersation.

Wherefore, I exhorte you to receaue it louingly, to reade it with diligence, and to take it in good worth, though our wordes be not so eloquent as the famous orators. For the thyng that is wyltten in the hebrue tonge, soundeth not so wel when it is translated into another speche. Not onely this booke of myne, but also the lawe, the prophetes and other bookes sounde farre otherwylle, then they do, whē they are spoken in theyr owne language.

Howe in the xxxviii. yere when I came into Egypte in the tyme of Ptolomey Euergetes: and continued there all my lyfe, I gat lybertie to reade and wylte many good thynges.

Wherefore, I thought it good and necessarie, to bestowe my diligence and trowple to interprete this booke. And consyderynge that I had tyme, I laboured and dyd my best to pefourme this booke, and to bynge it vnto lycht:

that the straungers also whych are dysposed to learne, myght applie them selues vnto good maners and lyue accordynge to the lawe of the Lorde.

The first Chapter.

Wysdome proceedeth and cometh of God. A people of the feare of God, myghtynesse is a degree to come by wysdome.

Vnto whom hath the roote of wysdome ben declared: Or who hath knowen her wit: Vnto whom hath the doctrine of wysdome ben discovered & shewed: & who hath vnderstande the manyfolde entrance of her?

There is one: euen the best, & maker of all thynges, the Almyghty, the kyng, of power (of whom men ought to stande greatly in awe) which syteth vpon hys throne beinge a God of dominion: he hath created her thow the holy goost: he hath sene her, nobred her, & measured her: he hath poured her out vpon al his workes, and vpon all fleshe, accordynge to his gyfte: he geueth her recheise vnto them & loue hym: The feare of & Lorde is wysdome and triumphe, gladnes and a ioyfull crowne: The feare of the Lorde maketh a mery herte, geueth gladnesse, ioye and longe lyfe. Who so feareth the Lorde, it shall go wel with hym at the last, and in the daye of hys death he shall be blessed.

The loue of God is honorable wysdome: loke vnto whome it appeareth, they loue it for they se what woderous thynges it doth. * The feare of the Lorde is the begynnyng of wysdome, & was made with the saythfull in the mothers wombe: it shall go with the chosen women, and shall be knowen of the ryghteous and saythfull. The feare of the Lorde is the ryghte Gods scrupel, that pierseth heart and iustifyeth the better, and giveth with gladnesse. Who so feareth the Lord shal be happye, and whan he hath neede of comfort, he shal be blessed. To feare God is the wisdom that maketh ryche, & bringeth all good with her. She fylleth the whole house with her gyftes, and the garners with her measure. The feare of the Lord is the crowne of wisdom, and giveth plenteous peace & health. He hath sene her & noblyd her: (both she is the gyfte of God) knowledge and understandynge of wysedome hath he poured out as rapyne, & them that helde her fast, he hath brought vnto honoure.

The feare of the Lord is the dore of wysdom, and her bryanches are longe lyfe. In the treasures of wysedome is understanding and deuotion of knowledge, but wysedome is adorned of synners. The feare of the Lord dymyth out synne, for he is without feare can not be made ryghteous, and his wyllfull labours in his owne destruccyon. A patient man wyll suffre vnto the tyme, and then shall he haue the rewarde of ioye. A good under-standynge wyll hyde his wordes for a tyme, many mes lippes shall speake of his wis-dome. In the treasures of wysedome is the deuotion of doctrine, but the synner abhorreth the word of God. My sonne, yf thou desire wysedome, kepe the commaundement, and God shall gyue her vnto the: for the feare of the Lord is wysedome and murtoure, he gylt pleasure in sayth & lounge mekenes, and he shal fynd the treasures therof. He not obedient and vnfaithful to the feare of the Lord, and come not vnto hym with a double herte. He not an hypocrite in the sighte of men, and take good hede what thou speakest.
Marke well these thynges, lest thou happen trouble and bypynge thy soule to dishonoure, & God discouer thy secrettes, & cast the downe in the myddes of the congregacion: because thou wouldest not receaue the feare of God, and because thy herte is full of faynednes & deceite.

The ii. Chapter.

The exhorteth the seruantes of God to ryghteousnes, ioye, understandynge, and patience, and exhorteth him that feareth god, to helpe, to hope, & to loue, because god neither confoundeth nor forsaketh them that trust in hym. A curse vpon the scorner, feare, and im-pietye of chylde.

My sonne, yf thou wilt come into the seruice of God, stand faste in ryghteousnes & feare, & arme thy soule to temptaciō: sette thyn herte & be-hauour downe thynne care, receaue the word of understandynge, and thynke not awaye, whan thou arte enuyled. Hold the fast of God, ioyne thy selfe vnto hym, and suffer that thy lyfe maye encrease at the laste.
What sorow happeneth vnto the, receaue it:

suffre in heynesse, and be pacifit in thy trouble. * For lyke as golde and syluer are tryed in the fyre, euen so are acceptable men in the fornace of aduersitie. Beleue in God, and he shal helpe the: orde thy waye a ryghte, & put thy trust in hym. Hold fast his feare & grow therin. Ope that feare the Lord take sure holde of his mercy: thynke not awaye from hym, that ye fall not. Ope that feare the Lord, beleue hym, and your rewarde shal not be emptye. Ope that feare the Lord, put your trust in hym, and mercy shal come vnto you for pleasure. Ope that feare the Lord set your loue vpon hym, & your hertes shal be lychtened.

Consider the olde generacions of men: Quod ye chyliden & marke the well: * was there euer any one confounded, that put his truste in the Lord? Who euer continued in his feare, and was forsaken? Or whome dyd he euer despyse, that called faithfully vpon hym?
For God is gracious & merciful, he forgyueth synnes in the tyme of trouble, and is a defender for all the that seke hym in the truth.
Alas be vnto hym, & hath a double harte, wyched lippes & euell occupied handes, & to the synner that goeth two maner of wayes.
Alas be vnto the that are loose of herte, which put not their trust in God, and therefore shal they not be defended of hym. Alas be vnto the that haue lost pacifite, forsaken the ryghte wayes, and are turned backe into frowarde wayes. What wyll they do whan the Lord shall begynne to vset them?

They that feare the Lord wyll not mys-trust his wordes, & they that loue him, wyll kepe his commaundement. They that feare the Lord, wyll seke out the thynges that are pleasaunt vnto hym, & they that loue him, shal fulfill his lawe. They that feare the Lord wyll prepare theyr hertes, and humble their soules in his syght. They that feare the Lord, kepe his commaundement, and will be patient tyll they se him face to face:
* better it is for vs to fall into the handes of the Lord, then into the handes of men: for his mercy is as great as hym selfe.

The iii. Chapter.

To our father & mother ought we to geue double honour. Of the blyssynge and curse of the father & mother. No man ought ouercuriously to search out the secrettes of God.

The chyliden of wysedome are a congregacyon of the ryghteous, & their exerccise is obedynce & loue. Heare me your father: O my deare chyliden, and do thereafter that ye maye be safe. * For the Lord wyll haue the father honoure of the chyliden: and loke what a mother commaundeth her chyliden to do, he wyll haue it kepte. Who so honoureth his father, his syn-nes shal be forgyuen hym: & he that ho-

He þat honoureth his father, shall haue a lōge lyfe: and he that is obedient for the Lordes sake, hys mother shall haue ioye of hym.

B He that feareth the Lorde, honoureth hys father & mother, and doth them seruice, as it were vnto the Lord hym selfe. Honoure thy father in dede, in word & in all pacifce, that thou mayest haue goddes blessing, and his blessing shall a byde wyth the at the last.

* 51. 179. 1. 2.

* The blessing of þat father buyldeth vp the houses of the chyliden, but the mothers curse roteth out þat foundacyōs. Reioyce not wyth thy father is repproued, for it is not honoure vnto the, but ashamē. For the worship of a mans father is hys owne worship, & where the father is wythout honoure, it is the dishonour of þat sonne. If sonne, make much of thy father in hys age, & greue hym not as longe as he lyueth. And yf his vnderstandyng faile, haue pacience wyth hym, & despise him not in thy strength. For þat good dede that thou shewest vnto thy father, shall not be forgotten, & whā thou thy self wanst it shall be rewarded the (and for thy mothers offence thou shalt be recompensed wyth good, yee, it shall be founded for the in ryghte oulnes) and in the daye of trouble thou shalt be remembered: thy synnes also shall melte awaye, lyke as the yle in the saye warme wether.

C He that forsaketh hys father, shall come to shame: and he that despyeth his mother, is cursed of God. If sonne, perfourme thy workes with lowing mekenes, so shalt thou be loued aboue other mē. The greater thou arte, þat more humble thy selfe (in all thynges) and thou shalt fynde fauoure in the syght of God. For great power belōgeth only vnto God, and he is honoured of the lowlye.

* 51. 179. 1. 2.

* Seke not out þat thynges that are aboue thy capacite, and learne not the grounde of suche thynges as are to myghte for the: but loke what God hath commaunded the, thinke vpon that alwaye, & be not curious in many of his workes. For it is not nedfull for the to se with thine eyes the thynges that are secrete. Make not thou to much learne in superfluous thynges, and be not curious in many of his workes: for many thynges are shewed vnto þat already, which be aboue þat capacite of men. The medlyng wth such hath begyled many a man, & tangled they: wyttē in vanitie. Nowe þe that loueth paryll shall perishe therein.

D In harde herte shall feare euell at þat last: (and he that loueth daunger, shall perishe therein) and herte that goeth two wayes, shall not prosper: and he that is froward of hert will euer be worse and worse. A wyche herte shall be laden with sorowes, and a godly synner will beape one synne vpon another. The coucell of þat prond hath no health for the plante of synne shall be rooted out in them, and not knowen. The herte of hym þat hath vnderstandyng shall perceauē þe thynges, and a good eare wyl gladly herken vnto wylsome. An hert that is wyle and hath vnderstandyng, wyl abstayne fro synnes, & increase in the workes of ryghteoulnes. Water quenched burnyng fyre, & mercy reconyleth synnes. God hath respect vnto him that is thankfull: he thinketh vpon hym agaynst the tyme to come: so þat when he falleth, he shall fynde a stronge holde.

The.iiii. Chapter.

¶ Times must be done wyth all mekenes, the shewe of wylsome & her frute. A iudge oughten be mercifull. An exhortacion to eschue euill and to do good.

M If sonne, * defraude not the poore of hys almes, & turne not awaye thine eyes from hym þat hath nede. Despyse not an hongry soule, & the fyre not þat poore in his neede: greue not þat herte of him þat is helpelesse, & wythout we not þat gyfte fro þat nedfull. Refuse not þat prayer of one þat is in trouble, turne not awaye thy face from the ney. Call not thine eyes asyde fro the poore, for any euill wyll, that þat geue him not occasion to speake euell of þat. For yf he charynge of þat in the bytternes of his soule, hys prayer shall be perde: euen þe þat made him shall heare him. Be courteous vnto þat company of þat poore, humble the soule vnto þat elder, & bowe downe thy head to a man of worshippe. Let it not greue the to bowe downe thine eare vnto the poore, but paye thy dette, and geue hym a frendly answer, & that wyth mekenesse.

* Deluyce him that suffereth wronge from the hand of the oppressour, and be not fayne harted whā thou syttest in iudgement. Be mercifull vnto the fatherlesse as a father, & be in frende of an hal bande vnto they: mother: so shalt thou be as an obedient sonne of the byest: and he shall lone þat more then the mother doth. Wylsome wytheth lyfe vnto her chyliden, receaueth them that leue her, & will go before the in the waye of ryghteoulnes. He that loueth her, loueth lyfe: and she that seke her diligētye, shall haue great ioye. They that kepe her, shall haue the heritage of lyfe: for where she enureth in, there is the blessing of God. They that honour her, shall be the seruauntes of the holy one, and they that lone her, are beloued of God. Alho so greueh eare vnto her, shall not be heathen: and he that hath respect vnto her, shall dwell safely.

Jesus the sonne of Syrach. Ifo. xxxviii.

That beleueth her, shall haue her in possession, and his generation shall endure: for he shall not be fallen. He doth go wth him, and shall hym amonge the best. Feare, drede, & temptation shall be brynged vpon hym, and he shall be in her doctrine, tyl she haue so proued hym in hys thoughtes, that he comyt no synne vnto her. Then shall she stablyshe hym, brynging hym wth hym vnto him, make hym a glad man, shewe him her secretes, and bryng vpon hym the treasures of knowlege, vnderstandynge of ryghteousnes. But yf he go wronge, she shall forsake hym, & geue hym ouer into the bandes of hys enemye.

Thy sonne, make much of þ tyme, eschue thy synne that is euell, & for thy lyfe shame not to saue the trueth. For there is a shame that bryngeth synne, & ther is a shame that bryngeth wothyn and fauoure: * Accept no person after thine owne wyll, that thou be not confounded to thine owne decaye. Be not ashamed of thy nychtbour in his aduersitee, and kepe not backe thy coucell whā it maye do good, neyther hyde thy wysedome in thy bewty. For in the tonge is wysedome hidden, so is vnderstandynge knowlege & learninge in the talkynge of the wyle, & lited humylyte in the woordes of ryghteousnes: In wyspe speake agaynst the word of trueth, but be ashamed of the lyes of thine owne ignorance. Shame not to confesse thine error, and submytte not thy self vnto euery man because of synne. Withstande not the lye of the myghty, & stryue thou not agaynst the streame. But for righteounes take payne with al thy soule, & for the trueth stryue thou vnto death, and God shall fyght for þ agaynst thine enemyes. Be not hasty in thy iudge, neyther slacke & negligēt in thy woordes. Be not as a Lion in thine owne house, destroyng thy household folkes, and oppressing them þ are vnder the. * Let not thine mouth be stretched out to receaue, and shutte whan thou shouldest geue.

Curse this may we not put any confidence. The vengeance of God ought to be feared and to repent our maye we not be slowe.

Rust not vnto thy ryches, * & say not: tush, I haue ynough for my lyf. (For it shall not help in þ tym of vengeance and temptacion.) Followe not the lust of thine owne herte in thy strenght, and sape not: tush, how haue I had strenght, or who will bryng me vnder because of my woordes: for doubtles God shall avenge it. And sape not: I haue synned, and what euell hath happened me: For the almyghty is a patient rewarder.

Because thy synne is forgiven the, be not therefore wthout feare, neyther deape one synne vpon another. * And say not tush, the mercy of the Lord is great, he shall forgive me my synnes, be thy neuer so many. * For lyke as he is mercyfull, so goeth wyath fro hym also, & hys indignacyon cometh downe vpon synners.

Make no tarpenge to turne vnto þ Lord and put not of from daye to daye: for suddenly shall hys wyath come, and in the tyme of vengeance he shall destroye the. * Trust not in wyched ryches for they shall not helpe the in the daye of punishment and wyath. Be not carped about to euery wynde, & go not into euery waye: for so dothe the synner that hath a double tonge. Stāde fast in the way of þ Lord, be stedfast in thy vnderstandynge, abyde by the woerde, and folowe þ woerde of peace and ryghteousnes. Be gentle to heare the woerde of God, that thou mayest vnderstande it, & make a true answer with wysedome. * Be swyfte to heare, but slowe & patient in gynyng answer. If thou hast vnderstandynge, shapen thy nychtbour an answer: If no lay thine hāde vpo thy mouth lest thou be trapped in an vndiscrete word, and so confounded. Honour and wothynne is in a mans wise talkynge, but the tonge of the vndiscrete is his owne destruction. * Be not a prey accuser as longe as thou lyest, and vse no sleaunders wth thy tonge. For shame and sorowe goeth ouer the cheefe, & an euell name ouer him that is double tonged: but he þ is a prey accuser of other mē, shall be hated, enuyed and confounded. We that þ iustifye the small and great a lyke.

It is the poptie of a synner to be euell tonged. The doctrine & good counsell of the wyle is to be embraced wysedome shoulde be searched for. The poptie therof.

Be not thy nychtbour enemye for thy frendes sake, for who so is euell, shall be the heyze of rebuke and dishonoure, and whosoever beareth enuye and a double tonge offendeth. * Be not proude in the deuice of thine owne vnderstanding (lest thy strenght be hurte by foolpynnes, and lest thy leaues wyther, & thy frute be destroyed, and so thou be lefte as a drye tree (in þ wyldesternes).) For a wicked soule destroyeth hym that hathe it, maketh hym to be laughed to scoyne of hys enemyes, (and bringeth hym to the porcyon of the vngodly). * A swete word, multiplieth frendes, & pacifieth them that be at variance, and a thankfull tonge will be plenteous in a good man. Hold fered ship wth many, neuertheless haue but one counseller of a thousande.

Yf thou gettest a frende, * proue him fyrst, and be not hasty to geue him credence. For some man is a frende, but for a tyme, & will not abyde in the daye of trouble. And there is some is some frende that turneth to enemie, and taketh parte agaynst þe: & þf he knowe any hurt by the, he telleth it out. * Agayne some frende is but a companion at the table, and in the dape of neede he continueth not. But a sure frende wyll be vnto the euen as thyne owne selfe, & deale faithfully wyth thy houholde folke. Þf thou suffre trouble and aduersitie, he is wyth the, & hydeth not hymselfe from þe. Departe from thyne enemyes, pee, and beware of thy frendes.

C A fapthfull frende is a stronge defence, who so fyndeth such one, fyndeth a treasure. A fapthfull frende hath no peare, þ weyght of golde and syluer is not to be compared to the goodnes of his fapth. A fapthfull frende is a medycine of lyfe, & they þ feare þ Lord shal fynde hym. Who so feareth þ Lord shal prospere wyth frendes: & as he is hym selfe, so shal his frende be also. My sonne, receaue doctrine from thy yowth vp, so shalt þ fynde wysedome tyll thou be old. So to her as one that ploweth and soweth, and wayte patiently for her good frutes. For thou shalt haue but lytle laboure in hir work, but thou shalt eate of hir frutes ryght lone. O howe excreadynge sharpe is wysedome to vnlearned men: an vnstedfast bodye will not remayne in her. Vnto suche, she is as it were a touche stone, and he casteth her from hym in all the hast, for wysedome is wyth hym but in name there be but few that haue knowlege of her. (But wyth them þ knowe her, she abyedeth euen vnto the appareynge of God.)

Gene ear (my sonne) receaue my doctrine, and refuse not my counsell. Put thy foote into her lynkes, & take her pocke vpon thy necke: bowe downe thy shoulde vnder her, beare her patiently, and be not weery of her hādes. Come vnto her wyth thy whole hert, & kepe her wayes wyth all thy power. Seke after her, and she shalbe shewed the: & when thou hast her, forsake her not. For at the last thou shalt fynde rest in her, and that shalbe turned to thy great ioye. Then shal her fetters be a stronge defense for þ, and her pocke a glorious rayment. For the bewtpe of lyfe is in her, and her bandes are þ couplyng to gether of saluacion. Pee, a glorious rymēt is it, thou shalt put it on, & þ same crowne of ioye shalt thou weare.

My sonne, þf thou wylte take hede, thou shalt haue vnderstandynge, & þf thou wylte applye thy mynde, þ shalt be wysle. If thou wilt bowe downe thyne eare, thou shalt receaue doctrine, & þf thou deylte in hearyng, thou shalt be wysle. Stande wyth the multitude of such elders as haue vnderstandinge, and consent vnto their wysdome wyth thyne herte: that thou mayest beare all godly sermons, and þ the worthpy sentēces escape the not. And þf thou seyst a man of discrete vnderstandynge, get the soone vnto hym, & let thy foote treade vpon the steppes of his doctres. * Let thy minde be vpon the commandementes of God, and be earnestly occupied in hys lawes: so shall he stablysh thy herte, & geue the wysedome at thyne owne desyre.

The vii. Chapter.

We must forsake euill, and yet not suffise our synnes. The behauiour of the wyse towarde his wyfe, his frendes, his chyldren, his seruantes, his father and mother the pithes, &c.

No euell, so shall there no harme happen vnto the. Departe awaye from the thyng that is wycked, & no mysfortune shall medle wyth þ. My sonne, forwe no euell thynges in the sorowes of vnyghteousnes, so shalt thou not reape the seuē folde. Laboure not vnto man for any lordship, neyther vnto þ kyng for the seat of honour. * Justifie not thy self before God, (for he knoweth the hert) and desyre not to be reputed wysle in the presence of þ kyng. Make no labour to be made a iudge except it so were, that thou couldest myghte ly put downe wyckednes: for þf þ shuldest stande in awe of the presence of the myghty, thou shuldest sayle in geuyng sentēces. Defend not in the multitude of the cytie, & put not thy self amonge the people. * Binde not two synnes together, for in one synne shalt thou not be vnpunished. Saye not: tush, God wyll loke vpon the multitude of my ablations, & when I offre to the hyest God he wyll accepte it.

Be not fayne harted when thou makest thy prayer, neyther slacke in gyuing of almes. Laughe no man to scoorne in þ heupnesse of his soule, for God (which seyth all thynges) is he that can bypunge downe, and let vp agayne. Accepte not lesyng agaynst thy brother, neyther do the same agaynst thy frende. Wile not to make any maner of lye, for the customes therof is not good. Make not many wordes, when thou art amōge þ elders: & when thou prayest, make not much bablyng. * Let no laborious worke be tedious vnto the, neyther þ housbandrye which þ almyghty hath created. Make not thy boast in the multitude of thy wyckednes, but hāle thy selfe euen from thyne hert: and remember þ the wrath shall not be longe in tarpeng, and that the vengeance of the fleshe of the vngodly is a very fyre and woyme. Gene not out thy frende for any good, nor thy fapthfull brother for the best gold.

Departe not from a discrete and good woman, þ is fallen vnto þ for thy porcyō in the feare of the Lord, for the gyft of her honestie is aboue golde. * Here as thy seruante worketh truly, intreate hym not euell, nor the hyrclyng þ is fapthfull vnto the. them vp in nourture and learnynge, & holde them in awe from theyr youth vp. If thou haue daughters, kepe theyr body, & shewe thy daughter, and so shalt thou perfourme a goodly matter: but geue her to a mā of vnderstandynge. If thou haue a wyfe after thy owne mynde, forsake her not. (but comende not thy selfe to the hatefull.)

* Honour thy father fro thy whole hert: forget not þe sorowfull trauaile that thy mother had wryth þe: remember that þe wast in thy mother's womb, and howe canst thou re-uerence them the thynges that they haue done for the: feare the Lorde wryth all thy heart, and honour hys ministers. Love thy father wryth all thy strenght, * and forsake not hys seruantes. Feare the Lorde wryth to them that are deade.

not geue the to vylite the spycke, for that maketh þe to be beloued. Whatsoener thou doest in hāde, remember the ende, and thou shalt neuer do amysse.

¶ The viii. Chapter.

¶ Charyte the better is no styngynge. Of þe death of the myghty mayest thou not reioyce, nor despyse thy neighbours, nor the wordes of the wyse.

Stryue not wryth a myghty man, lest thou chaunce to fall into his handes. * Make no variaunce wryth a ryche man, lest he happen to bring yn an harde quarel agaynst þe. * For golde and silver hath vndone many a mā, yee, euē the herres of kynges hath it made to fall. stryue not wryth a man that is full of worye, and laye no styckes vpon hys fyre. Kepe thy company wryth the vnlearned, lest he geue the kyndred an euell repoyte. * Despyse not a man that turneth hym selfe awaye fro synne, and cast hym not in the teeth wrythall, but remember that we are frayle euerychone.

* Thinke scoorne of no mā in his olde age, for we are old also. Be not glad of þe death of thine enemy, but remember that we must all the sorte of vs (and sayne wolde we come into lope.) * Despyse not the sermons of such elders as haue vnderstandynge, but acquaynte thy selfe with the wyse sentences of the, for of them thou shalt lerne wyldome and the doctrine of vnderstanding, and how to serue great men without cōplaynte.

So not from þe doctrine of the elders: for they haue lerned it of theyr fathers. For of them thou shalt learne vnderstandynge, so that thou mayest make answeare in þe tyme of nede. Kyndele not the coales of synners, (whan thou rebukest them) lest þe be bzent in the fyre flammes of theyr synnes. Resyst not the face of the blasphemour, that the lay not waite for thy mouth. * Lende not vnto him that is myghtier then thy selfe: If thou lendest hym, couste it but lost. Be not luerie aboue thy power: yf thou be, then thynke surely to paye it. So not to law wryth þe iudge: for he will iudge accordynge to his owne do-noure. * Trauaile not by þe way wryth hym that is byapnyesse, lest he do the euell: for he foloweth his owne wyllfulness, and so shalt thou perperthe thowowe hys folow.

* Strype not wryth him that is angrey & cruell, and go not wryth hym into þe wylder-des: for bloude is nothyng in hys spght, & where there is no helpe, he shall murder þe.
* Take no coucel at foolles, for they loue no thyng but þe thynges that please them sel-ues. Make no coucell before a stranger, for thou canst not tel what wil come of it. Dye not thine herte vnto euery mā, lest he be vn-thankfull to the, and put the to reproche.

myze, of euery one that goeth by the waye. Many a man wonderynge at þe bewtye of a straunge woman, hath ben cast out, for her wordes kyndle as a fyre. Sit not wyth an other mans wyfe by any meanes, lye not wth her vpon the bed, make no wordes wth her at þe wyne, lest thyne hert consent vnto her & so thou wyth thy blonde fall into destruc- cyon. Forsake not an olde frende, for þe new shall not be lyke hym.

A new frende is new wyne: let hym be olde and thou shalt drynke hym wyth pleasure. Delyte not the honoure and riches of a syn- ner, for thou knowest not what destruccyon is for to come vpon him. Delyte not thou in the thyng that the vngodly haue pleasure in, beyng sure, that the vngodly shal not be accepted vntyll they graue.

Kepe the from the man that hath power to slaye, so nedest thou not to be afrayed of death. And yf thou comest vnto hym make no faute, lest he happen to take a waye thy lyfe. Remember that thou goest in the myd- dest of inares, and vpon the bulwookes of thy cite. Beware of thy neyghbour as nye as thou canst. * and medle wth suche as be wyle and haue vnderstanding. Lest iust me be thy gesses, let thy myzth be in the feare of God, let the remembraunce of God be in thy mynde, * and let all thy talkynge be in þe co- maundementes of the hyest. In the handes of craftemen shal the woorkes be commen- ded, * so shal the princes of the people in the wysedome of theyr talkynge. A man full of wordes is perelous in hys cytie: and he that is rathe in hys talkynge, shalbe abhoyred.

The .x. Chapter.

Of hynges & iudges. Pryde and courtousnes are to be abhoyred. Labour is praysed.

A Wyle iudge wyl ordre hys people wth discrecion: and where a man of vnder- standynge beareth rule, there goeth it well. * As the iudge of þe people is hym selfe, euen so are hys officers: & loke what maner of man þe ruler of the cytye is, suche are they that dwell therein also. * An vnwyle kyng destruyeth hys people: but where they that be in authoritie are men of vnderstandynge, there the cytye prospereth.

The power of the earth is in the hande of God (and al iniquitie of þe people is to be ab- hoyred) and whan hys tyme is, he shal set a profytable ruler vpon it. In the hande of God is the power of man, and vpon þe scri- bes shal he laye his honoure. * Remember no wronge of thy neyghboure. & medle thou wth no vnpyghteous woorkes. Pryde is ha- tefull before God and man, and all wicked- nes of þe heathen is to be abhoyred. * Because of vnpyghteous dealynge, wrong, blasphemies and diuerse disceates, a realme shal be translated from one people to another.

There is nothyng wylle the a courtous mā. Why arte thou proude, O thou earth & althes: There is not a moze wicked thyng, then to loue money. And why: such one hath hys soule to sell, yet is he but fylchye douge whyle he lyueth.

And though þe phisicion shewe his helpe neuer so longe, yet in conclusion it goeth af- ter thys maner, to dape a kyng, to mozoze dead. For whan a man dyeth, he is þe heye of serpentes, bestes, and woymes. The be- gynnynge of mans pryde, is to fall away fro God: and why: his herte is gone fro his ma- ker, for pryde is the originall of all synne. Who so taketh hold therof, shalbe fylled wth curlynges, and at þe last it shal ouerthrowe hym. Therfore hath the Lorde brought the congregacyons of þe wycked to dishonoure, and destroyed them to the ende.

* God hath destroyed the seates of proude princes, and let vth the meke in theyr stede: God hath wythered the rootes of the proude heathen, & planted the lowly amonge them. * God hath ouerthrowen þe landes of þe hea- then, and destroyed them vnto the grounde. He hath caused the to wither away, he hath brought them to nought, and made the me- moriall of the to ceasse, fro out of the earth. (God hath destroyed þe name of the proude, and left the name of the humble of mynde.) Pryde was not made for mā, nether wozth fulnesse for mens chyldren. The seide of men þe feareth God, shalbe brought to honour, but þe seide whych transgresseth the comaun- dementes of the Lorde, shalbe shamed. He that is the ruler amonge brethren, is holden in honoure amonge the, & he that regardeth such as feare the Lorde. The gloze of þe cyche of the honozable, and of the pooze is þe feare of God.

Delypse not thou the iust pooze man, and magnifye not the cyche vngodly. Great is þe iudge & myghty in honoure, yet is there none greater, then he that feareth God. * Vnto þe seruaunt that is discrete, shall þe free do ser- uice. * He that is wyle and well nourtured, wyl not grudge when he is resourmed, and an ignozant body shal not come to honour. Be not proude to do thy work, and dyspayre not in the tyme of aduersitie. * Better is he that labourereth, and hath plenteousnes of al thynges, the he that is goygous, and want- teth breade.

O Sonne, kepe thy soule in meknes, and geue her her due honoure. Who shal iustifie hym, that synneth agaynst hym selfe: Who wyl honoure hym, that dishonoureth hys owne soule: The pooze is honoured for hys faythfulness and tructh but the cyche is bad in reputacio because of hys goodes. The. xi. Chapter.

The people of humilitie. After the outwarde appearance ought we not to iudge. Of heaþe and rather iudgement. The ryche is not without offence. All thynges come of God. All men are not to be brought into thyne house.

The wysdome of hym that is brought lowe, shall lyft vp hys heade and shal make hym to syt amonge great men.
Commende not thou a man in hys bewtye, nor despise a mā in his utter appareauce The kee is but a small beast amonge þ fou his yet is her frute excedyng swete. As the wynde of thy rayment, * and exalte not thy selfe in the day of thy honoure: for þ wor-kes of the best onely are wonderfull: pee, glorious, secrete, & vnknewen are hys wor-kes. Many tyrantes haue ben fayne to syt vpon the earth, * and the vnþelye haue worne the crowne. Many mygþy me haue ben brought lowe, and the honorable haue bene deliuered into other mens hādes.
I condemne no mā before thou haue tryed the matter, and what thou hast made in iudgement, the refourme ryghteously. Generally, before thou hast herde the cause, let not let men tell out theyr tales.

Stryue not for a matter þ toucheth not thy selfe, and stande not in the iudgement of others. My sonne, medle not with many matters: * and yf thou wylte be ryche, thou shalt not get it: and though thou rūnest thy waye, yet shalt thou not escape. * Ther is none man that labouryth, and þ more he wepeth hym selfe, þ lesse he hath. Againe, none man is slouthfull, hath nede of helpe, nor strength, and hath great pouertie, and Gods eye loketh vpon hym to good, set him vp from hys lowe state, * and lyftyng vp hys heade: so that many me maruel at hym, and geue honoure vnto God.

Prosperitie & aduersitie, lyfe and deth, honoure and rycheesse come all of the Lorde.
Wisdom, murtoure, and knowlege of the Lorde, are with God, loue and the wayes of God are with hym. Errours and darkenes are made for synners (and they that exalte themselves in euell, waxe olde in euell.) The wyse of God remayneth for the ryghteous, and his good wyll shall geue prosperitie for euer. Some mā is ryche by lypunge nþgard-ly, and that is the porcion of hys rewarde, that he sayeth: * now haue I gottē rest, & I will I eate and drynke of my goodes my selfe alone. And yet he considereth not, þ the tyme draweth nye (& death approacheth) þ must leaue al these thynges vnto other men, and dye hym selfe. Stande thou fast in thy couenaunt, and exercise thy selfe therin, and remaine in the worke vnto thy age. Cotinue not in the workes of synners, but put thy trust in God, & byde in thyne estate, for it is but an easie thyng in the syght of God, to make a poore man ryche, and that sodely. The blessing of God hasteth to þ rewarde of the ryghteous, & maketh hys frutes sone to floreye & prospere. Saye not: what hel-peth it me? & what shall I haue the while?

Agayne, saye not: I haue ynough, how can I wante? * When thou arte in welfare, forget not aduersitie, & when it goeth not well with þ, haue a good hope, that it shal be better. For it is but a small thyng vnto God, in the daye of death to rewarde euery mā according to his wayes. The aduersitie of an houre maketh one to forget al pleasure: and when a man dyeth, hys workes are discou-red. Praise no body before hys death, for a man shal be knowne in hys chyldren.

Bypunge not euery mā into thyne house, for the disceyfull lapyeth wayte dyuersly.
Lyke as a partych in a maide, so is þ herte of the proude: & lyke as a spyte, that loketh vpon the fall of hys neyghbour. For he turneth good vnto euell, and flaundereth the chosen. Of one sparke is made a great fyre (and of one disceatful mā, is bloude increased) & an vngodly man lapyeth wayte for bloude.
Beware of the disceatful, for he ymagineth wycked thynges, to bypunge the into a perpetual shame. Yf thou takest an aleaunt vnto the, he shal destroye the in vniquietnes, and dypue the from thyne owne wayes.

The. xii. Chapter.

What to whom we ought to do good. Whom we ought to be rich.

When thou wylte do good, knowe to whome thou doest it, & so shalt thou be greatly thanked for thy benefytes. * Do good vnto the ryghteous, and thou shalt fynde great re-warde, though be not of hym, yet (no doubt) the Lorde hym selfe shall rewarde the. He standeth not in a good case that is alwaye occupied in euell, & geneth no almes, for the best hateth the synners, & hath mercy vpon them that shewe the workes of repentance.
Geue thou vnto suche as feare God, and ceceane not a synner. As for þ vngodly & synners, he shall receyue vengeance vnto the & kepe them to the day of wrath. Geue thou vnto the good, and receaue not the synner: do well vnto hym þ is lowly, but geue not to þ vngodly. Let not þ bread be geue hym, that he be not mightier then the self therin.
For so shalt þ receaue twofold as much euell, in al þ good that thou doest vnto hym. And whyy?

why / the hygghest hateth synners, and shall rewarde vengeance to the vngodly.

In prosperitie, a frende shall not be knowen and in aduersitie an enemy shall not be hyd. For whā a man is in wealth, it greueth hys enemyes: but in heuynes and trouble a man shall knowe hys frende. Trust neuer thynne enemye, for lyke as an yron rusteth, so doth this wickednes. And though he make moche crouching and knelyng, yet kepe well thy mynde and beware of hym. Set hym not by the nether let hym sit at thy ryght hāde: lest he turne hym, get into thy place, take thy crowne and seke thy seate, and so thou at the last remember my wordes, and be pickt at my sayenges.

An enemy is swete in hys lippes, he can make many wordes & speake many good thynges: Pee, he can wepe wyth hys eyes, but in hys herte he ymagineth, how to throwe the into þ pyt: & yf he may fynde oportunitie, he wyl not be satisfied wyth bloude. If aduersitie come vpon the, thou shalt fynde hym there fyrst and thought he pretēde to do the helpe, yet shall he vndermyne þ. He shall shake his heade, and clappe hys handes ouer the for þe ry gladnes: & whyle he maketh many wordes, he shall dysguise hys countenance.

¶ The companyes of the proude & of the ryche are to be riched. The loue of God: lyke do company wyth thes ryche.

Who so toucheth pryde, shall be fylled withall: and he that is familiar wyth the proude, shall cloth hym selfe wyth pryde. He taketh a burthen vpon hym, that accompanieth a moze honorable man than hym selfe. Therefore kepe no familiaritie w one that is rycher then thy selfe. Howe agre the ketell and þ pot together: for yf the one be smytten agaynst the other, it shall be broken. The ryche dealeth vngodly, & threteneth withall: but the poore beyng oppressed and wrongeously dealeth wythall, suffereth scarcenes, and geueth saye wordes. Yf thou be for hys profyte, he vseth the: but yf thou haue not bing, he shall forsake the. As longe as thou hast any thyng of thine owne, he shall be a good felowe wyth þ: pee, he shall make the a bare man, and not be loy for the. Yf he haue nede of the, he shall defraude the: and (wyth a prey moche) shall be put the in an hope, and geue the al good wordes, & say:

what wantest thou? Thus shall he come the in his meate, vntyl he haue supt & cleane by twyle or thyle, and at the laste shall he laugh þ to scoyne. Afterward, when he seyth that thou hast nothing, he shall forsake the, and shake hys heade at the. (Submytte thy selfe vnto God, and wayte vpon hys hande.)

Beware, that thou be not disceined and brought downe in thy symplenes. Be not humble in thy wisedome: lest whā thou art brought lowe, þ be disceined thowowe foolyshnes. If thou be called of a myghty mā, absent thy selfe, so shall he call þ to hym the moze ofte. Breaue not thou vnto hym, that thou be not put out: but go not þ farre of, lest he forget the. Withdrow not thy self fro hys spech, but beleue not his many wordes. For wyth much comunicaciō shall he tempt þ, & (wyth a prey moche) shall he question the of thy secretes. The vnnecyfull mynde of hys shall marke thy wordes, he shall not spare to do the hurte, & to put the in prison. Beware and take good hede to thy selfe, for thou walkest in parel of thy ouerthrowing.

Howe whā thou hearest hys wordes, make the as though thou werest in a dreame, & wake vp. Loue God all thy lyfe longe, and call vpo hym in thy nede. Eueri beast loneth hys lyke, eue so let euery mā lone hys neyghboure. Al they wil resorte to the, lyke, and euery man will kepe company wyth such as he is hym selfe. But as the wolfe agreeth w the lambe, so doth þ vngodly wyth the ryche trons. ¶ What felowshipp shuld an holy mā haue with a dogge? How can the ryche & the poore agre together? The wyld Ass is the Lyons prae in the wyldernesse, euen so are poore men the meate of the rich. Lyke as the proude may not a waye with lowlines, euen so doth þ ryche abhorre the poore: If a ryche man fall, his frendes set hym vp agayne: but whan the poore falleth, hys acquaintance forsake hym. If a ryche man fall into an error, he hath many helpers: he speaketh proude wordes, and yet men iustifye hym.

But yf a poore man go wronge, he is punished: pee, though he speake wylely, yet ca it haue no place. Whan the ryche man speaketh, euery body holdeth his tonge: and loke what he sayeth, they praye it vnto the cloudes. But yf the poore man speake, they saye: What felowe is this: and yf he do amysse, they shall destroye hym. Riches are good vnto hym that hath no synne in hys conscience, & pouertie is a wicked thyng in the mouthe of þ vngodly. The herte of a man chaungeth hys countenance, whether it be in good or euell. A chearfull countenance is a token of a good herte, for els it is an harde thyng to knowe the thought.

The. xliii. Chapter.

The office of the tongue. Man is but a vapour thing that is in the world and in the world.

Blessed is the man that hath not fallen with the worde of his mowthe, & is not pryched with the conscience of synne. happye is he that hath no envy in his mynde, and is not fallen from grace. It becommeth not a covetous man to be pryched to be ryche: and what shulde a man do with golde? he that with all hys labours deapeth together unryghteously for other folkes, and another man shall make good there with his gooddes. he p pryched unto hym selfe, howe shulde he be good unto other men? howe can such one have the pleasure of his gooddes? There is nothing then when one disfaunoureth hym selfe that is a reward of his wyckednes.

And if any good, he doth it not knowynge it, and agaynst his wyll, and at the laste he shall see his ungracyousnes. A nygarde that wolde shal dye the death. * Do good in thy frende before thou dye, and according to thy abyltie reache out thyne hande vnto the poore. Be not disapoynted in the good daye, and let not the porcyon of the good daye overpasse the. Shalt thou thyne heretage before thy deathe, for in the laste there is no meat to fynde. * All fleshe shall be leafe in a grene tree. Some growe, and are cast downe: euen so is the generacyon of fleshe and bloude: one cometh to an end and is borne.

All transitory thynges shall fayle at the laste, and the worker therof shall go withal.
The golden worke shalbe inuysed, and he he holde hym fast by her, he shal not come to confusyon. She shal byng hym to honoure amonge his neyghbours, and in the myddest of the congregacyon shal she ope his mouth.

With the scripture of wysdome and understandyng shal she fyll hym, and cloth hym with the garment of gloze. She shal heape the treasure of myght and tope vpon hym, & geue hym an euerlastyng name to heretage.
Folpse men wyl not take holde vpon her:

These thynges doth no herte vnderstande, but he vnderstandeth euery hert, and who vnderstandeth his wayes? No man seyth his skowes, and the moste parte of his workes are secrete. Who wyll declare the workes of his ryghteousnes? Or who shal be able to abyde the? For the conenaunt is farre from some, and tryng out of men is in the ende. he that is humble of herte, thynketh vpon such thynges: but an vnwyse & erroneous man casteth hym mynde vnto folpthe thynges.

Hy sonne, herken thou vnto me, & learne vnderstanding, and marke my wordes with thyne herte, I wyll geue the a sure doctryne, and playnely shal I instructe the (marke my wordes then in thyne herte: for in ryghteoulnesse of the spyte do I speake of the wonders that God hath shewed amonge his workes from the begynnynge. And in the truth do I shewe the knowledg of hym) God hath set his workes in good ordze from y begynnynge and parte of them hath he sundered from the other. he hath garnished his workes from euerylastynge, and theyr begynnynge, accordyng to their generacyons. None of them hath dered another, neither was any of them dybedpent vnto his wordes. After this God looked vpon the earth, and fylled it with his goodes. With all maner of lyuynge beastes hath he couered the grounde, & they all shalbe turned vnto earth agayne.

The .xvii. Chapter.

Of the creation of man: and the goodness that god hath done vnto hym. Of aulmes and repentance.

God shope man of the earth, & made hym after his owne ymage, and turned hym vnto earth agayne, and clothed him with his owne strength. he gaue hym the nombre of dayes and certayne tyme, yee and gaue hym power of the thynges that are vpon earth. he made all liethe to stande in awe of hym, so that he had the dominyon of all beastes and foules. * he made out of hym an helper lyke vnto hym selfe, and gaue them dyscrecyon and tonge, eyes, and eares, and a herte, to vnderstande, and fylled them with instructyon and vnderstandyng. he created for them also the knowledg of the spyte, fylled theyr hartes with vnderstandyng, and shewed them good and euell. he set his eye vpon theyr hertes, declarynge vnto them his greete and noble workes: that they shulde praysse his holy name together: reioyce of his wonders, and be tellyng of his noble actes. * Welyde this he gaue them instructyon, and the lawe of lyfe for an heritage.

he made an euerylastynge conenaunt with them, and shewed them his ryghteoulnesse & iudgements. They sawe his glory with theyr eyes, and theyr eares heard the maner of his voyce. And he sayde vnto them: beware of all vnyghteous thynges. he gaue euery man also a commaundemente con-

page his neyghbour.

They wapes are ener before hym, and come hys from his eye. * He hath let a rule upon every people, but Israel is the love of his mercy. All they wozkes are as the lyght of the syghte of God, and hys eyes are lokinge upon they wapes. All their wickednesse are manifest unto hym, & all they wozkednesse are open in his syghte.

The mercy that a man sheweth is as it were a puelle with hym, and the grace that is unto man preferreth hym as the apple of his eye. * At the laste shall he awake, and reward every man upon his deed, & shal turne them together into the nethermost partes of the earth. * But unto them that will repent and geve the waye of ryghteousnes. As much as he weake, he comforteth them, and much them, and sendeth them the porcyon of his mercy. O turne then unto the Lord: forsake synnes, make thy prayer before the Lord, do the lesse offence, turne agayne unto the Lord, forsake thine unryghteousnes, be not enemye to abhominacyon, learne to knowe the ryghteousnesse & iudgements of God, stand in the porcyon that is set forth for the, and in the prayer of the most hye God. So the porcyon of the holy woylde, with such a prayer & true thankes unto God.

Who will prayse the Lord in the hell, and not thou in the erreure of the vngod-ly, give hym thankes before death. As the seed, thankfulness percyveth frō hym and geve. Spue thou thankes in thy lyfe in, for thou art luryng and wholly shalt be geve thankes, and prayse God, and reward in his mercy. O howe greate is the love of hyndnes of the Lord, and his mercy-fullnesse unto such as turne unto hym.
In all thynges, maye not be in man: & why?
The love of man is not immortall, & he hath synne in the vanyte of wickednes. What more dreare then the Sunne? Yet shall it be. * What is more wycked then a thing that is red and bloude hath ymagyned / and the same shalbe reprovied. The Lord seyth of the hye heven, & all are but earth and ashy.

The xviii. Chapter.

The mercies of god the misery and wretched-nesse. Against god ought we not to complayne, because he continually.

That lieth for evermore, & made al thynges together. God onely is ryght and true, & remaineth a victorious king for ever. Who shalbe able to expresse a word of hym? Who wyl seke out the ground of his power? Who shal declare the power of his strenght? O who wyl take upon him to tell out his mercy? As for the wonderful wozkes of the Lord, there maye no thyng be taken from them, nothing maye be put unto them, neither maye a grounde of the be found out. But when a man hath done his best, he must begyne agayne: & when he thinketh to be come to an end, he must go agayne to his laboure. What is man? What is he worthy? What good or euell can he do?

* If the nombze of a mans dayes be almoste an hundred yere, it is much.

As the droppe of rayne are unto the see, and as a grauell stone is in compary-son of the lande: * so are these fewe yeres to the dayes of everlastyng. Therefore is the Lord paciente with them, and povereth out hys mercy upon them. He saith and percea-ned the thoughtes & ymaginacions of they herte, that they were euell, therefore heaped he up his mercifull goodnesse upon them & bewoted them the waye of ryghteousnes. The mercy that a man hath, reacheth to his neygh-bour: but the mercy of God is upon al fleis.
He chasteneth, he teacheth and nourtoureth: yece, even as a shepheard turneth agayne his flocke, so doth he all them that receave chastenyng, nourtoure and doctryne. * Wherfull is he unto them, that stande in a we of his iudgements.

Op sonne, when thou doste good, make no grudging at it: and what soever thou ge-uest, speke no discomfortable wordes. Shall not the dewe coole the hett? run so is a word better then a gyfte. * Is not a frendly worde a good honest gyfte? but a gracious man geueth them both. * A foole shall caste a man in the teeth, and that roughly, and a gyfte of the nygarde putteth out the eyes. Set the ryghteousnes before thou come to iudgement.
Learne before thou speake, and go to physyk by ever thou be speche: & examen and iudge thy selfe, before the iudgement come, and lo shalt thou fynde grace in the syghte of God. Humble thy selfe afore thou be speche, and in tyme of thy dyscase shewe thy conuersacyon.
* Let not to praye alwaye, and stande not in fear to be reformed unto deathe, for the reward of God endureth for ever. Before thou prayest, prepare thy soule, and be not as one that tempteth God. Thynke upon a wozke full indignacyon that shalbe at the ende, and the houre of vengeance, when he shall turne awaye his face. * When thou hast ynowgh remembred the tyme of hunger: and when thou art ryche, thynke upon the tyme of pouertie and scarcenes.

From the mornynge untill the eveninge the tyme is chaunged, & all such thynges are sone done in the syghte of God. A wyse man feareth God in all thynges, & in the dayes of transgressyon he keepeth hym selfe from synne.
A dyscrete man hath the pleasure in wysdome, and he that synneth her, maketh much of her.
They that haue had understandynge, haue

And though he be so weake that he can do tunitie, he shall do some euell. A man may be knownen by his face, & one that hath vnderstandyng, may be perceaued by þe lōke, of his state. Some man bieth much for a lytle price, must paye for it seven folde.

A wyle man with his wordes maketh himselfe to be loued, but the fauoure of fooles shall be poured out. The gyfte of the vnwyle shall do the no good, for his eyes are sent. * He shall geue lytle, and saue he much: he openeth his mouth and cryeth out, as it were one that cryeth out wyne. Comely he kenderth, to morrow asketh he agayne and such a man is to be hated. The foole sayeth: I haue no frende, I haue no thanke worthy good dedes: yee, euen they that eat of my bread, speake no good of me. How oft, how many shall he be laughed to scozne: he shall have a moze perelous fall by such words, as if he fell vpon the grounde: euen so shall the failles of wycked men come hastily.
In the mouth of hym that is vntaughte, are many vnconuenient and vnmete wordes.
A wyle sentence shall not be allowed at the mouth of a foole, for he speaketh it not in due time.

Some man synneth not, because he hath underwithall, and in his reast he shall be happy. Some man there is that destroyeth his soule with shame, and for an vnwylednes sake destroyeth he it, and with emptyng of personnes shall he vndo hym selfe. Some man prynceth his frend a gyft in his shame, and getteth an enemy of him for a gyft. A lyfe is a wycked shame in a mā whill it be euer in the mouth of a vnywyle.
It is better, then a man that is accustomed to lye, but they both shall haue destruction for a heritage. The condicions of lyars are many, & they: shame is euer with them.

A wyle man shall byng hym selfe to dome with his wordes, and he that hath vnderstandyng, shall be set by among greates as he that fylleth his lande shall increase the hope of coine: he that worketh ryghte-ness, shall be exalted, and he that pleasech his men, shall eschape much euil. * Rewar-de the gyftes blinde the eyes of the wyle, make hym dyme, that he can not tel men his fautes. * Wylsome that is hyd, & treasured in hooded vp, what profyete is in him both. Better is he that kepeth his ignorance secreete, then a man that bydeth his secret.

C The. xxi. Chapter.

Of the repentance of synne. Whom may not heape syn from synne. The boldnes of an heretike. The ende of the foole & of the wyle man. Of hym that maketh the deuill.

In sonne, yf thou hast synned, do it nomore: * but praye for thy foresynnes, yf they maye be forgeuen the. Fle from synne, euen as from a serpent: for yf y com-mett to nye her, she wyll bite the. The tettetherof are as the teeth of a lyon to slaye & sou-les of men. The wyckednes of man is as a sharpe two edged swerde, whiche maketh such woundes yf they cannot be healed.

Strype and wyngedous dealyngs shall waste awaye a mans goodes, and the wyne pride a ryche house shall be brought to nought so the ryches of yf proude shall be roted out.

* The prayer of the poore goeth oute of the mouth, and cometh vnto the eares, and his vengeaunce (or defence) shall come, and that hastely. Who so hateth to be reformed, it is a token of an vngodly personne: but he yf scareth God, wyll remembre hym selfe. A myghtie man is knowen a farre of by his tonge but he yf hath vnderstandyng, perceaueth yf he shall haue a fall.

Who so buyldeth his house with other mens coste, is lyke one that gathereth stones in wynter. * The congregacion of yf vngod-lye is lyke stubble gathered togeder, theye ende is a flamme of fyre. The waye of the vngodly is set with stones, but in theye ende is hell, darchnes, and paynes. He that kepeth yf lawe, wyll holde fast the vnderstanding ther-of, & the ende of the feare of God is wylsome and vnderstandyng. He that is not wyle, wyll not be taught in good: but the vnywyle man aboundeth in wyckednes: & where bytternes is, there is no vnderstandyng. The knowledge of the wyle shall flowe lyke water that renneth ouer, and his counsell is lyke a fountayne of lyfe.

The bert of a foole is lyke a broken vessel, he can kepe no wylsome. When a man of vnderstandyng heareth a wyle worde, he shall commende it, and make much of it. But yf a voluptuous man heare it, he shall haue no pleasure therein, but caste it behynde his backe. The talkyng of a foole is lyke an heuie burthen by the waye: but to heare a wyle man speake, it is a pleasure. Alhere a doute is in the congregacion, it is asked at yf mouth of the wyle, and they shall ponde his wo-rdes in theye dettes. Lyke as is a house that is destroyed, eue so is wylsome vnto a foole.
As for the knowledge of the vnywyle, it is but darche wordes. Doctryne is vnto hym yf hath no vnderstandyng, euen as setters a-boutte his fete, and lyke manacles vpon his ryght hande. * A foole lysteth vp his voyce with laughter, but a wyle man shall sharpe laugh secretly.

Learnynge is vnto a wyle man a Jewell of golde, & lyke an armelet vpon his ryghte arme. A foolyshe mans fete is soone in his neighbours house, but one that hath experyence, shall be ashamed at the personne of the myghty. A foole wyll pepe in at yf wyndowe into yf house, but he that is well nouroured, wyll stande without. A foolyshe man stan-deth

When the vngodlye curseth the blasphemere he curseth his owne soule. * A pryue accuser of other men shall despyle his owne soule, and be hated of euerye man: (but he that kepeth hys tonge is discrete, shal come to honoure.)

The .xxii. Chapter.

¶ The purgacion of the slouthfull. Of the folye sonne & daughter, we must haue discrecion howe and to whom we ought to preach, of sojournyng upon the deeth. A foole is not to be much talked withal. Insuper & wronges do by cause frendshipp and amitye.

slouthfull body is moulded of a stone of clare, and euery man wyl speake to his dyspraise. A slouthfull body is made of the donge of oxen, and euerye one that toucheth hym must wash hys handes agayne. A mynurtured soune is the dishonoure of þe father. A foolyþe dou ghter shalbe lytle regarded. A wyse dought er is an heritage vnto her husbände: but she that cometh to dishonelltye, byngeth her fa ther in heuynes. A daughter þe is past shame, dishonoureth both her father and her husbād the vngodly shall regarde her, but they both shall despyle her. The playng of Dyspraise is not mete where heuynes is eue so is the corre ctyon and doctryne of wysdome euer vnplea saunt vnto fooles.

Who so teacheth a foole, is euen as one þe gyleth a potberd together: as one that tel leth a tale to hym that heareth hym not, & as one that rapeth a man out of an heuy slepe.
Who so telleth a foole of wysdome, is eue as a man, whiche speaketh to one that is a slepe.
When he hath tolde his tale, he sayeth: what is the matter? What one dyeth, lamentacyon is made for hym, because þe lyygh sayeth hym euen so let me mourne ouer a foole: for he wan teth vnderstandyng. Wake but lytle we ppng because of the deeth: for he is com to rest but the lyfe of the foole is worse then þe deeth.
Seuen dayes doo men mourne for hym that is deeth, but the lamentacion ouer the vnwyse and vngodlye shulde endure all the dayes of the lyfe.

Talke not much wyth a foole, and go not wyth hym that hath no vnderstanding. Be ware of hym, lest it turne the to trauayle, & thou shalt not be despyled with his synne.
Depart from hym, and thou shalt fynde rest and shalbe not be dysauentured into hys foo lyþnes. What is heuier then leade? And what shulde a foole be called elles but leader ¶ Psal. xlv. d.

* Saunde, false, and a lumpe of pyon is calper to beare then an vnwyse, foolyþe, & vngodly man. Lyke as the bande of wood bound toge ther in the foundation of the house cannot be lowled, euen so is it with the herte that is sta blyshed in þe thought of conšel. The thought of the wyse shal nether feare, nor be offended at any tyme.

Lyke as a fayre playstred wal in a wy ter house, and an hye buyldyng, maye not a byde the wynde and storme: euen so is a foo les herte astrayde in his ymaginacyon, he fea reth at euery thyng, and cannot endure. (A waueryng hert in þe ymaginacyon of a foole wyl not euer stande in a we, but he that aby deth in the commaundementes of God, wyl alwaye feare.) He that nyppeth a mans eye byngeth forth teares: and he that pryeth the herte, byngeth forth the meanyng and thought. Who so casteth a stone at the by des, frayeth them away: and he that blaspe mieth hys frende, breaketh the frendshipp: though thou dyest a swerde at thy frend yet dyspayre not, for thou mayst com agayne to thy frende. If he speake sowely, feare not for ye maye be agreed together agayne, ex cept it be that thou blasphemest hym, dyspraise hym, open hys secretes & wounde hym tray torously: for all suche thynges shall dysre wey a frende.

Be saythful vnto thy neyghbour in his pouerte, that thou mayest reioyce wyth hym also in his prosperyte. Abyde stedfast vnto hym in the tyme of his trouble, that þe mayst be heyre wyth hym in his heritage. Lyke as the vapoure and smoke goth out at the oven before the fyre: euen so euell wordes, rebukes and threatenynges go before bloudsheddyng.
Be not ashamed to defende thy frende: as for me, I wyl not hyde my face fro hym, though he shuld do me harme. Who so euer hereth it, shalbe ware of hym. * Who shal set a watch before my mouth, & a sure scale vpon my lyp pes, that I fall not wyth them, and that my tonge destroye me not?

The .xxiii. Chapter.

¶ A prayer agaynst pryde: les here, & gloucy. Of the blasphem, and of vnwyse communicacyon. Of the ch tyndes of synner. Of any synners pproche of absoutyng of the feare of God.

Lozde, father and gouernoure of my lyfe, leaue me not in the yre y maginacyon and counsell. O lette me not fall in suche reprofe.
Who wyl kepe my thought wyth the scourge, and the doctryne of wysdome in myne herte: that he spare not myne ygnor raunce, that I fall not wyth them, lest myne ignozaunces increafe, that myne offences be not many in numbze, and that my synnes ex ceade not, lest I fall before myne enemyes, and so my aduersary reioyce. O Lozde: thou Father and God of my lyfe, leaue me not in not in theyr ymaginacyō. ¶ Let me not haue a proude looke, but turne awaye all voluptuousnes from me. Take from me þe lustes of the body, let not the desyres of vncleennes take hold vpon me, & geue me not ouer into an vnshamefull and obshynate mynde.

¶ Heare me (O ye chyldren) I wyll geue you a doctrine, how ye shal ordeyne your mouth so heperth it, shal not perperthe thozowe of synnes, nor be hurte thozow wycked wo-rdes. As for the spinner, he shal be taken in his owne vanytie: he that is proude and cursed, shal fall therein. * Let not thy mouthe be accustomed wyth swearynge, for in it there are many falles. Lette not the namyng of God be continually in thy mouth: (and medle not wyth the names of Saynctes, for þe shalt not be excused of them) for lyke as a seruauit whiche is ofte punysshed cannot be wythoute some lope, eue so what soeuer he be that swe-areth and nameth god, shal not be cleane poured from synne. A man that vseth muche swearynge, shalbe fylled wyth wyckednes, and the plage shal neuer go from his house.
¶ The people his brother, hys sante shalbe vncomfyt. If he knowledg not hys synne, he maketh a double offence, and if he sweare in vayne, he shal not be founde ryghteous: for his house shalbe full of plagis.

* The wordes of the swearer byngeth lost (God graunte þe it be not founde in the booke of Jacob.) But they that feare God, shal be all such, and lye not wyltynge in synne.
¶ We not thy mouth to vnbonest and fylthy langage, for in it is the worde of synne. Remembere thy father & thy mother when þe art amonge great men: lest God forget the integritye of thynght, and lest þe doryng in thy custome be rebuke, & wylde not to haue bene dozne in so curse the daye of thy natyngte. * The man that is accustomed wyth the wordes of blasphemy, wyll neuer be reformed all the daye of his lyfe. To synne twyse is to much for the thynde byngeth wrauth and destrucci-on. An hote stomache cannot be quenched: (lyke a burnyng fyre) tyll it haue swa-lled vp som thyng: euen so an vnchast mā shalt not rest in his fleshe, tyll he haue kyndled hys.

¶ All heed is swete to an whozemonger, he shalt not leaue of, tyll he haue hys purpose.
¶ A man that breaketh wedlocke, & regardeth not his soule, but sayeth: * Tush, who seyth me? I am compassed about with darknes, the walles couer me, no body seyth me: whō do I to feare? The hyest wyll not remember my synnes. He vnderstandeth not that his soule is all thynges, for all suche feare of men draweth awaye the feare of God from hym: he feareth onely the eyes of men, and considereth not that the eyes of the Lorde are ouer them: the Sunne, beholdynge all the wayes of men and the grounde of the depe, & lokyng euen to mens hertes in secret places.

¶ The Lorde God knewe all thynges or euer they were made, and after they be brought to passe also he loketh vpon the al. * The same man shalbe openly punysshed in þe stretes of þe citty: and shalbe chased a brode lyke a ponge dozse foale: and when he thynketh lest vpon it, he shalbe taken. Thus shal he be put to shame of euery man, because he wold not vnderstande the feare of þe Lorde. And thus shal it go also wyth euery wyfe, þe leaueth her husbande, and getteth enberptaunce by a straig marriage. * First she hath bene vnfaithfull vnto the lawe of the hyest. Secondly, she hath forsaken her owne husbande. Thirdly, she hath playde the whoze in aduoutery, and gotten her chyldren by an other man. She shalbe brought out of the congregacion, and her chyldren shalbe loked vpon. Her chyldren shal not take roote: & as for frute, her byauches shal byng forth none. A shamefull re-poynte shal she leaue behynde her, and her dyshonoure shal not be put out. And they þe re-mayne, shal knowe, that there is nothyng better, then the feare of God: and that there is nothyng sweter then to take hede vnto þe commaundementes of the Lorde. A greate woorthynge is it to folowe the Lorde, for longe lyfe shalbe receyued of hym.

¶ The xxxiii. Chapter.

¶ A praye of wydomes procedyng forth of the mouth of God. Of her wordes & place where she resteth.

Wydome shall praye her selfe, & be honoured in God, and reioyce in þe myddst of his people: In þe congre-gacions of þe hyest shal she ope her mouth, and triumph in þe beholdynge of hys powder: In the myddst of her people shal she be exalted & wondred at in the holyfynes. In the multitude of the chosen she shalbe comen-ded, & amonge suche as be blessed she shalbe prayed, and shal saye: I am come out of the mouth of þe hyest, fyrst bozne before all creatures. I caused the lyght þe sayleth not to arysse in the heuen, and couered all þe erth as a cloud.
¶ My dwelling is aboue in the heith, & my seat is in the pyller of the cloude. I my selfe alone haue gone rounde about the compasse of heuē and pearled þe grounde of þe depe: I haue walked in the floudes of the see, and haue stande in all landes: my domynion is in euery people and in euery nacō, and with my powder haue I troden downe the hertes of all, bothe hye & lowe.

In all these thynges also I soughte rest, & a dwellinge in some enberptaunce. So the creatō of all thynges gaue me a commaun-dement: and he that made me, appoynted me a tabernacle, and sayde vnto me: Lette thy dwellinge be in Jacob, & thyne enberptaunce As iii in Jc.

The boke of

in Israel: & rote thy selfe amonge my chosen.
 * I was created from the begynnyng, and before the worlde, and shall not leaue of vnto the worlde to come. * In the holy habyta-cyon haue I serued before hym, and so was I stablyshed in Syon. * In the holy cytie rested I in lyke maner: and in Ierusalem was my power: I toke rote in an honorable people, euen in the pozcyon of the Lorde and in his herytage, and kept me in the fulnes of the sayn-ctes. I am set vp an hylke a Cedar vpon Libanus, & as a Cypress tree vpon the mount Hermon. I am exalted lyke a Palme tree in Cadex, and as a rose plante in Jericho. As a fayre Olive tre in the felde, and am exalted lyke as a planteyne tree by the water syde. I haue geuen a smell in the stretes, as the Cyna-mon & Balme, that hath so good a sauoure: per, a swete odoure haue I geuen as it were Myrrour of the best.

I haue made my dwellynges to smell as it were of Rosyn, Galbanu, of Cloues, and Incense, and as Libanus when it is not bewen downe, and myne odoure is as the pure Balme. As the Cerebynte haue I stretched out my bzaunches, and my bzaunches are the bzaunches of honoure & louyng fauoure.

* As the vyne haue I brought forth frute of a swete sauoure, and my floures are the frute of honour and ryches. I am the mother of bewtye, of loue, of feare, of knowledge, and of holy hope. * In me is all grace of lyfe and truth. In me is all hope of lyfe and vertue.

Come vnto me all ye that be despyous of me, & fyl your selues with my frutes: for my sprete is sweeter then hony, & so is my inberytance moze then the hony combe: the remembraunce of me endureth for euermoze. They that eate me, shall haue the moze hunger, and they that dryncke me, shall thyrst for moze. Who so herkeneth vnto me, shall not come to confusyon and they that worke in me shall not offende.
 They that make me to be knowen, shall haue euerylastyng lyfe.

All these thynges are the boke of lyfe, the couenaunt of the best, and the knowledge of the trouth. * Moses commaunded the lawe in the preceptes of ryghteousnes for an heritage vnto the house of Jacob, and commytted the promyses vnto Israel. * Out of Da-uid his seruaunt he ordered to raple vp a most myghtie kynge, settynge in the seate of honoure for euermoze. * This fylleth with wysdome lyke as the floud of Euphron, and as the floud of Tigris, when the newe frutes are growynge.

* This byryngeth a plenteous understandyng lyke Euphrates: and fylleth it vp, as Iordane in the tyme of haruest. Theys ma-keth noure to bryake forth as the lyghte, and as the water Euphon in the haruest. The fyrst hath not knowen her perfectyng, no moze shall the last seke out the grounde of her. For her thought is fuller then the see, & her counsel is profounder then the great depe.

Wysdome haue caste out floudes. I am as a great waterboke out of the ryuer. I am as the ryuer Doryx, and as a water condyte am I come out of the garden of pleasure. I sayde: I wyll water the garden of my ponge plantes, and fyll the frute of my byrthe: So my water boke became exceedyng grete, and my ryuer approached vnto the see. For I make doctryne to be vnto all men as lyghte: as the fayre moonyng, and I shall make it to be euer the clearer. I wyll pearle thorowe all the lower partes of the earth, I wyll loke vpon all such as be a slepe, & lighten all them that put theyr trust in the Lorde. I shall yet powze out doctryne, lyke as prophete & leaue it vnto such as seke after wysdom, and theyr generacyons shall I neuer fayle, vnto the holy euerylastyng worlde. * Beholde, howe that I haue not laboured for my selfe onely, but for all them that seke after the truth.

The xrb. Chapter.

Of the thynges which please God, and of the which he hateth. Of ager thynges that be not to be suspect: and of the tenth, cheslyr of the maytyr of a woman.

These thynges there are, that my sprete fauoureth, whiche be also allowed before God and men.

* The vnite of byrthe, the lone of neryghbours, * a man & wyfe that agre well together.

These thynges there be whiche my soule hateth, and I vterly abhorre the lyfe of the I poore man that is proude. A ryche man is a lyer, & an olde body that doth, and is vncaste.

If thou haste gathered nothyng in thy youth, what wyll thou fynde then in thyne age.
 Howe pleasaunt a thyng is it, when gray headed men are discrete, & when the elders geue good counsell: Howe comely a thyng is wysdome vnto aged men: per, understandyng and counsell is a glorious thyng. The crowne of old men is to haue much experyence and the feare of God is their wysdome.

There be nyne thynges, whiche I haue iudged in my bette to be happye, & the tenth wyll I tell forth vnto men with my tonge.
 A man that whyle he lyueth, hath ioye of his chyldren, and seyth the fall of his enemyes.
 Well is hym that dwelleth with an housewyfe of understandyng, & and that hath not fallen with his tonge, and that hath not bene fayne to serue such as are vniuers for hym.
 Well is hym, that fyndeth a faythful frende: and well is hym, which talketh of wysdome to an eare that heareth hym. Howe great is he, that fyndeth wysdom and knowledge: Per is he not aboute hym, & feareth the Lorde.

The feare of God hath set it selfe aboue all the blessed is the man, vnto whom it is graū to haue the feare of God. Vnto whom shal be hepted, that kepeth it fast: The feare of God is the begynnyng of his loue, and the begynnynge of fapth is to cleaue fast vnto it.

The bypynesse of the herte is all the punishmēt and the wyckednesse of a woman goeth aboue all. All punishment and plage is nothyng in comparyson of the plage of the herte, euen so all wyckednesse is nothyng, to the wyckednesse of a woman.

What soeuer happenieth vnto a man is nothing in comparyson of it, that his euill wyllingnes vnto hym: and all vengeance is nothig in the vengeance of the enemye.

There is not a moze wycked heed then þ of the serpente, and there is no wyath aboue the wyath of a woman. * I wyl rather med with a lyon and dragō, the to kepe house with a wycked wyfe. The wyckednesse of a woman chaungeth her face, she shal moule her countenance as it were a beere, and as a sack shal she shewe it amonge the neygbbours.

her husbande is brought to shame among his neygbbours, and when he heareth it, it maketh hym to sygh. All wyckednesse is but lytle to þ wyckednesse of a woman, the porcyon of þ vnyll shal fall vpon her.

Lyke as to clyme vp a sandpe waye is the feate of the aged, euen so is a wyfe ful of troubles to a styll quyet man. * Loke not to beautye vpon the beautye of a woman, least thou be prouoked in desyre towarde her. The mouth of a woman is dishonour and great colour. If a woman get the mastyfe, then is the contrarye to her husbande. A wycked wyfe maketh a sope herte, an heuie countenance, and a deid wounde. * (Weake handes and fe-bles handes is a woman that her husbande is not abater for.) Of the woman came the begynnynge of synne: and thozowe her we al are synners. Spue thy water no passage, no not a ly-lyte: neyther geue a wycked woman her wyl. she walke not after thy hande, she shal condemne the in the syght of thyne enemyes. Cut her off from thy fleshe, that she do not aluay abuse the.

The xxvi. Chapter.

The playe of a good woman. Of the feare of the Lord, and of the fourth. Of the ielous and bydyng woman. Of two thynges that cause sorowe, and of the thyng which moueth to ioy.

A ppye is the man that hath a vertuous wyfe, for the nombze of his yerres shalbe double. An honest womā maketh her husbande a ioyfull man, and she shal fyll the yeres of his lyfe with pyncer. A vertuous woman is a noble gyfte, which shal be gyuen for a good porcyon vnto suche as feare God: Whether a man be ryche or poore he maye haue euer a mery herte, and a chearful countenance. There be thze thynges that my herte feareth, and my face is afraped of the fourth. Treason in a cytie, a sedycious people, and nopsome tonges, all these are be-uer then death. But when one is gelous ouer his wyfe, it bypyngeth payne and sorowe vnto the herte: and a woman that telleth out al thin-ges, is a scourge of the tonge. When one hath an euill wyfe, it is euen as when an vnyll payre of oxen must drawe togyther, * he that getteth her, getteth a scorpyon. A byronkē woman is a great plage, for she cannot couer her owne shame.

The whozome of a woman maye be knowen in the pynde of her eyes and eye liddes.

* If thy doughter be not shamesfast, holde her straptely, lest she abuse her selfe thozowe our moche lybertye. Beware of all the dysposidye of her eyes: and maruayl not yf she do against the. Lyke as one that goeth by the way, and is thyrstye: so shal she open her mouth, and drynke of euery next water that she maye get.

By euery hedge shal she lye downe, and open her quyuere agaynst euery arrowe. A louyng wyfe reioyseth her husband, and fedeth his bones with her wysdome. A woman of fewe wordes is a gyfte of God, and to all well nurtoured myndes maye nothyng be compared.

An honest and manerly woman is a gyfte aboue other gyftes, and there is no wryght to be compared vnto a minde that can rule it self.
 Lyke as the Sunne when it aryseth, is an ornament in the hygh beauen of the Lorde, so is a vertuous wyfe the beautye of all her house.

Lyke as the cleare lpght is vpon the holy can-delstyeke, so is the beauty of the face vpon an honest body. * Lyke as the golden pylers are vpon the socherres of syluer: so are the sayre legges vpon a woman that hath a constaunte mynde. Perpetuall are the foundacyons that be layed vpon an hole skonye rocke: so are the remaundementes of God vpon the herte of an holy woman.

There be two thynges that grene my herte, and in the thynde is a displeasure come vpo me When an expert man of warre suffreth leasnesse and pouertye. When men of understandyng and wysdome are not set by: And when one departeth from ryghtousnesse vnto synne.
 Who so doeth suche, the Lorde hath prepared hym vnto the swerde. There be two maner of thynges, whiche me thynte to be hearde and peryllous. A marchaunt cannot lpghtly kepe hym from wzonge, neyther a cannerer hym self from synne.

The xxvii. Chapter.

Art v Dithi

The booke of

Of the poore that wolbe be ryche. The probacion of the man that feareth God. The vncōstant: nisse of a foole. The secretes of a frende, are not to be vnder. The wycked imagineth euill, which returneth vpon hym selfe.

Because of pouertie haue many one offended: and he that seeketh to be ryche, turneth his eyes asyde. Lyke as a nayle in the wall stycketh fast betwixt two stones, euen so doth synne styck betwixt the buyer and the seller. If he holde hym not diligentlie in the feare of the Lorde, his house shall soone be ouerthrowen. Lyke as when one spyteth, the spytynesse remaineth in the syue: So remaineth there some vncleane thyng in the thought of man. The outproueth the potters vessell, *so doth temptacyon of trouble trye ryghtous men. *The tree of the felde is knowen by his frute, so is the thought of mans hert knowen by his wordes. Praise no man excepte thou haue herde hym, for a man is knowen by his wordes. If thou folowest ryghtousnes, thou shalt get her, and put her vpon the as a fayne garment. And thou shalt dwell with her, and she shall defende the for euer: and in the daye of knowledge thou shalt fynde stedfastnesse. The bydes resorte vnto the; lyke: so doth the truthe turne vnto them that be occupped withall. The lyon wayteth the praye: so doo the synners lurke vpon the wordes of wyckednesse. The talkynge of hym that feareth God, is nothyng but wysdome: as for a foole he chaungeth as y moone. If thou be amonge the vndiscrete, keepe thy wordes tyll a conuenient tyme, but amonge suche as be wyle, speake on hardely. The talkynge of foolis is abhominacyon, and they; spoyre is volupuousnesse and mysnurtour.

*Woche swearynge maketh thy heere to stande vp: and to strine with such stopperth the eares.

C The styffe of the proude is bloodsheddyng and they; blasphemynge is heuy to heare.

*Who so discovereth secretes, leseth his credence, and synneth no frende after his wyl. Loue thy frende, and hynde thy selfe in fapfulness with hym: but if thou bewrayest his secretes, thou shalt not get hym agayne. For lyke as the man is that destroyeth his enemye so is he also that dealeth falselye in the frendshipp of his neyghbour.

Like as one that letteth a byrde go out of his hande, can not take her agayne: Euen so thou, if thou gyne ouer thy frende, thou canst not get hym agayne: Pea, thou canst not come by hym: for he is to farre of. He is vnto the as a Roo escaped out of the snare, for his soule is wounded. As for woundes, they may be bound up agayne, and an euill worde maye be reconcyled: but whoso bewrayeth the secretes of a frende, there is no more hope to be had vnto hym.

*He that wyneketh with the eyes, ymagineth some euill, and noman shall take hym from it. When thou arte present he shall hyre commende and praise thy wordes: but at the last he shall tourne his tale, and sleaundre thy sayinge. Many thynges haue I hated, but nothyng so euill, for the Lorde hym selfe also abhorreth suche a one.

*Who so casteth a stone on hye, it shall fall vpon hym owne heade: and he that smyteth withe gyle, woundeth hym selfe: who so bygeth a pytte shall fall therin (as he that layeth a stone in hym neyghbours waye, shall stombe thereon) and he that layeth a snare for another shall be taken in it hym selfe. *Who so gyueth a wycked nopsome counsayl, it shall come vpon hym selfe, and he shall not knowe from whence: The proude blasphemeth and are scornful, but vengeaunce lurketh for them as a lyb. They that reioyse at the fall of the ryghteous, shall be taken in the snare: angustie of herte shall consume them before they dye. Anger and rygourousnesse are two abhominable thynges, and the vngodly hath them both vpon hym.

The xxviii. Chapter.

We ought not to desyre vengeaunce, but to forgiue the offender. Of the bydes of chetousnes, and of the daungers thereof.

*That seeketh vengeaunce, shall fynde vengeaunce of the Lorde, which shall surely kepe hym from synnes. *Forgiue thy neyghbour the hurte that he hath done the, so shall thy synnes be forgiuen the also, when thou prayest. A man that beareth hatred agaynst another, how darre he desyre forgiuenesse of God? He that sheweth no merce to a man whiche is lyke hym selfe, howe darre he aske forgiuenesse of his synnes? If he that is but fleshe, beareth hatred and kepeth it, who wyl intreate for his synnes? Remember the ende, and let enymitie passe, which seeketh deeth and destruction, and abyde thou in the comaundementes. Remember the commaundementes so shalte thou not be rygourous ouer thy neyghbour. Thynke vpon the couenaunce of the byghest, and forgiue thy neyghbours ignorance. *Beware of strife, and thou shalt make thy synnes fewer. For an angrey man kindleth variaunce, and the vngodly disquieteth frendes, and putteth discorde among them that be at peace. *The more wood there is, the more vehemente is the fyre: and the myghtyer that men be, the greater is the wrath: and the longer the strife endureth, the more it burneth.

An halste byawynge kindleth a fyre, and an halste styffe weddeth bloude. A tonge also that beareth false wytnesse byngeth death. If thou blowe the sparke, it shall burne. If thou spyt vpon it, it shall go forth: and bothe the out of the mouth. *The sleaundre and double tonged is cursed, for many one that be frendes be at varpaunce. The thyrd tonge disgayed manye one, and dyspyn them from one lande to an other. Strong cyties of the earthe hathe it broken downe, and ouer-throwen houses of great me. (The strenght of the people hathe it broughte downe, and the decaye of myghte nacjons.) The thyrd tonge hath cast oute manye an honest man, and robbed them of theyr labours.

Whoso herkeneth vnto such, shal neuer finde rest, and neuer dwell safely. The stroke of the tong maketh adders, but the stroke of the tong maketh the bones in sondre. There be manye that haue perished with the swerde, but many more thowde the tonge.

Wyll is hym that is kept from an euill tong, and comureth not in the angre thereof, whiche draweth not the pocke of such, and is not bounde in the bandes of it. For the pocke thereof is of pyon, and the bande of it of Steele.
The death thereof is a very euill death: hell is better for one, then such a tonge. But if the tongue of it may not oppresse the that feare God, and the flame thereof maye not burne them.
Such as forsake the Lorde, shall fall therein: and it shall burne them, and no man shall be able to quench it. It shall fall vpon them as a lion, and deuoure them as a leopard. Thou pragst thy goodes with thornes: why dost thou not rather make doozes and barres for thy mouth? Thou wepest thy golde and siluer why dost thou not wep thy wordes also vnto thy baliaunce? Beware that thou syde not in thy tonge, and so fall before thyne enemyes, that shal wayte for the, (and thy fall be incuntable, vnto death.)

The xxix. Chapter.

Thou hast ought to lende our money, and be almes.
Of a faithfull man answeryng for his frende.
Discreetie and hospitalite.

Whoso wyl shewe mercy: let hym lende vnto his neygh-bour: and he that is hable, let hym kepe the commaun-dement. Lende vnto thy neyghbour in tyme of his nede, & paye thou thy neygh-bour agayne in due season. Kepe thy worde, and tale faithfully with hym, and thou shalt alwaye fynde the thyng that is necessary for the. There haue ben many, that when a thyng was lent them, reckened it to be founde, and made them trauaile and labour that had helped them. Whyle they receyue any thyng, they are in the bandes of such as gyue them, and for such neyghbours good they hable their voyce.
When they shoulde paye agayne, they kepe it backe, and gyue euill wordes, and make many excuses by reason of the tyme: & though they be hable, yet gyuerth he scarce the halfe a-gayne, and reckeneth the other to be founde.

And yf he withholde not his money, yet hath he an enemye of hym, and that vndersecreed.

He payeth hym with cursynge and rebuke, and gyuerth him euill wordes for his good dede.
There be many one which are not glad for to lende, not bycause of euill, but they feare to lese a thyng that they lende. Yet haue thou pa-cience with the simple, and withhold not mercy from hym. Helpe the poore for the commaundementes sake, and let hym not goo emptye, from the bycause of his necessitye. Lese thy money for thy brother and neyghbours sake, and burie it not vnder a stone, where it rusteth and corrupteth.

* Gather thy treasure after the commaun-dement of the hyghest, and so shall it byynge the more profyt then golde: & Laye vp the almesse in the hand of the poore, and it shal kepe the from all euill.

* A mans almesse is a purse with him, and shal kepe a mans fauour as the apple of an eye and afterwarde shal it aryle & paye euery mahis treward vpon his heed. It shal spede for the agaynste thyne enemyes, better then the thyde of a gyauite, or speare of the myghttye.

A good honest man is surety for his neygh-bour, but a wycked personne letteth hym comto shame. Forget not the frendshipp of the sure-tye, for he hath gyuen his soule for the. The ungodly despyseth the good dede of his suretye and the vntankfull and ignorant kaneth his suretye in daunger. Some man promysseth for his neyghbour: and when he hath lost his honesty he shal forsake hym. Suretyshipp hath destroyed many a ryche man, and remoued them as the waues in the see. Wyghtye people hath it dyspyn a waye, and caused them to wandre in straunge countreys. An ungod-lye man transgressynge the commaundement of the Lorde, shal fall into an euill suretyshipp: and though he force hym selfe to get oute, yet shall he fall into the iudgemente. Helpe thy neyghbour out after thy power: and beware, that thy selfe fall not in such det. The chere thyng that kepeth in thy lyfe, is water, and byerde, clothynge, and lodgynge, to couer thy shame.

Better is it to haue a poore lynyng in a mans owne house, then delicate fage amonge the straunge. * Be it lytle or moche that thou hast, hold the content withall, and thou shalt not be blamed as a vagabonde: for a myserable lyfe is it, to goo from house to house: and where a man is fremde, he darre not open his mouthe. Though one be lodged, and haue meate and drynke, yet shall he be taken as vntoworthye, and heare manye bytter rough wordes, namelike thus: Goo thy waye, thou straunger, and prepare a table for thy selfe, and feede me also of that thou hast. Awaye thou

¶ The. xxx. Chapter.

Of the correction of chyldren. Of the commodi-tie of health. Death is better then a sorrowful lyf Of hye wysdome. Of the sope and sorowes of the deceit.

Who so loueth his chyldre * holdeth him self vnder correctiō that he may haue sope of him afterwarde, and þe grope not after his neighbours dores. * He that teacheth his son, shall haue sope in hym, and neede not to be ashamed of hym amonge his acquaintance.
Who so enfourmeth and teacheth his sonne, greueth the enemye: and before his frendes he maye haue sope of hym. Though the father dye, yet is he as though he were not deed: for he hath left one behynde him that is lyke him.
In his lyfe he sawe hym and had sope in hym, and was not sorow in his death, neyther was he ashamed before his enemyes. For he left behynde him an auenger agaynst his enemyes and a good doer vnto the frendes. For þe lyfe of chyldren he shal binde the woundes togyther and his hert is greued at euery crye. An vn-tamed horse wyll be harde, and a wanton chyld wyll be wyffull. If thou bypunge vpon thy sonne deyrcately, he shall make the asfayed: and yf thou playe with hym, he shall bypunge the to heynesse. Laughe not with hym, least thou wepe with hym also, and least thy teeth be set on edge at the last.

* Gyue hym no lybertie in his yowth, and excuse not his folie. Bowe do wone his necke whyle he is younge, hys hym vpon the sydes, whyle he is yet but a chyld, lest he waxe stub-borne, and gyue nomore force of the, so shalt thou haue heynesse of soule. Teach thy chyld and be diligent therein, lest it be to thy shame.
Better is the pooze beinge hole and stronge, then a man to be ryche & not to haue his helth: Health and welfare is aboue all golde, and a whole body aboue all treasure. There is no rychesse aboue a sounde bodye, and no sope aboue the sope of the hert. Death is better then a wretched lyfe: and eternal rest better then co-tynall spekenesse. The good thynges that are put in a close mouth, are lyke as when meate is layed vpon the graue.

¶ What good doeth the offrynge vnto an poule? For he can neither eate, tast, nor smel.
Euen so is he that is chased of the Lorde, and beareth the rewardes of iniquitie. He seith w his eyes: and groneth lyke a gelded man, that lyeth with a virgin and spygheth. * Gyue not ouer thy mynde into heynesse, and vexe not thy selfe in thyne owne counsaile. * The sope and chearfulnesse of the hert is the lyfe of maand a mans gladnesse is the prolongynge of his dayes. Loue thyne owne soule, and cofort thyne hert: as for sorow and heynesse, byne it farre from the, * for heynesse hath slayne many a man, and bringeth no profyt. Zele and angre shorten the dayes of the lyfe: carefulesse and sorow bypunge age before the tyme. Unto a mery hert euery thyng hath a good taste that he eateth.

¶ The. xxxi. Chapter.

We ought to gyue diligent heed to boordynge. Of them that take payne to gather ryche. The payne of a ryche man without a faulte. We ought to fye drunkennesse & folowre sobrenesse.

Ranaple & carefulesse for * rychesse taketh away the slepe, and maketh the fleshe to consume.
When one lyeth and taketh care he awaketh euer vp, lyke as a great spekenesse breaketh the slepe. The ryche hath great labour in gatherynge his ryche together, and then with the pleasure of his rychelle he taketh his rest, and is refreshed. But whoso labourereth, and prospereth not, he is pooze: and though he leane of, yet is he a beg-ger. He that loneth rychesse, shall not be sufficyed: and whoso foloweth corruption, shall haue ynough therof. * Many one are come in great myffortune by the reason of golde, and haue founde theyr destruction before them.
It is a tree of fallynge vnto them that offre it vp, and al such as be foolish tal therein. Blessed is the ryche whiche is founde without blem-yshe, and hath not gone after golde, nor hoped in money and treasures. Where is there such a one? and we shall commend hym, and cal hym blessed: for great thynges doeth he amonge his people. Whoso is tryed and soude perfect in such thynges, shalbe commended & prayed. Who myght offende, and hath not offended? Who coulde do euill, and hath not done it? Therefore shal his good be stablyshed and the hole congregasyon shal declare his alinnesse. If thou lye at a great mans table, ope not thy mouth wyde vpon it, and make not many wordes. Remember that an euyl eye is a thewe.

¶ What thyng created is worse then a wilked eye? therefore wepe it before euery mans face: Laye not thyne hande vpon euery thyng that thyne eye seith, and stryue not with hym in the dyspute. * Dondre by thy selfe, what thy neighbour wolde sayne haue, and be discrete in euery poynte. Eate the thyng that is set before the manerlye, as it becommeth a man, and eate not to moche, least thou be abhoyed.
Leave thou of fyt of all, bycause of nurytur, least thou be he whome no man maye satysfy, whiche maye turne to thy decaye. When thou lyttest amonge manye men, reache not thyne hande out fyt of all. * Howe well content is a man with a syke wyne : so that in the last thou shalt fynde as I haue tolde the. In al thy wordes be diligent and quych to shew there no syncknesse happen vnto the.

Whoso is lyberall in dealyng out his meate many men shall blesse hym, and prayse hym thou shalt be : and the same is a sure token of thy lypes : and the same is a sure token of thy meate and faythfulnesse. But he that is vnderstandynge in meat, the hole cytie shall complayne of hym : and that is a sure experience of his intemperance and syncknesse. * Be not thou a glutton, for wyne hath destroyed many men. The fyre proueth the harde yron, euen so wyne proueth the hartes of the proude, and they be broken.

Wyne sobelye broken, quycheneth the meate. If thou drynkest it measurably, thou shalt be temperate. What life is it that continues without wyne? (What takerh the fyre euen death.) Wyne was made for the begynnynge to make men glad (not for the endynge). Wyne measurably broken harmynge of the soule and body. (A measurably broken wyne is healed to soule and body. But if it be broken with excess, it ma-keth syncknesse and sorrow vnto the mynde.
Whynnes fylleth the mynde of the foolish with shame and rayne, mynnysheth strength and maketh woundes. * Reduke not thy meate at the wyne, and despyse hym not for syncknesse. Gue hym no dyspreefull wo-rdes, and prayse not vpon hym with contrary wordes.

The xxxii. Chapter.

The instruction and prayse of the parader, and of the meate of the tate, laped, and confidence in God.

If he made a ruler, * pryde not thy selfe therein, but be thou, as one of the people.
Take diligent care for them and loke wel therto: and when thou hast done all thy duty, be thou, that thou mayst be met with honour and receyue a crowne of honours. Take thy pay and honestie, for wysdome becometh thyght well. Appoyne not mulyche. Speake not where there is no audience: * and pouce not thy wysdome out of tyme, at an impossible. Lyke as the Carbuncle stone syncketh that is set in golde, so doth a longe garnyshe the wyne least: and as the smaragde that is set in golde, so is the sweetnesse of mulych by the myght of wyne. (Gue care and be lyl, for the good behauiour thou shalt be loured.)

Thou yonge man, speake that becometh the, and that is profitable, and yet scarce when thou art twyple asked. Comprehende moche of fewe wordes. In many thynges be as one that is ignozant: gue care, and holde thy tonge withall. If thou be amonge men of hys anctouitie, desyre not to compare thy selfe vnto them: and when an elder speaketh make not thou many wordes therein. Before the thoudre goeth by gettynge, and before nurture and shamefastnesse, goeth loue and fauour. Stand vp by tyme, and be not the last: but gett the home soone, and there take thy pastyme, and do what thou wylt: so that thou do no euill, & desyre no man: but for all thynges gue thankes vnto hym that hath made the, and repli-nished the with his goodes.

Whoso feareth the Loyde, wyl receyue his doctryne: and they that gett them to hym by tymes, shall fynde grace. He that feareth the lawe, shall be fylled withall: As for hym that is but fayned, he wyl be offended therat. They that feare the Loyde shall fynde the indgement and they that are syncknesse shall be syncked as a lyght. An vngodlye man wyl not be resour-med, but can helpe hym selfe with the example of other in his purpose. A man of understandyng despyseth no good counsaile: but a wilde and proude body hath no feare. (Pea, euen when he hath dealt rashly with an other man, but his owne doynge shall be his rebuke.) If sonne, doo nothyng without aduysment, so shall it not repent the after the dede. Goo not in the way where thou mayest fall, nor where thou mayest stumple agaynst the stone. Gue not thy selfe into a laborious slippyng waye, and beware of the chylde, (and take hede of them that be of thyne owne houtholde.) In all thy wordes put thy trust in God, from thy whole herte, for that is the keepynge of the comandementes. Whoso beleueth Gods word takerh hede to the commandementes: and he that putterh his trust in the Loyde, shall want nothyng.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

The instruction of hym that feareth God. The author of the wyse. The lytle instruction of a soule. Man is in the hand of God, as the eard is in the hand of the potter.
We ought not to helpe oure selues to become syncked other.

Here shall no euill happen vnto him that feareth God: but wyl he be in temptation, & Loyd shall helpe him, & kepe him fro euill. A wyle man hateth not law, but an ypocrite is as a wyllow in raging water. A man of understandynge gruethe credence vnto the lawe of God.

of God, and the lawe is faythfull vnto hym. We lurre of the matter, then talke thereof: We fyist wel instruct, then mayest thou gyue answer. The hert of the foolishe is lyke a cartwhele: and his thoughtes runne aboute lyke an axel tre. Lyke as a wyld horse that neyeth vnder every one that syteth vpon hym, so is it with a scozeful frende. Why doth one day excell an other, seinge al the dayes of the yere come of the Sunne? The wysdome of the Lorde hath so parted them a sondre, and so hath he ordeyned the tymes, and solempne feastes. Whom of them hath he chosse and halowed before other dayes. And all men are made of the grounde, and out of the earth of Adam.

1. Cor. 15. 47

In the multitude of science hath the Lorde sondred them, and made theyr wayes of dyuers fassions. Some of them hath he blessed, made moche of them, halowed them, and clapped them to hym selfe. But some of the hath he cursed, brought them lowe, and put them out of theyr estate. * Lyke as the claye is in the potters hande, and all the ordynge therof at his pleasure: so are we also in the hand of him that made them, so that he may gyue them as lyketh hym best. * Agaynst euyl is good, and agaynst death is lyfe: so is the vngodly agaynst suche as feare God. Beholde, these are the woordes of the hyghest, and there are euer two agaynst two, and one set agaynst another. I am awaked vp last of all, as one that gathereth after in harvest. In the gyftes of God and in his blessing I am increased, and haue fylled my wynepysselle, lyke a grape gatherer. * Beholde, how I haue now laboured onely for my selfe, but for al such as loue nurture and wysdome.

1. Cor. 15. 47

1. Cor. 15. 47

1. Cor. 15. 47

Hear me, O ye greates men of the people, and hearken with your eares ye rulers of the congregacyon. Gyue not thy sonne and wife, thy brother and frende, power ouer the while thou lyuest: and gyue not away thy substance and good to an other, lest it repent the: & thou be fayne to begge therfore thy selfe. As longe as thou lyuest and hast breathe, lette no man change the: For better it is thy chylde to pray the, then that thou shouldest be fayne to loke in theyr handes. In all thy woordes be excelsit, that thyne honoure be neuer stayned. At the tyme when thou shalt ende thy dayes, and fynish thy lyfe, distribute thyne inherytaunce. The fodder, & whyp, and the burthen belongeth vnto the asse: Heat, correction & woordes vnto the seruaunt.

If thou let thy seruaunt to labour, thou shalt fynde rest. But if thou let hym go ydle, he shall seke lybertie. The poock and the whyp bowe downe the harde necke, but tame thou thy euyl seruaunt with bondes and correction. Sende hym to labour, that he go not ydle. For ydlenesse byngeth moche euyl. Set him to woork, for that belongeth vnto hym, and becommeth hym well. If he be not obedyent, bynde his feet: but do not to moche vnto hym in any wyse, and without discretis do nothing. * If thou haue a (faythfull) seruaunt, let hym be vnto the as thyne owne soule: (intreat hym as a brother) for in bloude hast thou gotten hym. If thou haue a seruaunt, holde hym as thy selfe: for thou hast nede of hym, as of thy selfe. If thou intreate hym euyl, and hepest hym harde, and makest hym to be proude and to runne awaye from the, thou canst not tell what waye thou shalt seke hym.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Of dreames, vinyacions and enchaunmentes. We oughte to esteeme vayne hope, and lying. The prayse of them that feare God. Of dreames: how of men. God doth not alowe the wyse of an vnfaythfull man.

A wyse people begyle them selues with vayne and disceptfull hope, & foster trust in dreames. Who so regardeth dreames, is lyke hym that wyll take holde of a shadowe, and folowe after. Euen so is it with the apparenynges of dreames. Before the face is the lykenesse of a face: Who can be clenched of the vncleaner? Of whom truthe can be spoken of a lyer? Soothsayng, witchcraft, sorcerye and dreameing is but vanytie: lyke as when a woman transpleth a chylde, and hath many fantasies in her hart. Where as suche vylions come not of God, he not thynke hert vpon them: For dreames haue discouered manye a man: and they sayled that put theyr trust therein.

The lawe shalbe fulfilled without lye, & wysdome is sufficient to a faythfull mouth. What knowledge hath he that is not tryed? A wyse man that is well instruct, vnderstandeth moche: and he that hath good experyence can talke of wysdome. He that hath no experyence knoweth lytle: and he that errith, can seke moche wyckednesse. He that is not tryed, what thinges knoweth he? Who so foloweth no rule is full of wyckednesse.

When I was yet in erreour, I leamed moche also: yea, I was so leamed, that I could not expresse it all, and came ofte in peryll of death therfore: tyll I was deliuered from it (thorowe the grace of God.) Nowe I se, that they which feare God haue the right wyse: for they hope standeth in hym, that can helpe them. And the eyes of the Lorde are on them, that loue hym. Who so feareth the Lorde, standeth in awe of no man, and is not afraid: for the Lorde is his hope and comfort.

Blessed is the soule of him that feareth the Lorde: In whom putteth he his trust: who in his strength. * For the eyes of the Lord are respect vnto them, that loue hym. He shal haue myghty protection, and stronge grounde.

A defence for the heate, a refuge for the both noon dape, a succour for stomblyng, and a helpe for fallynge. He setteth vp the soule and lygheneth the eyes: He gyueth lyfe, and deliuereth. He that gyueth an offerynge of vn-righteous good, his offeryng is refused: and the harmful dealynges of the vnyghteous please not God: (the Lorde is theyr onelye, that patiently abyde hym in the waye of the truthe, and of ryghteousnesse. The hyghest doeth not deceiue the gyftes of the wycked.) And God hath no deliuer in the offerynges of the vngod-ly: neither may synne be reconciled in the multitude of oblacions. Alho so bypnygeth an offeryng out of the goodes of the pooze, doth eue as one that kylleth the sonne, before the fathers eyes.

The breed of the nedefull is the lyfe of the pooze: he that defraudeth him therof, is a man of bloude. Alho so robbeth his neyghboure of his lypnyng, doth as great synne as though he haue hym to death. * He that defraudeth the labourer of his hyre, is a bloud shedder. Alho he buydeth and an other breaketh downe, what profit haue they the but labour? Alho he mayeth an other curseth, whose voyce the Lorde heareth: * He that walsheth him self by cause of a deed body, and toucheth the bad agayne, what doeth his walshynge?
* So is it with a man that fasteth for hye synes, and doth them agayne: who wil heare his prayer? * What doth his fastynge helpe

The xxxv. Chapter.

It is wel done to praye, and so do sacrifice. The prayer of the fatherlesse, and of the wydow: and hym that humbleth hym selfe.

Who so kepeth the lawe * bypnygeth offerynges ynough. He that holdeth fast the commaundement, offereth the ryght healt offerynge. He that thankfull, and recompenseth, offereth syne loue. * Alho so is mercifull and gyueth al-me, that is the ryght thank offerynge. God hath pleasure when one departeth from syn, and to forsake vnyghteousnesse, reconcyleth him with hym.

* Thou shalt not appeare emptye before the Lorde, for all suche is done by cause of the commaundement of God. * The offerynge of vnyghteous maketh the aulter fat, and a sweet smell is it before the hyghest. The of-ferynge of the ryghteous is acceptable vnto God, and shal neuer be forgotten. Gyue God his honour with a chearefull herte, and kepe not backe the fyrst lynes of thy handes. * In all thy gyftes shewe a merciful countenance, and halowe thy tythes vnto God with glad-nesse. Gyue vnto God accordyng as he hath enriched and prospered the: * and loke what thy hande is habile, gyue with a chearefull eye: for the Lorde recompenseth, and gyueth the ten tymes as moche agayne.

Gyue no vnyghteous gyftes, for suche wyl be not receyue. Beware of wyngful of-ferynges, for the Lorde is a ryghteous iudge: he regardeth nomans person. He accepteth not the person of the pooze: but he heareth the prayer of the oppressed. * He despyseth not the despyre of the fatherlesse, nor the wyddowe, when she poureth out her prayer before hym. Doth not God se the teares, that runne downe the chekes of the wyddow? * He heareth he not the co-playnte ouer suche as make her to wepe: for from her chekes do the teares go vnto be a uen, and the Lorde whiche heareth them, doth accept them: Alho so serueth God after his pleasure, shal be accepted: and his prayer reacheth vnto the cloudes. * The prayer of him that humbleth hym selfe, goeth thorow the cloudes, tyll he come nye. He wyl not be comforted, nor goo her waye, tyll the hyghest God haue respect vnto her, gyue true sentence and perfourme the indgement. And the Lorde wyl not be slacke in commynge, nor tarpe longe: tyll he hath smytten in sondre the backes of the vnnmercifull, and auenged him self of the hepythen: tyll he haue taken a wape the multitude of the cruell, and broken the sceptre of the vnyghteous, tyll he gyue euery man after his workes, and rewarde them after their dopnynges: tyll he haue deliuered his people, maintayned theyr cause, and reioyced them in his mercy. O how saye a thyng is mercye in the tyme of angustye and trouble? It is lyke a cloude of rayne, that cometh in the tyme of a drouth.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

Thy prayer to God in the person of all saythfull men with the people of a good woman.

Hue mercy vpon vs O Lord, thou God of all thynges. Haue respecte vnto vs, shewe vs the lyght of thy mercyes, and sende thy feare amonge the hepythen and straungers, whiche seke not after the, that they may knowe how there is no God but thou, and that they maye shewe thy wonderful workes. I pte w thyne heede ouer the outlandyshe hepythen, that they maye learne to knowe thy myght, and power. Like as thou art halowed in vs before them, so bypnyge to passe, that thou mayest be magnified all o in them before vs: that they maye knowe the, lyke as we knowe the. For there is none other God but onelye thou, O Lorde. Renue the tokens, and chaunge the wonderous workes. Shewe thyne hande, and thy ryght arme gloriously. Ryle vp thy indignacion, and poure out thy wrath.
Take away the aduersary, and smyte the en-emye. Make the tyme shorte, remembre thy couenaunt, that thy wonderful workes may be prayled. Let the wrath of the tyme consume

* Eccl. vi. 3.

I like no counsaile at hym, that suspecteth the for an enemye, & hyde thy counsaile from such as hate the. I like no counsaile at a woman concerninge the thinges that she longeth for: no at a fearful and faint hearted body, in matters of warre: or at a marchaunte, howe deare he wyl cheape thy wares towardes him: or at a byer of sellynge: Or at an enuyous man, of thankesguyng: Or at the vnnecessary, of lounge kynnesse: (or at an vnboned man of honestie.) Or at the slouthful, of working: Or at an hyelyng whiche hath no bene, or profyte, of wealth. (A ydle body wolde not gladly heare speake of moche labour.) Take no suche folkes to counsaile: but be diligent to seke counsaile at a vertuous man that feareth God, suche one as thou knowest to be a keper of the commaundementes, whiche hee mynde after thyn owne mynde, and is sorry for the when thou stumblest.

A wyle man maketh his people wyle, and the frutes of his wysdome fayle not. A wyle ma shal be plentifully blessed of God: and all they that he him shal speake good of him. The life of man, standeth in the nombre of the dayes, but the dayes of Israel are innumerable. A wyle Wise man shall opteyne saythfulnesse and presence amonge his people, & his name shall be perpetuall. My sonne, proue thy soule in thy lyfe: and yf thou se any euell thyng, geue it not vnto her. * For all thynges are not profitable for all men, neyther hath euery soule pleasure in euery thyng. Be not greedy in enemy sayng, & be not to hasty vpon all meates.

 * For excess of meates byngeth synneshesse, & glotony cometh at the laste to an vnnecessarye. Thowowe surfet haue many one pe-nyshed: but he that byteth hym selfe temperately, prolongeth his lyfe.

C The. xxxviii. Chapter.

A physician in synners oughte to praye, & to praye a physician which healeth by prayer. The beweping of the deede. Sadnes, wysdome. Artificers of craftynmen.

Donour & Philispy: honour him because of necessitye. God hath created hym (for of hymest commeth medecine) & he shall receaue gyftes of the kyng. The wysd-om of Philispyon byngeth hym to great worke, & in the syght of the great men of thys world, he shall be honozably taken. The lord hath created medecyne of the earth, and he shall wyl not a bypore it. * Was not & bit in water made swete wyth a tree, that men myght learne to knowe & vertue therof? The lord hath geuen men wysdome, and vnderstandyng, that he might be honoured in his wondrous wothes. With such doth he heale men, and taketh awaye theyre paynes: Of his doth the Apothecary make a confectyon for no man perfourme all his wothes.
 For of the Lord cometh prosperous wealth vnto all the earth.

My sonne, despyse not this in thy synneful, but praye vnto the Lord, and he shall make the whole. Leane of from synne, and geue thy handes a ryghte, cleanse thyne herte from all wyckednes. Geue a swete lauoured praye, and the syne shal be for a token of re-membzaunce: make the offeringe fat as one that geueth the first frutes, and geue rowme vnto Philispyon. For the Lord hath created hym, let hym not go from the, for thou haiste made of hym. The houre maye come, that the lord maye be helped thowowe them, when they praye vnto the Lord, that he maye remune, and get helth to lye longer. He & synner before his maker, shall fall into the han-des of the Philispyon.

My sonne, & byngye forth thy teares ouer the deede: and begynne to mourne, as yf thou haddest suffered greate harme thy selfe: and thou shalt see his body after a conuenient maner and shal not be buryall. Enforce thy selfe to wepe, and prouoke thy selfe to mourne, & make lamentacyon expediently, and & shal be as two, lest thou be euell spoken of:

and then conforte thy selfe because of & deu-nes. * For of deuynes cometh death, the deu-nes of the herte breaketh strengthe. Deuynes and pouertie greueth the herte in tentacyon & offence. Take no deuynes to herte, bypore it a waye, and remembre the last thynges. For get it not, for there is no turnyng agayne.
 Thou shalt do hym no good, but varte thy selfe. Remembre his iudgment, thine also shall be lyke wyse: vnto me yester daye vnto the to-daye. * Let & remembzaunce of & deede crasse in his rest, and conforte thy selfe agayne ouer hym, seying his sprete is departed from hym.
 The wysdome of the scripbe is at conuenient tyme of rest: and he & ceaseth from exerceyse and labour shall be wyse.

He that holdeth & plough, and hath pleasure in ploughing, & byngye the oren, & goeth about with such wothes, he can speake of orenen: he setteth his herte to make forowes, & is dilygent to geue the hyme fodder. So is eue-ry carpenter also and woorkmaster & laboureth wyl nyghte & daye: he carueth, graneth, cutteth oute, and his desyre is in condre con-nyng thynges, his herte ymagyneth howe he maye connyngly cast an ymage, his dilygence also & watchyng perfourmeth the wothe.
 The yronsmith in lyke maner bydeth by his synthe, & doth his dilygence to labour & yro The vapoure of the fyre brenneth his synthe, and he must synthe with the heat of & foynace The noise of the hammer soundeth euer in his eares, & his eyes loke wyl vpon the thyng & he maketh. He hath let hym mynde therupon, & he wyl make out his wothe, and therfore he watcheth, howe he maye let it out, and byng it to an ende.

So doth the potter synthe by his wothe, he turneth the whele aboute with his fete, he is dilygent and carefull in all doynges, and his labour and wothe is without nombze. He fashioneth the claye with his arme, and with his fete he tempereth it. His hert ymagyneth howe he maye make it pleasaunt, and his dilygence is to cleanse the ouen. All these hope in theyr handes, and euery one thyngeth to be connyng in his wothe. Without these maye not the ctyes be maynteyned, inhabytated, nor occupied: yet they come not hye in & congregacyon, neyther synthe they vpon the iudge-mente seates: they vnderstande not the connaunt of the lawe: they cannot declare equy-te and iudgement: they cannot synde out the darke sentences, but thowowe them shall the creature of the worlde be maynteyned, they prayer concerneth onely the wothe & labour of connyng.

A wise man. The wothes of god. Vnto the good prosper euill.

¶ He that

In that applyeth bys mynde to vnderstande the lawe of God, doth diligently seke out the wysdome of them of the olde tyme, and exercyseth hym selfe in the prophetes. He heareth the sayynges of famous men, and pecaileth to the vnderstandyng of darch sentēces of wysdome. He sekerth out the mysterie of secrete sayynges, & exercyseth hym selfe therein continually. He doth seruice amonge great men, & appeareth before the Prynce. He goth into a strange cōūtre, & trauaileth thorow it: loke what good or euell is amonge men, he prometh it & sekerth it out. He purpolet in his herte, to resorte early vnto the Lorde & made hym, and to praye before the hyest God. He openeth his mouth in praer, and prayeth for his synnes. When the greates Lorde wyll, he shalbe fylled with þe spyrte of vnderstandyng that he maie then poure out wyle sentēces, and geue thankes vnto þe Lorde in his prayer. He shal ordeine his deuyce, and lead his knowledge a ryght: and geue hym vnderstandyng of secrete thynges. He shal therewe soke the science of his learnyng, and reioyce in the cōuenant of the lawe of the Lorde. The whole congregacyon shal commend bys wysdome and it shal neuer be put out. The remembrance of hym shal neuer be forgotten, and bys name shal contynue from one generation to another. * Bys wysdome shalbe spoken of, amonge the people, and the whole congregacyon shal openly declare his prayse. Whyle he liueth, he hath a greater name than a thousande helyde: and after his deathe, the same name remayneth vnto hym. Yet wyl I speake of no men of vnderstandyng, for I am full as the Doone.

Earken vnto me (ye holy vertuous chyldren) byyng forth frute, as the rose þe is planted by the brokes of the felde, and geue ye a swete smell as Libanus. As lozely as the rose gardeyne, syng a songe of prayse. O geue thanques vnto God ouer all his workes.
Geue glory & honoure vnto the Lorde, thewe his prayse with your lippes. Pee, euen with the songe of poure lippes, with harpes and playyng, and in geuyng thankes vnto hym, saye after this maner. * All the workes of þe Lorde are exceedyng good, and all bys commaundementes are mete and conueniente in due season.

A man nedeth not to saye: what is þe what is that? For at tyme conuenient they shal al be sought. At his cōmaundement the water was as a wall, & at the worde of bys mouth the water stode still. * In his cōmaundement is euery thyng acceptable and recon-cyled, and his helth cannot be mynyshed.
The workes of all fleshe are before hym, and there is nothyng hyd from his eyes. He seyth from euerlastyng to euerlastyng, and there is nothyng to wonder full or tye into hym A man nedeth not to saye then, what is this, or that? For he hath made all thynges to be good vnto man. His blessyng shal reuene ouer as the streame, and moisture the earthe lyke a founteyn of water. Lyke as he maketh water for dryght, so shal his wrath fall vpon the heathen.

* His wayes are playne & ryght vnto the iust, but the vngodly stumple at them. For the good, are good thynges created from the begynnyng, & euell thynges for the vngodly.
* All thynges necessarye for the lyfe of man are created from the begynnyng: water, fyre, pion, & salt, meale, wheate, and hony, mylke, and wyne, oyle & clothyng. * All these thynges are created for the best to the faythful.
But to the vngodly shal all these thynges be turned to the hurte and harme. There be thynges that are created for vengeaunce, & in their pygroushnes haue they fastened their tymetes. * In the tyme of the ende they shal poure out theyr strength, and pacifye the wrath of hym that made them. * Fyre, bayle, hunger, and deathe: all these thynges are created for vengeaunce.

The teeth of wyld norysome beastes, the scorpions, serpentes, and þe swerde are created also for vengeaunce, to the destruction of the vngodly. They shalbe glad to do his cōmaundementes: and when nedeth is, they shal be redy vpon earth: and when theyr hour is come, they shal not ouerpasse the cōmaundement of the Lorde.

Therefore haue I taken a good cojage vnto me from þe begynnyng, and thought to put these thynges in wytyng, & to leane them behynd me. * All þe workes of the Lorde are good and begeth euery one in due season, & when nedeth is, so that a man nedeth not to saye: this is woyle then þe. For in due season they are all pleasunt & good: And therefore prayse þe lord with whole hert and mouth, and geue thankes vnto his name.

The xl. Chapter.

¶ On any mysteries lyght in a mans lyf. All thynges pass away: but a fyme and stable facte remayneth: of the dis-crynge of the vngodly & prerogatyue of the lawe of God.

¶ Great trauaile is created for al men, and an drey poche vpon al menchylidren, from the day that they go oute of theyr mothers wombe, tyl they be buryed in earth: the mother of al thynges: namely the thoughtes & ymaginacions, feare of the best cōncell, meditacions, longyng, and helpe the daye of deathe: from the hyell that shal vpon the glorious seate, vnto the lowly and moste simple vpon the earth: from hym humly clothed. There is nothing but wrath gale, fearfulnesse, vnquietnesse, and feare of death, rygourous, anger and stryfe. And in the eue, when one shulde rest and sleape vpon his bed, & slepe chaungeth his vnderstanding and knowledg. A lytle or nothyng is his rest, in the slepe as well as in the daye of labour.

He searcheth & is disquieted in the vpspon of his herte, as one that renneth out of a battle: and in the tyme of health he awaketh and marvelleth that the feare was nothyng.
Suche thynges happen vnto all fleshe, both man and beast: but leuen folde to þ vngodly.
Dreder, death, bloudshedynge, stryfe and warde, oppresyon, hunger, destruccyon, and pynnyment: * these thynges are all created agaynst the vngodly, & for theyr sake came the floude also. * All that is of the earth, shall turne to earth agayne: & all waters be agayn into the see. All byrdes and vnrpygtroules shal be put awaye, but faythfulnes and truth shal endure for ever. The substance & goodes of vngodly shalbe dyed vp & syncke away in a water floude, & they shal make a sounde like a great thundze in the rayne.

Lyke as the ryghteous reioyseth when he openeth his hande, so shall the transgressor be saynte, when theyr goodes vanyshe and consume awaye. * The chyldzen of þ vngodly shal not obtayne many braunches and weleane rotes vpon þ hye rockes, shalbe cutt out before the grasse by the water syde and vpon the ryuer banckes.

Strenghnes and lyberalite in the increase and blessing of God, is lyke a Paradyse and garden of pleasure: such mercy also & kynd-nes endureth for ever. * To labour and to be content with that a man hath, is a swete pleasure lyfe, and that is to fynde a treasure amonge all treasures. To begette chyldzen and to payre þ cytie, maketh a perpetuall name but an honest womā is more worth the thy wyse. Wyse and mynstrelspe reioyse the daye, but the loue of wysdome is aboue them both.

Þyng and harpyng make a swete nople but a frenchly tonge goeth beyond them both wyse eye despyeth fauoure and becomie, but a grene sede tyme, rather then they both. A frende and companion come together at op-portunite, but aboue them both is a wyse þ dwelleth with her husbande. One brother hel-peth an other in þ tyme of trouble, but almes doeth helpe more then they both. Golde and silver fasten the fete, but a good counsell is more pleasaunt then they both. Tempozall substaunce and strength lyfte vp the mynde: but the feare of the Lord more then they both.
The feare of the Lord wanteth nothyng, and needeth no helpe.

The feare of the Lord is a pleasaunt garden of blessing, and nothyng so bewtyful as it is. Wy sonne, leade not a beggers lyfe, for better it were to dye then to begge. Who so lokethe to another mannes table, taketh no thought for his owne lyfynge how to uphold his lyfe, for he fedeth hym selfe w other mens meat. But a wyse and well nourtoured man wyl be ware therof. Begging is swete in þ mouth of the vnchamefalte, but in hys belly there burneth a fyre.

The xli. Chapter.

Of the remembraunce of death. Death is not to be feared. A curse vpon them that forsake the lawe of god.
Good name and fame. An exhortacion to geue hobe vnto wysdome. Of what thynges a man ought to be ashamed.

Death, howe bytter is the remembraunce of þ, to a man that seeketh rest and comfort in his substaunce and ryches, vnto þ man that hat nothyng to bere hym, and that hath prosperyte in all thynges, yee, vnto hym that yet is able to receaue meate. O death, howe acceptable and good is thy iudgment vnto þ nece-full, and vnto hym whose strenght faileth, & that is now in the last age, and that in all thynges is full of care and fearfulnesse: vnto hym also that is in dyspayre, & hath no hope nor pacyence. Be not thou astrayde of death: remembre them that haue bene before the: & that come after the: this is the iudgemente of the Lord ouer all fleshe. * And why wol-dest thou be agaynst this pleasure of the hy-perst: whether it be ten, an hundred, or a thousande peaces: deathe asketh not howe longe one hath lyued.

The chyldzen of the vngodly are abhominable chyldzen, & so are they that kepe company with the vngodly. * The interpretaunce of vngodly chyldzen shal come to nought, & theyr posterityte shal haue perpetuall shame & confusyon. The chyldzen complayne of an vngodly father, and why: for his sake they are rebuked and despyed. Who be vnto you (O pe vngodly) whiche haue forsaken the lawe of the hyest God: yf ye be bozne, ye shall be bozne to cursynge, yf ye dye, the curse shal be poure porcion.

* All that is of the earth, shall turne to earth agayne: so go the vngodly also oute of the curie into destruccyon. The sorow of men is in their body: but þ name of þ vngodly shal be put out. * Labour to get þ a good name, for that shal contynue surer by the, then a thousand greates treasures of golde. A good lyfe hath a nobye of dayes, but a good name endureth ever.

* Wy chyldzen, kepe wysdome in peace for wysdome that is hye: and a treasure þ is not lene, what profyte is in them both: A mā that hydeth hys foolyshenes, is better then a ggyll man

man that bydeth his wysdome. Therefore be ye turned at my wordes: for it is not good in al thynges & alwaye to be ashamed. True sayth mult pious & measure it.

Be ashamed of whoredome, before father and mother: Be ashamed of lechynge, before the prynces and men of auctorite: Of synne, before the iudge and ruler. Of offence before the congregacion and people: Of vnryghteousnes, before a companion and frende. Of thefte, before thy neyghbours. * As for the truth of god & his couenaunt, be not ashamed thereof.

Be ashamed to lye with thyne elbowes vpon þe bzed: Be ashamed to loke vpon harlottes: Be ashamed to turne awaye thy face from thy frende. Be ashamed to take and not to geue: Be ashamed also to loke vpon another mans wyfe, and to make many trisyng wordes with her mayden, or to stande by her beddyde. Be ashamed to vpbryde thy frende when thou guesst any thyng, cast hym not in the teth with all.

The .xlii. Chapter.

Secrecies maye not be opened. The lawe of God must be sought. A daughter. A woman. God knoweth al thinges: yee, euen the secretes of the herte.

Rearse not a thyng twofle, and dysclose not the wordes, that thou hast heard in secrete. Be shamefast and well manered in dede, so shal euery man fauoure the. Of these thynges be not thou ashamed, and accepte no personne to offende. Namely, of these thynges be not ashamed: Of the lawe of God, of the couenaunt, of iudgement to byng the vngodly from his vngodlynes vnto ryghteousnes, & to make hym a good man: to deale faithfully with thy neyghbour & companion: to distribute þe heritage vnto thy frendes: to be diligent to kepe true measure & weyght: to be content whether thou gettest muche or lytle: to deale truly with temporall goodes: in bying and sellynge, to byng vp chyldren with diligence to correcte an euell seruaunte, to kepe that thyne is from an euell wyfe: to sette a locke where many handes are: what thou delpue-rest and guesst out to be kepte, to tell it, and to wepe it: to wyte by all thy out geuyng and receauynge: to enfourme the vnlerned and vnwyle: Of the aged, that are iudged, of the yonge. If thou be dysgret in these thynges, truly thou shalt be learned & wise and accepte of all men.

The daughter maketh þe father to watch secretly: and the carefulnes that he hath for her, taketh awaye his slepe: yee, in the pouthel lest she shoulde ouergrowe hym: And when she hath an husbnde, lest she shoulde be hated: lest she shoulde be despyled or raynyshed in her virginyte, or gottē with chyld in her fathers house: Or when she cometh to the man lest she behaue her selfe not ryght, or chetpue vnfrutefull. * If thy daughter be waton, kepe her straitly, lest she cause thyne eymys to laugh the to scozne, & the whole cytie to geue þe an euell repoyte, and so þe shal be shamed before all the people. * Schold not euery bodie be wote, & haue not much dwelling amonge women. If lyke as þe wyrm & moth cometh out of clothyng, so doth wychednes come of women.

It is better to be with an euell man, then with a frendly wyfe þe putteth one to shame and rebuke. I wyl remembre the wordes of þe Loyde, and declare the thyng þe I haue seene. In the wordes of the Loyde are his wordes. The Sunne ouerlooketh all thynges with his synne, and all his wordes are full of the clerenes thereof. Hath not þe Loyd brought to passe that his sayntes shoulde tell out all his wondrous wordes, which the almyghty Loyd hath stablyshed: All thynges endure in his glory. He seketh out the ground of the depe, and the herte of men, & he knoweth all thes: ymaginacion and wysdome. For þe Loyde knoweth all science, and he loketh into the token of the tyme. He declareth the thynges þe are past & for to come, and dyscloseth thynges þe are secreete.

* No thoughte maye escape hym, neither maye any word be hyd from hym. He hath garnysed the hie excellent wordes of his wysdome, and he is from euery lastyng to euery lastyng. Vnto hym maye nothyng be added: neither can he be mynyshed, he hath no nede at so of any mans counsell. O, howe amiable are all his wordes, and as a sparke to loke vpon. They lyue all, and endure for ever: and when soeuer nede is, they are all obedyent vnto hym. They are all dubble, one agaynst another: he hath made nothyng that hath fault or blemish. * He hath stablyshed the goodes of euery one: & who may be satisfied with his glory, when he seyth it.

The .xliii. Chapter.

The Sunne of the creation of the wordes of God.

The glory of the height, is þe saynt and clere firmament, the bewty of the heuen is his glorious cleannes. The sunne when it appeareth, declareth the daye in the goyng out of it, a maruelous worke of the hysell. At noone it burneth the earth & who maye abyde for þe heat thereof? Who so kepeth an oarn when it is hote, the tymes more doth the Sunne burne vpon þe mountaynes, when it bzyeth out þe fyre beames & synneth with the byrgenes of it, it blyndeth the eyes. Great is the Loyde that made it, and in his commaundement he causeth it to renne hastily.

The Moone also is in all, and at comment season it sheweth the tymes & is a toke of the tyme. * The token of p^r solemn feast of the Moone, a lycht p^r minisheth & increaseth againe. The Moone is called after the Moone, it groweth wonderously in her shynynge.

The army of heuen also is in the heighth of the firmament of heuen: it groweth a cleare and glayous hyne. * This is the clearnes of the starres, the bewyfull apparell of heauen, the apparell that the Lorde lychteneth in the heighth. In hys booly woike they conty-nue in their ordre, and not one of them faileth in his watch. * Loke vpon the rapne bowe, and prayse hym that made it: very bewyful is in hys hyne. He compasseth the heauen about with hys clearnes and gloz, the bowes of the hysell haue bended it. Tho: so his commaundemente he maketh the snowe to fall, and the thunder of hys iudgemente to shout hastily. Tho: so his commaundement the starres are opened, and the cloudes fle from the foules. In his power hath he strengthened the cloudes, and broken the hayle bowes.

The mountaynes melt at the lycht of him that wynde bloweth accordynge to hys will.
The sounde of his thunder beateth the earth, and doth the storme of p^r north: the whylle wynde also lychteth downe as a fettered hale, casteth oute and spredeth the snowe downe: and as the greshoppers that destroye all, so falleth it downe. The eye marueleth at the bewy of the whyntesse thereof, and frighte is astrayde at the rapne of it. He pouneth out the froste vpon earthe, lyke salt, and when it is frozen, it is as sharpe as the pyrch dallyle.

When the colde North wynde bloweth, the chylde shall commeth of the water. He lcheth downe vpon all the gatherynge of water, & putteth on the waters as a plate. He deuoureth the mountaynes, & burneth the wyldernes: and loke what is done, he putteth it out lyke fyre. The medecine of all these is, when a cloude cometh hapy: and when a dewe cometh vpon p^r heate it shal be refreshed agayne.

In his woide he stylleth the wynde: In his counsell he setteth the depe, & (the Lorde) has planted it. They that sayle ouer the sea, full of p^r paretles and harmes therof, and when we heare it wyth our eares, we maruel there. For there be straunge wonderful wokes, by quere maner of nyce beastes and whal fowles. Tho: so we hym are all thynges set in order, and personified, and in hys woide all thynges endure.

I speake much, but I cannot sufficiently saye vnto it, for he hym selfe onely is the fynnyon of all wo:des. We shulde prayse the Lorde after all our power, for he is great in all his woikes. The Lorde is to be feared per, very great is he, * and maruelous is hys power. Prayse the Lorde, and magnifye hym as muche as ye maye, yet doeth he farre exceede all prayse. * Omagnifye hym with all your power, and labour earnestly, yet are ye in no wyse able sufficiently to prayse hym Who hath sene hym, that he myghte tell vs?

* Who can magnifye hym so greatly as he is?
For there are hyd per greater thynges then these be: as for vs, we haue sene but fewe of hys woikes. For the Lorde hath made al thynges, & geuen wyldome to suche as feare God.

The xliiii. Chapter.

The prayse of certen holy men/ Benach, Aser, Asapham, Aisac and Jacob.

Et vs comende the noble famous men, and the generacyon of oure fore elders & fathers. Many more glayous Actes hath the Lorde done, and shewed hys great power euer sene the begynnyng. The noble famous men raygned in they: kyngdomes, and bare excellent rule. In they: wyldome and understandyng, they folowed the counsell shewed in p^r prophets. * They led the folke tho: so the counsell and wyldome of the Scribes of the people. Wyse sentences are founde in they: re instructyon. They sought the swetnes and melody of musycke, and broughte forth the pleasaunt longes in scripture. They were ryche also, and coulde comforte and pacifye those that dwelt with them. All these were very noble and honozable men in they: generacyons, and were well reported of in they: re tymes. These haue left a name beynde them, so that they: prayse shal alwaye be spoke of. Afterward, there were some, whose remembraunce is gone. * They came so nought and perished, as though they had neuer bene: & became as though they had neuer bene bozne, per, and their chyliden also with them.

Nevertheless, these are lonyng men, whose ryghteousnesse shal neuer be forgotten, but contynue by they: posteritye. They: chyliden are an holy good heritage: They: sede endureth fast in the couenaunt. For they: sakes shal they: chyliden and sede contynue for euer, & they: prayse shal neuer be put downe.
They: bodies are buried in peace, but they:
name lyueth for euer moze. The people can speake of they: wyldome, and the congregacion can talke of they: prayse. * Enoch walked ryght & acceptably before the Lorde: therfore was he translated for an example of amendement to the generacyons. * Noe was a stedfastte and ryghteous man, & in the tyme of wyath he became a reconcilinge.

Therefore was he left a remnant vnto the earth, when the floude came. An euerlastyng couenaunt was made w hym, that all fleshe shulde perysh nomore with y water. Abraham was a great father of many people, in glozy was there none lyke vnto him. He kept the lawe of the hyest, and came into a couenaunt with hym. He set the couenaunt in his fleshe, & when he was proued, he was found faythfull. Therefore woze God vnto hym w an othe, that he wolde blesse all people in his seide, that he wold multiply and increase hym as the dust of the earth, and to exalte his seide as the sterres: yee, and y his seide shuld haue y posseltyon, an inherytaunce of the land from see to see, and from y ryuer vnto the borders of the worlde.

MOSES beloued of God and men whose remembraunce is in hye prayse him y the lord made lyke in the glozy of y sayntes, & magnified hym, so y y enemies stode in awe of hym, thozowe hys wordes he dyd great wonders. He made hym greates in the syght of kynges, gaue hym comaundement before his people, & shewed hym his glorious power. He stablyshed hym with faythfulness and mekenes, & chose him out of all men. For he herde his voyce, and he led hym in the darke cloude, & there he gaue hym the comaundementes, yee: the lawe of lyfe & wyl-dome y he myght teach Jacob the couenaunt and Israel his lawes.

He chose Aaron his brother also out of the trybe of Leuy, exalted hym, & made hym such lyke. An euerlastyng couenaunt made he wth hym, and gaue hym the presthode in the people. He made hym glozyous in bewtiful arape, and clothed hym wth the garment of honoure. He put perfecte ioye vpon hym, and gyfedyd hym w strength. He deckte hym wth syde clothes, and a tuncle, wth an ouerboddy cote also and a gyrdle. Rounde about made he hym belles of golde, and that many: * that when he wente in, the sounde myght be heard, y they myght make a noyse in the Sanctuary, and geue the people warnyng. The holy garment was wroughte and broderd with golde, ycalow spicke and purple. And in the byestclappe there was a goodly worke, wherin was fastened lyght y perfectnesse.

* Vpon the same also there was a wothe fastened, and set with costly precious stones, all bounde with golde: and this he broughte in his minystracyon. The stones were fastened for a remembraunce, after the nombze of the twelue tribes of Israel. Vpon his myn- tre there was a plate of pure golde, a grauen ymage of holynes, a famous & noble wothe, garnysed, and pleasaunte to loke vpon.

Before hym were there sent no suche sayre ornaments, and these it behoued him alway to vse: There myghte none other put them on, but onely hys chyldzen and hys chylders chyldzen perpetually. Dayly performed he his burnt offrynges two tymes. * Woles shaled his handes, and anoynted hym with holy oyle.

This was now confyrmmed hym with an euerlastyng couenaunt, and to hys seide, as the dayes of heauen, namely: that hys chyldzen shulde alwaye mynystre before hym, & performe the offyce of the presthode, and wythe the people good in his name. Before all men luyng chose he hym, & that he shulde offre incense before the Lord, & make odours for a swete sauoure and remembraunce, that he shulde reconple the people of the Lord w hym agayne. He gaue hym auctorite also in his comaundementes and in the couenall that he shulde teache Jacob the statutes and testymones, and to enfourme Israel in hys lawe.

* Therefore there stode by certayne against hym, and had enuy at hym in the wyldernes, namely: they that were of Dathan, and Abiram syde, and the fuyous congregacyon of Choz. This the Lord sawe, and it displeased hym, and in hys wrothfull indignacyon were they consumed. A great wonder dyd he vpon them, and consumed them with the fyre. * Besydes this, he made Aaron yet more honozable and glozyous. He gaue hym an her- itage, and parted the fyist frutes vnto hym. * Vnto hym specially he appoynted y bread for sustenance, (for the breastes dyd eate of the offerynges of the Lord) chys gaue he vnto hym and his seide. * Elles had he no her- itage nor porcyon in the lande, and wth y people. For the Lord hym selfe is his porcyon & enherytaunce.

The thyzde noble & excellent man is: Shimeon the sonne of Eleazer, which pleased the God of Israel, because he had the zeale & feare of the Lord. For when the people were touned backe, he put hym selfe forth ryght soone, and y with a good wylle, to pacyfy the wyath of the Lord toward Israel. There- fore uour vnto the electe of God, to punyche the enmyes & rose vp agaynste Israell, & Israel myght obteyne they enderptauce. Whome great, noble, and excellent was he, when he set up his hande, and dyed out his swearde agaynst the cyties. Who stode so manly be fore hym. For the Lozde hym selfe broughte him to the enmyes. * Stode not the Sunne still at hys commaundemente, and one daye was as longe as two. He called vpon the best and most myghtye, when the enmyes mailed vpon hym on euery syde, & the Lozde aid hym with p hayle stones. They smote the heathen wth people myghtely, and in fal ling downe they slewe all the aduersaries, so that the heathen knewe his hoost, and al his myght. & the Lozde hym selfe fought agaynst them, for he folowed vpon the myghtye men of them.

* In the tyme of Moles also, he & Caleb the sonne of Iephune, vpd a good worke, whiche stode agaynst the enmyes, wrytheld the people from synne, and stiled the wicked murtheryng. * And of syre hundred thon sande people of fote, they two were preserued in byngte them into the herp tage, namely, a lande that floweth with mylke & hony.
* The Lozde gaue strenght also vnto Caleb whiche remayned with hym vnto his age: so that he went vp into the hye places of p land and his seide conquered the same for an herp tage, that all the chyldren of Israell myghte knowe good a thyngge it is, to be obedynt vnto the Lozde. And the iudges or rulers (euery one after hys name) whole herte wente not a whorpyng, nor departed from the Lozde, and that to lorde not p Lozde vnfaithfully, whose commendauce hath a good reporte.
Per thei bones flozpe the out of they place and they names shall neuer be chaunged, (but honoure remayneth still w the chyldren of those holy men.)

Samuel the prophete beloued of the Lozde his God: ordeyned a kyng, and anointed the pynces ouer the people. In the lawe of the Lozde he Judged the Congregacyon, and the Lozde had respecte vnto Jacob: The Pro phet was found dysp gent in hys faithfulness: per, & he is knowne faithfull in hys wordes: becaule he sawe the God of light. * He called vpon p lozde the almyghty, when p enmyes pzealed vpon hym on euery syde, what tyme as he offred p luckynge lambes. And the Lozde thondred from heuen & made hys voyce to be heard w a great noyse. He disconfited p prin ces of Tyre, and all p rulers of the Philisty nes. * Before his last ende he made protesta cyon in the syght of the Lozde, & his anointed that he toke nether substance nor good of a ny man, no not so muche as a shoo, & no man myght accuse hym. After this he tolde, p hys ende was at hande, & shewed the kyngge also his ende, & death, and from the earth lyfte he up hys voyce in the prophete: p the vngodly people shulde pertyge.

The. xlii. Chapter.

The people of Nathan, Wolyph, and Salomon.

Afterwarde in the tyme of kyng Da uid there rose vp a Prophete called Nathan: For lyke as the fat is take awaye from the offering, so was Da uid cholen out of p chyldre of Israell. He toke his pastyme with the lyons, as with hys dodes and with beares lyke as w lambes. * Woleph he not a graunt when he was yet but yonge and toke awaye the rebuke from his people: what tyme as he toke the stone in his hande, and smote downe proude Goliath w the syng For he called vpon p best Lozde, which gaue hym strenght in his right hande, so that he o uerthrew the myghty graunt in the battayll that he myghte set up the hoyme of his people agayne.

* Thus broughte he him to wofull aboue al pynces, & made him to haue a good report in the praple of the Lozde, that he shuld were a crowne of glozy. * For he destroyed the enmyes on euery syde, roted out the Philis tynes hys aduersaries, & brake they hoyme in sunder, lyke as it is broken yet this daye.
In all hys workes he prayled the best and holpest, and ascribed the honoure vnto him.
Wth hys whole herte vpd he prayle the Lozde, and loued God that made hym. * He sette syngers also before the Altars, and in theyre tune he made swete songes.

He ordeyned to kepe the holy dayes wof fully, and that the solempne feastes thorowe the whole yeare shulde be honora bly holden, wth praysynge the name of the

* The Lozde toke awaye hys synnes, and vp the wyse sone clalled Salomon, & foꝝ his

This Salomō ragned w peace in hys tyme (foꝝ God gaue hym rest fꝛom his enemyes on lyke as he was well instructe in hys yowth, & fylled with wyldome & vnderstandyng, as it were with a water floude. He couered & fylled the whole lande with synilitudes & wyse pꝛudent sentences.

of his peace he was beloued. All landes mar-neled at his longes, pꝛouerbes, synilitudes, he left behynde hym a verry foolysheues of the people, and suche one as had no vnderstandyng: * Euen Roboam, which turned away the people thozowe his counceyl, and Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat: & which caused Israel to synne, and shewed Ephraim the waye of myldeades had the vpperhand so soꝛe, that at

C The pꝛaꝛle of eliab, elizous, hezekiah, and elay.

* III. reg. xvi. a

Then stode vp * Eliab the Propheet as a fyze, & his woꝛde bzent lyke a C thozowe the woꝛde of the Lozde be Out the beauen, & thez tymes bzought he the fyze downe. Thus became Eliab honozable in his wonderous dedes. Alho maye make his boast to be lyke hym: * One that was derapled he vp frome deathe, and in the woꝛde of the hꝛest he bzought hym out of the grane agayne. He cast downe kynges & destroyed them, & the honozable from theyꝛ seate. And the mount Sina he hearde the punysshment, and vpon hoꝛeb the iudgemente of the vengeaunce. He pꝛophetced recompensyng vnto kynges, & oꝛdered Propheetes after hym.

* He was taken vp in the skoyne of fyze, in a charet of hoꝛses of the Lozde. He was oꝛdened in the repꝛouynges in tyme to pacifye the wyath of the Lozde, & to turne the hartes of the fathers vnto the chyldeꝛen, and to sette vp þ trybes of Jacob agayne. Blessed were they that sawe the, and were garmyshe in lone: foꝝ we lyue in lyfe: (but after deathe we shall haue no such name.)

* Elias was couered in the skoyne, but helyseus was fylled with his spirite. Alþe he lyued he was astrayde of no bynne, and no man myght ouercome hym. There coulde no woꝛde disceane him, & after his deathe his body pꝛophetied. * He dꝛd wonders in his lyfe, and in deathe were hys woꝝkes marnelous. Foꝝ all this, þ people amended not, nether departed they from theyꝛ synnes: * tyll they were carped a waye pꝛil oners out of the lande, & were scatred abꝛode in all countreys so þ of them there remayned, but a verry lytle people, & a pꝛynce vnto the houle of Dauid.
Howbeit some of them dꝛd right, & some heaped vp vngodlynes.

* Hezekias made his cꝛtye stronge, chꝛuped water into it, dygged thozowe þ stony roche with pꝛon, and made vp a well by the water syde. * In his tyme came Sennacherib vp, sent Rabshake, lyfte vp hys hande agaynst Syon, and defyled them with grea t pyꝛde.
Then tymbled theyꝛ dertes and handes: so that they soꝛowed lyke a womā trauaylyng with chylde. So they called vpon the Lozde which is mercyfull, and lyfte vp theyꝛ han-des befoꝛe hym. Immediatly the Lozde heard them out of heuen: (he thought nomoꝛe vpon theyꝛ synnes, noꝝ gaue them ouer to theyꝛ enemies:) but deliuered them by the hande of Elay. * He smote the hoost of þ Assyrians, & his aungell destroyed them.

Foꝝ Hezekias had done the thyng that pleased the Lozde, and remayned stedfastly in the waye of Dauid his father. As Elay þ great & faithful pꝛophet in þ syght of God had cō-maunded hym. * In hys tyme þ sone went bar-ward: & he lengthened þ kynges lyfe. Altho a ryghte Spꝛete pꝛophetced he, what shoulde come to passe at the last: and to suche as were soꝛowfull in Syon: he gaue consolacon, wherwith they myght comforte them selues in euermore. He shewed thynges that were to come, and secrete, or euer they came to passe.

The xlii. Chapter.

Of Josias, Ezechiah, Dauid, Jerem, Ezechiel, Jozababel, Jesus, Achemias, Enoch, and Joseph.

The remembraunce of * Josias is lyke as when the apotycarpe maketh many precious swete smellynge thynges together. His remembraunce shall beswete as honny in all mouthes, and as the playnge of musyke at a banket of wyne. He was appointed to tourne the people agayne, and to take awaye all abhominations of the vngod-ly. He directed his herte vnto the Lorde, and in the tyme of the vngodly he set vp the wor-shyppe of God agayne. All kynghes (excepte Dauid, Ezechias and Josias) comytted wickednesse: for euen the kinges of Iuda also forsooke the lawe of God. For they gaue theyr horne vnto other, theyr honour and worshippe also to a straunge people.

Therfore was the elect cytie of the Sanctuarie bynt with fyre, * and the stretes thereof laye desolate and waste in the hande of Jeremy, for they intreated hym euill, whiche ne-uerthelesse was a prophet ordeyned from his mothers wombe, that he myght roote oute, breake of, * and destroye: and that he myght burye vp, and plant agayne. * Ezechiel saw the gloze of the Lord in a vysion, which was shewed hym vpon the charret of the Cherubim, for he thought vpon the enemies in prayne, in too good vnto suche as had ordeyned theyr wopes aryght. And the bones of the twelue prophets flozished from out of theyr place: for they gaue comforte and consolacion vnto Jacob, and deliuered them fathfullye.

* How shall we prayse Jozababel, whiche was as a rynge in the ryght hande?

* So was Jesus also the sonne of Josede: these men in theyr tyme buylded the house, & set vp the Sanctuarie of the Lorde agayne: which was prepared for an euerlastyng worshyp. * And Achemias is alwaye to be commended, which set vp for vs the walles that were broke downe, made the portes and barres agayne, and buylded oure houses of the lawe. * But vpon the erth is there nomā created lyke Enoch, for he was taken vp fro the erth. * And Joseph, which was lorde of his housen, and the upholder of his people: his bones were couered and kepte. Seth & Sem were in great honour among the people: and as was Adam about all the beastes, when he was created.

The l. Chapter.

Of Symon the sonne of Onias.

Symon * the sonne of Onias the hye priest, which in his life set vp the house agayne, and in his dayes made fast temple. The heygth of the temple also was founded of hym, the double buyldynge and hye walles of the temple. In his dayes welles of water flowed out, and were exceeding full as the see. He toke care for his people, & deliuered them from destruction. He kepte his cytie, and made it stronge, that it shoulde not be belleged. He dwelt in honour and worshyp amonge his people, and enlarged the entraunce of the house, and the court. He gaue lyght as the moonyng starr in the myddest of the cloudes, and as the Moone when it is full. He shyned as the sunne in the temple of God. He is as byght as the raynebowe in the fayre cloudes, and flozisheth as the floures and roses in the sprynge of the pearce, and as lylyes by the ryuers of water. Lyke as the bryanches vpon the mounte Libanus, in the tyme of Sommer: as a fyre and incence that is kyndled. Lyke as an whole ornamente of pure golde, set with all maner of pcyous stones, and as an Olyue tree that is frutefull and as a Cypres tree, whiche groweth vp on hye.

When he put on a garment of honour, and was clothed with all bewte: when he went to the holy altar to garnish the coue-ryng of the Sanctuarie: when he toke a por-cion out of the prestes hande, he hym selfe stode by the hearth of the altar, and his bzethren rounde aboute in ordre. As the bzanches of Cedze tree vpon the mount Libanus so stode they rounde about hym. And as the bryanches of the Olyue tree, so stode all the sonnes of Aaron in their gloze, and the oblacions of the Lorde in theyr handes before all the congregacyon of Israel. And he might sufficientlye persourme his seruice vpon the altar, and garnish the offrynge of the best God, he stretched oute his hande, and toke of the bynkoffrynge, and poured in of the wyne so he poured vpon the botome of the altar a good smell vnto the best Prince.

Then beganne the sonnes of Aaron to synge, and to blowe with trompettes, and to make a great noyse, for a remembraunce and prayse vnto the Lorde. They were all the people afrayed, and fell downe to the earth vpon theyr faces to worshippe the Lorde theyr God and to ggeue thanks to the almyghtye God.
They longe goodly also with theyr voyces, so there was a pleasaunt noyse in the great house of the Lorde. And the people in theyr prayer besought the Lorde the best, that he wolde be mercifull, tyl a honour of a Lorde were persourmed: thus ended they theyr mynistracion and seruyce. Then went he downe and stretched oute his handes ouer the whole multitude of the people of Israel, that they shulde ggeue prayse and thanks out of theyr lyppes vnto the Lorde, and to reioyse in his name. He began yet ones also to praye, that he myght openly shewe the thankesguyng before the hyst, namely thus: O give praise and thankes (ye all) vnto the Lorde our God which hath euer done noble and great thynges: whiche hath increased oure dayes from our mothers wombe, and dealte with vs ac-cordinge to his mercye: that he wyllyng vs the ioyfullnesse of hert, and peace for our tyme in Israel. Whiche faithfully keepeth his mercy for vs euermore, and alway deliuereth vs in due season.

D There be two maner of people that I abhorre from my herte: as for the thyng whom I hate, it is no people. They that lyt vpon the mountayne of Samaria, the Philistines, and the foolish people that dwell in Sichimis.

I Iesus the sonne of Syrach Eleazarus of Jerusalem, haue tokened vp these in fourmacpons and documentes of wysdome and vnderstandyng in this booke, and poured out the wysdome of my herte. Blessed is he that excepteth hym selfe therein: and who so taketh such to hert, shalbe wise for euer. If he do these thynges, he shalbe stronge in al. For the lycht of the Lorde leadeh hym.

The li. Chapter.

A prayer of Iesus the sonne of Syrach.

I Wyllyng the O Lorde king, and praise the O God, my Saviour. I wyllyng praise vnto thy name: for thou art my defender and helper, and hast preserved my body from destruction, from the snare of traytous tonges, and from the lippes that are occupied with lyes. Thou hast bene my helper, from such as stode vpon agaynst me, and hast deliuered me after the multitude of thy mercy, and for thy holy names sake. Thou hast deliuered me from the rooyng of them that prepared them selues to deuoure me, oute of the bandes of such as sought after my lyfe: from the multitude of them that troubled me and went about to set fyre vpon me on euery syde, so that I am not bzent in the myddes of the fyre: from the deepe of hell, from an vncleane tonge, from lyeinge wordes, from the wycked kynge, and from an vnyghteous tonge. My soule shall praise the Lorde vnto death, for my lyfe dwelleth vnto the hell downwarde.

B They compassed me rounde about on eu-ry syde, and there was no man to helpe me.
I looked about me, if there were any mā that wolde socoure me: but there was none. Then thought I vpon thy mercye, O Lorde, and vpon thyne actes that thou hast done euer of olde: namely, that thou deliuerest such as put their trust in the, and ryddest them out of the bandes of the hepten. Thus lyfte I vp my prayer from the earth, and prayed for deliueraunce from death. I called vpon the Lorde the father of my Lorde, that he wold not leaue me without helpe, in the daye of my trouble, and in the tyme of the proude: I wyllyng thy name continually, prayyng honour and thankes vnto it: and so my prayer was herd.

Thou saudest me from destruction, and deliuerdest me from the vnyghteous tyme.
Therefore, wyllyng I acknowledge and praye the, and magnify the name of the Lorde.

When I was yet but younge, as euer I went astraye, I deliued wysdome openly in my prayer. I came therefore before the temple, and sought her vnto the last. Then flourished she vnto me as a grape that is soone ripe.
My hert reioysed in her, then went my foot the ryght waye: yea, fro yowth vp, sought I after her. I bowed downe myne eare and re-ceyued her. I founde me moch wysdome and prospered greatly in her. Therefore wyllyng I ascribethe the glozy vnto hym, that giveth me wysdome: for I am aduysed to do thereafter.
I wyllyng be ielous to cleane vnto the thing that is good, so shall I not be confounded. My soule hath wrestled with her, and I haue ben diligent to be occupied in her, I lift vp myne handes on hye, then was my soule lychtend thorow wysdome, that I knowlege my folishnesse. I ordred my soule after her, she and I were one herte from the begynnyng, and I founde her in cleanness. And therefore shall I not be forsaken.

My herte longed after her, and I gat a good treasure. Thorow her the Lorde hath gyuen me a newe tonge, wherewith I wyllyng praise hym. * Come vnto me ye vncleane and dwell in the house of wysdome: wherewe not your selues from her, but talke and coun-men of these thynges, for your soules are de-ry thyng. I opened my mouth and spake: Come and bye wysdome without moneye, howe downe your necke vnder her yoke, and your soule shall receyue wysdome. She is harde at hande, and is content to be founde.
Beholde with your eyes, * how that I haue had but lytle labour, and yet haue founde moch treast. I receyue wysdome, and ye shall haue plenteousnesse of syluer and golde in possession.

Let your mynde reioyse in his mercye, and be not ashamed of his praye.

Worke his worke bytymen, and he shal gyue you your rewarde in due season.

The booke of the

prophete Baruch.

The fyrst chapter.

Baruch wrote a booke duringe the captivite of Babylon, which he red before Iechoniah and al the people. The Jewes sent the booke with mo: ny into Jerusalem, to the: other brethren: to content that they shoulde praye for them.

And these are the wordes of the booke, which were wyrtten by Baruch the sonne of Neriah, the sonne of Naaſias, the sonne of Sedechias, the sonne of Sedechias, the son of helchias, at Babylon in the thirde yere, and in the ſeventh daye of the mo: ny, what tyme as the Chaldees toke Jeru: salem, and brent it wth fyre.

And Baruch dyd read the wordes of this booke, that Iechoniah the sonne of Joachim kyng of Juda myghte heare: and in the pre: sence of all þ people that were come to heare the boke: yea, and before all the noble kinges houses, before the Lordes of the counsayl, and others: and before the whole people, from the least unto the best: before al them þ dwelt at Babylon by the water of Eodop. Whiche whenthey herde it, wept, fasted, and prayed befor the Lorde.

They made a collection also of money, ac: cordinge to every mans power, and sent it to Jerusalem unto Joachim the sonne of hel: chias the sonne of Salon prest, with the other prestes: and to all the people whiche were wth hym at Jerusalem, what tyme as they had gotten the ornaments of the temple of the Lorde (that were taken away out of the tem: ple) that they myghte bypunge them agayne in the land of Juda, the tenth day of the mo: ny Nisan: namelpe, silver vessels (whiche Sedechias the son of Josiah kyng of Juda had made) after þ Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babylon had taken Iechoniah, with all his pyners, lordes, and all the people, and led the captiue from Jerusalem unto Babylon.

And they sayd: Behold, we haue sent you money, to bye you burnt offerings & incense wthall: make you unleuened bredd, and of: fer for synne vpon the auter of the Lorde our God. And praye for the prosperite of Na: buchodonozor kyng of Babylon, and for the welfare of Balthazar his sonne: that they: hopes maye be vpon earth, as the dayes of brauen: that God also maye grue vs strenght and lyghten our eyes, that we maye lyue vn: der the defence of Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babylon, and vnder the protection of Bal: thazar his sonne: that we maye longe do them honoure, and fynde fauour in they: lyght.

Praye for vs also vnto the Lord our God, for we haue synned agaynst the Lorde our God: and vnto this day is not his wrath tur: ned yet awaye from vs. And se that ye reade this booke (whiche we haue sent vnto you to be rehearsed in the temple of the Lorde) vpon the hye dayes, and at tyme conuenient.

Thus shal ye saye. The Lorde our God is ryghtous, but we are worthy of confusion and shame: like as it is come to passe this day vnto al Juda, and to every one þ dwelleth at Jerusalem: to our kynges, pyners, prestes, pro: phetes & our fathers. We haue sinned before þ Lorde our God, we haue not put our trust in hym, nor gyven hym credence, we haue not o: beyed hym, we haue not hearkened vnto the voyce of the Lorde our God, to walke in the commaundmentes that he gaue vs.

Syns the daye that he brought our fore: fathers out of the lande of Egypte vnto this present day, we haue ben ever amyspleyung and an vnfaithfull people vnto the Lorde our God: destroyinge our selues utterly, and chynkynge backe, that we shoulde not heare his voyce.

* Wherefore, there are come vnto vs great plagues and dyuers curses. Lyke as the Lorde benyſed by Moyses his seruante: & whiche brought our fathers oute of the lande of E: gypte, to grue vs a lande that floweth wth mylke and hony, like as it is to se this daye. Neuerthelesse, we haue not hearkened vnto the voyce of the Lorde our God, accordynge to all the wordes of the prophetes, whom he sent vnto vs and to our rulers: but every mā folowed his owne mynde & wyched ymagi: nation: to offre vnto straunge goddes, and to do euill in the syght of the Lorde our God.

The .ii. Chapter.

The Jewes confesse that they sinned fully by they: synnes. The true condempnation of the chyrche. The Jewes desire to haue the wrath of God turned from them. The Lorde wyl that he obeye vnto pyners al though they be euill. He promyseth that he wyl call agayne the people from captivite, and gyue them a newe and an euell daye testament.

Of þ which cause þ Lorde our God hath performed his deupse: wherof he certifyed vs, and our heedes that ruled in Jerusalem: yea, and our kynges, our prestes with all Israel and Juda. And suche plagues hath þ Lorde brought vnto vs as neuer came to passe vnder the heauē, like as it is fulfyllid in Jerusalem, & accordynge as it is wyrtten in the lawe of Moyses: that a man shoulde ente the flesch of his owne sonne, and the fleshe of his owne doughter. Whereouer, he hath deli: uered them into the handes of al the kynges, that are rounde aboute vs (to be confounded and desolate) and scatred them abroad in all landes and nacions. Thus are we broughte beneth beneth and not aboue, bycause we haue synned agaynst the Lorde oure God, & haue not ben obedient vnto his voyce. * Therfore the Lorde our God is righteous, and we with our fathers (as reason is) are broughte to open shame, as it is to se this daye. And as for these plagues that are come vpon vs already, the Lorde had deuyled them for vs: yet wold we not praye vnto the Lorde oure God, that we myght euery man turne from his vngodly wayes. So the Lorde hath caused such plagues to come vpon vs: for he is ryghtous in all his workes, which he hath commaunded vs: which we also haue not done, nor hearkened vnto his voyce: for to walke in the commaundementes of the Lorde, that he hath gyue vnto vs.

* And now, O Lorde God of Israel, thou that hast brought thy people out of the lande of Egypte with a myghty hande, wth tokens and wonders, with thy great power, & out stretched arme: and hast gotten thy self a name, as it is com to passe this day. O Lorde our God, we haue synned, we haue done wickedly, we haue behaved our selues vngodly in all thy ryghtousnesses. Turne thy wrath fro vs (we beseeche the) for we are but a fewe left among the heathen, where thou hast scattered vs. * Heare our prayers (O Lorde) and our petitions: bypunge vs oute of captiuitie, for thyne owne sake: get vs fauour in thy sight of them, whiche haue led vs awaye: that all landes maye knowe, that thou art the Lorde our God: and that Israel and his generacion calleth vpon thy name.

* For the deed that be gone downe to the graues, and whose soules are out of thei bodies, ascribe vnto the Lorde, neither prayse nor ryghtous makinge: but the soule that is bereft for the multitude of her synnes which goeth on heuily and weakely, whose eyes be gynto faple: yea, such a soule ascribeth praise and ryghtousnesse vnto the Lorde. O Lorde we poure out our prayers before the, and requyre mercy in thy sight, O Lorde our God: not for any godlynesse of our fathers, but bycause thou hast sent out thy wrath, and indignation vpon vs: accordyng as thou dydest threaten vs, by thy seruantes the Prophetes, sayinge.

* Jer. xli. vii. a

* Thus sayeth the Lorde: Bowe downe your shoulders & neckes, and serue the kynge of Babylon, so shall ye remayne still in the lande, that I gaue vnto your fathers. If ye will not doo this, nor heare the voyce of the Lorde your God, to serue the kynge of Babylon: I shall destroie you in the cyties of Iuda, within Ierusalem and without. I will also take you from the voyce of my th, & the voyce of sope, the voyce of the bydegrome & the voyce of the byde, and there shall noman dwel more in the lande. But they wolde not hearken vnto thy voyce, to doo the kynge of Babylon seruite: and therefore hast thou persecuted the wordes that thou speakest by thy seruantes the Prophetes: namelye, that the bones of oure kynge & the bones of oure fathers shulde be translated out of thei places.

And lo, now are they layed out in the heat of the sunne, and in the colde of the night, and deed in great misery, with hungre, & swerde with pestilence, and are cleane cast forth. As for the temple wherein thy name was called vpon, thou hast layed it waste, as it is to se this daye: and that for the wickednesse of the house of Israel, and the house of Iuda. O Lorde our God, thou hast intreated vs after all thy goodnesse, and accordyng to all that great lounge mercye of thyne, lyke as thou speakest by thy seruante Hoies, in the daye when thou dydest commaunde hym, to write thy lawe before the chyldren of Israel, saying: * If ye will not hearken vnto my voyce, then shall this greete multitude be turned into a very small people, for I will scatter them abroad. Notwithstandyng, I am sure that this folke will not heare me: for it is an hard necked people. But in the lande of thei captiuitie, they shall remembre them selues, and learne to knowe, that I am the Lorde thy God, when I gyue them an herte to vnderstande, and eares to heare. Then shall they prayse me in the land of thei captiuitie: and thinke vpon my name. Then shall they turne them from thei harde backs, and fro thei vngodlynesse. Then shall they remembre the thynges, that happened vnto thei forefathers, which synned agaynst me. So will I bringe them agayne into the lande, which I promysed with an oth vnto thei fathers: Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and they shall be lordes of it: yea, I will increase them, and not mynsh them. * And I will make an other covenant with them: such one as shall endure for euer: namelye, that I will be thei God, and they shalbe my people: and I will nomore bypunge my people the chyldren of Israel, oute of the lande that I haue gyuen them.

The.iii. Chapter.

The people continueth in thei prayer begun for thei deliuerance. He prayeth wylfully vnto the people, shewing that so great aduersities came vnto them for thei despayre therof. Truly God was the father of wylfully. Of the incarnation of Christ.

And now, O Lorde almyghty, God of Israel: our soule that is in trouble, and oure synne that is bereft, cryeth vnto the: heare vs, (O Lorde) and haue pitie vpon vs for thou art a merciful God, be gracious vnto vs, for we haue synned before the. Then endurest for euer, shuld we then vtterly perishe? O Lorde

O Lord almyghty, thou God of Israel: hear nowe the prayer * of the deed Israelites and of theyr chyldezen, which haue synned before the, and not hearkened vnto the wordes of the Lord: theyr God, for the which these plagues hang vpon vs: O Lord, remembre not the wyckednesse of our fathers, but thynke vpon thy power and name now at this tyme: for thou art O Lord our God: and the (O Lord) wyl we prayse.
For thou hast put thy feare in oure hartes, so content that we shuld cal vpo thy name, and prayse the in our captiuitie: and that we myght tourne from the wyckednesse of oure fathers, that synned before the.

Beholde, we are yet this daye in oure captiuitie, where as thou hast feared vs, to be an abhominacion, curse and syn: * lyke as it hath happened vnto our fozefathers also, because of all theyr wyckednesse and departure from the.

O Israel, heare the commaundementes of the Lord: pondre them wel with thyn eares, that thou mayest learne wysdome. But how happeneth it Israel, that thou art in thynne cunnyng lande: thou art waxe olde in a straunge countrie, and despyled with the deed. Why art thou become lyke them, y go downe to theyr grauers: Euen because thou hast forsake the well of wysdome. For yf thou haddest walked in the waye of God truly, thou shouldest haue remayned stil safe in thynne owne lande.

O learne then where discretion is, where wisdom is, where vnderstanding is, that thou mayest knowe also frome whence cometh the light of thy eyes, and quyetnesse. Who euer foud out his place: O who came euer in to her treasury.

Where are the princes of the hepythen become, and such as ruled the beastes vpon the earth: They that had theyr pastime with the lutes of the apye, they that hoorded vp syluer and golde (wherein men trust so moch) and made no ende of theyr gatherynge: What is become of them that corned syluer, and were careful, and coulde not byynge theyr wor-kes to passe: They be rooted oute, and gone downe to hell, and other men are come vp in theyr stedes. Ponge men haue sene light, and lived vpon earth: but the way of reformation haue they not knowen, nor vnderstande the pathes therof: neither haue theyr chyldezen reuered it: yea, ryght farre is it from them.
It hath not ben herd of in the land of Canaā neither hath it ben sene at Cheman.

The Agarenes sought after wysdome, but that whiche is earthlye, lyke as the marchantes of the lande doo. They of the man our comynge also, and they labour for wysdome and vnderstandynge: but the waye of true wysdome they knowe not: neyther doo they thynke vpon y father: therof. O Israel howe greate is the house of God: and howe large is the place of his possesyon: * Great is he, & hath none ende: yea, & vnmessurable.

What is become of those famous gyaunces, that were so great of bodyes, and so worthy men of warre: Those had not y Lord chosen, neither haue they founde the waye of reformacyn, therfore were they destroyed: & for so moche as they had no wysdome, they perished because of theyr foolishnesse.

Who hath gone vp into heauen, to take wisdome there and brought her downe from the cloudes: Who hath gone ouer the see, to fynde her, and hath chosen her aboue golde, & so brought her hyther: No man knoweth the wayes of wysdome, neither is there any that can seke out her pathes. But he that woteth all thynges, knoweth her, and he hath found her out w his soze knowledge. * This same is he which prepared the earth at the begynnig and fylled it with all maner of foules & beastes. * When he sendeth out the lyght: it goeth: and when he calleth it agayne it obeyeth hym w feare. The starres kepe theyr wache, and gyue theyr lyght: yea, and that gladlye.
When he calleth them: they saye: here we be.
And so with chearefulnesse they shewe lyght vnto hym that made them.

* This is our God, & there shal none other be compared vnto hym. It is he that hath founde out all wysdome, and hath gyuen her vnto Jacob his seruaunte, and to Israell his beloued. * Afterwarde dyd he shewe hym self vpon earth, and dwelt amonge men.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The rewardes of them that kepe the lawe, and the punishment of them that despyse it. A comfytynge of the people beinge in captiuitie. A complaint of Jerusalem, and vnder the figure therof, of the church.
A consolacion and comfytynge of the same.

This is the booke of the comman-dementes of God, and the lawe y endureth for euer. All they y kepe it shal come to lyfe: but suche as forsake it, shal come to death.

Turne y O Jacob, & take hold of it: walk by this waye thowowe his brightnesse & thynne.
Gyue not thynne honoure to an other, and thy worship to a straunge people. O Israel: how of good cheare, y people of God, O thou aun-cient Israel: Now are ye solde amog y hey-then, howbeit, not for your vtter destruction: but because ye prouoked God the Lord to wrauth and displeasure, therfore were ye deli-uered vnto your enemyes: for ye displeased y ye grieved, O Jerusalem.

When he sawe that the wrath of God was compynge vpon you, he sayd: hearken O ye that dwell aboute Syon, for God hath brought me into greete heuynesse: and why? I se the captiuitie of my people, of my sonnes and daughters, which the euerlastynge God wpll bypunge vpon them. With ioye dyd I noyssh them, but now we must I leaue them to wepyng and sorowe.

Let no man reioyse ouer me wyddow, and forsaken: which for the synnes of my chyldren am desolate of euery man. For why? they departed from the lawe of God: they wold not knowe his ryghteousnesse, nor walke in the wape of his commaundementes: and as for þe pathes of þe truthe and godlynesse, they had no lust to go in them.

O ye dwellers aboute Syon: come, and let vs call to remembraunce the captiuitie, that the euerlastynge God hath brought vpon my sonnes and my daughters. * He hath brought a people vpon them from farre, an vncircumsised people & of a straunge language which neyther regarde the olde, nor ppytie the younge.

* Jerem. lxxv. 2.
Jerem. lxxv. 2.

These haue carped away the deare beloved of my wyddowes, leaung me aloune, both desolate and chyldlesse. But alas what can I helpe you? Now he that hath brought these plagis vpon you, deliuer you also from the handes of your enemyes.

* Deut. xxxiii. 9.
* Jerem. lxxv. 2.

Go your way (O my chyldren) go your way: for I am desolate & forsaken. * I haue put of the clothynge of peace, and put vpon me the sacke cloth of prayer, and for my tyme I wpll call vpon the moost hyst. Be of good cheare O my chyldren, crye vnto the Lorde, and he shall deliuer you fro the power of the prynces, your enemyes.

For verelye, I haue euer a good hope of your prosperous health: yea, a very gladnes is come vpon me from the holpe one, because of the mercy that ye shall haue of our euerlastynge Saupour.

With mournynge and wepyng dyd I let you go from me, but with ioye and perpetuall gladnesse, shall the Lorde bypunge you agayne vnto me. Lyke as the neyghbours of Syon sawe your captiuitie from God, eue so shall they also se shortly your helth in God, whiche shall come on you with great honour and euerlastynge woithpy.

* Jerem. lxxv. 2.

O my chyldren, suffre patiently þe wrath that shall come vpon you. For the enemye hath persecuted the, but shortly thou shalt se his destruction, and shalt treade vpon his necke. My dearlinges haue gone rough hard wapes, for they are led awaye as a flocke þe is scared a byode with the enemyes. But be of good comforte (O my chyldren) and crye vnto the Lorde: For he that led you awaye, hath you yet in remembraunce: and lyke as ye haue be mynded to swarue from your God: so shall ye now endeouore your selues ten tymes moze, to turne agayne and to seche him. For he þe hath brought these plagis vpon you shall bypunge you euerlastynge ioye agayne, with your health. Take a good hert vnto the O Jerusalem: for he whiche gaue the þe name, exhorteth the so to do.

* The wycked doers that now put the to trouble, shall perishe, & suche as haue reioysed at thy fall, shall be punysched. The cyties whome thy chyldren serue, and that haue carped awaye thy sonnes, shall be corrected. For lyke as they be now glad of thy decaye, and reioyse at thy fall: so shall they mourne in their owne destruction. The ioye of thy multitude shall be taken awaye, & they cheare shall be turned to sorowe. For a fyre shall fall vpon them from the euerlastynge God longe to endure: and it shall be inhabited of demys for a greate season.

The .v. Chapter.

Jerusalem is moued vnto gladnesse for the returne of her people, and vnder the figure thereof, she sheweth

Jerusalem, loke about the towarde the East, and beholde the ioy that cometh vnto the from God. For lo, thy sonnes (whiche thou hast forsaken, and that were scared a byode) are gathered togyther, from the east & west, reioysynge in the worde of the holpe one, vnto the honour of God.

But of thy mournynge clothes (O Jerusalem) and thy sorowe, and decke the with the woithpy and honoure, that cometh vnto the from God, with euerlastynge glorye. God shall put the garment of ryghteousnesse vpon the, and sette a crowne of euerlastynge woithpy vpon thyne heed: for vpon the wpll God declare his byghtnesse, that is vnder the heauen. Yea, an euerlastynge name shall be gyuen the of God, with peace of ryghteousnesse, and the honour of Gods feare.

Arise, O Jerusalem, stande vpon hye: loke about the towarde the East, and beholde thy chyldren gathered from the East, vnto the West, whiche reioyse in thy holpe worde, haung God in remembraunce. They departed from the on fote, and were led awaye of thy enemyes: but now shall the Lorde bypunge them carped with honoure, as chyldren of the kynngdome. For God is purposed to bypunge downe all stout mountaynes: yea and all hye rockes, to fyl the valleyes, and so, to make them euen with the grounde: that Israel maye be diligent to lye vnto the honour of God. The wooddes and all pleasant trees shall ouersadowe Israel, at the commen-commandement of God. For byther shall I bringe Israel with ioyfull mynth, and in the light of his maiestye: with the mercye and clemencye that cometh of hym selfe.

The. vi. Chapter.

A copye of the epistle that Hieremie sent vnto the Je-wes, which were led awaye prisoners by the kynge of Babylon: wherein he certifieth them of the thinge that was commaunded hym of God.

Because of the synnes, that ye haue done agaynst God, ye shall be * led awaye captiue vnto Babylon, euen of Nabuchodonosor, the kynge of Babylon. So when ye be come into Babylon, ye shall remayne there many yeres, and in a longe season: namelye seuen generacions: and after that wyll I bringe you awaye peacablye from thence. Nowe shall ye se in Babylon goddes of golde, of syluer, of wood and of stone, bozine vpon mens shoulders, to cast and ashafulnesse before the heythen. But that ye do not as the other: be not ye afraid, and let not the feare of them ouercom

Therefore, when ye se the multitude of people worshyping them behynde and behynde ye in your hartes: O Lorde, * it is that oughtest onely to be worshypped.
The Angell also shall be with you, and I wyll care for your soules. As for the image of those goddes, the carpenter hath made them: yea, gylded be they, and layed out with syluer, yet are they but vayne things, and can not speake. Like as a wenche that is lewellye paramours is trymply de cte, euen these made and hanged with golde.
Images of golde verely haue they: goddes in theyr heedes: to the prestes them selues in golde and syluer from them: and put it in theyr owne vles: yea, they gyue of þ same in harlottes, and trymme they: whores shall: agayne, they take it from the whores, and deche they: goddes therewith. * Yet must these goddes deliuer the selues from hand and moethes. When they haue couered thems with clothynge of purple, they wypp theyr faces for the dust of the temple, wherof they are moche amonge them. One hath a sceptre in his hande, as though he were iudge of the countrey: yet can he not slaye suche as offend hym. Another hath a swearde or an in his hande, for all that is he neyther ha-ble to defende hym selfe from battayl, nor fro the heeres.

By this ye maye vnderstande, that they be goddes: therefore se that ye neither worshype them, nor feare them. For lyke as a man that a man sleeth, is nothyng worth when it is broken, euen so is it with they: goddes. When they be set vp in the temple, they are full of dust, tho: ope the sete of those that come in. And lyke as the dozes are set in rounde about vpon him that hath offended the kynge. Or as it were a deed body kepte beyde the grane. Euen so the prestes kepe the dozes with barres and lockes, least they: goddes be spoyled with robbers. They set vp candles before them (yea verely & that many) wherof they can not se one but eue as blockes, so stande they in the temple. It is sayd, that the serpentes and woymes, whiche come of the earth, gnawe oute they: hartes, eatynge them and they: clothes also, and yet they fele it not. They: faces are blacke tho-row the smoke þ is in the temple. The oules, swalowes and byrdes, flye vpon them, yea, and the catteres runne ouer they: heedes.

By this ye maye be sure, that they are not goddes, therfore feare them not. The golde that they haue, is to make them beautifull: for all that, except some body dyggt of they:
rust, they wyll gyue no thynge: and wherthey were cast into a fourme, they felt it not.

They are bought for money & haue no bryth of lyfe within them. * They must be bozine vpon mens shoulders, as those that haue no ferte: wherby they declare vnto men, that they be nothyng worth. * Confounded be they then that worshyp them, for yf they fal to the grounde, they can not ryle vp agayne of them selues. Yea, though one helpe them vp and set them ryght, yet are they not hable to stand alone: but must haue proppes set vnder them lyke deed men. As for the thynge that is offred vnto them, their prestes sell it, and abuse it: yea the prestes wyues take ther of: but vnto the lyche and pooze, they gyue nothyng of it: the women with chyldre and the men struous lape handes of they: offryn-ges: By this ye maye be sure, that they are no goddes, therfore denot ye afrayed of them from whence cometh it then, that they be called goddes? The womē spt before þ god-des of syluer, golde, and wood, and the prestes spt in they: temples, hangynge open clothes, whole heedes and beerdres are shauen & haue nothyng vpon they: heedes: roozynge, and cryng vpon they: goddes, as men do at the feast when one is deed.

The prestes also take awaye the garmentes of the ymages, and deche they: wyues & chyldren withal. Whether it be good or euyl that any mā do vnto them they are not able to recompence it: they can neither set vp a king nor put hym downe. In like maner they may neither gyue rycheesse, nor rewarde euyl.

* Though a man make a vowe vnto them & kepe it not, they wyll not requyre it.

They can saue nomā from death, neyther deliuer the weake from the myghtye. They can not restore a blynde mā to his syght, nor helpe any man at his nede. They can therfore no mercye to þ wyddowe, nor do good to the fatherlesse,

The booke of Baruch.

fatherlesse. They: goddes of wood, stone, golde and siluer, are but euen as other stones that be hewen of the mountayne. They that worshipp them shalbe confounded.

How shuld they then be taken for goddes? Yea, how dare men call them goddes? And though the Chaldees worshipped them not, hearynge that they were but domine, and coulde not speake: Yet they them selues offere vnto Beil, & wold sayne haue hym to speake as who saie, they coulde feele, that maye not moue. But whē these men come to vnderstaundyng, they shal forsake them, for their goddes haue no felpyng. A great sorte of women gyde with cordes, syt in the stretes, & burne olyue berpes. Now if one of them be coneyped away, and lye with any such as come by: she casteth her neyghbours in the teeth, bycause she was not so worthelye reputed, nor her corde broke. Whatsoeuer is done for the, it is but in vayne and lost. Howe maye it then be sayd or thought, that they are goddes? Carpenters and golde Smythes make them, neyther be they any other thyng but euen what the workemen wyl make of them. Yea, the golde Smythes them selues that make them, are of no longe continuance. Howe shoulde then the thynges that are made of them, be goddes? Clapne therfore are the thynges: (yea, very shame is it) that they leue behynd them for they: prosperitie. For as soone as there cometh any warre or plague vpon the, then the prestes ymagin, where they maye hyde them selues with them. Howe can men thynke then that they be goddes, which neither maye defende them selues from warre, nor deliuer them from myfortune? For seying they be but of wood, of stone, of siluer, and of gold: al people and kynges shal know hereafter, that they be but vayne thynges: yea, it shal be openlye declared, that they be no goddes: but euen the very workes of mens handes, and that God hath nothyng to do wth them. (It is manifest then that they are no goddes, but the workes of mens handes, and no worke of God in them.) They can let no kyng in the land, nor gyue rayne vnto men. They can gyue no sentence of a matter, neyther defende the land from wzonge. For they are not hable to do so moche as a crowe that flyeth betwixt heauen and earth.

¶ When there happeneth a fyre in to the house of those goddes of wood, and siluer, & of golde, the prestes wyl escape, and saue the selues: but the goddes burne as the balikes therein. They cannot withstande anye kyng or battayl: how maye it the be thought or graunted that they be goddes? Whoesouer, these goddes of wood, of stone, of golde, and siluer may neither defende them selues from theues nor robbers: yea, the very wyched are stronger then they. These strypp them out of

they: apparell, that they be clothed withall: these take they: golde and siluer from them, and so get them away, yet can they not helpe them selues. Therfore it is moche better for a man, to be a kyng, & so to shewe his power: or els a profitable vessel in an house, wherein he that owreth it, myght haue pleasure: yea, or to be a doze in a house, to kepe such thynges safe as be therein, the to be such a vayne god. The Sunne, the Moone, and all the starrs, seinge they gyue they: bene and lyght, are obedient, and do men good. When the lightnyng glpyreth, all is cleare. The wynde bloweth in euery coutrie: and when God commaundeth the cloudes to goo rounde aboute the hole worlde, they do as they are bydden: when the fyre is sent downe from aboue and comaunded, it burneth vpon hylls & woddes. But as for those goddes, they are not lyke one of these thynges, neither in beauty, neither strength. Therfore, men shoulde not thynke nor saye that they be goddes: seing they can neither giue sentence in iudgement, nor do me good. For so moche now as ye are sure, that they be no goddes: then feare them not. For they can neither speake euyl nor good of kynges. They can shewe no tokens in heauen or the earth, neither shine as the Sunne, nor gyue lyght as the Moone: yea, the unreasonable beastes are better then they, for they can get them vnder the rose, and do them selues good. So can ye be certified by no manner of meanes, that they be goddes: they feare them not. For lyke as a scarcrowe in a garden of her bes kepeth nothyng: euen so are they: goddes of wood, of siluer, & golde: and lyke as a wyche thorne in an orchard, that euery byde lyteth vpon: yea, lyke as a deed bodye that is cast in the darke. Euen so is it with those goddes of wood, siluer, and golde. By the purple and scarlet which they haue vpon them, and soone fadeth away, ye maye vnderstande, that they be no goddes: yea, they them selues shalbe consumed at the last, which shalbe a greate confusion of the lande. Blessed is the godlye man, that hath no ymages & worshippeth none, for he shalbe far from reproche.

ryght, and all thy iudgements true. In all the thynges that thou hast brought vpon vs and vpon the holy cytie of oure fathers: euen Jerusalem) thou hast executed true iudgmet for, according to ryght and equyte hast thou brought al these thynges vpon vs because of oure synnes.

For why? we haue offended, & done wylly, departinge from the: * In all thynges we trespassed, & not obeyed thy commaundmentes, nor kepte them, neyther done as þy lawdd vs, & we myght prosper. * Albet we all that thou hast brought vpon vs, and every thyng that thou hast done to vs, thou doest them in true iudgement: As in deliuering vs into the handes of our enemyes, amonge vngodlye and wycked ymaginacyon, and to an vnyghteous kynge, yee: the medeforde vpon earth. And now we are not open oure mouthes, we are become dumme & reprove vnto thy seruantes, and to them that worshippe the. Yet for thy names sake we beseeche the) geue vs not vp for ever make not thy couenaunte, and take not away thy mercy from vs, for thy beloued Abrahams sake, for thy seruauit Isaacs sake and for thy holy Israels sake. To whome þy lawd spoken and promysed * þy thou woldest multyple they) sede as the sterres of heuen, & the lande þy lyeth vpon the see shoure. For we (O Lord) are become lesse then any people, & be kept vnder this dawe in all þy worlde because of oure synnes: So that now we be neyther prynce, duke, prophete, burnt offeryng, sacrifice, oblacpon, incense, nor) Sanctuary before the.

Nevertheless, in a contryte herte and an humble sprete, let vs be receaued, & we maye expeynte thy mercy. Lyke as in the burnt offeryng of Hammes and bullockes, & lyke as in landes of fat lambes, so lette oure offeryng be in thy syght this dawe, that it maye please the, * for there is no chylfyn vnto the that put they) trust in þy. And now we folow the with all oure herte, we feare the, and seke thy face. But vs not to shame, but deale w vs after thy louyng kyndnes, and accordyng to the multitude of thy mercyes. Deluyce vs by thy myracles (O Lord) and get thy name an honour: & all they which do thy seruau-tes euell, maye be confounded. Let them be a shamed thowowe thy almyghty power, & let they) strength be broken: & they maye know howe þy thou only art þy Lorde God, & honour worthy thowowout all the worlde.

And the kynges seruantes that put them in, ceassed not to make the oven hote w cubytes: yee, it toke away and brennt vp those Caldees, that it gat holde vpon besyde the ouen. But the Angel of the Lord came downe into the out to Aarias and his felowes, and smote the flame of the fyre out of the oven, and made the myddst of the oven as it had ben a colde wynde blowyng: so þy the fyre nether touched them, greued them, nor) dyd the hurt.

Then these thre (as out of one mouth) praysed, honoured, and blessed God in the forna-ce sayyng.

* Blessed be thou, O Lord God of oure fathers: for thou arte prayse & honour worthy, yee: & to be magnified for evermore.

* Blessed be the holy name of thy glory, for it is worthy to be prayed, and magnified in all worldes. Blessed be þy in the holy temple of thy glory, for aboue al thynges þy art to be prayed, yee and more then worthy to be ma-gnified for ever. Blessed be thou in the trone of thy kyngdome, for aboue all þy art worthy to be wel spoken of, & to be more then magnified for ever. Blessed be thou, þy lokest tho-rowe the depe, and syttest vpon þy Cherubins for þy art worthy to be prayed, and aboue al to be magnified for ever. Blessed be thou in the firmament of heauen, for thou art prayse and honour worthy for ever.

here dwelt a man in Babilon called Joachim, þe toke a wife, whose name was Susanna, the dought-ter of helchia, a very faire woman & such one as feared God. her father and her mother also were godly people, and taught thei doughter accordyng to the lawe of Moyses. Nowe Joachim (her husband) was a grete ryche man, & had a fayre orcharde ioynyng vnto his house. And to hym refozted the Jewes comenly, because he was a man of reputacyon amonge thei. The same yere were there made two wydes, such as the Lozde speaketh of: All the wychednes of Babilon cometh from the elders (þe is the the Judges, whiche seme to rule the people.
These came oft to Joachim's house, & all such as had any thing to do in the lawe came th-ther vnto them.

Nowe when the people came agayne at after none, Susanna went into her husban-des orcharde, to walke. The elders spyng thei that she wente in daylye, and walched, they burned for lust to her: pee, they were almozte out of thei wyttes, and calde downe thei eyes, that they shulde not se hem, nor remembre, that God is a ryghteous Judge.
For they were both wounded wth the love of her, neyther durste one shewe an other his grete. And for shame, they durst not tell her thei inordynate lust, that they wolde saye haue had to do with her. Per thei layd wayte for her earnestly from daye to daye, that they myght (at the lest) haue a syght of her. And one layd to the other: Tyl, let vs go home, for it is dyner tyme. So they went thei waye from her.

When they returned agayne, they came together, enquiryng out þe matter betwyxe them selues: pee, the one tolde þe order of thei wyched lust: Then appoynted they a tyme, when they myght take Susanna alone.

It happened also þe they spyed out a conuenient tyme, when she went forth to walke (as her maner was) and no bodye wth her, but two maydens, & thoughte: to walke her selfe in the garden, for it was an hott season.
And there was not one personne there, except the two elders, that had hyd them selues to behold her. So she layde to her maydens: go set me oyle and sope, and shut the orchard dore, that I maye walke me. And they dyd as she bad them, and shutte the orchard dore: and went out them selues at a backe dore, to set the thyng that she had commaunded: but Susanna knewe not, that the Elders laye there hyd wthyn. Nowe when the maydens were were gone forth, the two elders gat them vp and came vpon her, saying: nowe the orchard does at that, that no man can se vs: we haue a lust vnto the, therfore consent vnto vs, and be with vs.

If thou wylt not, we shall bring a testymony agaynst the, that there was a ponge flynge with the, and that thou haste sent awaye the maydens from the for þe same cause Susanna spyghed, and sayde: Alas. I am in trouble on euery syde. Though I follow your wynde, it wyl be my death, and if I consent not vnto you, I cannot escape your handes.
Alas, it is better for me, to fall into your hãde without the dede doyng, then to synne in the syght of the Lorde: and with that, she cryed out with a loude voyce: the elders also cryed out agaynst her.

Then ranne there one to the orcharde dore, & smote it open. Nowe when the seruantes of the house herde the crye in the orcharde they rushed in at the backe dore, to se what the matter was. So when the elders tolde them, the seruantes were greatly ashamed, for wher there was neuer such a report made of Susanna. On the morowe after came the priests to Joachim her husband, and the two elders came also, full of myscheuous ymagi-nacion agaynst Susanna, to bring her vnto death, & spake thus befoze þe people: Send for Susanna þe daughter of Helcias, Joachims wyfe. And immediatly they sent for her. So she came with her father and mother, her children and all her kynred. Nowe Susanna was a tender personne, and maruelous fayre of face. Therfore the wycked men commaunded to take of the clothes from her face (for she was couered) that at the lest, they myght be satisfied in her beweppe. Then her fren-des, & all they that knew her, beganne to wepe.

These two elders stode vp in the myddest of the people, & and layde their handes vpon the heade of Susanna, whiche wept, and loked vp towarde heauen, for her herte had a true trust in the Lorde. And the elders sayde: As we were walkyng in the orcharde alone this woman came in with her two maydens whom she sent awaye from her, & sparged the orchard dozes: so that a ponge felowe (which there was hyd) came vnto her, & lay with her in the syght of vs, we stode in a corner of the orchard and when we sawe this wyckednes, we ran to her: and perceaued, þe they had medled together. But we coulde not holde hym, for he was stronger then we: thus he opened þe dore and gat hym awaye.

Nowe when we had taken this woman, we asked her, what ponge felowe this was:
but she wolde not tell vs. This is the matter, & we be wytnesses of the same. The co-myn loyde beleued them: as those that were þe elders and Judges of the people, and so they condemned her to death. Susanna cryed out with a loude voyce, and sayde: O euerlastyng God, * thou searcher of secretes, thou that knowest all thynges afore they come to passe: thou wottest, that they haue bozne fals wytnes agaynst me, & beholde, I must dye, where as I neuer dyd any suche thynges, as these men haue malyciously inuented agaynst me. And the Lorde heard her voyce. For whẽ she was led forth to deathe, the Lorde rapled vp the sperte of a ponge chyld, whose name was Danyel, whiche cryed with a loude voyce:

* I am cleane from this blonde. Then all the people turned them towarde hym, & sayde What meane these wordes, that thou haste spoken? Danyel stode in the myddest of them and sayde: Are ye such fooles, O ye chyldren of Israel, that ye cannot dyscerne nor knowe the truth? Ye haue here condemned a dought-ter of Israel vnto death, and knowe not the truth wherfore: So sytte on iudgements a-gayne, for they haue spoken fals wytnes a-gaynst her.

Wherfore the people turned agayne in all the haste. And the elders (that is the prynci-pall heades) sayd vnto hym: come syt do wne here amonge vs, and shewe vs this matter, seyng God hath geuen the as great honour as an elder. And Daniel sayd vnto the: But these two asyde one frome another, and then shall I heare the. When they were put a sunder one frome an other, he called one of them and sayde vnto hym: O thou olde cankered carle, that hast bled the wyckednes so longe: thyne vnglacypous dedes whiche þe hast done afore, are nowe come to lycht. For thou hast geuen fals iudgements, thou haste oppressed the innocent, and letten the greiue go fre where as yet the Lorde sayth: * The innocent & ryghteous se thou slaye not. Well thankest thou halfe sene her tell me vnder what tree lauest thou them talkyng together? He answered: vnder a Golbery tree. And Daniel sayde: brye well, nowe thou lyest euen vpon thyne heade. Lo, the messaunger of the Lorde hath receaued the sentence of hym, to cut the in two. Then put he hym asyde, & called for the other, and sayd vnto hym: O thou sene of Canaan, but not of Iuda: Rayenes hath dysceaued the, and lust hath subuerted thyne hert. Thus dealt ye afore with the dought-ters of Israel, and they (for feare) consented vnto you: but the daughter of Iuda wolde not abyde your wyckednes. Nowe tell me than vnder what tree dydest þe take them speaking together? He answered: vnder a Pomgranate tree. Then sayd Danyel vnto hym: brye well, nowe þe lyest also euf vpon thyne head. The messaunger of the Lorde standeth waytyng with the sword, to cut the in two and to slaye you both.

Uith that al the whole multitude gaue a great shout, & praised God, which al way deliuered them that put theyr trust in hym. And they came vpon the two elders (whome Daniel had corrupct with theyr owne mouth that they had genen false wytnes) and deale wyth them, euen lywyle as they wolde haue done wth theyr neyghbours: yee, they dyd accordyng to the lawe of Moyses, and put them to death. Thus the innocent bloude was lained the same daye.

Then helchiah & hys wyfe prayed God, for theyr daughter Sulanna, with Joachim her husband and all the kynred: & there was no dishonesty found in her. of the Dragon, which is the. xiii.

Chapter of Daniel after the Latyn.

Daniel dyd eate at the kingly table, & was had in reuerence about all his frendes. There was at Babylon an ymage, called Bel: & there were spyt upon him euery daye. xii. cakes. xi. shepe, and xii. great pottes of wyne. Hym dyd the kyng worship hymselfe, & wente dayly to honour hym: but Daniel worshipped his owne God. And the kyng sayde vnto him: why dost not thou worship Bel: he answered and sayde: * Because I maye not worship thynges that be made with handes. * But the lyvinge God, whiche made heauen & earth, & hath power vpon all flesh. The kyng sayd vnto hym: thyngest thou not that Bel is a lyvinge God? Oseyth thou not howe much he eateth and drynketh euery daye? Daniel smyled, & sayde: O kyng disceane not thy selfe, for this is but made of claye with in, & of metal without, * nether eateth he euer any thyng.

* Dan. iii. 1.
* 1 Jo. v. 16.
* 1 Jo. v. 16.
* 1 Jo. v. 16.

* 1 Jo. v. 16.

Then the kyng was wroth, & called for his prestes, and sayde vnto them: Ye tell me not who is this, that eateth by these expenses, ye shall dye: but ye can certifie me that Bel eateth them, then Daniel shal dye, for he hath spoken blasphemy agaynst Bel: And Daniel sayde vnto the kyng: let it so be, accordyng as thou hast sayde: The prestes of Bel were. lxx. helyde theyr wyues & chyldren. And the kyng went wth Daniel in to the temple of Bel. So Belis prestes sayd: Lo, we wyll go out, and sette thou the meate

there (O kyng) and poure in the wyne: then shutte the doze faste, and seale it wth thyne owne sygnet: and to morow when thou comest in, yf thou fyndest not that Bel hath eaten vp all, we wyll suffre death: or elles Daniell, that hath lyed vpon vs. The prestes thought them selues sure ynough, for vnder the altare they had made a preynt entrance, and there went they in euer, and dyd eate vp what there was.

So when they were gone forth, the kyng set meates before Bel. Now Daniel had commaunded hys seruantes to bypunge althes, & these he spytte thorow out all the temple, that the kyng myght se. Then went they out, & sparrd the doze, sealyng it with the kynges sygnet, and so departed. In the nyght came the prestes wyth theyr wyues and chyldren (as they were wonte to do) and dyd eate & drynke vp all. In the morning by tymes at the breake of the daye, the kyng arose, and Daniel wth hym. And the kyng sayde: Daniel are the seals whole yet? he answered: Yee (O kyng) they be whole. Nowe as lone as he had opened the doze, the kyng looked vnto the altare and cried with a loude voyce: Great art thou O Bel, and with the is no discreete. Then laughed Daniel, and helde the kyng: & he shulde not go in, and sayde: Beholde the pavement, marke well, whole fote steppes are these: The kyng sayde: I se the fote steppes of men, women and chyldren.

Therefore the kyng was angrie, and toke the prestes, wyth theyr wyues and chyldren, and they shewed hym the preynt doze, where they came in, & dyd eate by such thynges as were vpon the altare. For the which cause the kyng slewe them, & deliuered Bel into Daniels power, which destroyed hym in his temple.

And in that same place there was a great Dragon, which they of Babylon worshipped. And the kyng sayde vnto Daniel, sayd thou that this is but a God of metall also? lo, he lyueth, he eateth and drynketh: so that thou canst not saye, & he is no lyvinge God, therefore worship hym. Daniel sayde vnto the kyng: I wyll worshippe the Lorde my God, * he is the true lyvinge God: as for this he is not the God of lyfe. But geue me leaue (O kyng) and I shal destroye this Dragon without swerde or staffe. The kyng sayd: I geue thee leaue. Then Daniel toke pitch fatte and bearte woll, and dyd sette them together, and made lompes therof: this he put in the Dragons mouth, and so the Dragon burst in sunder: and Daniel sayde: lo, there is he whom ye worshipped. When they of Babylon heard this, they toke greute indignacion and gathered them together agaynst Daniel sayinge: The kyng is become a Jewe, and he hath destroyed Bel, he hath slayne the the Dragon, and put þe Priestes to death: So they came to the kyng, and sayde: let vs haue Daniel, or els we wyl destrope the and thine house.

Some when the kyng sawe, that they rusht in so fozre vpon hym, and that necessitye straitened hym, * he deliuered Daniel vnto them: which cast hym into the Lyons den, where he was lyre dayes. In the denne there were seuen Lyons, and they had geuen them every daye two bodies and two shepe: which they were not geuen them, to the intent that they myght deuoure Daniel.

There was in Jewrye a Prophete called Thacur, whiche had made pottage, & broken bread in a depe platter, and was gongye into the fele, for to bypunge it to the repers. But the Angell of the Lorde sayde vnto Abacuc, carrye the meate that thou hast into Babylon, vnto Daniel, which is in the Lyons den. And Abacuc sayde: Lorde, I neuer sawe Babylon: and as for the denne, I knowe it not. Then the Angell of the Lorde toke hym by the trowpe, and bare hym by the heare of þe hed vnto the fele, and set hym in the denne. And Abacuc cryed, O Daniel: þe seruant of God, haue, whiche breakfast, þe God hath sent the. And Daniel sayde: O God, hast þe thought vpon me well, thou neuer forgyttest them þe loue the. So Daniel arose, and byd eate: & the Angell of the Lorde set Abacuc in hys owne place againe immediatly.

Upon the seventh daye, the kyng wente vnto the denne: and when he came to the denne, he looked in: and beholde, Daniel sat in the mydd of the Lyons. Then cryed þe kyng vnto aloude voyce, sayinge: Great art thou, O Lord God of Daniel: * & he dyde hym out of the Lyons denne. * As for those þe were the mydd of his destruction, he byd cast them into the denne, and they were deuoured in a moment before his face.

After this, wrote the kyng vnto all people, knyghtes and tungen, that dwelte in all countreys, sayinge: peace be multiplied with vs. By commaundemente is, in all the domynion of my realme: that men feare and stand in awe of Daniels God, * for he is þe lyvinge God, whiche endureth euer: hys kyngdome shal be vnconquered, and hys powere is euerlasting. It is he that can deliuer and save: he doth wonders and marvellous workes in heauen and in earth, for he hath saved Daniel from þe power of þe Lyons.

The ende of the storye of Bel.

The prayer of Manaf

les kyng of Iuda, when he was holden captiue in Babylon.

Lorde almyghtye, God of our fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and of the ryghteous leade of them: whiche hast made heuen and earth, with all the ornament thereof, whiche hast ordeyned the lee, by þe worde of thy commaundemente: whiche hast shutte vp the depe, and haste sealed it for thy fearefull and laudable name, whiche all men feare, and tremble before the face of thy vertue, and for the anger of thy thretenyng, the whiche is importable to synners. But the mercy of thy promys is great and vnsearchable, for thou arte the Lorde God most myghty aboue all the earth, longe sufferyng, and exceedingly mercifull, and repentaunte for the malys of men. Thou Lorde after thy goodness hast promysed repentaunce of þe remysyng of synnes: and thou that arte the God of the ryghteous, haste not put repentaunce to the ryghteous Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: vnto them that haue synned agaynste the. But because I haue synned aboue the nombre of the sandes of the see, and that myne iniquities are multiplied, I am humbled with many bandes of pyn, and there is in me no breatchinge. I haue prouoked thyne anger, and haue done euell before the, in commytinge abhominacyon and multiplyinge offences. And nowe I bowe the knees of my herte, requyryng goodnes of the O Lorde, I haue synned, Lorde I haue synned, and knowe myne iniquyte. I besyge the by prayer, O Lorde forgyue me: forgyue me, and destrope me not with myne iniquytes, neyther do thou alwayes remembre myne euilles to punyshe them, but save me (whiche am vnrworthy) after thy great mercy: and I wyl praye the euerydaye, all the dayes of my lyfe: for all þe vertue of beauen prayeth þe, and vnto the belongeth glorye worlde without ende.

Nowe, when he had gathered a myghty stronge hoste, and subdued the landes and people with thei prynces, so that they became tributaries vnto hym: he fel sick. And when he perceaued þe he must nedes dye, he called for his noble estates (whiche had bene brought vp w hym of chylidren) * & parted his kyngdome amonge the, whyle he was yet alque. So Alexander raygned .xii. yere, and then dyed.

After his death fell the kyngdome vnto his prynces, and they optayned it euery one in his rowme, and caused them selues to be crowned as kynges: and so dyd thei chylidren after them many yeres, and much wyckednes increased in the worlde. Out of these came the vnglacous rote, noble Antiochus the sonne of Antiochus the kynge (* whiche had bene a pledge at Rome) and he raygned in the .C. xxvii. yere of the empyre of the Grekes.

In those dayes wente there out of Israel wycked men, whiche moued muche people w thei counsell saying: * Let vs go & make a couenaunt with the heathen, that are rounde aboute vs: * for sence we departed from them we haue had much sorowe. So this deupee pleased them wel, and certayne of the people toke vpon them for to go vnto þe kyng, which gaue them lycence to do after þe ordynance of the heathen. * Then set they vp an ope scoule (at Iherusalem) of the lawes of the heathen and were nomore circumcysed: but forloke þe holy testament, and iopned them selues to the heathen. * & were cleane solde to do myschefe. So when Antiochus beganne to be myghty in his kyngdome, he went aboute to optayne the lande of Egypte also þe myghte haue the dominion of two realmes, * vpon this entred he into Egypt w a stronge host, wth charettes, elephantes, horsemen, and a great nombze of shippes & beganne to warre agaynst Ptolomy the kynge of Egypt. But Ptolomy was afrayd of hym: & fled: and many of his people were wounded to death. Thus Antiochus wanne many strong cities and toke awaye greate good out of the lande of Egypt.

* And after that Antiochus had smytten Egypt, he turned agayne in the Crisi. yere, and went towarde Israel, & came vp to Ierusalem w a myghtie people: and entred proude- ly into the Sanctuary, and toke away þe golden altare, the candellpyke and all the ornamentez therof, the table of the shewbread, the powring vessell, the chargers, & golden spo- nes, the vayle, the crownes, & golden apparell of the temple, & brake downe al. he toke also the syluer & gold, the pteuous Jewels, & the secrete treasures that he founde. And whle he had taken a waye al together, caused a great murthur of men, & so falslyll his malitious pyde, he departed into his owne lande.

Thus there arose greate heynesse and mysery in all þe land of Israel. * The prynces and the elders of the people mourned, & yong men and the maydens were despyled, and the sayze bewtye of women was chaunged: the bydegrome and the byde toke the to moun- nyng: the lande and those that dwelt therein, was moued: for all the house of Jacob was brought to confusyon.

* After two yeres the kyng sent his chiefe treasurer into þe Cyties of Iuda, whiche came to Ierusalem with a great multitude of peo- ple, speakyng peacable wordes vnto them, but all was dyceate: for whan they had ge- uen hym credence, he fell sodenly vpon the ctye, & smote it fore, & destroyed it wche people of Israel. * And when he had spoyld the ctye, he set fyre on it, castyng downe houses & walles on euery syde. The wemen & thei chylidren toke they captiue, & led awaye they: castell. Then buylded they the ctye of David w a great & thicke wall, & wth myghty tow- res, and made it a stronge hold for them. Besyde all this, they set wycked people and vngodly men to kepe it, stoared it w weapens & vytayles: gathered the goodes of Ierusalem and layd them vp there: thus became it a the- upthe castell.

And thus was done to lape wayte for the people that went into the Sanctuary, and for the cruell destruccyon of Israel. Thus they shed innocent bloud on euery syde of the Sanctuary, and despyled it: In so muche that the ctytyns were sayne to departe, and the Cytie became an habytacyon of straungers, being desolate of her owne seide, for her own natyues were sayne to leaue her. * Her Sanctuarie was cleane wasted, her holpe dayes were that turned into mourning, her Sabbath were had in derision, and her honour brought to naught. Loke how great her glory was afore, so greates was her confusyon, & her joye turned into sorow.

Antiochus also the kynge sent out a commission vnto all hys kyngdome, that all the people shuld be one. Then they left euery mans lawe, and all the heathen agreed to the commandment of kynge Antiochus: Per, many of the Israelites consented there vnto, turning vnto Idols, and derisying the Sabbath. So the kynge Antiochus sent his messengers with hys commissyon vnto Jerusalem, and to all the cyties of Iuda: that they shoulde folowe the lawes of the heathen, and shoulde eiter burnt offeringe, meat offeringe, peace offeringe to be made in the temple of God, and that there shoulde no Sabbath nor feast daye be kepte: but commaunded that the Sanctuary and the holy people of Israel shoulde be despyled.

He commaunded also that there shuld be no other altars, temples, & Idols: so of the wyldernes flesh & other vncleane beastes that men shoulde leaue theyr chyldren vncircumcised, to despyle theyr soules with all manner of vncleannesse & abhominacyons: & they might so forget the lawe, and chaunge all the ordynaunces of God: & that whosoever woulde not do accordyng to the commaundement of kynge Antiochus, shoulde suffer death. In the manner commaunded he thowowe out all hys realme, and set rulers ouer the people, to compell them to do these thynges commaunding the cyties of Iuda to do sacrifice vnto Idols.

Then wente the people vnto the heathen by houses, forsooke the lawe of the Lorde, and committed much euell in the lande: Per, & chaunge out the secrete Israelites, which had hid themselves in corners and prey places. The ruler of the Moneth Castle, in the xlv. year, let kynge Antiochus an abhominable Idoll of delolacyon vpon the altare of God, and they buyled altars thowowe out all the cyties of Iuda on euery syde, before the doores of the houses, and in the stretes: where they burnt incense, & dyd sacrifice. And as for the lawes of the lawe of God, they bent them in the fyre, and rent them in peces. Whatsoever was that had a boke of the testament of the Lorde found by hym, or whosoever endeuored hym selfe to kepe the lawe of the Lorde, the kynge commaundement was, & they shoulde put hym to death. And thowowe his auctoritey they executed these thynges euery moneth vpon the people of Israel that were found in the cyties.

The fyue and twenty daye of the Moneth, what tyme as they dyd sacrifice vpon the altare (which stode in the strede of the altare of the Lorde) accordyng to the commaundement of kynge Antiochus, they put certayne women to death, which had caused theyr chyldren to be circumcised: Not onely so, but they hanged vpon the chyldren by the neckes thowowe out all theyr houses, and strowe the circumcisers of them.

Yet were there many of the people of Israel, whiche determynd in them selues, that they wolde not eate vncleane thynges: but chose rather to suffer death, then to be despyled wth vncleane meates: So because they wolde not breake the blessed lawe of God, they were cruelly slayne. And this great tyranny increased very sore vpon the people of Israel.

The ii. Chapter.

The mourning of Machabias and hys sonnes for the destruction of the holy cytie. They refuse to do sacrifice vnto Idols. The zeale of Machabias for the lawe of God. They are slayne and will not feare agayne because of the Sabbath daye. Machabias dying commaundeth his sonnes to kepe the lawe of God after the example of the fathers.

Those dayes there dyd stand by one Machabias the sonne of John the son of Symeon the Priest (out of the kynred of Iouis) from Jerusalem, and dwelt vpon the mount of Modyn, and had v. sonnes. The first called Gaddis, the seconde called Thasi: Iudas, otherwyle called Machabius: Eleazer, otherwyle called Abaron: and Ionathas whose surname was Appus. These sawe the euill that was done amonge the people of Iuda & Jerusalem. And Machabias sayde: wo is me, alas that euer I was borne, to se this mysery of my people, & the piteous destruction of the holy cytie: and thus to lye so still, it being deliuered into the handes of the enemyes. Her Sanctuary is come into the power of straungers: her Temple is, as it were a man that hath lost hys good name: her precious ornaments are carped awaye captiue. Her olde men are slayne in the stretes, & her yonge men are fallen thowowe the sword of the enemyes.

What people is it, that hath not some possession in her kyngdome? Or who hath not gotten some of her spoiles? All her glory is taken awaye. She was a free woman, & now she is become an handmayde. Beholde our Sanctuary, our bewtie & honour is wasted awaye, & despyled by the Gentyls. What helpeth it vs then to lye? And Machabias rent his clothes, he & his sonnes, & put sackcloth vpon them, and mourned very sore.

Then came the men wherof which were sent of kynge Antiochus, to compell suche as were fled into the Cyrie of Modyn, for to do sacrifice, and to burne incense vnto Idols, & to forsake the lawe of God. So, many of the people of Israel consented and enclyned vnto them, but Machabias and his sonnes remained steadfast. Then spake the commys-

sponers of kynge Antiochus, and sayde vnto Mathathias: Thou art a noble man, of hye reputacyon and great in thys Eytie, ha-uyng sayre chyldren and bryethren. Come thou therfore fyrst, and fulfyll þe kynges commaundement, lyke as all þe heathen haue done yee, and the men of Iuda, & such as remaine at Ierusalem: so shalt þe and thy chyldren be in the kynges fauoure & enriched with golde syluer & greate rewardes.

Mathathias answered, and spake with a loude voyce. Though all nacjons obey the kyng Antiochus, and fall awaye euery man from keepynge þe lawe of thei fathers: though they consent to his commaundementes, yet wil I and my sonnes & my bryethren, not fal from the lawe of our fathers. God forbyd we shoulde forsake the lawe and ordynaunces of God, & to agre vnto the commaundement of kyng Antiochus. Therfore we wyl do no suche sacrifyce, nether bryake the statutes of our lawe to go another waye. And when he had spoken these wordes, there came one of the Jewes, which openly in the syght of all, dyd sacrifyce vnto the Idols vpon the altare in the cytie of Modin, accordyng to the kynges commaundement.

C When Mathathias sawe thys, it greued hym at the hert, so þe rapnes thoke withal and hys wyathe kyndled for very zeale of the lawe. With that he starte vp, and kylled the Jewe belyde the altare: yee, & slew the kynges commissyoner, that compelled hym to do sacrifyce, and destroyed the altare at the same tyme: such a zeale had he vnto the lawe of God. lyke as Whinephes dyd vnto Iambry þe sonne of Salomi. And mathathias cryed with a loude voyce thowowe the Eytie sayynge.

Whoso is feruent in the lawe, and wyl kepe the couenaunt, let hym follow me. * So he & his sonnes fled into the mountaynes, & left al that euer they had in the cytie. Many other godly men also departed into the wyldernes with theyr chyldren, theyr wyues & theyr catell, and remainyd there: for the tyranny increased soze vpon them.

D Nowe when the kynges seruantes, and the hoost, which was at Ierusalem in the cytie of Dauid hearde, þe certayne men had broken the kynges commaundement, and were gone theyr waye to the wyldernes into secret places, and that there were many departed after them: they folowed vpon the, to fyght against them in the Sabboth daye, and sayd wyl ye yet rebell? Set you hence, and do the commaundement of kyng Antiochus, and ye shall lyue. They answered: * We wyl not go forth, nether wyl we do the kynges commaundement, to defyle the Sabboth daye. Then beganne they to fyght agaynst them, neuertheless: they gaue them none other an-swere, nether cast they one stone at them, nor made faste theyr prey places, but sayde: we wyl dye all in our innocency, heauen & earth shall testifie with vs, that ye put vs to death wrongously. Thus they fought agaynst the vpon the Sabboth, and slew bothe men and catell, theyr wyues and theyr chyldren, to the nombze of a thousand people.

When Mathathias and his frendes heard thys, they mourned for them ryght soze and sayde one to another: Yf so be that we all do as oure bryethren haue done, and fyght not for our lyues and for our lawes agaynst þe heathen, then shall they the soner rote vs out of þe earth. So they concluded amonge thei selues at the same tyme: sayynge, what soeuer be þe commeth to make battayl wyth vs vpon the Sabboth daye, we wyl fyght agaynst hym and not dye all, as oure bryethren þe were murdered so haynously. Vpon this came the Synagoge of the Jewes vnto the stronge me of Israel, all such as were feruent in the lawe. And all they that were fled for persecucion, came to helpe them, and to stand by them: In so much that they gathered an hooste of men, and slew the wycked doers in theyr gelyous and the vngodly men in theyr wrath. Some of the wycked fled vnto the heathen, and escaped.

Thus Mathathias and hys frendes went about, and destroyed the altars, & circumcised þe chyldren, that had not yet receaued circumcision: as many as they founde within þe coastes of Israel: & folowed myghtely vpon the chyldren of pyde, & this acte prospered in theyr handes: In so much, that they kept the lawe against the power of the Scyptles and the kynges: & gaue not ouer theyr dominion vnto wycked doers.

After thys, when the tyme dreyde on fast, that Mathathias shoulde dye, he sayde vnto hys sonnes: Nowe is pyde and persecucion increased, nowe is þe tyme of destrucion and wrathfull dyspleasure: wherfore (O my sonnes) be ye feruent in þe lawe, and leoparde your lyues for the Testament of the fathers cal to remembre what actes oure fathers dyd in theyr tyme, so shall ye receaue great honoure and an euerlastyng name.

* Remembre Abraham, was not he founde faythful in temptacyon, and it was reckened vnto hym for ryghteousnes: * Joseph in tyme of his trouble kept the commaundement, and was made a Lord of Egypte. * Whinephes oure father was so feruent for the honoure of God, that he optayned the couenaunt of an euerlastyng Priesthode. * Josia for fulfyllynge the worde of God, was made the captayne of Israel. * Calch bare recorde before the congregacyon & receaued an herptage. * Dauid also in his merciful kyndnes, optayned the throne of an euerlastyng kyngdome.

Ellas beinge gelous & feruent in the lawe, was taken vp into heauen. Hananias, Asa- rias and Misael remayned stedfast in fayth, and were deliuered out of the fyre. In lyke maner: Daniel beinge vnglytpe, was laued from the mouth of the Lyons.

And thus ye maye conspyde thowowoute al ages syns the worlde begane, * that who haue put theyr trust in God, were not ouercome. * Feare not ye then the wordes of an vngodlye man: for his glozpe is but donge and doymes: to daye is he set vp, and to morrowe is he gone: for he is turned into earth, & his memorial is come to nought. Wherefore, (O my sonnes) take good hertes vnto pou, and quyte youre selues lyke men in the lawe: for ye do the thynges that are commaunded you in the lawe of the Lorde your God, ye shall obtayne great honour therein.

And beholde, I knowe that your brother Symon is a man of wysdome: se that ye gyue care vnto hym alwaye, he shall be a father vnto you. As for Judas Machabeus, he hath myghty and stronge from his yowth: let hym be your captayne, and orde the battayle of the people: thus shall ye byynge vnto you all those that fauour the lawe, and that ye anenge the wronge of your people and recompence the hepythen agayne, and ap- pte youre selues whole to the commaunde- ment of the lawe. So he gaue them his bles- syng, and was layed by his fathers: and byed with E. lvi. pere at Modin, where his son- buryed hym in his fathers sepulchre, and all Israel made great lamentation for hym.

The .iii. Chapter.

¶ Judas is made ruler ouer the Jewes. He kylled Ap- polonius & Seron the prince of Syria. The confidence of Judas towards God. Judas determyneth to fyght agaynst Elias, whome Antiochus had made captayne ouer his host. The prayer of the aduyners.

When stode vp Judas Machabeus in his fathers stede, and al his bre- thren helped hym: and so byd all they that helde with his father, & fought with cheercfulness for Is- rael. So Judas gat his people great honour he put on a brestplate as a gyaunte, and a- rmed hym selfe with his harnesse, and defen- ded the host with his swearde. In his actes he was lyke a Lyon, and as a Lyons whelpe myngre at his praye. * He was an enemye to the wycked, & hunted them out: and byt vnto those that vexed his people: so that his enemyes fled for feare of hym, & all the wo- rdes of vngodlynesse were put to trouble: the lucke and prosperite was in his hande. This greued byuers kinges, but Jacob was greatly reioysed thowow his actes, and hegat hym selfe a great name for euer.

He wente thowowe the cyties of Juda, destroyng the vngodly out of them, turnynge awaye the wrath fro Israel, and receyvinge such as were oppressed: and the fame of him went vnto the uttermost parte of the earth. Then Appolonius (a prince of Syria) gathe- red a myghty great host of the hepythen, & out of Samaria, to fyght agaynst Israel. Which whē Judas perceyued, he went forth to mete hym, fought with hym, slewe hym, & a great multitude with hym, the remnaunte fled, and he toke theyr substance. Judas al- so toke Appolonius owne sweerde, & fought with it all his lyfe longe.

Now whē Seron (an other prince of Sy- ria) herde saye, that Judas had gathered vnto hym the congregacion & church of the fayth full, he sayde: I wil get me a name & a people thowoweout the realme: for I wyl goo fyght with Judas and them that are with hym, as many as haue despyed the kynges comma- dement. So he made hym readye, and there went with hym a great myghty host of the vngodlye, to stande by hym, and to be auen- ged of the chyldzen of Israel. And when they came nye vnto Bethozon, Judas went forth agaynst them with a small companye. And when his people sawe suche a great host be- fore them, they sayde vnto Judas: howe are we habile (being so fewe) to fyght agaynst so great a multitude and so stronge, seeing we be so wery, and haue fasted all this daye?

* But Judas sayde: It is a small matter for many to be overcome with fewe: yea, there is no difference to the God of heauen, to deli- uer by a greate multitude or by a small com- pany: * for þ victoizye of the battayl standeth not in the multitude of the host, but þ strenght commeth from heauen. Beholde, they come agaynst vs with a presumptuous and proude multitude, to destroy vs, our wyues and our chyldzen, and to robbe vs. But we wyl fyght for our lyues, and oure lawes, and the Lorde hym selfe shall destroye them before our face: therefore be not ye afrayed of them.

As soone as he had spoken these wordes, he leapt sodaynly vpon them. Thus was Seron smytten, and his host put to a fyght, and Judas folowed vpon the beyonde Bet- hozon vnto the playne felde: where ther were slayne epyght hundred men of them, and the re- sydue fled into the lande of the Philistines. Then all the hepythen on euery syde were a- frayed of Judas and his brethren: so that the rumour of hym came vnto the kynges eares, for all the Gentyles coude tell of the warres of Judas.

So when kynge Antiochus hearde these thynges, he was angry in his mynde: where- fore he sent forth, and gathered an hoste of his whole realme, very stronge armys: and opened his treasurie, and gaue his hoste a peaces wagges in hande, commaundyng them them to be readye at all tymes.

Neuerthelesse, when he sawe, that there was not moneye ynoughe in his treasures, and that thowowe the discorde and persecucion, which he made in þe land (to put downe the lawes that had bene of olde tymes) his customes & trybutes of the lande were mynistred: he feared that he was not hable for to beare the costes and charges anye longer, nor to haue suche gyftes, to gyue so liberally as he dyd afore, moze then the kynges that were before hym.

Wherefore, he was heuy in his mynde, and thought to go into Persides, for to take tributes of the lande, & so to gather moche moneye. So he left Lysias (a noble man of the kynges bloude) to ouersee the kynges busynesses, frome the water Euphrates vnto the borders of Egypte: & to kepe well his sonne Antiochus, tyll he came agayne.

Moreover, he gaue hym halfe of his host and Elephantes, comytted vnto hym euery thyng of hys mynde, concernynge those whiche dwel in Iuda and Jerusalem: that he shoulde sende out an armie agaynst them, to destrope and to rote out the power of Israel and the remnaunte of Jerusalem: to put oute theyr memoriall from that place, to set straungers for to inhabyte all theyr quarters, and parte theyr lande amonge them: Thus the kynge toke the other parte of the host, and departed fro Antioche (a cytie of his realme) ouer the water of Euphrates, in the hundred and. xlviij. yere, and went thowowe the hygh countreys.

* And Lysias chose vnto hym Ptolomee the sonne of Doriminius, Nicanor and Gorgias myghty men, and the kynges frendes. These he sent with. xl. thousande foote men, and. vii. thousande horsemen, for to go into þe lande of Iuda, & to destrope it, as the kynge commaunded. So they went forth with all their power, and came to Emmaus vnto the playne felde. When the marchauntes herde the rumour of them, they, & theyr seruantes, toke very moche syluer and golde, for to bye the chyldren of Israel to be theyr bonde men: There came vnto them also yet moo men of warre on euery syde, out of Syria, and from the Palestynes.

Now when Judas & his brethren sawe þe trouble increased, & that the host drew nye vnto theyr borders cōspyring þe kynges woordes whiche he commaunded vnto the people: namely, that they shoulde utterly waste and destrope them: They sayde one to an other: Let vs redresse the decaye of oure people, let vs fyght for our folke and for oure Sanctuary. Then the congregation were loone redye gathered to fyght, to praye and to make supplication vnto God for mercy and grace.

* As for Jerusalem, it laye voyde, & was as it had bene a wyldernesse. There wente no man in nor out at it, and þe Sanctuary was troden downe. The aleauntes kept the castell there was the habytation of the hepten. The myyth of Jacob was taken awaye, the pyper and the harpe was gone from amonge them.

The Israelites gathered them together & came to Betsapha before Jerusalem: for in Betsapha was þe place where they prayed afore tyme in Israel. So they fasted þe daye, & put sackclothes vpon them, cast ashes vpon theyr beedes, rent theyr clothes, & layd forth the bookes of the lawe (wherout the hepten soughte the lyke nesse of theyr ymagines) and brought the prestes ornamētes, the hyssingges & the tythes. They set there also the stayners (whiche had fulfilled theyr dayes) before God, and cryed with a loude voyce, towarde heauen, sayinge: What shall we do with these? and whytter shall we cary them away? For thy Sanctuary is troden downe and defyled, thy prestes are come to heynesse and dishonoure: and beholde, the hepten are come together for to destrope vs. Thou knowest what thynges they ymage agaynst vs: how may we stand before them except thou (O God) be our helpe?

They blew out the trompet also with a loude voyce. Then Judas ordeyned captaynes ouer the people: ouer thousandes, ouer hundredes, ouer fiftye, and ouer ten. So as for suche as buylded the houses, married wyues, plated them vndergarbes, and those that were fearefull: he commaunded them euery man to go home agayne, accordynge to the lawe. So the host remoued, and pytched vpon the southsyde of Emmaus.

And Judas sayd: Arme your selues, be stronge (O my chyldren) make you ready agaynst tomorowe in þe morning, that ye may fyght with these people, which are agreed to gyther to destrope vs and our Sanctuary. Better is it for vs to dye in battayle, then to se oure people and oure Sanctuary in suche a myserable case: * Neuerthelesse, as thy wyll is in heauen, so be it.

The. liii. Chapter.

Judas goeth agaynst Gorgias whiche he leeth in Ierusalem. He putteth Gorgias and his host to flight. Lysias suadeth Newys, but Judas dyspurch hym out. Judas purifyeth the temple and dedicateth the oulter.

Then toke Gorgias fyue thousand men of sote, and a thousande of the best horsemen, & remoued by nyght, to come nye where the Jewes host laye. & so to slaye them sodenly. Now þe men that kepte the castell, were the comarres of them. Then arose Judas to synke the chest and principall of þe kynges host at Emmaus, for the army was not yet come together. In the meane season came Gorgias by nyght in to Judas

Judas tentes: & when he founde no man there, he sought them in the mountaynes, and thought they had ben fled awaye, because of him. But when it was daye, Judas the web himselfe in the felde with thye thousande men, which had neither harnesse nor swer-re to they: mynde. But on the other syde, they sawe that the hepten were myghtye and well harnessed, and they: horsemen about them, and al these well experie in feates of warre. Then sayde Judas to þ men that were w hym: feare not þ multitude of the. be not afrayed of they: violent runnyng: remembre, howe oure fathers were deliuered in þ red see, when Pharaoh folowed vpon them with a great host.

Euen so let vs also crye nowe towarde heauen: and the Lord shall haue mercy vpon vs, and remembre the couenaunt of oure fathers: pea, and destroye this host befoze our face this daye. And all the hepten shall knowe, that it is God hym selfe, which deliuereth and saueth Israel.

Then the hepten lft vp they: eyes: and when they sawe that they were commynge agaynst them, they went out of they: tentes into the battayle: and they that were with Judas, blew vpon the trumpettes. * So they buckled togyther, and the hepten were distressed, and fled ouer the playne felde: but the mymost of them were slayne. For they folowed vnto the vnto Aflaremorth, and into the lides of Iounea towarde Azot and Jania: that there were slayne of them vpo a thye thousande men. So Judas turned agayne w his host, and sayde vnto the people: Be not greeued of the spoyles, we haue yet a battayle in syght, for Sogrgas and his host are here by vs in the mountaynes, but stande ye fast agaynst oure enemyes, and ouercome them: then maye ye safely take the spoyles.

As Judas was speaking these wordes, behold, there appeared one parte of the vpon the mount. But when Sogrgas sawe that they of his partye were fled, and the tentes went by (for by the smoke they myght vnderstande what was done) they perceyvinge this, were very soze afrayed: and when they sawe also that Judas and his host were in the felde readye to stryke battayle, they fled in pichone into the lande of the hepten.

So Judas turned agayne to spoyl the tentes, where they gat moche golde and syluer, precious stones, purple & great rcheffe. Then they went home, and longe a psalme of thankesguyng, and prayled God in heauen: * for he is gracious, & his mercye endureth for ever: And so Israel had a greate victory in that daye.

Howe all the hepten that escaped, came and tolde Lysias euerye thyng as it happened. Wherefore Lysias was soze afrayed, and grieved in his mynde, because Israel had not gotten suche myffortune, as he wolde they shulde, neyther as the kyng comaunded. The nexte yere folowynge gathered Lysias thre scoze thousand chosen men of foote, and fyue thousande horsemen to fyght agaynst them.

So they came into Jewrye, and pitched they: tentes at Bethozon, where Judas came agaynst them with ten thousande men. And when he sawe so greate & myghtye an host, he made his prayer, and sayde: Blessed be thou (O Saviour of Israel) * whiche dydest destroye þ violent power of the gyaunt, in the hande of thy seruant Dauid, * and gauest the hoste of the hepten into the hande of Jonathan (the sonne of Saul) and of his weaponbearer.

But this host now into the hande of thy people of Israel, and let the be confounded, in they: multitude and horsemen. Make them afrayed, and discomfozt the boldnesse of their strength, þ they maye be moued thowoe they: destruction. Cast them downe thowoe the swerde of thy louers, then shall all they that knowe thy name, prayle the with thankesguyng.

So they stroke the battayle, and there were slayne of Lysias hoste, fyue thousande men. Then Lysias seing the discomfytynge of his men, and the manynesse of the Jewes, howe they were readye, eyther to lyue or dye lyke men: he went vnto Antioche, and chose out men of warre: that when they were gathered togyther, they myght come agayne in to Jewrye. Then sayd Judas and his brythre beholde, oure enemyes are discomfyt: Let vs nowe go vp, to cleanse and to repayre the Sanctuarye.

* Upon this, all the host gathered them togyther, and went vp into mounte Syon. Now when they sawe the Sanctuarye layed waste, þ auter defyled, þ doores bzint vp, the shrubbes growynge in the courtes, lyke as in a wood or vpon mountaynes: pea, and þ the prestes Celles were broken downe: They rent they: clothes, made great lamentation, cast al þes vpo they: heedes, fell downe flat to the grounde, made a great noyle with the trumpettes, and cryed towarde heauen.

Then Judas appoynted certayne men to fyght agaynst thole whiche were in þ castell tyll they had cleansed the Sanctuarye. So he chose prestes þ were vndefyled, suche as had pleasure in the lawe of God: and they cleansed the Sanctuarye, and bare out the defyled stones into an vncleane place. And for so moche as the auter of burnt offrynges was vnhallowed, he tooke aduysment, what he myght do wall: so he thought it was best to destroye it (lest it shulde happē to do the any shame) for the hepten had defyled it, & therefore they brake it downe. As for the stones, they

* So they toke whole stones accordynge to the lawe, and buylded a newe aulter suche one as was befoze, & made vp the Sātuary within and without, & halowed the house & the courtes. They made newe oymantes, & brought the cādelsycke, the alter of incence, and a table into the temple. The incense layed they vpon the alter, and lyghted the lampes which were vpon the candelstyck, that they myght burne in the tēple. They set the shew-bred vpon the table, and hāged vp the vāyle and set vp the tēple, as it was afoze. * And vpon the. xxv. daye of the ix. moneth, which is called the moneth of Cassen, in the. C. lviij. pere: they rose vp by tymes in the moynynge for to do sacrifice (accordynge to the lawe) vpon the newe burnt offrynge alter that they had made: after the tyme and season that the heythen had despyled it. The same daye was it set vp agayne, with longes, pypes, harpes and cymbales.

¶ And all the people fell vpon theyr faces, worshipping and thāking the God of heaue which had gyuen them the vpyctoye. * So they kept the dedicatiō of aulter. viii. dayes, offrynge burnt sacrifices and thāk offrynge with gladnesse. They deckte the temple also with crownes and sheldes of golde, and halowed the portes and celles, and hanged dores vpon them. Thus there was very great gladnesse among the people, bycause the blasphemy of the heythen was put awaye. So Judas and his bryethen with the whole congregacion of Israel, ordeyned, * that a tyme of the dedication of the aulter shulde be kept in his season from pere to pere, by the space of. viii. dayes, from the. xxv. daye of the moneth Cassen: with myght and gladnesse.

¶ And at the same tyme builded they vp the mounte Syon with hye walles and stronge towres rounde about: lest the Gētyles shulde come and treade it downe, as they day afoze. Therfoze Judas sette men of warre in it, to keepe it: and made it stronge, for to defende * Bethsura: that the people myght haue a refuge agaynst the Edomptes.

The. v. chapter.

¶ Judas banquished the heythen that go aboute to destroye Israel, and is holpen of his bryethen Symon and Jonathan. He ouerthoweth the cite of Ephraim because they denyed hym passage thowse we it.

* Ioseph. ca. iii. lib. xlii.

¶ It happened also that when the heythen rounde aboute hearde, howe that the aulter & the Sāntuarie were set vp in theyr olde estate: it displeased them verpe soze, wherfoze they thought to destroye the generacion of Jacob that was amōge them: In so much that they beganne to slaye and to persecute certayne of the people. * Then Judas fought agaynst the chyldren of Esau in Iudaea, and agaynst those whiche were at Arabatbame (for they dwelt rounde about the Israelites) where he slew and spoyled a great multitude of them. He thought also vpon the malice and vnfaithfulnesse of the chyldren of Esau, howe they were a snare and a stoppe vnto the people, & howe they layed wayte for them in the hye waye. Wherfoze he shut vp the into towres, and came vnto them, destroyed them utterly and burnt vp their towres, with al that was in them.

¶ Afterwarde, went he agaynst the chyldren of Ammon, whereof he founde a myghty power and a greate multitude of people, with Timothy their captayne. So he stroke many battayles with them, which were destroyed before him. And when he had slayne them, he wanne Gazer the cite, with the towres belongynge thereto, and so turned agayne into Jewry. The heythen also in Galilee gathered them togyther agaynst the Israelites that were in their quarters, to slaye them: but they fled to the castel of Bethanai and sent letters to Judas and his bryethen, sayinge: The heythen are gathered agaynst vs on euery syde, to destroye vs, and now they make them readye for to come, and laye siege to the castel, wher vnto we are fled, and Timothy is captayne of theyr hoste: come therfoze, and deliuer vs out of theyr handes: for there is a great multitude of vs slayne at readye. Yea, and our bryethen that were at Tabin, are slayne and destroyed (well nye a thousande men) and theyr wyues, their chyldren and theyr goodes haue the enemyes led awaye captiue.

¶ While these letters were yet a readyng, beholde, there came other messengers from Galilee with rent clothes: whiche tolde euen the same vpydnges, and sayde: that they of Betholomays, of Tyrus and of Sydon were gathered agaynst them, and that all Galilee was fylled with enemyes to destroye Israel. * When Judas and the people herde this, they came togyther (a great congregacion) to deuyle, what they might do for theyr bryethen, that were in trouble, & besieged of their enemyes. And Judas sayd vnto Simon his brother: chole the out certayne men, and go deliuer thy bryethen in Galilee: As for me & my brother Jonathan, we wyll go into Galasathim. So he left Iosephus the sonne of zacharye, and Azarias to be Captaynes of the people, and to kepe the remnant of the host in Jewrye, and commaunded them, sayinge: Take the ouersyght of this people, and let ye make no warre agaynst the heythen, vntill the tyme that we come agayne. And vnto Simon he gaue the thousande men, for to go into Galilee, but Judas hym selfe had thousande in Galaadithim.

Then went Symon into Galilee, and fought dyuers battayles with the hepten: whom he discomfited, and folowed vpo the into þe porte of Ptolomais. And there were houre of the hepten almoost .iii. thousande men. So he toke the spoyles of them, and carried awaye the Israelites that were in Galilee and Arbatis, with theyr wyues, theyr chyldren, and all that they had, and brought them into Jewry with great gladnesse. Judas Machabeus also and his brother Jonathan wente ouer Jordane, and trauelyed .iii. dayes iourney in the wyldernes: where the Arabies met them, and receyued them lovingly, and tolde the euery thyng that had happened vnto theyr brethren in Galaadithim, and how that many of the were besieged at Barasa, Bolo, Alimis, Calphoz, Wageth and Carnaim (all these are strong walled and myghty great cyties) and that they were kept in other cyties of Galaad also: & now they are appoynted to brynge their host vnto these cyties, to take them, and to ronne them in one daye.

So Judas and his host turned in al the night in the wyldernes towardes Bolo, and came to the cytie, slew al the males with the sword, toke all theyr goodes, & let fyre vpo the cytie. And in the nyght theyooke theyr iourney from thence, and came to the castel. In bytymes in the moorning when they looked vp, beholde, there was an innumerable people bearyng ladders and other instrumentes of warre, to take the castell and to ouercome them.

When Judas sawe that the battayle beganne, and that the people therof wente vp, & came into the heauen, and that there was a great crye in the cytie: he sayde vnto his brethren this daye for your brethren. And became behynde theyr enemyes in the combayles, & blew vpo the trumpettes, and cried vnto prayer to God.

But as soone as Timothees host perceyued that Machabeus was there, they fled fro hym, and the other slew them downe ryghte by: so þe there was kyllled of them the same daye almoost epyghte thousande men. Then descended Judas vnto Maspha, layed siege vnto it, and wanne it: slew al the males in it, & let fyre vpon it: from thence went he and toke Calbon, Wageth, Bolo, and the other cyties in Galaad.

After this gathered Timothee an other host, which pitched theyr tentes befoze Raspho beponde the water. Judas also sent to spy the host, & they brought hym worde agayne, saying: Al the hepten that be round about vs, are gathered vnto hym, and the host is very great. Yea, they haue byred the Arabians to helpe them, and haue pitched theyr tentes beponde the water, and are ready to come & fyght agaynst the. So Judas went on to mete them.

And Timothee sayde vnto the captaynes of his host: when Judas and his host come nye the ryuer: yf he go ouer fyrt, we shall not be hable to withstande hym: for why? he wil be to strong for vs. But yf he dare not come ouer, so þe he ppeche his tent beponde the water: the wyl we go ouer, for we shalbe strong ynough agaynst hym. Nowe as soone as Judas came to the riuer, he appoynted certayne scribbs of the people, & commaunded them, sayinge: se that ye leaue none behynde vpon this syde of the ryuer, but let euery mā come to the battayle. So he went fyrt ouer vnto them, and his people after hym.

And all the hepten were discomfited before hym, and let theyr weapons fall, & ranne into the temple that was at Carnaim. Which cytie Judas wanne, and burnt the temple with all that were in it: So was Carnaim subdued, and myght not withstande Judas. Then Judas gathered all þe Israelites that were in Galaadithim, from the leest vnto the moost, with their wyues and theyr chyldren (a very great host) for to come into þe lande of Israel.

* So they came vnto Ephraim, which was a myghty, great and stronge cytie, and laye in theyr waye. For they coude not go by it, neither of the ryght hande nor of the left, but must go thowowe it. Nevertheless, they that were in the cytie, wolde not let them go thowowe, but walled vp the portes with stones. And Judas sent vnto them with peaceable wordes, sayinge: Let vs passe thowowe your lande, that we maye go into our owne countrye: there shall no bodye do you harme, we wyl but onely go thowow on fote. But they wolde not let them in.

Wherefoze Judas commaunded a proclamation to be made thowowout the hoste, that euery man shoulde kepe his ordre: and so they dyd theyr best lyke valeant men.

And Judas besieged the cytie al that day and all that nyght, and so wanne it, where they slew as many as were males, and destroyed the cytie, and spoyled it, and wote thowowe al the cytie ouer them that were slayne. They went they ouer Jordane into þe playne feld befoze Bethsa. And Judas helpe thowowe for ward þe came behynde, and gaue the people good exhortacion all the waye thowowe, tyll they were come into the lande of Juda.

Thus they went by vnto the mount Syon, where they offered with myrrour & thankesgyuyng: because there were none of the slayne, but came home agayne peaceably.

Nowe what tyme as Judas & Jonathan were in the lande of Galaad, and Symon their brother in Galilee befoze Ptolomais: Then sarias the captaynes, hearynge of the actes came Sozypas and his men out of the ctye, to fyght agaynst them: Iosephus also & Alsarias were chased vnto þe borders of Jewrye, and there were slayne that day of the people of Israel. ii. M. men: so þe there was a greate milyer among the people, * & al bycause they were not obedyent vnto Judas and his brethren, but thought they shulde quyte the sel-ues manfully. Neuerthelesse they came not of the seed of these men, by whome Israel was helped. But the men that were with Judas, were greatly commended in the syght of all Israel, and all heythens, wheresoeuer they:

name was heard vpon, and the people came vnto them, byddyng them welcome.

After this went Judas forth with his brethren, and fought agaynst the chyldre of Esau, in þe lande that lyeth towarde þe south, where he wanne the ctye of hebron, and the townes þe lye besyde it: and as for the walles and towre rounde about it, he bzient the vp.
Then remoned he to go into the lande of the Philistines, and wente thowre Samaria.
At the same tyme were there many preastes slayne in the battayle, whiche wyllfullpe and without aduylment went out for to fyght, to get them honour. And when Judas came to Azot in the Philistines lande, * he brake downe their alters, bzēt the ymages of their Idols, spoyled the ctyes, and came agayne vnto the lande of Iuda.

The. vi. Chapter.

Antiochus wyllynge to take the ctye of Elimas for a praye is dyspuen awaye of the ceterins. He saileth into sycknesse and deeth. His sonne An-tiochus is made kynge. The besiege of þe towne of Syon. Eupator commeth into Jewry with a great armye. The boldnesse of Eleazar.

Now when kynge Antiochus trauayled thowre the hye countreyes, he hearde þe Elimas in Persia was a noble and pleuous ctye in splur and golde, and that there was in it a verpe riche temple: where as were clothes, cote armours and shildes of golde, which Alexādre the sonne of Philip kynge of Macedonea (þe raygned fyrste in Greke lande) had lefte behynde him. Wherefore he went about to take the ctye & to spoye it, but he was not hable: for the ctyzins were warned of it, & fought with hym. And so he fled & departed w great heuynesse, and came agayne into Babylon.
Moreouer, there came one whiche bzought hym tydinges in Perside, * that his hoostes whiche were in the lande of Iuda, were dyspyen away, and how that Lysias went forth fyist with a greate power, and was dyspuen awaye at the Jewes: how that they had wō the byctory, and gotten great goodes out of the hoostes þe perished: how they had bzō downe the abhominacion * which he set vp vpon the altar at Ierusalem, and fenced the Sanctuary with hye walles, lyke as it was afore: pea, and Bethsura his ctye also.

So it chaunced, that when the kynge had herde these wordes, he was afraped and gre-ued very soze. Wherefore he layed him downe vpon his bed, and fell sycke for very sorowe: and al bycause it had not happened as he had deuyed. And there continued he long, for his grete was euer, more and more, so that he lawe he must nedes dye. Therefore he sent for his frendes, and sayde vnto them: the slepe is gone fro myne eyes, for the very sorowe and vexacion of herte that I haue. For when I consydre in my mynde the greate aduersite that I am come vnto, and the floudes of heuynesse which I am come in, where as afore tyme I was so merpe, and so great lye set by (by reason of my power.) Agayne, consydrynge the euill that I haue done at Jerusalem, fro whence I toke al the richesse of gold and splur that were in it, and sent to fette awaye the inhabitours of Jewrye without any reaso why: I knowe that these troubles are come vpon me for the same cause. And he holde, I must dye with greate sorowe, in a strange lande. Then called he for one Phy-lyp a frende of his, whome he made ruler of all his realme, and gaue him the crowne, his robe & his rying: that he shulde take his sonne Antiochus vnto hym, & bypunge hym vp, tyl he myght raygne hym selfe. * So the kynge Antiochus dyed there, in þe. cxl. ix. yere. When Lysias knewe that the kynge was deeth, he ordyned Antiochus his son (whiche he had bzought vp) to raygne in his fathers steed, & called hym Eupator. Now they that were in the castell (at Ierusalem) kepte in the Je-wes rounde about the Sanctuary, & sought ener spyll to do them harme for the strydenyng of the heythens.

Wherefore, Judas thought to destroy the and called all the people togyther, that they myght laye siege vnto the. So they came to-gyther in the. Cl. yere, & besieged the, laying forth they: ordinaunce and instruments of warre. Then certayne of them that were besieged, went forth (vnto whome some un-godly mē of Israel toynded them selues also) and went vnto þe kynge, saying: how longe wyl it be, or thou punish and auenge our brethren? We haue euer bene mynded to doo thy father seruyce, to walke in his statutes, and to obepe his commaundementes: Therfore our people sel from vs, and wheresoeuer not onely medled with vs, but with all our cōtreyes: and behold, this daye are they belagynge the castell at Ierusalem: and haue made vp the stronge holde in Bethlura. And yf thou dost not p̄uentē them ryght soone, they wyl do moze then these, and thou shalt not be hable to ouercome them.

* When the kynge herde this he was very angry, and called all his frendes, the captaynes of his footemen, and of all his horsemen together. He byred men of warre also out of other realmes and oute of the Isles of the see, which came vnto him. And the nombre of his host was an hundred thousande footemen, and xx. thousande horsemen, and xxxii. Elephantes well exercysed in battayle. * These came thowowe Idumea vnto Bethlura, & he layed it a longe season, and made dyuers instruments of warre agaynst it. But the Jewes came out and byent the, and foughte lyke men. The departed Judas from the castell at Ierusalem, & remoued the host towardes Bethsacaran ouer agaynst the kynges armpe.

So the kynge arose before the daye, and broughte power of his host in to the wape in Bethsacaran, where the hostes made the ready to the battayle, blowinge of trumpettes. And to prouoke the Elephantes for to fyght, they shewed them the sap of red grapes, and mulberries. And deuicid the Elephantes among the hoste: so that by euery Elephante there was a man well harnessed, and helmettes affixe vpon theyr heades. And vnto euery one of the Elephantes also were ordeyned. v. Chosemen of the best, which wayted on the Elephante, goinge wheresoeuer he went, and departed not from hym. Euery Elephante was couered with a stronge tower of wood, wherevpon were. xxxii. valeaunt men with weapons to fyght, and within was a man of Iude to rule the beast.

As for the remnaunt of the horsemen, he set them vpon bothe the sydes in two partes with trumpettes, to prouoke the hoste, and to fyghte vpon suche as were slowe in the army. And when the sunne shone vpon theyr shylde of golde and stele, the mountaynes glistered agayne at them, and were as byghte as the mettes of fyre. The kynges host also was divided, one parte vpon the hye mountaynes the other lowe beneth: so they wete on takinge good hede, and keppinge theyr ordre. And all they that dwelt in the lande, were afrayed at the noyse of theyr host, when the multitude went forth, and when the weapons smote to gyther, for the hoste was bothe greate and myghtye. Judas also and his host entred in to the battayle, & slew. vi. C. men of the kynge's armpe. Now when Eleasar the sonne of Iudith was one of the Elephantes decked with the kynges badg, & was a moze goodly beaust then the other: he thoughte the kynge shoulde be vpon him, & to ordeyne hym selfe to deliuer his people, & to get hym a perpetuall name. Wherefore he ran with a courage vnto the Elephante in the myddest of the host, smytynge them downe of bothe sydes, and slew many about hym. So went he to the Elephantes feet, and gat hym vnder hym, & slew him: then fell the Elephante downe vpon him, and there he dyed. Judas also and his men seinge the power of the kynge & the myghty violence of his host departed fro them. And the kynge's armpe went vp agaynst the toward Ierusalem, and pitched theyr tentes in Jewrye besyde mounte Sion. Moreover, the kynge toke truse with them that were in Bethlura.

But when they came out of the cite (because they had no vitayles within, & the land laye vntyllid) the kynge toke Bethlura, and set men to kepe it, and turned his host to the place of the Sanctuary, and layed siege to it a great whyle. Where he made all maner ordynance, handbowes, fyre darters, raketes to cast stones, scorpios to shote arrows, & synges. The Jewes also made ordynance agaynst theyr, and fought a longe season.

But in the cite there were no vitayles, for it was the seventh yere of the warres and those theyr that remayned in Jewry, had eaten vp all theyr store. And in the Sanctuarie were fewe men left, for the hunger came so vpon them, that they were scattered abrode euery man to his owne place.

So when Lysias hearde, that Philp (* who Antiochus the kynge whyle he was yet lyvinge, had ordeyned to byngne vpon Antiochus his sonne, that he myghte be kynge) was come agayne out of Persia and Medea with the kynge's host, & thought to obtayne the kyngdome. He gat hym to the kynge in all the haste, & to the captaynes of the host, and sayde: we decrease dayly, & oure vitayles are but small: Agayne, the place that we laye siege vnto is very strong, & it were our parte to le for the realme. Let vs agree with these men, and take truce with them, and with all theyr people, and graunte them to lyue after theyr law, as they byd afore. For they be greued, and do all these thynges agaynst vs, because we haue despyled theyr lawe. So the kynge and the princes were content, and sent vnto the to make peace, and they receyued it. Nowe when the kynge and the princes had made an oth vnto them, they came out of the castell, and the kynge wente vp to mounte Syon. But when he sawe that the place was well defended, he brake the othe that he had made, and commaunded to destroye the wall rounde about. Then departed he in all the haste, and returned vnto Antioche, where he founde Philp haungne domynion of the cite. So he fought agaynst hym, and toke the cite agayne into his handes.
